The Most Stupendous Dramatic offering in all the Annals

IT WAS the Lincoln sentiment that made the United States a unit, in place of many scattered nations, which it threatened to become.

The Lincoln sentiment represents the American spirit.

This sentiment saved America and will eventually dominate the world, in the present world-crisis.

The Lincoln Sentiment

This is the sentiment portrayed so forcefully in the Benjamin Chapin Cycle of Lincoln Photoplays.

IT IS WORTH WHILE.

Mr. Walter E. Greene, Pres.,

March 19th, 1917.

Dear Mr. Greene:-

Allow me to express my sincere gratitude for your speedy and favorable reply to my request of even date, which answer gives me the privilege of extending the remarkable engagement of Mary Pickford in "The Poor Little Rich Girl", for another week; marking the first time in the history of Boston that any feature has been able to show to capacity audience for three consecutive weeks.

Believe me when I say that I regret not being in a position to continue the engagement of this masterpiece six or seven weeks on account of advance bookings. In my estimation Miss Pickford has, in this picture, the greatest vehicle ever offered her, and in comparing the beloved star's successes of the past with this, her latest and greatest, it is sufficient to say that in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" Miss Mary Pickford dwarfs all past achievements to insignificance.

Wishing you continued success, I remain

Very truly yours,
Samuel Pinanski

Universal Serial and Dramatic Series Setting Fast Pace

Ben Wilson

FROM Exhibitors and Exchange men in every section of the country come enthusiastic reports of the marvelous reception accorded the wonderful mystery serial, "The Voice on the Wire," recently released by the Universal Film Mfg. Company. Founded on that immensely popular novel of the same name, written by Eustace Hale Ball, famous for his production of "Traffic in Souls," and other notable successes, "The Voice on the Wire" has set a fast pace in serial thrillers that is coining money for Exhibitors. A baffling series of mysterious events, each of which is preceded by a ghostly warning from a mysterious "voice on the wire" gives this great multi-reel picture its name. As John Shirley, famous private investigator, Ben Wilson, the handsome, virile Universal Star, has the opportunity of his successful career. Supported by beautiful Neva Gerber, and a brilliant cast, with a lavish scenic investiture, the Universal's latest serial reaches the highest standard of production. Produced by Stuart Paton, the master director of the Universal's stupendous spectacle, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," there is marvelous continuity from episode to episode, and punches galore from start to finish. Here is an opportunity to book a serial that will give you fifteen weeks of capacity business. You can book "The Voice on the Wire" from any of the 73 Universal Exchanges, or from the Home Office.

Neva Gerber

Kingsley Benedict

For Exhibitors who do not care to run serials there is an unusual chance for a clean up in the brilliant series of seven dramatic two reel pictures released by the Universal under the general title of "The Perils of the Secret Service." This famous series was published serially in a magazine of tremendous circulation under the title of "Yorke Norroy—Diplomatic Agent." The stories were written by the famous American novelist, George Bronson Howard, author of "God's Man," the sensational book of the year. Mr. Howard, who is a playwright of note, personally directed the seven pictures. The lead is played by the popular Universal star, Kingsley Benedict, and opposite him is a different Universal woman star for each part. This remarkable series is among the most successful novelties ever released by the Universal. Each part is complete in itself, but when a patron sees one story he will be enthusiastically anxious to see all of them.

Increasing Popularity

Greets Brilliant Releases of Universal Screen Magazine

HAILED by fans, exhibitors and exchange men alike as the greatest single reel novelty ever filmed, the Universal Screen Magazine, is now, by popular demand, released every week. For freshness of treatment, selection of interesting subjects, timely topics, etc., the Screen Magazine is comparable only to a great popular magazine of wide circulation. One of the principal reasons for the unprecedented popularity of this novel picture is the fact that in it will be found something to interest every man, woman and child who ever attends a moving picture theatre. The subjects include among others, Latest Inventions, Scientific Progress, Beauty Hints, Domestic Science, Lessons in Cooking and Housekeeping, Juveniles, Animated Sculpture; Travelogs; Industrial Progress (showing how articles in common use are made), Our Dumb Animal Friends; What We Eat, Nature Studies, and a score of Miscellaneous Subjects which cover the entire range of human activity. Not only has the Universal Screen Magazine proved immensely popular with the average "movie fan," but it has received the unqualified endorsement of hundreds of noted scientists, educators, preachers, business men, club women, etc. It will pack your house on the dullest day of the week. It is unusual—a winner from the start. Book through any Universal Exchange, or THE UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE, 1600 Broadway, New York.

Separate Listing of "Special" and "Regular" Universal Program Releases Great Aid to Exhibitors

EXHIBITORS who book an "open" program will find listed below the cream of the "special releases" of the entire world. Here they can pick the big punches; the best comedies; the strongest one, two and three reel dramas; pictures that will bolster up and put over the weakest show or performance. Include a selection of these Universal Specials and you will be giving a first class entertainment. You must expect to pay extra for these (unless you are getting the complete Universal Program), BECAUSE THEY ARE WORTH MORE THAN ANY PICTURES YOU CAN BOOK ANYWHERE. Communicate with your nearest Universal Exchange and get full particulars about Universal Specials and the Universal Program. You need to know about both.

Special Releases

On the Universal Program
For the Week of April 16, 1917

RED FEATHER—"THE FLOWER OF DOOM" (Five Reels)—Douglas Gerrard and Ruth Clifford.
NESTOR—"FOLLOW THE TRACKS" (One-Reel Comedy)—Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts.
IMP—"THE PERILS OF THE SECRET SERVICE" (Two Reels)—No. 7 "THE INTERNATIONAL SPY"—Kingsley Benedict.
UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE—Issue No. 15.
JOKER—"TAKE BACK YOUR WIFE" (One-Reel Comedy)—Gale Henry and Wm. Franey.

Don't get away with the idea that because the specials are "special" Universal regular releases on the program are not the finest quality short-reel subjects that it is possible to get anywhere. Here you will find great dramas based on great stories, directed by the most brilliant directors in the world in fact, these "regular" releases are the backbone of the great Universal Program the greatest on earth, giving more QUANTITY and more QUALITY than all competition combined. Remember, if you book the complete Universal Program Service, you get both the specials and the regulars at a price that enables you to make money.

Regular Releases

On the Universal Program
For the Week of April 16, 1917

GOLD SEAL—"FOR LACK OF EVIDENCE" (Three-Reel Drama)—Tina Marshall.
VICTOR—"IT HAPPENED IN ROOM 7" (One-Reel Comedy).
LAEMMLE—"CHUBBY TAKES A HAND" (One-Reel Drama)—William V. Mong and Zoe Rae.
UNIVERSAL ANIMATED WEEKLY—No. 68.
VICTOR—"THE TOPSY TURVY TWINS" (Two-Reel Comedy)—Carter De Haven.
BIG U—"THE PACE THAT KILLS" (One-Reel Drama)—Clair McDowell.
REX—"THE SORCERESS" (One-Reel Drama)—Herbert Rawlinson and Cleo Madison.
VICTOR—"TIT FOR TAT" (One-Reel Comedy-Drama)—Hobart Henley.
BISON—"THE TELLTALE CLUE" (Two-Reel Drama of the Woods)—Molly Malone.
IMP—"THE BLAZING SECRET" (One-Reel Drama)—King Baggot and Leah Baird.
BIG U—"HER GREAT MISTAKE" (Two-Reel Animal Drama)—Marie Walcamp.

Don't overlook the fact that at the regular and complete Universal Program Service you get all the releases listed above. Twenty-nine reels that will keep your patrons coming in the week. Communicate now with your nearest Universal Exchange or with the home office, 1600 Broadway, New York.

If one person in every ten who swear by Hall Caine and his books, go to see this picture, "The Manx-man" will make a fortune for Exhibitors!

The Three Legs of Man

"Quocunque Jeceris Stabit"

"Whichever way you throw me I shall stand"

Each leg of the Isle of Man's famous coat of arms represents a vigorous kick being given to each of their powerful neighbours by the most independent little people known to history.

Overrun from time to time by its powerful neighbours the Island has been successively IRISH, SCANDINAVIAN, SCOTCH and ENGLISH and yet today is politically independent of them all.

Tynwald Court on the Isle of Man is famous as the oldest known parliament of man.

For a thousand years the Manxmen have gathered once a year on Tynwald day on Tynwald Hill; for no law may bind a freeman until it has been read and accepted on Tynwald day.

Many times in history the Islanders have asserted their ancient prerogatives at Tynwald Court, and it is a famous rising of the fishermen of Man and their demands upon a Governor who threatened to have the soldiers shoot down disturbers of Tynwald that forms one of the BIG SCENES

IN

"The Manx-Man" by Hall Caine

9,000 Manxmen appear in this scene which is correct in every detail, Lord Raglan, the Governor, having given instructions that the regular soldiers be used and every accessory—EVEN THE OLD CHAIR and THE SWORD OF STATE—HIS OWN COSTUME—he ordered furnished for GEO. LOANE TUCKER'S production of

All any exhibitor has to do to get the Arbuckle Comedies is to pay for them, whether he is now doing business with the Paramount Exchange or not.

Do you think it's right?

or wise or good business, to plug along half a dozen different brands of pictures?

Half a dozen generals failed to get anywhere with the Union Army in the Civil War until General Grant laid down a plan and policy when he said,

"I'll fight it out on one line if it takes all summer"

It took much longer than that, but he won.

He picked his line and put it over big. Of course, he had to pick a good line—

But take Paramount Pictures—the best pictures; the most consistent attractions.

Don't you think you'd profit by having your house known as the All Paramount House?

Wouldn't it pay you better to play Paramount Pictures longer and play more of them?

Do you think it's good business to treat a Paramount picture like so many feet of film?

For example this week

"The Bond Between" written by George Beban and produced by Pallas Pictures is a superb production of an unusual story abounding with heart interest and thrills.

Trying to earn more money that his son may continue his art studies

George Beban as an Old French Music Master Is Involved in a Daring Robbery of the National Academy

The clever exposé of the methods of covering one painting with another will do much to discourage this sort of crime. The young female assistant of the district attorney's office becomes much interested in the young artist, but luckily for all she keeps her mind on her work and helps unravel a bad tangle.

"The School for Husbands"

Written by Harvey Thew and produced by Lasky

Adapted for Stanislaus Strange's clever comedy

Though Miss Ward made her reputation on the screen in such tense dramatic successes as "The Cheat," it was comedy in which she rose to popularity on the stage.

A Fannie Ward Comedy with a Remarkable Race Track and Society Setting

The race scenes and casino are made at the famous California track, Tia Juana, and the Hula Hula dancers are native Kanackas imported especially for this picture. Miss Ward's gowns are marvels and the entire production a delight.

NOW A BLUEBIRD
"HELL MORGAN'S GIRL"

Made as a State Rights picture, "Hell Morgan's Girl" so impressed the BLUEBIRD Executives that they bought it outright. All State Rights negotiations were declared off, and all money received for territory sold was returned. This picture is playing return bookings all over the country. It is unusual in story; in place—San Francisco's "Barbary Coast"; in time—The San Francisco fire; in the cast and the direction. Unusual in every way. Book now for sure profits.

INC.

The First Definite Contribution in the Propaganda to Popularize Clean and Wholesome Films for All Right-Thinking Americans

For a long time there has been developing a country wide demand for a better class of motion pictures suitable for exhibition before mixed audiences of all ages. From time to time individual producers and groups of producers have provided occasional motion pictures to meet this demand. It has remained for THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc., and FORUM FILMS, Inc., however, to provide the first definite and regular contribution in the form of weekly programs of selected and carefully edited subjects.

"EDISON CONQUEST PICTURES" will be published at the rate of five reels per week, each program of that length including a three-reel dramatic production, and shorter comedies, travelogues, and miscellaneous subjects providing a well balanced program of variety.

"EDISON CONQUEST PICTURES" will have the endorsement and support of national organizations interested in welfare work, educators, community workers, and social bodies, and all individuals as well as organizations which have been instrumental in creating the demand for better films for the entire family. It is obvious that all this interest means new patrons for the exhibitor who links his theatre with this movement.

Some of the productions soon to be released are:

"The Exhibitors' Paper"

Because the Exhibitors unquestionably represent the foundation upon which the success of the entire Moving Picture Industry must be established, it has become an honorable distinction for a moving picture trade publication to be known as "The Exhibitors' Paper."

The paper most properly called "The Exhibitors' Paper" is certainly "the paper that has done and is continuing to do most for the Exhibitor."

The MOVING PICTURE WORLD invites your consideration from this angle.

In its ten years of devoted and unselfish service it has never failed to look at things from the Exhibitors' viewpoint.

What seemed best for the Exhibitor has unceasingly and unswervingly been advocated by the MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

It has spent thousands of dollars in advancing the Exhibitors' best interests.

It has thrown itself whole-heartedly into every battle justly waged by Exhibitors the country over—and it has given not only of its prestige but also of its money and experience.

It has cheerfully refused to profit through the adoption of new and alluring promises which have ensnared some of its less careful competitors in the field.

Not because we say so for advertising purposes, but because past performances and present policies prove it conclusively the MOVING PICTURE WORLD stands out pre-eminently as has been made by the State Right Buyers of the country to the offer of franchise for this great five-reel feature.

"The Exhibitors' Paper"

¶ The public demand may be inferred from the comments of certain important personages who have witnessed advance showings of the picture.

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS EXCHANGES

APRIL 7, 1917

TEN MUTUAL-CHAPLINS NOW FINISHED OFFER BIG OPPORTUNITIES

THERE are great opportunities for big box office receipts in the series of Mutual-Chaplin Specials now available at all Mutual Exchanges. These subjects are the most costly, the most carefully staged comedies obtainable. Plenty of time has been taken in producing each picture. The stage settings are elaborate and are carefully worked out in detail. Each and every bit of comedy business" is thought out so carefully that it is "sure fire" stuff. It gets laughs every time.

Ten Now Finished.

Ten Mutual-Chaplin subjects are now finished. Nine are available. They are "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," One A. M." "The Count," "The Pawnshop," "Behind the Screen," "The Rink" and "Easy Street." The tenth, "The Cure," will be released on April 16. All of them are widely varied in their nature. All of them are sure to appeal to people of every age. There is amusement in each Mutual-Chaplin Special for all nationalities—all classes. They can be shown with equal success in the largest transient theatres or in neighborhood houses with small seating capacities.

Repeat Bookings.

Exhibitors everywhere are finding it highly profitable to arrange repeat bookings on the Mutual-Chaplin series. If you haven't shown any of them, an exceptional opportunity awaits you. If you have shown them, you can pack your theatre again by arranging repeat showings. Start with the first and show them all at regular intervals. Any Mutual Exchange will arrange the bookings for you.

New Strand Comedies Will Set Standard

Absolutely new standards in one reel comedies will be set by the new series of Mutual Featurettes—Strand Comedies—the first of which is to be released on Wednesday, April 11. These subjects are free from slapstick and suggestiveness. They are clean, fresh and snappy—enacted by a company of good looking, vivacious young people. Pretty Billy Rhodes plays the lead, supported by Jay Belasco. Exhibitors may book the entire series of 52, at Mutual Exchanges. A new Strand Comedy will be released each week, beginning April 11. "Her Hero" is the title of the first one and those for April 18 and 25 bear the titles "When Mary Took the Count" and "In Walked Uncle."

"RAILROAD RAIDERS"

Third Big Helen Holmes Success in 15 Chapters

STARTS ON APRIL 9TH

Monday, April 9, is the day. That's the date scheduled for the release of the first chapter of the big new Helen Holmes Success—"The Railroad Raiders." Exhibitors everywhere are arranging to take care of capacity business on that date. They know Helen Holmes is today one of America's most popular stars. Motion picture fans everywhere idolize her. They have seen her steadily rise to her present lofty position in filmdom, and they are willing to go far out of their way to see her newest offering. The story of "The Railroad Raiders" is crammed with action—punch—thrills. As a secret service employee of a big railroad, Helen is afforded some unusual opportunities for the sort of risks she delights in taking. She will thrill theatre patrons as never before. Big surprises are in store for those who imagine that Miss Holmes has performed every daredevil feat possible. She has a any number of new "stunts" to perform. They all work logically into the story. It runs at express train speed from the very start. Book this mile-a-minute motion picture novel and make sure of crowded houses for fifteen weeks. Arrange your bookings now at the nearest Mutual Exchange.

New Style Torpedo Pictured in Reel Life

Reel Life No. 50, the Mutual screen magazine, released April 12, shows the detailed working of a brand new style of torpedo. In these days of preparedness, theatre patrons will be greatly interested. Bring them to your theatre to see how Uncle Sam is arranging to guard his shores against invasion.

EMPIRE WATCHWORD IN MAKING PICTURES WILL BE TIME

TO assure ample time for the production, the assembling, titling and the putting of the finishing touches to the Charles Frohman stage successes produced as motion pictures by the Empire All Star Corporation for release through the Mutual Film Corporation, President John R. Freuler of the Mutual and Alf Hayman, representative of the Frohman interests, have decided that no one picture of any series featuring a star shall be released until two pictures of the series have been completed and the third is in the process of production.

Mr. Freuler and Mr. Hayman purpose that all productions coming from the Empire-Mutual studios shall be handled in the same careful manner in which stage plays are produced. No picture is to be started until cast, director, and technical staff have had ample time to study the story they are to produce as a picture, and no photodrama, having been photographed is to be released until it has been given every finishing touch that thoughtful cutting, assembling and titling can bestow.

Speed Breeds Mediocrity.

"A great deal of the mediocrity of the photoplays on the market today is due to the speed with which productions are hurried through," says President Freuler. "The haste is due, too often at least, to the desire of producers to save the high salaries paid to stars and directors.

"Rush methods and good pictures are seldom found in the same studio. The public's support of fine, well made pictures more than pays for extra time it takes to make them."

"Jimmie Dale" Series Has Popular Appeal

Mutual Exchanges all over the country are reporting good bookings on "Jimmie Dale, Alias 'The Grey Seal.'" the new series of Mutual Featurettes produced by the Monmouth Film Corporation. Exhibitors know that mystery-detective stories are highly popular with motion picture fans. But they are the hardest kind of pictures to obtain. Only once in a long while is the exhibitor offered a really high class series of such stories. "Jimmie Dale" Featurettes constitute such an attraction. Stars of the first magnitude are featured in all the releases of this series. E. K. Lincoln, famous everywhere, plays Jimmie Dale. His supporting cast includes such favorites as Paul Panzer, Edna Hunter and Doris Mitchell. Harry McRae Webster directed the entire production.

Throughout The World Are Making Millions Laugh.

Mutual-Chaplin Specials stand supreme today throughout the world in the field of motion picture comedy. Nowhere in all filmdom are there comedies on which so much time, and thought and money have been spent. This is the most costly series of comedies ever released. Extreme care has been taken in its production. Cost has always been waived for quality. Ten comedies featuring the Mutual's $670,000 per year comedian, are now available at Mutual Exchanges. Beware of violators! The genuine Mutual-Chaplin Specials are only released through the Exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation in America.

"The Floorwalker"

In which Chaplin burlesques the common, every-day happenings of a big department store.

"The Fireman"

As a "smoke eater" Charlie is a 4-11 alarm. You can't go wrong by showing this one.

"The Count"

Charlie takes a little flyer into high society, disguised as a member of the nobility.

"The Pawnshop"

Chaplin finds innumerable things in a pawnshop with which to evoke laughter, and all are effective

"Easy Street"

As the cop on the beat in the toughest section of the city Charlie scores new triumphs.

O. Henry's Delightful Characters Brought to Life in Motion Pictures

From Fifth Avenue—the Bowery—the Western prairies—the little comic opera republics of South America—O. Henry gathered the whimsical, ludicrous and pathetic characters which will live forever in the hearts of untold millions.

Now you can see these marvelous O. Henry stories on the screen—those wonderfully human men and women—those absurdly delightful situations—those thrilling adventures, beautiful romances and astonishing climaxes that have made O. Henry the most widely read and best loved author in the world.

O. Henry Pictures are Broadway Star Features, every one personally supervised by J. Stuart Blackton, for twenty years the dominant genius of the photoplay and producer of world-famous short pictures. Commodore Blackton has been responsible for more big, world-wide photoplay successes than any other one producer. His "Battle Cry of Peace" and other great productions swept the country. All his knowledge and experience—all his genius and talent—have been applied to making these O. Henry Pictures the greatest short features ever produced. A new O. Henry picture each week.

"They wear well with my patrons."

"I always use a 'Ham' Comedy after running a long feature. They're great!"

"MY program would not be complete without a 'Ham' Comedy."

"Ham and Bud are the biggest comedy favorites I have ever shown."

Week after week, for over two years, Ham and Bud have been seen in their famous characterizations. Their following has grown enormously: a vast army of admirers look forward with the keenest delight to their appearance upon the screen. These fans are everywhere—and they want "Ham" Comedies.

Under the capable direction of Al Santell, Ham and Bud are getting plenty of laughs into their work.

A noteworthy example of a really clever comedy is

"THE DEADLY DOUGHNUT"

It is one thing to say: We will now produce comedies, and quite another to make them as good as the "HAM" brand.

Facts and Comments

THE fact that the moving picture drama is a great educational force is becoming more self-evident every day. Examples of the most unexpected nature are continually coming to light. At a recent showing of the Mary Pickford play, "A Poor Little Rich Girl," there was an indication that the screen will soon take the place of the time-honored but smudgy copybook of our youth in inculcating moral precepts. During the schoolroom scene when Mary's teacher, pointer in hand, drew her pupil's attention to that accusing axiom, written at the top of her blackboard, "Procrastination Is the Thief of Time," one generous old soul, who belongs to the large number of spectators that love to confide their enjoyment or disapproval to everyone within hearing of their voices, was heard to remark in the tone of a person whose mind is being opened to a great truth for the first time: "My! isn't that true!"

JUST now there is a strong campaign in progress to defeat the bill to permit Sunday picture exhibitions in the State of New York. From information gathered by a representative of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD it is quite likely that the opponents of the measure will succeed in defeating it. There was a hearing on the bill the other day before the Legislative committee which has it in charge and the motion picture men made a creditable showing and a good impression; but it is feared that the campaign against the bill is too strong to be met effectively. Legislators are quoted as saying that numerous protests from their respective constituents make it imperative that they vote against the measure. Since no reference is made to letters from constituents who favor the passage of the proposed law it may be presumed that there are none such, or that their quantity is negligible. If this is true it would seem that the exhibitors have been asleep at the post.

IT WILL take more than the press work of the League President's own paper and personal mouthpiece to convince exhibitors throughout the country as to his sincerity and interest on behalf of the exhibitor. Too much that points to purely personal advancement is yet lying at his door and to which no straightforward, satisfactory explanation has yet been forthcoming. Many exhibitors already know what's what. They are "wise" and many more are cutting their wisdom teeth. Some of them may be heard from before long. When the rank and file refuse to be exploited for the benefit of a small inside ring we may hope to see an exhibitors' organization that will be worth while. May that day soon come.

AFTER doing business with a film exchange for years, paying all bills when due and meeting all other usual business conditions, it is no wonder that an Iowa theater manager writes us a strong letter of protest when he receives a telegram as his first notification that the service was to be discontinued. Service sold to another exhibitor, we presume, at a higher price. His letter concludes as follows:

> It is not the first time we have gone through similar deals, and until treatment accorded theaters is changed absolutely there will never be harmony in this business as in other lines.

"I JOURNEYED to Wilmington, not to get subscribers," naively writes the editor of the New Style Trade paper, but how the molasses was smeared on that same page. Go to, you would-be editors, learn how to get dollar subscriptions. Mention them by name five or six times at least and say "liked by everybody," "dominates the situation," "most courteous gentlemen," "ably managed," "leading spirit," "able young manager," ad infinitum et ad nauseam.

NOT all newspaper comment on the motion picture is of the disparaging sort. A person in Lawrence, Kan., writing to the Kansas City Star, declares that as a result of the scourgings received on the screen by the gossip and tattler of the female species that particular kind of pest is rapidly becoming less prominent, in fact bids fair to become extinct. While the latter conclusion has no chance of ever coming true there can be no question that the holding up to public execration of town and city gossips, putting them under the fierce white light that beats upon the screen, has done much to reduce their activities, whether in clubs or church societies or over the back fence.

Where We All Fall Down

By Louis Reeves Harrison

PRODUCERS, directors, editors, all in authority at the studio, have a common failing, a weakness that may pervade all departments of artistic production, but which can only be indulged in by those at liberty to exercise their own discretion. The owners and managers of theaters, of exchanges, even of periodicals, are included. The man in power likes to do things his own way. His work is then more attractive to him, further removed from drudgery. In very many cases a man has worked faithfully for others and seen their errors. He has noted where he could do much better. There is self-confidence mixed with a little vanity in his idea of having a product suit his own taste.

It may be assumed that the varied tastes of those who make up a mixed audience meet with natural response from the fact that each producer supplies something different from the others, but we are confronted by the fact that producers are not creating the products they publish and distribute as a rule. Mr. A. likes a play with a punch. So does Mr. B., but not the same kind of a punch. One means a story with a definite purpose to it. The other means something sensational, like a fire, or a wreck.

Most men say they prefer a story with a happy ending—they are not even telling the truth about themselves, as the popularity of such dramas as Camille and Madame Butterfly has proven in a large number of instances. What they possibly mean is that they prefer to have the satisfaction of justice rendered, or what is known as "compensation" at the end of a long drama.

There are directors who are not happy unless there is a marriage scene in the play. Others think it great when the innocent lead is falsely accused of the crime. Many authors and directors adore the "sacrifice" story, especially when the heroine gives up the man she loves, even when he loves her, for the sake of a personal sacrifice. It is so noble. Others are tickled to death when a man is thrown into intimate relations, from which neither can escape, with a lady to whom he is not married. It is so risque and exciting. Then the resemblance story has a following, in which two people look exactly alike. Whew!

Two people might look alike, but their voices and handwriting would not be the same. In one recent horror the leading lady plays a dual role, that of an American lady and that of a foreigner who takes her place in society, where she must have the same manners, customs, habits, tastes, vocabulary and little imperfections of the one she impersonates. This sort of stuff not only jars intelligence, but ordinary common sense as well.

In all these countless instances, it is obvious that personal preference is responsible, not discriminating intelligence and plain common sense. It is equally obvious that personal preference can never make for decided success when the audience is accorded only secondary consideration. Popularity is not reached by suiting the man who puts up the money, not by suiting a piggish star, not by catering to this or that studio favorite, but by an appeal to the millions of people who pay to see the show. Even precedent is a poor guide—people tire of seeing the same thing done over and over again. Novelty and variety do not come from repetition, nor can they be expected until their importance is more clearly and fully understood in catering to public taste.

To men in authority at the studio, a place established for the artistic visualization of stories and educational subjects of interest and value to the public, is given the POWER OF SELECTING WHAT SHALL BE SHOWN BY EXHIBITORS. When that power is at the caprice of mere personal preference it becomes LIMITED to that preference. Choice of subject, general design, method of treatment and quality of presentation are narrowed to the prejudices of one or two individuals, and the tastes of those individuals is usually formed on what has succeeded in the past, in moving pictures, on the stage, or in literature. It opposes originality.

The cry of today is for vigorous originality. The freshness and charm of what is new is of such high value to the audience that it deserves relatively higher consideration than it receives at the hands of established preference. For the sake of that one delightful quality a great deal of indulgence can be shown to the shortcomings of a scenario, particularly at this stage when so few know how to write for the screen. The very story which jars our old faiths and cherished ideals may be the biggest sensation of the year if it sets forth a new and yet unassimilated truth.

How much faster the wheels of progress would revolve if the man intrusted with the selection of subjects for motion-picture production would consider the past only as it bears on what is vital today! Every mother's son of us is ready to follow real leadership. We long to advance. The spirits of all vigorous and intelligent men are fired with ambition to improve on what has been done in the days gone by. Right now, while we are facing a blind struggle for existence among great nations, we realize the stern necessity of accelerating our own development through better physical training and finer educational ideals.

The only hope of improving moving pictures until they stand so high in public estimation that their exhibition will win the favor of all classes of people lies in the direct application of human foresight which shall invent logical plans and schemes for our betterment and illustrate them entertainingly for the reduction of common suffering and the increase of aggregate happiness among those reached by the exhibitions. That is a long sentence, but it will do no harm to think it over once or twice. The shortest cut to public favor is to render that public GREAT SERVICE.

There can be no two opinions that the very men who are following personal preference in THEIR OWN productions severely criticise those of rival producers. They are enjoying the thousands of material blessings scattered over the earth by inventive genius, but their attitude is passive, one of accepting benefits, not of distributing them with a generous hand, else they would suddenly find themselves famous as leaders of thought and nobility of feeling. The passive attitude of feeding high on service already rendered leads naturally to wallowing in the trough.

We can never get away from the narrow and selfish place occupied by personal inclination until we rid ourselves of a lot of primitive vanity and egotism. We must take the viewpoints of a really capable critic so far as lack of individual bias is concerned—he is not considered capable when guided by personal preference—and open up the field of production to original effort for the pleasure of all progress, knowledge of ourselves, acquaintance with our environment and the universal distribution of such knowledge as we possess. It is possible for us to astonish the world with the beauty, charm and power of this new art and to make it a wondrous contribution to common human happiness.

The Child Is Growing

By Sam Spedon

LITTLE did we believe a few years ago when we listened to the inspired prophecies of the great possibilities and uses which moving pictures would achieve that they would so soon come to pass. All this kind of talk was pooh-poohed as a stall to appease opposition, or a lot of "bull" to make people believe we were apostles of the altruistic and the motion pictures disciples of Michaelangelo, trying to put over what is now considered a lot of cheap comedies and mediocre dramas. We remember making some of these prophecies ourselves when introducing players to personal appearances before moving picture "audiences." Invariably they would wonder what that kind of talk had to do with them or moving pictures. Then they would step out upon the stage to show us how to do it, as follows: "Hello folks! I met a dame the other night and she gave me a terrible bawling out. She said she was sitting right in front of me a few nights ago, looking right at me and I wouldn't speak to her. She saw me on the screen. Can you beat it?" This was the motion picture talk of those earlier days indicative of the standard at which moving pictures were measured by the "fans" at that time. Things have changed since then. Very few of us at that time knew that they were the forerunners of a different personnel of players and motion pictures of today. Very few, we believe, counted on the rapid growth and perfection they now already have attained.

We are at the dawn of another upward movement in the progress of motion pictures, namely, the educational and the industrial, which has to do with our social and civic affairs.

Women's clubs, settlement workers, mothers' clubs, the National Juvenile Board, the Photoplay League and a number of other organizations, national and local, are taking an active interest in motion pictures which only a few years ago they depreciatively called the "movies." The advent of these different associations into the realm of the "movies" is looked upon by some of us as an invasion, and it will take time and evidence to prove to these skeptical ones that they are not meddlers and busybodies, who have some ulterior motive in entering a field which a few years ago they feared to enter lest they be defiled. It will take a little time for everybody to be convinced that these bodies of intelligent people see the great uses to which motion pictures can be applied in the betterment of mankind, the welfare of humanity and the education of the masses. It is an admission that they, too, recognize the great possibilities of moving pictures. These organizations invite the co-operation of the exhibitors for mutual benefit, free from any mercenary motive on their part. Already some producers and exhibitors are working with them, realizing that they are prompted by a desire to make full use of clean and wholesome productions for the betterment of the industry, meaning the public, the exhibitor and the producer.

The original purpose of motion pictures was entertainment—the cheapest form of entertainment; they were not founded on the higher intelligence that now claims them as part of itself. Unfortunately we have dwelt too much on the words "cheap entertainment" and many of us compare the quality of the picture with the price of admission. We have cheap priced foods, but the Health Commission obliges all purveyors of food stuffs to guarantee that they are of pure quality and not deleterious. This is what we are coming to and the consumers of moving pictures are demanding purity and quality regardless of price. Otherwise they must be consigned to the garbage heap.

We welcome these newcomers to help us raise our standard to greater prominence in the affairs of the world and challenge the hypercritical captiousness of motion picture sceptics.

Long Runs Not Generally Practicable

By Sam Spedon.

AFTER considerable thought and investigation, we make bold to express our belief that a change of pictures three times a week at least is absolutely necessary in most localities; it would be impossible for most theaters to continue to run a picture longer than two or three days. Some specially big feature that will draw patronage from far and near with exclusive rights for thirty or sixty days might be run profitably for one week or more, but that is the exception which proves the rule. Even then, in residential neighborhoods, the attendance will dwindle after the fourth day. We are aware that such theaters as the Strand and Rialto in New York City and similar theaters located on transient crowded thoroughfares in other cities do exhibit a picture for weekly runs, to paying houses, but these are other exceptions that prove the rule. We say that in the majority of theaters and localities we believe it can't be done profitably.

Our belief is sustained by the long runs of popular theatrical performances. In the large cities they run for weeks and months, but these long runs are not repeated in smaller cities. In Brooklyn, largely a residential community, a run of one or two weeks for the same play in any theater is a long one; then the production is presented in another section of the borough for the same length of time.

We draw our conclusion from members of our own families, who attend the showing of every new picture in our neighborhood theater; they tell our neighbors and they go the next day. This theater seats 2,000, admission of fifteen cents, and gives four performances a day, thus making it possible for 16,000 persons to see the showing of the pictures in two days; these eight showings exhaust the moving picture patrons of that vicinity, and bear in mind there are a half dozen other theaters, including a vaudeville house, in that same locality.

These facts are from the statement and experience of the management and parallel with the experience of many others in other localities of the city as well as exhibitors in the smaller cities and towns. From personal knowledge we know the members of our families would only go once a week if only one picture a week were shown, where now they attend three and four times a week. This would be no saving to us, the family would probably go downtown to a theatrical performance, and it would certainly be a loss to our local moving picture theater.

The same arguments against the practicability of instituting larger runs apply against increasing the general price of admission beyond fifteen cents. The consensus of opinion is it cannot be safely done excepting in the large city houses and with the exceptionally big special features playing to transient patronage.

"No Entangling Alliances"

By the Rev. W. H. Jackson

THE opponents of the exhibiting of moving pictures on Sunday are for their own purposes dragging the question of the Sunday pictures through all the mire of scandalous and unclean relationship. The moving picture is not only able and willing to stand by itself and upon its own record and purposes, but it is extremely anxious to do so. If it were a simple question concerning the pictures such as "to be or not to be," the issue would be considerably narrowed and lose much of its present complexity; this to the confusion of the opponents of the pictures, who prefer to befog the issue rather than to be themselves confused, as they undoubtedly would be if the matter were made a simple and individual issue.

From no society or organization of any kind has there appeared a clean-cut single attack upon the question of the use of the pictures themselves; instead, the first cry is—"No Continental Sabbath." Every one and any one who knows anything about the old cry of the so-called evils of the Continental Sabbath knows full well that it has in no way any connection with the use of moving pictures. In fact, who can tell but that if the pictures had been known several generations ago they might have ushered in a period in which the Continental Sabbath as now understood could not have existed as further reasons may show.

As if in explanation of this Continental Sabbath evil, a detailed list is given out, showing what this Continental Sabbath would mean:

"Open saloons for the sale of liquor, all kinds of games and sports, an open door to all kinds of trading, moving pictures, theaters and music halls."

In behalf of moving pictures we must decidedly object to this "entangling alliance." The pictures deserve and demand to stand alone by themselves, and protest against being allied with liquor saloons, questions of trade, games, sports and music halls.

In the first place the moving picture is the enemy of the liquor saloon. It has been instrumental in closing more saloons than have the reform movements themselves, so much so that the saloon keepers treat the picture place as an enemy and are trying to legislate accordingly. This is well known to the opponents of the Sunday picture at the very time they are making this dishonorable classification. The open drinking place is the very foundation of the Continental Sabbath. Without this freedom other objectional features would cease to exist. If, then, the pictures strike at the very root of the Continental Sabbath, is it not a wicked accusation to classify the opening of the Sunday picture house with those evils which are universally condemned? Furthermore, to make such classification is postively libelous. Let the strongest objection be lodged against the entangling alliance.

There is no connection between the opening of the moving picture house on Sunday and the so-called "wide-open Sunday." That which is "wide open" is inclusive of everything that is objectionable. Any capable platform speaker can easily gain the sympathy of an audience when he presents the evils of a "wide-open Sunday," and we admit most justly so; in principle, the wide open Sunday must be condemned. We insist, however, that when particularizing the evils of the wide-open Sunday, to include the moving picture is misleading, and people find themselves condemning in the grouping of these evils at least some things which they would not condemn if presented individually, chief of these being the moving picture, which ought not in any way to be connected with well known abuses.

There is a familiar saying to the effect that you may judge one by the nature of the company with which he associates. This is largely true, either for good or evil. The opponents of the Sunday picture are therefore desirious of placing the moving picture in and with the worst possible company, in the hope of bringing about its downfall with those things of a distinctly evil reputation. True, "birds of a feather flock together." If, therefore, the moving picture is found in bad company, by all means let it be so judged, and if necessary condemned. As a matter of fact, however, the moving picture is not in the company which its opponents have classified, but on the contrary as already shown, is often opposed to those very things so justly condemned.

Another insidious and entangling alliance to which decided objection must be taken is that of associating the educational and all good moving pictures with those evil pictures which the moving picture trade at large has condemned.

It is tiresome to hear of platform speakers prating about "the evil pictures" in such a way as to deceive their hearers into believing that as a rule moving pictures are evil. These speakers seldom have the honesty to refer to the good and educational pictures; to do so would interfere with their purpose. Therefore, they suppress that which would in any way have any bearing on the advantages of the pictures to which they are justly entitled. The present high standard of moving pictures is a result of the moving picture trade at large refusing to allow association or alliance with pictures of a questionable nature. No one more than the writer is acquainted with the determined efforts put forth by means of the leading trade paper to refuse to in any way acknowledge the unworthy efforts of those who placed financial profit above morality; knowing that more evils have been driven away by ostracism than by censorship. All entangling alliances of evils within the world of moving pictures have been equally denied as with those evils which exist on the outside. Thus, standing alone upon its own determined character, the moving picture as such is not ashamed to go before an enlightened public and claim without any entangling alliance the right to be judged as a fit medium to enlighten the workingman's Sabbath.

General Offers Reward for Film Thieves

An Effort Being Made to Put a Stop to Systematic Thievery.

URGED by the frequency and alarming increase of thefts of valuable films, the General Film Company has organized a detective bureau, especially to overcome this evil and apprehend those responsible for it. Other large concerns have combined to battle with the conditions complained of, but the General is the first large firm to wage organized warfare upon the film crooks.

A notice issued by the Company offers a reward of $500 for the apprehension and conviction of "any party or parties guilty of receiving property stolen from this company or its producers."

A $100 reward is also offered for information which will lead to the arrest and conviction of the guilty parties. The General Film has asked the co-operation of the trade.

Albany Legislative Hearing on Sunday Bill

By Sam Spedon

Desperate Tactics Employed by Clerical Opponents on Sunday Motion Picture Shows—William A. Brady Makes Strong Appeal for Passage of Measure—Albany Forecast Unfavorable

THE hearing before the Legislative Codes Committee relative to the presentation of a bill before the Legislature permitting the showing of motion pictures on Sundays was held at Albany, N. Y., on Wednesday, March 21.

There was an equal representation of those favoring and opposing the bill, about one hundred each. On one side of the Senate chamber sat the exponents of Sunday showings, their faces beaming with anxious hope, inspired by a feeling that their cause was just and right, sustained by the appeal of the masses seeking some forms of clean, wholesome mental relaxation on the one day they could best enjoy it. On the other side were arrayed the opponents of this privilege, grim visaged, austere, determined to fight a measure which they consider a desecration and a "commercializing" of the Sabbath. The scene recalled a picture of an inquisition of the dark ages when men feared to express their honest convictions and hesitated to declare their conscientious beliefs.

Senator Charles D. Newton, who presided, gave the first hour to the opposition and requested the leader to call on his speakers, whom he enjoined strictly to confine their addresses within the hour.

The Keynote of the Opposition.

The Rev. Joseph A. Dunney, of Albany, was the first speaker. He said, addressing himself to the motion picture adherents:

Last year you were here when the State held the strap over your head and you had forces in strong array to defend yourselves and plead with the paternal authority to withhold his hand and use his power of intervention. By some strange freak of—I will not say justice of politics—that hand was held back, or perhaps it was better to say the fingers were politically palsied too much so to sign and censor your pornographic productions. And that time you were balancing dollars and decency, and you could not gainsay it either.

And you are here again, for what a fair-minded citizenry cannot but consider the second act of public effontery. Emboldened, no doubt, by past accomplishments, and the successful resistance of the rights of public morality, you are here now to juggle the decencies of dollars with the decencies of religion, and to use methods and arguments which are as decidedly dishonest as they are utterly unconvincing to self-respecting, State-loving citizens possessed of the elemental instincts of religion. So things stand in the second act. And, let me say, it is a very human drama and means much, not merely for morality and religion, but for safety and the stability of the Empire State.

Father Dunney then turned to the members of the Joint Committee:

It is with a certain respected reluctance that one should approach a body of lawmakers, and let me emphasize the fact that what is here said is said not by a subsidized pleader for any group or party, nor by one who has any axe to grind, but by a plain, blunt citizen, a native son of this Empire State, speaking the mind and heart and soul of thousands who are indignant at the abuses which are creeping snake-like into our civic life, and fearful lest the abettors of this fresh abuse should by their very numbers cow the lawmakers into believing that their numerical strength and their commercial activities are guarantees that they are right. Of that ilk I frankly consider the projectors of this bill to be. They and their bill wear all the earmarks of an enterprise that cannot be other than hurtful to the people and polity of the Empire State. Because of the existent abuses which go far to spoil the peace, rest and happiness of one day in the week, they would wedge in another abuse, and dryrot morally more and more that present state of Godless industry. Evil must be added to evil, abuse must follow upon abuse, so that the present confusion of the Sabbath with pleasure and profit should be even worse confounded. This is the whole state of affairs as it stands in the yellow light of actual fact. Others are garnering pennies on the Sabbath, why shouldn't we do likewise by hook and by crook. And to cover the real reason what wretched attempts are made at logic, explanation and argumentation.

The most pretentious argument heard here today is that the public is being served and has a right to be served according to its demands. But it is a feeble one. It stands on a cork leg and is none the less clumsy despite the fact that there may be a silver band or a nickel peg put into the wooden argument.

This is an intensely practical matter, for it touches the heart and affects the flow of life-blood of the State which you are here to serve and we as citizens are here to sustain. It is no whim or prejudice or fanaticism that urges us so to speak. Nor are we before you to suggest a brand new procedure, but to urge the preservation of a policy too often compromised which is absolutely essential to the security of the State.

Clearly the State should do all it properly can to maintain the morality of its citizens. No state can afford to be indifferent to the moral and religious interests of its citizens. Their religion, whatever it may be, is at the root of character and for that reason it is a function of the State—a legitimate and vital function—to uphold the religion as a great factor in the real life of the citizenry. The State is wholly within its right; even more, it is obligated for its own safety to restrain what is intrinsically vicious activity and to maintain conditions that truly serve its welfare.

This proposed transgression of the Sabbath is intrinsically vicious. The prevalence of unconscionable commercialism, such as this is in the State is no less a community mischief than is widespread drunkenness. If the State has the right and duty to limit the place and hours at which, and the persons to whom intoxicating liquors are to be sold, it has the selfsame duty to protect the citizenry in this matter of moving picture enterprise—a movement which strikes just as deadly a blow at public morality as does the drink evil.

Undermine the love, reverence and loyalty for the Lord's Day and you are sapping at the very foundation of the State fabric. Religion is the only effective teacher of morality and citizenship for the vast multitude of men. Take away its ordinances, strike at its sanctions and you are imperiling the very strength of society. Do away with the sanctity of the Sabbath, as this bill aims to do, and you slam one door on public decency while you throw open the door to every form of abuse, civic, industrial, commercial, professional. Invading the dominion of conscience, you are putting the poignard at the very heart of religion, and you are in the same hour cutting at the heartstrings of the State. For the sake of pennies which you designate from your business interests as "pleasure" you would drive away a general idea of right from the general mind; you would try to diskound a sacred religious conviction. The man who does that removes the strongest stay of patriotism.

Rev. C. W. Leitzell, who followed the Rev. Dunney, speaking as the representative of the Albany Ministerial Association, urged the legislators to first consider the preservation of the Sabbath. He insisted that legalized Sunday movies marked the opening wedge of the commercialization Sunday. "Take away the sanctity of Sunday and you have no Sabbath," shouted Rev. Mr. Leitzell. "And no Sabbath means no religion, no church, no God, no country."

"Well, what is the difference between playing golf on Sunday and going to the moving picture show?" inquired Senator Walker.

"The playing of golf has nothing to do with motion pictures," replied the Albany minister.

"Well, I want the distinction between the morals of the two," insisted Walker.

"That is entirely irrelevant to the question," returned Rev. Mr. Leitzell.

Mrs. Ella Boole, representing the Women's Christian Temperance Union, said the movie question was one of the attitude of the State toward Sunday amusement, while the golf question was only the view of the individual. Sunday movies would be a counter attraction to the home, the church and the Sunday school, she said, declaring "Sunday is not a holiday to be on pleasure alone bent."

Mrs. W. W. Lenox, speaking for 150 women of Albany, said: "The women of Albany are against motion picture shows on Sunday. They are aroused over the possibilities of such temptation as these shows will lead the children to." She told the committee that without effort the committee she represened secured 18,000 signers to a petition against Sunday shows.

John Zwack, representing the Federation of German Catholics, spoke against the bill and presented resolutions adopted by the Albany branch condemning the bill. "We are opposed to giving this enterprise a special license to commercialize Sunday," said Zwack.

Canon William Sheafe Chase of Brooklyn said as a result of a vote of exhibitors taken by a Newburgh man it had been learned 60 per cent. of the exhibitors wanted indecent pictures. He quoted from the report of the Wheeler motion picture committee to show that even the motion picture producers admitted the immoral pictures were injuring the industry. As proof that he wasn't opposed to motion pictures on Sunday if they were free, Canon Chase said he exhibited two reels last Sunday night depicting the life of Christ.

He opposed local option on the motion pictures on the ground that it is one of God's laws to preserve the Sabbath, and he is against "local option on God's laws."

There were a number of one minute speakers against the bill from various parts of the State, and then Dr. Leitzell of Albany, representing the Albany Ministerial Association of sixty-five members, and the Lutheran Association of thirty-five members, was introduced. He declared that the man needs and the church needs the Sabbath. Sunday motion pictures ultimately mean no Sabbath, he said.

At this point Assemblyman Clarence F. Welsh, who is sponsor for a bill favoring local option in the showing of moving pictures on Sunday, was introduced.

Assemblyman Welsh did not consider the merits of Sunday "movies" in his talk, maintaining that he was interested only in his local option measure, insisting that he favored allowing the people of the different sections of the State to decide for themselves this question.

Alderman Robitzek Opens for Supporters.

The first speaker who was heard in support of moving pictures on Sunday was Alderman Harry Robitzek, heading a committee from the Board of Aldermen of New York City, pleaded for the legalizing of Sunday movies "on behalf of 5,000,000,000 people who maintain that Sunday is the people's day." Alderman Robitzek also stated that the people of his district, a thickly populated one, wanted moving pictures on the first day of the week and he wanted them to have them. This statement brought forth peals of laughter from the opposition, which was sternly rebuked by Senator Newton, who said he would clear the room and listen to the other side without any such rude interruption.

It was unfortunate for the moving picture interests that Alderman Robitzek was the initial speaker. His earnestness and enthusiasm got the better of him and his apparent nervousness led him to a reiteration and vociferation of his statements without any definite conclusion.

Congressman George R. Lunn spoke as a Congressman, Mayor of Schenectady and as a minister. When he announced that he spoke as a minister he was boohed by opponents of the measure and he paid his respects to them tartly, insisting that such conduct was discourteous. He said that in his opinion Sunday movies had proved a distinct benefit to Schenectady. He was for local option. He saw no difference between Sunday and any other day of the week and said that if the pictures were indecent on Sunday they were indecent on Wednesday. He said that Sunday was no different than any other day, excepting that the people concentrated their religious thoughts more on Sunday. He told of his efforts to close up movies in Schenectady after the Appellate Division had given its recent decision and how he had met defeat because the people wanted them.

"It will be better for morality and better for decency and the State and the nation by having moving picture shows open on Sunday," said Congressman Lunn.

He told of having converted the ministers of Schenectady to his way of thinking regarding Sunday movies, and also said that when he was a preacher his church was crowded on Sundays, despite moving picture shows being opened.

The next speaker, Peter Brady, speaking for the State Federation of Labor, made a very strong appeal, accentuated by earnestness and sincerity. He was interrupted by one of the cloth, who took exception to one of his assertions. Mr. Brady said that the workingmen of the State are in favor of Sunday movies. He viewed the opposition of the clergymen as being due to the fact that they were unable to get people to come to their churches and blamed it on the motion pictures. He insisted that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was trying to subsidize religion in New York City by bringing Billy Sunday there in an effort to drive the people into the tabernacle.

"That a lie," shouted a Tarrytown minister, the Rev. J. E. Dunn.

"It's the truth," said Brady, as Senator Newton pounded his gavel.

Mr. Brady said proof of his statement lies in the fact that there was a meeting of the Sunday Campaign Committee at Rockefeller's home a few days ago.

Brady declared that the movies were the poor man's pastime and education. He said that the movies had done more to keep the families united than any other form of amusement, picturing the mother and father and their children going to the picture shows together.

"Will anybody here deny that?" said Brady.

"Yes, it's a lie," came the reply.

"Come over here and say it so we can see you," shouted Brady.

Mrs. Wheelock, who said she was a sustaining member of a Fifth avenue church, scored the opposition to the bill, and called those who opposed them "weasel-faced church people," who she said never contributed a cent to the churches, and came here to talk as church people. She had no patience, she said, with such opposition. She didn't go to the movies herself on Sunday, but was willing that they should be open for the entertainment of those who desired to attend. She asked: "How many of you people go out into the byways and highways? Do you welcome such people into your churches? Not much; they're not your kind."

W. A. Brady Makes Strong Appeal.

William A. Brady, the only producer or moving picture man who spoke, defended the industry and the people connected with it. "I resent the accusation that the men behind the motion picture industry strive for immorality. I resent the accusation that the actors and producers are baneful and harmful and want to destroy the morals of the youth of the United States. "No class of entertainment ever invented in the mind of man has done more good for the masses than these so-called movies.

"I am a churchgoer and attend to my religious duties. So does my wife and my daughter and I resent the insinuation that because we may go to movies on Sunday that we have no respect for the day.

"The motion picture is doing more to make Sunday decent than all the churches. The day will come when the doctrine of Christ will be preached in every school and every church through the aid of motion pictures."

He predicted that in a few short years the colleges would have little use for professors for dentists, surgeons and the like would be taught by the aid of motion pictures.

Mr. Brady's address was the most powerful appeal made. It was marked by a sincerity that rang true and carried with it a conviction of knowledge of the cause he advocated. He threw himself whole-souled into his subject and declared he would consider himself personally responsible for the exhibition of a suggestive or immoral picture and would send such an offender to State prison as a dangerous and undesirable citizen. His remarks were frequently interrupted by applause from all parts of the room.

Senator Wellington, who asked many question, said that he was satisfied that Troy, which had Sunday movies until a few weeks ago, had not suffered in its standing among the communities from a moral viewpoint. He thought exhibitors should wait for the Court of Appeals to first decide the question of Sunday movies before looking for legislative sanction.

The Rev. W. H. Jackson, pastor of the Dutch Reformed Church, Oyster Bay, N. Y., also made a plea for Sunday movies. He said that he lived "surrounded by millionaires," and that he was "ashamed" of the way they treated the Sabbath in the neighborhood of Oyster Bay. "The rich church man," he said, "is a greater Sabbath breaker than the poor non-churchgoer." He said that the rich men of Long Island broke the Sabbath to a large extent by making their chauffeurs work that day to drive them to and from church and the golf links.

Senator Franklin McCray from Indiana, who presented the Sunday opening bill in his State, and recently passed both houses, was the last speaker. He held his hearers until the close with his stirring description and application of a motion picture in teaching God's omnipresence and wisdom in the government of the universe.

We do not know whether the bill will be reported favorably or unfavorably, but we do feel that those who were of the opposition, representing the church militant, did not make a favorable impression by their rude interruptions and the animus they manifested in their unseemly behavior, especially from a source from whence we expected Christian tolerance and cultured respect as an example of the teachings of the great Shepherd of the flocks whom they claimed to represent and defend against the "baneful influence" of motion pictures.

Briefs for or against the measure can be presented to the Senate's Codes Committee before Wednesday, March 28.

Among the representatives of the large film enterprises at the hearing were P. A. Parsons, of the Pathe Exchange; Stanley H. Twist, of the Submarine; Joe Brandt, M. H. Hoffman, of the Universal; J. Robert Rubin, Metro; Arthur S. Friend, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; E. T. Stewart, of D. W. Griffith's Enterprises; Geo. Balsdon, Vitagraph; Syd Cohen, of Binghamton, N. Y.; Sam Spedon, Moving Picture World; J. M. Mosier, of Buffalo; Wm. Brandt, of Brooklyn; John Whitman and Henry Coles, Bronx, New York City; John Manheimer, Brooklyn; W. A. Johnson, M. P. News; T. O. Eltenhead, Review; L. A. Buettner, Cohoes, N. Y.; Sam Trigger, New York City; H. F. Elliott, National Association; Grant W. Anson, New York City.

Sunday Picture Bill Doomed

Albany Dopesters Predict That the Measure Will Not Be Passed—Up-State Opposition Said to Be Too Strong.

By C. L. Grant.

UNLESS the unexpected happens the Sunday Moving Picture bill is doomed to defeat. Only one thing can save it. If the New York City members of the Codes Committee, before which Wednesday's hearing was held at Albany, can muster sufficient strength through an alliance with Buffalo legislators and a few others, the bill may possibly manage to squeeze through. The outlook, however, is far from favorable. This view is expressed by not only members of the Codes Committee itself, but among several prominent Senators and Assemblymen. There has been altogether too great an opposition, particularly from the country districts, for any Senator or Assemblyman from these districts to cast lightly aside.

The first executive session of the Codes Committee for the consideration of the Sunday picture proposition has been called for Wednesday afternoon, March 28. At that time the six New York City Senate members of the committee, Senators Gilchrist, Lawson, Murphy, Walker, Daly and Cotillo, will report the bill out of committee, going over the head of Senator Charles D. Newton, chairman of the committee, and opposed to the passage of the bill. The vote will be 6 to 3. Senators Slater and Wellington will stand by their chairman.

Once out of committee the bill will meet with strong opposition from many Senators and Assemblymen, who have already gone so far as to write to their constituents, in reply to hundreds of letters, that they will oppose the bill.

It was noticeable at Wednesday's hearing that while there was evidence that the country districts were generally opposed, that there was a well organized opposition from many of the cities through organizations of persons connected with the church.

A well-known Senator made the statement on the day following the hearing that the liquor interests of the State are also more or less firmly lined up against any proposition of legalizing Sunday pictures, due to the encroachments that have been made into the till of the cafe by the popular amusement. The liquor men say that they do not desire to take any further chances in depleting a till now seriously threatened with bankruptcy.

While there are three propositions before the Codes Committee in an endeavor to bring about the Sunday pictures, one, that of Senator Walker, permitting a general opening throughout the State, another allowing the theaters to open at 12 o'clock on Sundays, and a third, that of Assemblyman Clarence Welsh, leaving to a vote of the municipalities themselves, it was said by a member of the committee that only the first and third will be given consideration.

At the present time the New York City legislators appear to be lined up against the remainder of the State on the question of legalizing the Sunday movie. There is some talk of Buffalo siding in with New York in a final effort to get the measure through and defeat other up-State legislators, who are open in their assertion that they will down the bill if it ever comes to a vote.

Senator George Slater, who hails from Westchester County, and although a member of the Codes Committee, was not present at Wednesday's hearing, explained his action later on with the remark that "they could speak as long as they wished in favor of legalizing Sunday movies," but that he stood absolutely against such. Senator Slater added, however, that he was not opposed to letting the situation stand as it is.

Senator Slater also said that he had spoken to Senator Elon R. Brown, leader of the upper house, and that he, too, was opposed to the bill. If Senator Brown decides to come out openly against the measure the bill has but slim chances, even if New York City stands to a man.

Senator William A. Carson, a member of the Wheeler Investigating Committee, but not of the Codes, is also out against the bill. He comes from a small up-State town, and like many of the others, has been literally swamped with petitions from his constituents. Senator Charles W. Wicks, who has been in the limelight for several months on account of the Foods and Markets bill, has also taken a firm stand against the legalizing of Sunday motion picture shows, saying that he cannot very well afford to overlook the mass of letters which he has received from persons opposed.

Senator T. Douglass Robinson, a relative of Colonel Roosevelt, also predicts the defeat of the bill. Senator James Towner, who comes from Dutchess County, and has three cities in his district, will fight the passage of the measure, owing to the fact that up to the present time he has not received a single word in favor of the bill, even though something of that sort might reasonably be expected from Poughkeepsie, Beacon and Hudson. He has, however, received many communications asking him to oppose the bill.

Just what attitude the Assembly will take is a question. Speaker Thaddeus Sweet comes from the small town of Phoenix, and while he at the present time refuses to commit himself, it is said by those who are close to him that he cannot afford to take any political chances by favoring the bill. There are thirteen members of the Assembly on the Codes Committee. Out of that number New York City claims Assemblyman Meyer, Ahearn, Shapiro, Aranow and Bloch. Assemblyman Taylor comes from Buffalo. The other members are Assemblymen Chace, Coffey, Fearon, Duke, G. T. Davis, Fancher and O'Hare, the latter being from Long Island, the others being residents of small places with the exception of Mr. Fearon, who comes from Syracuse.

Jersey Sunday Opening Fails

On Final Day of Session Senator Is Called Away by Death, Destroying the Majority of One Vote.

THE bill for Sunday showing of motion pictures in New Jersey was not reported out of the Senate Committee. The bill passed the Assembly and was to be voted on by the Senate Friday, March 23. Everything was set, the necessary votes had been pledged and it would have passed the Senate by the necessary deciding vote, but at the eleventh hour Senator Stevens of Cape May received a telegram announcing the death of his daughter and he was obliged to return home at once, thus making it impossible to put the bill through. As Friday was the last day of the legislative session it will be necessary to go through the same work next year to bring the bill before the Legislature.

It is no fault of Dr. Charles Hespe, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' State League, that the bill failed. He worked almost single-handed at his own expense, and it is due to him that it passed the Assembly. We hope Dr. Hespe will be supported by a united body of exhibitors and other interests next year, taking up the work earlier and doing everything in their power to secure its passage through both houses.

WHEELER MOTION PICTURE BILL COMING.

The Wheeler bill, embodying the suggestions contained in the recent report of the Joint Legislative Investigating Committee, will be drafted the forepart of next week. It will contain from 25 to 30 sections. The bill will be drafted by Robert Cummings of the State Bill Drafting Commission. According to Mr. Cummings, it will probably contain no drastic changes intended for the motion picture industry other than those named in the report. The bill will be introduced in the Assembly late next week by Heber E. Wheeler, chairman of the committee. While the tenets of the bill are quite generally understood there appears to be no opposition to its ultimate passage.

Betty Dodsworth in "Trooper 44"

BETTY DODSWORTH, who played the heavy character of Cora in the E. I. S. production, "Trooper 44," is a new recruit in pictures from the legitimate stage. Her last dramatic role was in support of James K. Hackett in "Macbeth," in which she played a minor role and understudied Viola Allen as "Lady Macbeth." Although Miss Dodsworth has been playing for the screen but a short time, she has appeared in several important productions, among them Linda Griffith's "Charity," under the direction of Frank Powell; "The Smugglers," under the direction of Sidney Olcott; the McClure production of "Wrath," under the direction of Theodore Marston; "The Traveling Salesman," under the direction of Joseph Kaufman; with Mme. Petrova under the direction of Burton King, and in "Trooper 44." Miss Dodsworth is a native of Lexington, Ky., and is a grand-daughter of the late Jim Dodsworth, the most widely known horseman in the blue grass country.

State President Sahner Appeals

Urges Exhibitors of Pennsylvania to Fight Children's Law Which Threatens Theaters in That State.

THE exhibitors of Pennsylvania have been considerably aroused by the introduction in the Legislature of a bill barring children under 16 years of age from moving picture theaters and all places of amusement unless accompanied by an adult. The act excepts such performances as shall be purely of an educational, fraternal, charitable or religious nature. The bill has been proposed by Representative Jeff Smith, of Philadelphia, and final action on it is expected during the present session. Moving picture men say that if the bill becomes a law it will prove one of the worst hardships ever imposed upon the industry in Pennsylvania, and steps have been taken to fight its passage. G. A. Sahner, president of the Pennsylvania State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and secretary of the Pittsburgh Local of the Exhibitors' League, has issued the following appeal for united action in the matter by the exhibitors of the state:

"Some time ago I sounded a warning on preparedness of the motion picture exhibitors to defend their business against adverse legislation in these words: 'Mr. Exhibitor: What are you going to do about adverse legislation in the future? Let the other fellow do it?' I also cited the benefit that the exhibitor was enjoying through the work done through the Exhibitors' League in the past and for those who held no membership and who did not contribute to the accomplishment of the many things done for them.

"Now comes the price of negligence, which is destined to work an additional hardship on the picture show houses in Pennsylvania if the present bill introduced in the legislature by Mr. Jeff Smith, of Philadelphia, becomes a law. You know what the quarantine last summer did to your receipts as a temporary order. What will a permanent act of the legislature do to your business? And it surely will become a law unless we enter our protest and put forward some concerted effort to combat the said bill.

"How is it to be done or who will do it for you? You would not let your individual business go by default without putting forth an effort to hold it if it was threatened by any obstacle. Then why will you be indifferent to something that threatens you in a general way? You must wake up to the fact that you need organization and you should at once make application for membership in the League.

"The League has fought your battle in the past without any response from you (I refer to the exhibitor who has stood on the outside) until our militant forces and ammunition have been spent, and we are now appealing to you to take up the matter of recruiting the spirit of the League by showing some appreciation of the necessity of joining our forces to meet the onslaught of the regulators and reformers of your business. Will you enlist for the cause, or will you be the same old fellow saying let the other fellow do it? We await your verdict."

North Dakota Exhibitors

Scheduled to Meet at Fargo April 29—Organization Joins National League and Elects Officers.

EXHIBITORS of North Dakota will reconvene at Hotel Waldorf in Fargo, April 29 and 30, to investigate the history of Senate Bill 294, which it was thought would provide a loop-hole for the giving of Sunday moving picture shows. The bill permitting certain Sunday events was supposed to have been amended by seven words: "exhibitions of agricultural research and educational matters." The records of the passage of this measure are not clear. The house journal does not show that the bill was amended, although President H. L. Hartman of the North Dakota Theater Managers' Association contends the bill was amended in the house before it was finally passed by a vote of 60 aye, 26 nay and 27 not voting. If the house amended the bill the concurrence of the senate would have been necessary. This is not shown in the house message to the Senate advising that the bill be passed unchanged.

The name of the organization was changed at this last meeting to the Motion Pictures Exhibitors' Association of North Dakota and the body has become a member of the national organization. A resolution was adopted providing for the co-operation of North Dakota exhibitors in abolishing questionable pictures.

The following officers were elected: President, H. L. Hartman, of Mandan; first vice-president, R. C. Harper, of Enderlin; second vice-president, Archie Miller, of Devils Lake; third vice-president, L. G. Darling, of Kenmare; fourth vice-president, William McCarthy, of Fargo; fifth vice-president, Gus Meyers, of Grand Forks; secretary. N. A. Burch, of Valley City, and treasurer, G. E. Wingreene, of Bismarck.

Exhibitors' Association Is No More

Oregon Motion Picture Men's Association Dies a Quiet Death—Lack of Co-operation the Cause—There Are Hopes of Reorganization.

IT IS safe to say that the Oregon Motion Picture Men's Association is dead. The treasurer has stopped collecting dues. In Oregon, reputed to be the home of freak legislation, above all the other states in the Union, a strong moving picture men's organization is imperative if the industry is to flourish in its full glory, because experience has shown that it is to the Beaver State that many of the so-called reformers, chiefly political, flock to try their experiments. The need of organization to protect the honest exhibitor against the unscrupulous one who thrives by playing up the salaciousness of his shows has also been demonstrated in Oregon. There are exhibitors in Portland and Oregon who honestly believe that one of these purposes of organization is just as important as the other, the ideas of the censor board on this question notwithstanding.

Lack of co-operation killed the Oregon Motion Picture Men's Association. This is evidenced by the fact that two months ago, when a new censor ordinance was passed, meetings were held to discuss a possible referendum of the ordinance. These meetings were supposed to be secret. Letters were sent to Portland exhibitors asking their ideas on the subject. A few days after the last meeting, one of these letters had found its way to the City Hall and to the censor board and the film men's plans were known to those who were not supposed to know them. Out of the forty letters mailed, only three exhibitors responded at all, giving their ideas on the proposed referendum. So the Oregon Motion Picture Men's Association is dead.

During the life of the organization it was a known fact that only those film men who were then vitally interested in any issues attended the meetings where those issues were discussed. Up at the City Hall the sentiment existed that the association was formed and operated only by those men who had an "axe to grind." However, the early work of the organization, done at its luncheons and meetings, was most auspicious, and as long as there was co-operation among the film fraternity the organization prospered.

With the city election coming in June and the many changes that have just been made on Film Row, it is possible that the old organization will again come to life.

Ludwig Schindler

Recently Appointed Chairman of the National Exposition and Convention Committee of the M. P. E. L. of America for 1917.

LUDWIG SCHINDLER, who was recently appointed chairman of the National Exposition and Convention Committee of the M. P. E. L. of America, for the present year, is one of the most interesting figures in the colony of Chicago exhibitors. He was one of the first showmen in the city to recognize the possibilities of the moving picture as a great popular amusement, and about eleven years ago turned the Schindler theater, 1009 West Huron street, Chicago, into a moving picture temple.

Ludwig Schindler.

This theater had been specially built by him several years before for the production of German dramas, he himself being an accomplished German actor and playing leads with his own company for many years. In the early nineties he managed successfully three companies of German players, who played only one night each week and yet made money, which was then considered quite a feat in show circles. When the Schindler was turned into a moving picture theater it was one of the largest theaters in the country showing moving pictures, as it seated 1,100 people. At the present time Mr. Schindler owns both the Schlindler and the Plaza, the latter at 308 West North avenue and seating 1,195 people, and has also important business interests outside of the industry.

Mr. Schindler soon showed that he was a valuable adherent to the moving picture ranks by the splendid work done in the interests of exhibitors generally. At all times, when objectionable legislation threatened even the existence of the exhibitor, Schindler was always found fighting in the front ranks or marshaling his forces.

In the first municipal agitation over an increase in the license for moving picture theaters, Mr. Schindler convinced the authorities that the exhibitor could ill afford to pay more. Later on he fought, tooth and nail, the sixteen-year-old ordinance which sought to prohibit all minors under sixteen years of age from attending moving picture theaters, and in a forceful and brilliant speech before the Council Committee he practically won the day.

Mr. Schindler has already started active preparations to make the coming National Exposition the most successful of any of the six which have preceded it. He has already signed a lease for the Chicago Coliseum, and has announced several innovations. One of the most important of these is that the National Convention and the National Exposition will both be held in the same building, so that the Coliseum will be the center of the industry during convention and exposition week. In order to make this plan practical Mr. Schindler has secured the Coliseum Annex for the special use of the convention.

Manufacturers and exhibitors and all concerned are requested to make note of the fact that the date of the exposition has been changed from July 7-14 to July 14-22.

On the committee that will assist Mr. Schindler in the preliminaries for the exposition are the following: Peter J. Schaefer, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer; Nathan Ascher, of Ascher Bros.; Joseph Trinz, of Lubliner & Trinz, and Alfred Hamburger, of the Hamburger Enterprises. Mr. Hamburger is also a member of the national executive committe. Thus the four most prominent exhibitors in Chicago are behind Mr. Schindler in his arduous work preparing for the exposition.

Mr. Schindler is well known to the trade generally, and is held in high esteem by the producers, exchangemen and exhibitors who know him.

Maryland League Arouses Exhibitors

Interest in the Ball Is Growing and Many Pledge Their Assistance.

AT 7.15 o'clock on the evening of March 19, at their headquarters in the New Theater Building, 210 West Lexington street, Baltimore, a private meeting of the Exhibitors' League of Maryland was held, at which several important matters, now pending, were discussed. Then, when this meeting had adjourned at 8.15 o'clock, another was held, which was open for all the exhibitors, whether they were members of the league or not, who cared to attend, at which an enthusiastic discussion of the ball plans was given.

This gathering was one of the most enthusiastic that has yet been held, for not only were there present a fine showing of the affiliated members, but a number of other exhibitors, who, until this time, have stood absolutely neutral on the matter, attended and joined in the discussion with the zest of old timers.

F. A. Hornig, president of the league, invited F. C. Weber, chairman of the ball committee, to take the chair. Mr. Weber then presided over the assemblage and began his talk by making a strong plea to back up the league with their hearty support, and invited those not affiliated to become members.

"The committees now appointed," stated Mr. Weber, "cannot do all the work attached to making this ball a success, they must have the backing of the entire league; but, of course, no exhibitor, not a member, can be on a committee. No one man is to have credit for having arranged this ball, you are all to have a hand in it, for it is being given by the league. Do not let any feelings that you have had regarding the former league interfere with what you do now. There is room for every one of you on the committees. Your money will be protected, for not a cent can be spent unless ratified by the ten members on the committees. There seems to be a lack of interest in the affairs going on in the film business in Baltimore today. We want to revive that old time pride which we used to feel in the former days. Other businesses have affairs to stimulate the interest of the people engaged in them; we want this ball to act for that purpose. There are only five weeks more to prepare for the event. The Lyric has been engaged and a deposit made; the tickets and slides are being printed and made, and the program arrangement is in the hands of Mr. Gaffney—let us all hustle and do our best to make this dance a great big affair!"

Mr. Weber then invited others present to speak. Louis Schlichter arose and stated that the idea of the ball was not merely one of pleasure, but one to instill interest in the business. He went on further to make the startling inference that an important question of vital importance to the film industry in Maryland will probably arise at the next session of the Legislature, "which will need the whole hearted action of every member of the league, and some exhibitors, who may not have joined by that time, may think they were not wise in keeping away."

An interesting question came up regarding the selling of dance tickets by those exhibitors, not members of the league. It was at first decided that no such exhibitors would be given tickets to sell unless they became members. Then T. J. Bohannan of the Great Wizard, and Frank A. Durkee, owners of several theaters, not members, stated they would gladly place the tickets on sale in their box offices, even though they were not affiliated, their offer was taken and the former ruling quashed.

A committee of four, including Frederick Clement Weber, J. Louis Rome, L. A. DeHoff and Joseph Brodie, went to New York last week to arrange for the appearance of several of the most prominent stars. After the meeting came to a close a very enjoyable luncheon of sandwiches and beer was served and cigars were then passed around.

Among those who attended the meeting were: Louis Schlichter, Frank A. Hornig, Miss T. Marks, I. Levine, H. Cluster, E. C. Sandell, G. Horton Gaffney, L. A. DeHoff, Thomas D. Goldberg, J. Louis Rome, William Leicht, M. A. Berger, D. A. Neeley, R. L. Byrum, J. R. Cochran, William Ginsberg, R. Condon, T. D. Hildebrandt, B. Seligman, Joseph Brodie, J. Goodman, T. C. Landar, F. F. Lang, William Tyler, Jack Levine, B. Finnan, Charles S. Anderson, E. C. Berger, E. Scheck, I. Berman, Frederick Clement Weber, W. D. Pacey, J. Rabinowitz, W. Albers, N. P. Burns, B. Rosenbauer, H. Blechman, E. B. McCurdy, T. J. Bohannan and F. A. Durkee.

Rochester Film Frolic

Some Sense and Much Nonsense Enjoyed by Film Men and Friends.

THE first annual film frolic given by the Pictureplay News and the Rochester Exhibitors' League was held at Moerlbach Rathskeller, Rochester, Tuesday evening, March 20. The guests of honor were R. Andrew Hamilton, official censor and commissioner of public safety; Benjamin B. Cunningham, corporation counsel; George F. Argetsinger, state senator; Eugene J. Dwyer, president of the Common Council; Alderman H. Bradley Carroll, chairman of council law committee; Alderman John McParlin, member of council law committee; Alderman Hiram I. Davis, member of council law committee; John A. Robertson and George A. Blair, superintendent and manager of Film Department, Eastman Kodak Company; John Fuller, manager of Pathe Exchange, Buffalo; F. W. Haritch, manager of Vitagraph Exchange, Syracuse; C. A. Taylor, manager of Metro Exchange, Buffalo; Ira Mosher, manager of Palace theater, Buffalo; W. A. V. Mack, manager of General Exchange, Buffalo; Sam Spedon, Moving Picture World, New York.

The guests and members in attendance were John J. McIverney, toastmaster; A. H. Wolff, president of the Rochester League; George H. Caffery, Clinton, Rochester; Fred Gurling, Knickerbocker theater, Rochester; F. M. Zimmerman, Bluebird, Buffalo; Charles Mason, Motion Picture Equipment Company, Rochester; Samuel W. Leary, Charlotte, Crystal theater, Palmyra; William A. V. Mack, Salem, manager General Film, Buffalo; Ira Mosher, Palace theater, Buffalo; Israel Cobe, Civilization Feature Company; W. C. Fickeisen, General Film, Rochester; B. Munk, Park theater, Rochester; John B. Pfeifer, Plymouth theater, Rochester; George Simpson, Regent theater; J. J. Farren, Victoria, Rochester; E. G. Tapham, Rochester; G. E. Elliott, moving picture operator, Rochester; V. H. Bendell, Essanay; Max Hendu and Louis Green, K-E-S-E; B. Mahler, Triangle; John "World" Child, Brady-made; Thomas A. Taylor, William Frank, Michael Carr, A. M. Spiehler, George Kress, Frank Koch, J. J. Farren, William MacCallum.

If the general good time provided for the first frolic is indicative of succeeding ones, larger quarters will have to be secured for the accommodation of the guests. Everybody was in happy mood, not a dull moment during the festivities, which lasted well into the "wee sma' hours" of the next morning. A full orchestra from one of the leading theaters furnished music and encouraged the boys in singing all the latest popular and patriotic songs. The evening was not devoid of the serious consideration of many important problems of the industry, set forth in the addresses made by the honored guests. Hon. R. Andrew Hamilton spoke on the co-operation the League had given him in keeping the screen free from objectionable pictures and assisting him in many other ways. Much credit is due Charles H. Geyer and the managers of Moerlbach's for the generous hospitality and attention they gave to every detail necessary to add to the comfort and entertainment of the frolickers.

CINCINNATI LEAGUE COMMITTEES.

At the regular meeting of the Cincinnati Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, held a few days ago, the president announced the appointment of the following standing committees: Trade Rules, A. G. Hettesheimer, chairman; I. Libson, I. W. McMahan, Charles Weigel, Otto Dieckmann, John Weining, J. J. Huss; membership, Otto Ludeking, chairman; J. A. Ackerman, Otto Dieckmann, J. J. Huebner, Jr., Charles Weigel and Harry Linch; exchanges, John Weining, chairman; Henry Hoefle, Jesse Meis; entertainment, J. J. Huebner, Jr., Otto Ludeking, J. A. Ackerman, Thomas A. Reilly.

BROOKLYN EXHIBITORS' ELECTION.

The next meeting of the Brooklyn League will be held at the Triangle theater, Flatbush avenue and Fulton street, on Saturday night, March 31, at 11 p. m. sharp. The election of officers for the ensuing year will take place. The committee appointed to represent the Brooklyn organization at the hearings in Albany on Sunday opening will report. The ball committee will render a final report. Many guests have been invited and it is your duty to be present to welcome them. Refreshments and eats galore

ST. LOUIS EXHIBITORS GIVE LUNCHEON.

The Theater Managers' and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of St. Louis, Mo., gave a luncheon to the trade of that city at the Mercantile Hotel on Thursday, March 22. The assemblage of picture men was addressed by Mayor Kiel of St. Louis and Rabbi Harrison.

TOTO, HIPPODROME CLOWN, FOR PATHE.

Following the consummation of a contract, providing for the appearance of Hary Myers and Rosemary Theby in a one-reel comedy each week on the Pathe program and the enthusiastic reception of the first two-reel "Lonesome Luke" comedy at the Rialto and other big theaters throughout the country, a statement from Pathe now announces the engagement by the Rolin Film Company of Toto, the famous clown of the New York Hippodrome, and outlines a new comedy program.

Toto is what is known as a "posturing" clown. The "contortionist" clown leans backwards, bending his spine. Toto, on the contrary, leans forward and can sink on the ground as gracefully as any dancer. One of his favorite tricks is to bury himself in the oversized topcoat which he will wear in the Rolin comedies. He has arranged for a special costume for pictures. Unlike most clowns, Toto uses very little makeup.

Toto, probably the most famous clown in the world, will start for the Rolin studios in Los Angeles as soon as the present season at the Hippodrome ends and his comedies are expected to be ready in the early fall.

DAVIS MANAGES FAMOUS PLAYERS' MONTREAL OFFICE.

Maurice M. Davis has been appointed manager of the Montreal office of the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, with which company he has been connected for the past three years, succeeding Harry A. Kaufman, who has resigned his position to go into business for himself.

Special Meeting of Chicago Local, March 16

Members Went on Record as Being Against Advance Deposits on Films—Special Committee of Five Appointed to Visit Springfield on March 28, When State Censorship Bill Comes Up.

AT A SPECIAL meeting of the Chicago Local of the M. P. E. L. of America, held Friday morning, March 16, which was largely attended, the matter of the deposit system was taken up and the members went on record as being against it, believing that a better and fairer credit basis should exist in the relations between distributors and exhibitors. The special committee recently appointed on advance deposits for film service is planning to find a way that will be preferable and more satisfactory all around, and a report will be made by the committee at the next meeting of the Local, on April 6.

The proposed State censorship bill was also taken up and the members of the Local went on record as being opposed to all forms of censorship. The members were then informed by President Hopp that Guy Guernsey, who is fathering the State censorship bill in the Legislature, would be present at the meeting of the Reel Fellows' Club that evening, when he would explain the proposed bill.

The following committee was then appointed to represent the Local officially at that meeting: Robert R. Levy, George Laing and Dr. Sam Atkinson. About fifteen other well-known exhibitors were present at the meeting, in addition to the committee.

Mr. Guernsey informed the committee of exhibitors that the matter was in the hands of the Committee on License and Miscellany, of the House of Representatives, and that the bill would come up on March 28 for action.

At the special meeting of the Chicago Local, President Hopp was authorized to appoint a committee of five to go down to Springfield and represent the league at the hearing of the bill before the Legislature. Following are the names of the members selected: Robert R. Levy, Fred W. Schaefer, Wm. Heaney, Alfred Hamburger and Joseph Hopp. The members of this committee expect that W. W. Watts, of Springfield, and G. M. Luttrell, of Jacksonville, will also be present to aid them at that time.

A meeting of the city council sub-committee on the proposed increase of licenses for film exchanges and picture theaters took place Wednesday, March 21, but the meeting was again postponed, with the probability that it will not come up again until the inauguration of the new council. President Hopp, of the Chicago Local, was present at the meeting.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of March 25 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

George M. Cohan at the Strand.

THE widely heralded motion picture debut of George M. Cohan took place at the Strand theater the week of March 25. "Broadway Jones," one of his greatest stage successes, afforded him his initial screen vehicle, in which he is supported by an excellent cast including Marguerite Snow, Russell Bassett, Crawford Kent and Ida Darling. As a distributor of mirth and general good cheer, Mr. Cohan is equally as successful on the screen as on the spoken stage. Victor Moore, who some years ago appeared in one of Mr. Cohan's plays, was also on the Strand bill as the star of a new comedy, entitled "Rough and Ready Reggie." A new chapter of Raymond L. Ditmar's "Living Book of Nature," the Strand Topical Review and the first presentation on any screen of an Animated Sculpture comedy in which clay figures play all the parts, were also on the program. J. Oriz De Barate, Grace Hoffman, Arthur Depew and Ralph Brigham were the soloists.

"The Clock" at the Rialto.

The Rialto offered a program of standard quality, with "The Clock," a Bluebird photoplay, as its chief pictorial feature. Franklyn Farnum and Agnes Vernon have the leading roles. The picture is essentially a comedy and is based on a capital story with a clever idea skilfully developed. Mr. Farnum plays the role of a good hearted, thoroughly likeable young idler, whose total disregard for time makes it impossible for him ever to be prompt in keeping his appointments. Aaron Hoffman is responsible for the story of "The Clock." The direction is by William Worthington.

The Rex Beach-Dr. Salisbury pictures showed a mountain lion hunt in the highlands of Central America, besides views of the sugar and coffee industries and numerous other interesting tropical glimpses. "The Dipper," a novel comedy, based on one of Walt Mason's popular small town poems, and a topical digest completed the pictorial features. Marion Rodolfo was the soloist.

"The Eternal Sin" at the Broadway.

Florence Reed in the Herbert Brenon production of Victor Hugo's celebrated drama, "Lucretia Borgia," was the attraction at the Broadway theater. The engagement closes Saturday evening March 31.

The Eighty-first Street Theater Bill.

At the Eighty-first Street theater for the entire week Wm. S. Hart, in "The Square Deal Man," was the attraction. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Claire Anderson was seen in "Her Candy Kid." Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday Chester Conklin in a Keystone farce, "Dodging His Doom," furnished the film fun.

Associated Advertisers "Doing their Bit"

Week Beginning April 8 Designated as National Duty Week —Manufacturers Asked to Aid Patriotic Campaign.

THE FIRST call to arms of the National Duty Committee of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers has gone out. At the regular weekly meeting held on Thursday, March 22, the advertisers entertained four officers of the Army and Navy at luncheon, and plans were formulated for a national duty week. The week beginning April 8 was designated as a fitting time to concentrate the forces of the moving picture industry upon the duty and responsibility of citizenship in this national crisis.

The guests of the association were: Captain G. W. Harvey of the Army, and Lieutenant Commander Marion Epply, Lieutenant J. M. Patton and Lieutenant A. M. Cohen of the Navy. It was by them that the suggestion of a national duty week was made to the association.

It was decided to send out a summons to every moving picture manufacturing company to observe the week of April 8-15 as a national duty week, to include in its program all of the patriotic films and to arrange its posters in such manner as to bring the crisis of the country to the attention of as many citizens as possible, and in every way to arouse America to the danger of its supine and denfenseless attitude. It was unanimously voted to ask all of the manufacturing companies to attach a trailer to one or all of the films which are issued during that week, reading substantially as follows:

Your Country Needs You Now!

The United States Naval Reserve Force is in need of men from all trades and professions to enroll at once to guard our coasts. Service for war time only. Apply at once either to the United States Naval Reserve Force, 26 Cortlandt street, New York, or to any United States Navy Yard or recruiting station.

Seabury Resigns as Association Counsel

In Future Trade Body in Ordinary Cases Will Be Guided by Advice of Company Lawyers.

AT THE meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, held Thursday, March 22, the office of general counsel of the association, previously held by William M. Seabury, was abolished by mutual consent.

Mr. Seabury was immediately retained as legal adviser in one case which is now on the calendar of the organization. The yearly contract by which Mr. Seabury acted as attorney for the association, however, was terminated, and in the future legal advice will be engaged from time to time, as necessity may demand.

The legal affairs of the National Association will now be guided by a committee of lawyers composed of attorneys of the producing companies represented in that body. This committee will act in an advisory capacity, but in the matter of handling special cases it will be the policy of the association to engage special counsel.

THE CLEAN FILM MOVEMENT IS GROWING, SAYS TOM NORTH.

Tom North, who with the Pathe-Thanhouser, "The Vicar of Wakefield," has been touring the eastern Middle West, reports a strong impetus behind the "clean film" movement. He says exhibitors declare sex stuff is on the wane, and that there is a distinct demand for wholesome pictures. Mr. North played Mr. Mandelbaum's big Stillman in Cleveland, beginning March 17.

New 2,500-Seat House for Washington

Harry M. Crandall to Build Ultra-Modern Theater—Metropolitan Will Be Sixth in Crandall Chain.

By Clarence L. Linz.

ANNOUNCEMENT has just been made by Harry M. Crandall, of Washington, D. C., of the completion of a deal whereby there will soon come into being the sixth of the chain of motion picture houses which he will control in that city. The new theater, which is to be known as Crandall's Metropolitan, will be built at Tenth and F streets, Northwest. The entrance will be on the latter thoroughfare and will be sixty feet wide, while the house will extend down Tenth street for a distance of 120 feet to the old Ford theater, where Abraham Lincoln was assassinated at the close of the Civil War.

The total cost of the theater, including the land, is estimated at $800,000, although in all probability it will be found that the actual outlay will exceed this sum considerably before the opening of the theater on October 1. It will have a seating capacity of about 2,500. This capacity will be obtained from 1,400 seats on the main floor, 900 seats in the balcony and 200 in the loge boxes. Between the entrance and the auditorium will be an oval-shaped foyer, approximately thirty feet wide and sixty feet long. It will be surmounted by a gold dome, a replica of that in the Rialto theater, New York City.

The color scheme will be carried out in ivory and old rose, while the decorations will conform to the Adam period. No pillars or obstructions of any kind will hinder the view of the spectator from any part of the house. Mosaic and terrazzo flooring, marble trimmings, all harmonized, will unite to form a palatial interior effect.

The promenade lounge, between the first and second floors, which will be seventy feet long and thirty feet wide, will be one of the main features of this new house, although there will be many things that will make it different from any other project heretofore undertaken in this city. Here tea and other refreshments will be served and dancing will be permitted. The two floors will be connected by a gradual incline, the most modern arrangement of the sort, doing away entirely with the steps. Twelve loge boxes, each containing four rows of seats with a total capacity of two hundred, will be placed just forward of the balcony, the most advantageous viewpoint in the entire theater, giving an exclusive location for parties who desire reservations.

At convenient points on all three floors will be placed dressing and rest rooms for women patrons and smoking rooms for men. These are to be provided with every modern equipment, and will be in charge of especially trained attendants. Another distinctive feature will be the new semi-direct, self-diffusing lighting system, by means of which any desired light effect can be obtained in an instant, varying from a full sunlight effect to a subdued moonlight or the semi-darkness preceding dawn.

Special fixtures are to be designed for the building, as well as seats, hangings and other furnishings, all of which will harmonize with the color scheme. A specially designed ventilating plant is calculated to change the air in the theater at least once in every fifteen minutes, and the fresh air is to be warmed in winter, and ice-cooled in summer.

There will be in all twelve emergency exits, placed at convenient points. It is estimated that less than a minute will be required to empty the house of its patrons should the emergency arise.

Store buildings are to be located on either side of the F street entrance, while offices will occupy the space at the front of the building not occupied by the auditorium. These rooms will be reached by special high-speed elevators and the offices themselves will be most modern in their layout and equipment.

The screen will be placed on a stage on the Tenth street side. It will be made of radium-gold cloth.

Work will be commenced as soon as the bids, plans and specifications can be completed. This work, it is estimated, will require about six weeks, leaving five months for the construction of the edifice. The opening will occur simultaneously with the opening of the new Knickerbocker theater, now under construction at Eighteenth street and Columbia road, Northwest. Its erection will complete the chain of photoplay houses controlled by Mr. Crandall and the new Crandall Theater Company, of which he is the president. Others associated with him in this new enterprise are Barry Bulkley, who figured in the Hy Art Masterplays Company when it was formed here; J. A. Michelsen, Tucker K. Sands and Fred A. Swindell.

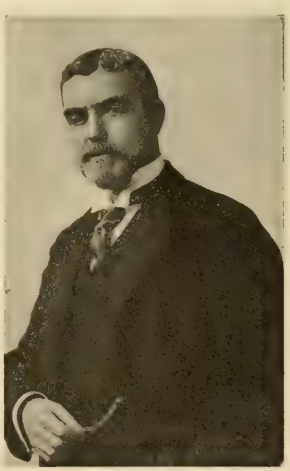
It may be said that the Metropolitan will fulfill Mr. Crandall's desires. For many months, in fact for several years, he has been figuring on some day getting on F street, with a location readily accessible to both the shopping center and Ninth street. This latter thoroughfare is conceded to be Washington's motion picture street, while F street contains many fine stores, both specialty and department stores; so between the two the new theater will be able to cater to all classes of people and, by reason of its type, it will hold both. In addition to the Metropolitan, and the Knickerbocker (under construction), Mr. Crandall controls the Avenue Grand, at 645 Pennsylvania avenue, Southeast, the Apollo, at 624 H street, Northeast; the Savoy, at Fourteenth street and Columbia road, Northwest, and the house which bears his name, at Ninth and E streets, Northwest. By reason of this control, Mr. Crandall is looked upon as the "movie magnate" of Washington. He is largely entitled to this distinction and a great deal more credit is due him because of his energy, ability and the efficiency with which he has operated his properties.

Elmendorf Travel Talks, Inc.

New Corporation Formed by A. H. Woods to Exploit the Elmendorf Pictures.

FOLLOWING on the heels of the formation of A. H. Picture Corporation comes the announcement from Mr. Woods of the organization of the Elmendorf Travel Talks, Inc., with a capital of $1,000,000, with Dwight Elmendorf, the famous traveler, lecturer and artist as president, Mr. Woods as vice-president and treasurer, and Dr. Albert A. Lowenthal, of Chicago, as secretary. The offices of the corporation are at present in the Eltinge Theater Building, New York.

With the organization of the Dwight Elmendorf Travel Talks, Inc., Mr. Woods takes over under his personal supervision, in addition to his extensive theatrical and moving picture interests, the attraction known as the Elmendorf Travel Talks, including more than 60,000 negatives, gathered by Mr. Elmendorf in every country of the world at a cost of more than $2,000,000 in the course of his twenty-five years' work as traveler and lecturer.



Dwight Elmendorf.

These travel talks, illustrated from this superb collection, will hereafter be presented as an A. H. Woods attraction at prices of from 25 cents to $2, first in the big legitimate theaters and ultimately in all the moving picture houses of the country.

Early in April Mr. Elmendorf will appear personally at a legitimate New York theater, under Mr. Woods' direction, for an engagement of about four weeks, during which time he will deliver a series of his complete travel talks, as given at Carnegie Hall, New York, and Orchestra Hall, Chicago.

On or about May 1 Mr. Woods will present simultaneously in about fifteen first-class theaters in New York, Chicago and other big cities a series of travel talks, embracing complete trips through fifteen different countries, for an engagement of one week in each city, thereby establishing a complete Elmendorf circuit for a period of fifteen weeks. These talks will be given by thirty lecturers, companions and coworkers of Mr. Elmendorf, especially trained by him for that purpose.

The chain of theaters may eventually be enlarged to include other theaters. Eventually every one of the fifty-five complete trips, now in Mr. Elmendorf's repertoire, will be shown both in the legitimate theaters and in all the moving picture theaters in the country.

It is Mr. Woods' intention to emphasize the educational value of these famous illustrated talks and to appoint special days for school children.

Some Schenectady Exhibitors

By Hanford C. Judson

World Man Spends Afternoon Meeting Downtown Picture Show Managers in Prosperous Manufacturing City

THE biggest thing in Schenectady is the General Electric Company, employing a great many well-paid, skilled workers. It is a city in which the average citizen is both intelligent and comfortably off. He dresses well, has a pleasant home and is sensitive to any lack of attractiveness in his surroundings. A year ago there were about seventeen moving picture houses in the city, but five of them have discontinued. I didn't get into any of these, but they probably were not among the really comfortable houses. There are two kinds of audiences in the Electric City, but it seems that the better paying kind will not stand for the sensational sex problem or under-world exposé picture.

If one wants to see Artcraft pictures or big superfeatures in Schenectady he will find them at Proctor's, on State street, with its 1,627 seats. This house shows six acts of vaudeville and feature film changed twice a week. The admission is from ten to fifty cents, and its genial manager, Charles Henry Goulding, is well satisfied with the state of business and with the world in general. The problems of a big vaudeville house are different from those of the real exhibitor and I had time for little more than to drop in for a handshake with the manager.

A little further up State street, on the same north side of the street, is the Palace, owned by Max Spiegel and presided over by Manager Frank I. Frayne, whose name doesn't often get into print, but who is no dead one. He is getting out a weekly paper of eight pages filled with news of coming attractions and interspersed with snappy bits that liven it. It has the times of the day when the feature begins and offers two free tickets to any patron who will write in telling what pictures seen at the Palace are liked and what disliked. This offer is good for one time to any patron of the house. Manager Frayne is shy of all sex-problem films—he couldn't afford to run them if he wanted to. The theater is open from 1 to 11 P. M., and has 950 seats with ten to fifteen cents admission on week days and ten to twenty cents on Saturdays and Sundays or holidays. It is run in connection with the Strand theater in New York and is advertising "Sapho" by the Famous Players one week later than the Strand in New York shows it. Every Saturday morning at ten there is a special children's show under the auspices of the Art Class of the Woman's Club. The Palace is an attractive, up-to-date, successful moving picture show.

Almost across State street from the Palace is the Strand, a 300-seat house running continuous from 1 till 11 P. M., with seven or eight reels and charging from ten to fifteen cents. W. H. Zeizer is the manager and he also conducts the Central Park theater on McClelland street, a strictly residential theater. The Strand caters to a transient and also a neighborhood clientele, but the house is in the shopping district and he finds a difference in taste at the two houses. He is using Fox with Brady-Made, Paramount, Mutual Feature and Vitagraph. Fox pictures are liked at both houses, but at the uptown theater the popularity of Theda Bara is not so marked as at the Strand, where she is one of the special attractions. The Central Park theater is close to Union College and is in a decidedly wealthy neighborhood. "Liberty" is doing fairly well at this house. At the Strand "The Nigger," with William Farnum, is attracting capacity for the fourth time.

The Crescent theater is but a step from the Strand, seats 450 at five and ten cents and does not open on Sundays. The manager is Miss Noon, whom we found in the box office selling tickets. Miss Noon says that it is not entirely a losing proposition, her keeping closed on Sundays while the other houses are open. It attracts attention and many people patronize the theater for that reason. Yet she makes no further effort to get patronage on this score than the fact itself shows. She hasn't worked up the church custom nor played to the woman's club element by special shows or special pictures. She is putting a good show on the screen on the same basis with the other houses, using Bluebird, Red Feather and Vitagraph.

Within a stone's throw of this group of State street houses, but a bit of a walk down one of the side streets, is the Happy Hour, run by M. Silverman. This seats 500 persons at five and ten cents. The program consists of Fox, Brady, Metro, Triangle and Mutual. These pictures are booked for one day each, but in case one comes in that is worth a second day's run the management tries to get a second day's run. Manager M. Silverman also runs the Pearl theater on Crane street, a neighborhood district on the opposite side of the city from the Central Park theater, and both the Happy Hour and the Pearl are run on the same plan with the same pictures.

At the east end of the city, toward Albany, there are five flourishing houses which I lacked the time to visit, the Rialto on Van Vranken avenue, the Broadway at 233 Broadway, the Lincoln at 907 Broadway and the Majestic and the Albany both on Albany streuet.

Alan Hale

THE exploitation of the term "star" nowadays has no particular significance with the more or less sophisticated motion picture public of this advanced day of motion picture progressiveness. Stars of the mushroom variety come and go and their number is legion. Where they pass into, nobody knows and none cares, but the star in the full meaning of the word, one of accomplishment and reputation, born of long experience, can be counted upon one's fingers. Of the latter type is Alan Hale, the strapping young blond, who is now being starred with Zena Keefe in the B. S. Moss production of "One Hour." Hale's face is known to motion picture fans from coast to coast, having seen years with the Biograph Company, and more recently with Lasky and Famous Players features, and lastly with Clara Kimball Young's production of "The Price She Paid." Young Hale comes to the screen from an extensive experience in stock productions and vaudeville, he having been a member for two years of the famous Orpheum Stock Company, of Philadelphia.

Alan Hale.

Unlike most artists, Mr. Hale has a keen sense of business values and is generally recognized as one of the few professionals who is more than capable of acting as an executive. He is interested in a million-dollar corporation which is handling an invention which will revolutionize one part of the automobile business, and indications point decidedly toward the possibility of the screen losing this popular young idol in the coming years, because of the success which will undoubtedly come to his business enterprises.

LILLIAN HAMILTON IN VOGUE COMEDY.

Lillian Hamilton makes her second appearance as a star in the Vogue comedy, released through Mutual on March 31, entitled "Freed by Fido." The story is laid in Chinatown, and shows the wiles and cunning of the Orientals in their sordid surroundings. Miss Hamilton leads a most strenuous life in this picture. She is kidnapped, hidden in cellars, taken hold of by the hair, dragged through trap doors and otherwise gently treated. Miss Hamilton is not the only one roughly treated, as Owen Evans, Larry Bowes, John Oaker and George Monberg, who support Miss Hamilton, can testify.

Chicago News Letter

Meeting of Chicago License Committee

Manager Proctor, of Art Drama, Protects Himself Against Error in Published Statement Regarding His Testimony Before the Members—Ninety Chicago Picture Houses Close During 1916.

THE Chicago News, in its report of the proceedings of a meeting held Wednesday morning, March 21, by the special committee appointed by the city council to discuss the proposed raise of license for picture theaters and exchanges in the city, attributed the following statement to Ralph O. Proctor, manager of the Chicago office of Art Drama:

"It is no longer the film exchanges or the 'movie' proprietors who are making the money out of the moving picture business. The big money in the 'movie' business now is being made by the producers, and the stock of the big producing concerns is away above par."

Mr. Proctor takes exception to this statement and gives in his own words his testimony in the proceedings of the meeting as follows:

A council committee on licenses met at 10:30 Wednesday morning to hear testimony as to why the licenses on moving picture theaters should not be increased pro rata as to seating capacity, from $300 to $1,000, and the license on film exchanges from $25 to $200 per year each.

The exchanges were represented by F. M. Brockell, of the Selznick enterprises, and myself. David T. Alexander, our attorney, was there also. The exhibitors were represented by Joseph Hopp, president of the Illinois Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

The aldermen had evidently been provided with a great deal of misinformation relative to the profits in the film industry. In fact, at the beginning of their meeting they were confident that fortunes were made weekly and that the exhibitors, film exchanges and the manufacturers were shining marks for taxation.

I was questioned at length by the committee and explained to them that the present losses in the film business started at the box-office and affected every branch of the business—the exhibitor, the exchange and the manufacturer; that the losses were increasing rather than decreasing, and that it was only the profits made prior to the last two years and the immense amount of new capital invested by Wall Street which enabled the business to exist at present, and for the past two years.

I explained further that the exhibitor in Chicago is subjected to no less than seventeen special and distinct taxations, namely: The canopy tax, electrical inspection, county tax, city license, state tax, government tax, health inspection, boiler inspection, operators' license, building inspection, etc., etc.

The committee then claimed that they had information to the effect that exchanges charged as high as $100 per day for one subject. I told them that this was quite true, that we all remembered this individual case, and were still talking about it; that the price obtained for pictures taken from carefully compiled statistics was between $11.50 and $12.50 per day, and that this embraces all accounts, from the first run man down to the commercial.

They had also been informed that the cost of film service was greater in percentage than the other costs in running a theater. I endeavored to enlighten them on this subject by showing them that the average cost of film service did not exceed 25 per cent of the cost of operation. Mr. Hopp took exception to this, claiming that 33⅓ per cent was closer to the facts; but I told them I believed the first figures will be borne out in nine cases out of ten.

After considerable time had been spent discussing the raising of licenses of the exhibitors, and at the suggestion of Mr. Hopp, the aldermen thought the exhibitors should be heard and they decided to put the matter over until the next council meeting, which will be held when the new aldermen are installed, at which time they will go into the matter more thoroughly.

The next item taken up was the matter of increasing the exchange licenses. I cited several instances of exchanges doing business two years ago whose revenues had been cut 80 per cent; brought to their attention the censorship tax of $1 per reel, which we are obliged to pay at present; the inspection taxes with which we are burdened, etc., and the fact that we are a legitimate enterprise and in no way subjected to special taxation.

The committee then called upon Mr. Hayda, a representative of the Fire Prevention Bureau, who stated there were several violations, in the different exchanges, of the safety ordinances. I took exception to his remarks on the ground that the Fire Prevention Bureau was operating under ordinance and had full power to regulate any exchange in the city, and if there were violations of this ordinance it was not up to the exchanges to correct it, nor would the imposing of an additional tax assist in any way. The power rested with the Fire Marshal's office, and the corrections could be made through that department, and that it alone was responsible for any violations that were not immediately remedied.

I further explained that at the present time there are between thirty and thirty-five buying exchanges located in Chicago; that in addition to these there are sixty film exchanges which are non-purchasing. In other words, that the latter are operating on a few features which have been purchased at some previous time.

I explained that the passing of an ordinance increasing the license of film exchanges would eliminate 50 per cent of the exchanges now doing business, as they are not financially equipped to stand the additional taxation. These are what are known as one-man exchanges and the increased taxation, if taken from the small revenue which they now receive, would make them absolutely unprofitable, and put them out of business. The committee said that this was not their object.

The matter of advance deposits was then touched upon. The committee had been informed that the Chicago exchanges had as advance deposits over one million dollars. The absurdity of this statement is apparent, but it was firmly impressed on their minds and took considerable argument to remove it.

I think we proved conclusively that the advance deposit was used only to protect the exchange against the change in ownership of theaters, which in Chicago is one of the greatest evils that confronts us. Houses change hands quite often once a week, several times twice a week, and in some cases three times in a week, and with this class of exhibitors there is no integrity in a contract.

It is my understanding that most exchanges in the city of Chicago do not demand deposits. In fact, I know ours does not, where the exhibitor has been in business long enough to warrant the credit rating established through meeting his obligations promptly. In other words, it is handled in the same manner that any commercial house handles its accounts.

The aldermen decided, inasmuch as the exhibitors and exchanges were not making money, that the different manufacturers should be investigated; that the inflated fortunes which have been referred to in the daily press were being made by some one, and that it must be the manufacturers. In fact, Alderman Bowler, chairman of the committee, said that he was personally aware of several men who had accumulated enormous fortunes in the motion picture business.

We agreed with him that this was quite true, but that the losses in the past two years had eaten up the profits of all prior years and that the losses were caused largely by destructive legislation, taxes, censorship, etc.

I mentioned that the Wheeler commission in New York had been hearing the testimony of different manufacturers for some time past and that I would be pleased to give them copies of the reports, testimony, etc., for their perusal, all of which they stated they would be pleased to have.

Furthermore, I stated that Chicago would have been, without the question of a doubt, the center of the motion picture industry in America if unjust taxation, reform agitation, etc., had not caused the manufacturers to locate elsewhere, and that they are now located on both coasts.

"I have gone to some length to explain my side of the case because the article in question has done me considerable harm and I have no way of refuting it, except through the Moving Picture World.

"I believe it should be called to the attention of the manufacturers, exchanges and exhibitors that their interests lie in defeating unjust legislation, and that it can only be accomplished by concerted effort. I know that this has been brought to their attention time and time again, but when you stop to consider that there are 90 exchanges in the city and that only two exchange managers were on the ground, 500 exhibitors in the city and only one exhibitor on the ground, and numerous manufacturers without any representation at all, it seems time they awoke to the necessity of protecting their own investments."

During the discussion Alderman James B. Bowler, chairman of the committee, drew attention to the fact that there are very few five-cent theaters now in Chicago.

At this juncture the deputy city collector informed the committee that 80 picture theaters closed their doors in 1916, reducing the seating capacity of such houses by 29,000. This leaves about 415 moving picture theaters in the city at the present time, with a total seating capacity of about 230,000.

"Heroic France, or the Allies in Action."

The first public presentation of "Heroic France, or the Allies in Action," a collection of remarkable war pictures taken on the French and British fronts in France, was given at the Strand theater, this city, Monday evening, March 19. A notable gathering of Chicago's fashionable society assembled for the occasion, and the prices paid for seats and boxes were sky-high. This was due to the fact that the proceeds will be devoted mainly to the American Relief Clearing House of Paris, the American Fund for French Wounded, the American Ambulance Field Service in France and the Children of the Frontier. All through the week the pictures have been drawing crowded houses, at the customary prices for presentations of this kind.

The pictures were taken by Merle LaVoy, an American of French descent, who spent nearly two years in the work. He was financed by several rich Chicagoans, whose sympathies are strongly with the brave soldiers of France.

I have pronounced these pictures remarkable, because I found them so. For nearly three hours I sat watching the screen, lost to my surroundings and actually living amid the scenes. It was just as if I had been conducted over the war-shattered territory, now watching the operation of the monster French and British guns and seeing far off the explosion of the giant shells in the ground, throwing up geysers of smoke and earth where they fell; and then the rush of soldiers through the trenches to the attack, or the bearing of the wounded from the front to the first relief station, and then farther back to the real hospitals in the rear. Not that I saw anybody actually wounded, or that I witnessed the grewsomeness of death in battle, for that would be impossible for a cameraman to accomplish under the circumstances.

Then I visited the hospitals, and then the workshops, where maimed men are seen working at their trades by the aid of queer mechanical devices which serve as limbs. I saw, too, the work of the French and American ambulance corps; strange types of aeroplanes, some of them darting with the swiftness of dragon flies and built and armed specially for death and destruction.

Next I was with the soldiers in holiday atmosphere, and watched them playing football or engaged in familiar or strange dances, for many nationalities are represented in the French trenches. At one place I saw Tommies disporting themselves in an outdoor swimming bath, which they had constructed close to a stream, looking just as happy as if they were away back home in old England.

These are only a few glimpses of what can be found in these pictures, which I gladly recommend for their fine educational value and for the wonderful grasp they give one of life in modern warfare as it is lived or lost.

Eagle Film Manufacturing and Producing Company Bankrupt.

I remember well the glowing prospectus, in booklet form, issued by the Eagle Film Manufacturing and Producing Company, with its extravagant claims for the profits in moving picture making, so that the unwary investor might snap at the bait. That was about two years ago, more or less.

Now I have before me a transcript of a statement soliciting bids for the company's property, issued in accordance with an order of the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, by Edwin D. Buell, trustee, appointed by the court, mentioned for the said company, which has been declared bankrupt. Bids will be received at the office of the trustee, 803 Monadnock Block, Chicago, until March 30, 1917.

Among the property described open for bids are the office furniture and fixtures at 109 North Dearborn street, this city, together with a large number of Tweedledum Comedy films, three of which have never been released; also the moving picture plant at Eagle Film City, Fla., three miles from Jacksonville, with all the buildings connected therewith and personal property of varied description.

It is estimated by men competent to judge that over $200,000 was taken in by the promoters of the company by the sale of stock. Just what the get-rich-quick people, who purchased the stock, now think of the fabulous fortunes to be made in the making of moving pictures can be readily guessed. But the woods are still filled with people of their kind, who should be warned through the columns of the daily press of the snares set for them.

Chicago Film Brevities.

The Michigan exhibitors have set a good example to Illinois exhibitors in the matter of State censorship. A dispatch from Lansing, Wednesday evening, March 21, gave the information that Representative Eaton's State censorship bill had been killed that day in the ways and means committee of the House. Illinois exhibitors are expected to follow the precedent set by exhibitors in every other State, where it has been sought to impose State censorship on moving pictures.

I had quite lost track of our old friend William H. Bell, who for several years was connected with the General Film Company in this city, but I find that he is now manager of the Mid-West Photoplay Corporation, whose exchange in Kansas City (Mo.) is distributing the Lewis J. Selznick productions.

A. D. Flintom, another old General Film Company manager, who had charge of the St. Louis office for years, is now president of the Kansas City (Mo.) Feature Film Company, which distributes the Paramount product in that territory. My best wishes for the success of both gentlemen.

Members of the Illinois State League of the M. P. E. L. of America have been notified by George M. Luttrell, State president, and Sidney Smith, State secretary, that a State convention will be held in the Masonic Temple, room 512, on Friday, April 6, at noon sharp. Important matters relating to the National Convention and Exposition to be held in Chicago, July 14-22, this year, will be taken up, and a full attendance of members is urgently requested.

C. J. Catlow, manager of the Catlow theater, Barrington, Ill., called last week and subscribed for the World. Mr. Catlow is the son of J. G. Catlow, owner of the theater. He was formerly manager and part owner of the Bend theater in Bend, Ore., for three years. The Catlow was opened in December, last year, and seats 499 people. Paramount service is used, and admissions of 10 and 15 cents are charged. Presentations are given only three times a week at this house —on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays. Mr. Catlow reported very good business.

I omitted to state in a brevity in my letter last week that Southern Wisconsin, in addition to Illinois and Indiana, was included in the territory for which State rights to "The Ne'er Do Well" were purchased from Sol Lesser by Jones, Linick & Schaefer

"The Price She Paid," with Clara Kimball Young, has been succeeded at the Studebaker by "The Eternal Sin," another Selznick production. This, in turn, will be followed by "The Law of Compensation," which features Norma Talmadge, and on April 8 George Cohan will be seen in "Broadway Jones."

A recent cablegram from Paris announced the destruction by the retreating German army of the historic de Coucy Chateau, in which the original armor worn by "Joan of Arc" was carefully guarded. It is understood that all the priceless relics were destroyed, the armor referred to among them. The armor worn by Geraldine Farrar in "Joan the Woman" was patterned after the original.

"A Tale of Two Cities" (William Fox) has been booked over the Hamburger Circuit, beginning at the Twentieth Century theater March 24. The circuit includes, in addition, the Willard, Grand Oak, Gaiety, Pine Grove, Albany Park and the Ziegfeld. "The Price She Paid" will open at the Willard immediately following the Studebaker run, and will afterward make the rounds of the other Hamburger theaters. "Little Lost Sister" (Selig) has also been booked over this circuit, opening Thursday, March 22, at the Twentieth Century.

"The Crisis" was recently shown to the National Press Club at Washington, D. C., and was received with high favor. The Washington newspapers devoted considerable space to the presentation.

Colonel Fred Levy, president of the Big Feature Rights Corporation, of Louisville, Ky., paid a brief visit to Chicago last week. He came on to see William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company. Colonel Levy is most enthusiastic over "The Crisis," for which he holds State rights in extensive Southern territory. He pronounces "The Crisis" one of the greatest film dramas ever produced, and stated that his company had broken all records with it at the Century theater, Indianapolis.

Sunday moving pictures in Oak Park have had a long, hard up-hill fight for some time past. Led by the Rev. Charles K. Carpenter, minister of the First Methodist Church of that village, the opponents of Sunday moving pictures secured a temporary injunction restraining W. A. Tristram, village clerk, from printing the Sunday moving picture question on the ballot for the election on April 3. Judge M. Foell dissolved the injunction on Thursday, March 22, and Attorney Myer J. Stein, for the defense, made a motion that Mr. Carpenter, who obtained the injunction, be compelled to pay the costs. The court took the matter under advisement. This means that the Sunday moving picure question will go on the ballot, and, from all indications, that it will be carried at the election.

C. W. Brown has been appointed assistant to Terry Ramsaye, director of publicity for the Mutual Film Corporation. Mr. Brown is an Illinoisian by birth and education and a young man of bright promise. Pivar Back from Canal Zone

Film Man Expects to Remain in the States Three Months on Business Matters.

AFTER an absence in the Canal Zone of nine months Jack Pivar arrived in New York on March 15. Mr. Pivar in all has been two and a half years on the Isthmus. During his last trip, as a member of the Strand Theater Company, of Colon, he supervised the construction and afterward the operation of the new house. The building was begun June 16 and completed September 27. It contains 1,200 seats, 500 of which are in the balcony, and the prices of admission are 10, 15 and 25 cents. The cost was $50,000. The structure is of solid concrete and has a frontage of 42 feet and a depth of 132 feet. The projection booth, which is of concrete, is asbestos lined, is equipped with two Power's 6B machines and a 70-ampere Hallberg generator. The screen is radium gold fibre.

On the Isthmus pictures are shown in the Y. M. C. A. clubhouses in Colon, Panama, Balboa, Ancon, Pedro Miguel, Gatun, Paraiso and Cristobal. Then, too, there are houses for United States soldiers in their camps in Culebra, Empire, Camp Otis, Corozal, Fort Grant, Fort Sherman, and Marguerita Point. The Y. M. C. A.'s show three times a week and the soldiers every night.

Prior to departure from the Isthmus Mr. Pivar disposed of his interest in the Strand company to the Y. M. C. A. He will remain in New York for three months on business connected with his interests in the South. "One trouble with American film men in South and Central America," said Mr. Pivar, "is that they lack patience properly to work up their business. They are too anxious to make big money quick."

"In Panama and Colon," the visitor said, "theatrical taxes are $75 a month. The cost of current, too, is twice what it is in the United States. Films are admitted free in the Republic of Panama, but in every other country there is a duty, either by weight or measure.

"There is an impression here," said Mr. Pivar, "but it is a mistaken one, that a lot of stuff rejected by the censor will be welcome in South America. Costa Rica, for one, rejects a lot of film. Since February 1, European film has been cut off. Up to that time there was quite a lot coming through. It may sound strange, but American film coming from Europe will sell for 4 cents a foot, while the same subjects coming from New Orleans or New York cost 8 cents. If Americans expect to get prices in South America they must stop the exportation of their product from Europe. I know of one concrete instance where an American company wanted $10,000 for a certain production, but the buyer obtained the same feature subject from Europe for only $3,000."

Paralta Plays, Inc., is New Company

Carl Anderson Heads Producing Organization in Which Herman Fichtenberg Is Interested with Other Capitalists.

THREE-MILLION dollar motion picture corporations arouse little interest these days when picture men have acquired the habit of thinking in large figures, but the recent incorporation of the Paralta Plays, Inc., becomes of interest because of the personnel of the promoters. This new company was officially formed on Thursday, March 22, with Carl Anderson, president; Herman Katz, treasurer; Robert T. Kane, vice-president; Nat L. Brown, secretary and general manager, and Herman Fichtenberg, chairman of the board of directors.

Mr. Anderson is well known to the business, having been connected with the Lasky and Paramount companies. Herman Fichtenberg is the big New Orleans exhibitor, owning a string of houses in that city. Mr. Katz is a New York business man of large interests. Mr. Brown is a St. Louis man who has long been interested in large motion picture affairs, principally in the distribution of films, and Mr. Kane is of San Francisco and is connected with theatrical and motion picture enterprises. Mr. Kane will have complete control of all production interests of the new company and will establish offices at Los Angeles, where two studios are now about completed.

According to the advance announcement of the company, its main purpose is to give the exhibitor a square deal—something, its officers claim, he has not been getting from other producers. How this is to be done will be explained later.

At present the offices of the Paralta Plays, Inc., is on the fifth floor of the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh avenue, New York. The company has secured the services of Wilbur F. Bates as its publicity manager.

Educational and Selected Films

List of Educational and Selected Moving Pictures for the Aid of Exhibitor and "Better Film" Workers.

A THIRTY-TWO page leaflet has just been published by the "Moving Picture World" containing a list of the educational films released during the last six months of 1916. It has been compiled with a view to helping the exhibitor and others interested in the better film movement, and contains in addition to the names of educational films, a list of selected films suitable for the family group and children's matinees, covering the more wholesome type of comedies, dramas, comedy-dramas and melodramas. It contains also the addresses of the head offices of the manufacturing or exchange houses referred to therein.

Individual copies of this leaflet will be mailed upon receipt of 20 cts. which may be remitted in postage stamps. A similar leaflet will be issued by the "Moving Picture World" every six months.

WOMAN'S AND MOTHERS' CLUBS CO-OPERATE TO FOUND CHILDREN'S THEATER.

The Pawtucket Woman's Club and the Mothers' Club in co-operation with Walter G. Hartford, manager of the Imperial Theater of Pawtucket, R. I., has founded a Children's Theater. Each Saturday is the time set aside for the children at the Imperial Theater, when they can come and see a wholesome and entertaining program for the sum of five cents. The Imperial theater has a seating capacity of 1,000 persons, and on children's day will be supervised by matrons who will see to the welfare of the youngsters. The feature pictures for January and February were "Snow White," "Gloriana," "The Foundling," "Still Waters," "Rags" and "Poor Little Peppina." The net proceeds of the Children's Theater will be devoted to child welfare work in Pawtucket and Central Falls.

LOUISIANA EXHIBITORS COMBINE.

On Saturday, March 24, announcement was made of the consolidation of the Saenger Amusement Company of Shreveport, La., and the Fichtenberg Amusement Enterprises of New Orleans, La. This combination affects a number of houses in New Orleans, Shreveport, Monroe and Alexandria, La., and in Texarkana and Houston, Texas, Vicksburg, Miss., and Pensacola, Fla.—about thirty-five houses in all.

MOTION PICTURE ENGINEERS TO MEET.

C. Francis Jenkins, president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, announces that a meeting of that organization will be held at Atlantic City, N. J., on April 6 and 7. It is anticipated that this will be the most important meeting the society has yet held and a large attendance is anticipated.

FRANK POWELL MOVING OFFICES.

The offices of the Frank Powell Producing Corporation have been moved from the Times Building to larger quarters at 71 West 23d street. The new offices of the Powell Company will be those that formerly were occupied by the executive offices of the Mutual, through which distributing organization the productions now being made under the direction of Mr. Powell are released.

ED MULLEN A FATHER.

The mystery that has shrouded the week-end visits of Ed Mullen to Holyoke, Mass., has at last been cleared. Ed, who is the assistant director of publicity for Universal, is the father of a boy, the youngster having first looked upon the world last week in Holyoke, where Mrs. Mullen has been staying with her parents in anticipation of the event. Congratulations.

Griffith Regime Passes at Fine Arts

Frank E. Woods Resigns—Players Leave—Rumors That McClure Interests Will Lease the Studio.

THE Fine Arts situation is still in somewhat of a muddle and many rumors are floating around. It is known definitely that Frank E. Woods, manager of production, has resigned. Mr. Woods has had several offers from various companies, but whether he will be associated with Mr. Griffith in his new company or whether he will accept an offer with another film concern is not as yet decided by Mr. Woods. It is known that Mr. Woods has been asked by Mr. Aitken and his associates to remain, but the former Fine Arts manager decided after a week's deliberation that it would be best for him to change affiliations.

All of the players who are not under contract or working in current productions have left. Some of them gave notice and resigned when the news came from New York that Mr. Griffith had severed his connection with the Triangle Film Corporation. The resignation of Mr. Griffith automatically annulled the contracts of several stars and directors. Among the players were Robert Harron, Lillian Gish and Dorothy Gish, who have a clause in their contracts that D. W. Griffith shall supervise their productions. Among those who will remain under the new regime are Bessie Love, Alma Reubens, Seena Owen and Director Chester Whithey. The pictures now in course of production will be completed under the supervision of the old management. The players and directors engaged in the production of these features are Bessie Love, directed by Paul Powell in "Cheerful Givers"; Edward Dillon, directing Elmo Lincoln and Carmel Myers in a comedy-melodrama, as well as Chester Whithey, who is directing Seena Owen in a story taken from O. Henry's novelette, "Madame Bo-Peep."

Mr. Woods' resignation and those with him will not take effect until the completion of these productions. It is understood that Mary H. O'Connor has resigned, while of the remainder of the scenario staff Bernard McConnville has joined the Fox Western studios and Roy Summerville is leaving for a new affiliation in New York. Harry Aitken left Thursday, this week, for San Francisco, and definite plans for the reorganization will not be announced until his return next week.

It is rumored the McClure picture interests have made offers for leasing the Fine Arts studio. It is said that Thomas H. Ince will take over those players on contract and transfer them to his Culver City plant. He will there produce all Fine Arts photoplays for the Triangle.

Director Edward Dillon, after eight years' association with Mr. Griffith, has resigned and is going to New York for his first vacation in that time, prior to announcing a new affiliation.

From one of the prominent officials of the Fine Arts organization, who declines to have his name mentioned, we have the authoritative statement that Mr. Griffith will have his own studio in Los Angeles, in which he will personally produce seven and eight reel features for the open market.

Culver City News

Death of Mrs. French, Illness of Charles Miller, Roy Neill a New Director.

NEARLY a hundred of the Ince players, directors and other studio employes turned out in a body this week, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Helen K. French, the well-known character actress and wife of Charles K. French, who succumbed to burns received in her home two months ago. For a time she gave promise of recovering, but early in the week suffered a relapse and passed away.

Illness of Director Charles Miller, who is suffering from grippe, is delaying the production this week of the new Triangle-Kay Bee play of the South, in which Dorothy Dalton is being starred. Miss Dalton and the members of her supporting cast are not wasting their time, however; for, each day they are at the studio, industriously rehearsing among themselves. The supporting cast consists of Joe King, Lillian Hayward, Donald Lee, Mary McIvor, Alice Taaffe and Clyde Tracy.

Another addition was made this week to the directorial ranks at the Ince-Triangle studios, by the promotion of Roy Neill to company-head. Neill has been intrusted with the responsibility of staging the next Triangle-Kay Bee play, in which Enid Bennett, the new Thomas H. Ince star, will work. He is now awaiting the erection of settings and the assembling of the supporting cast, which will include Margery Bennett, the younger sister of Enid. Neill has been associated with the Ince forces about two years, in the capacity of assistant to Raymond B. West.

Mme. Melba, the operatic star, and Julian Eltinge, the musical comedy favorite, were among the interested visitors this week to the Ince-Triangle plant at Culver City.

Accompanied by twenty supporting players, under the direction of Reginald Barker, Clara Williams and William Desmond left this week for San Francisco, where they will spend a week filming scenes for a new Ince-Triangle play by J. G. Hawks. This is a story woven about the Russian secret service. Upon the completion of these scenes, the company will return to Los Angeles, stopping at Merced, Cal., to make a sensational scene that will depict Desmond and Miss Williams leaping from a cliff into a river. Supporting the two stars in this play are Robert McKim, Wallace Worsley, Jerome Storm, Thomas S. Guise and Alfred Hollingsworth.

Yorke-Metro Players Go to Arizona.

In order to secure atmosphere for the current Yorke-Metro production, "The Secret Spring," Harold Lockwood, Director E. Mason Hopper and their company of players left on a special train Thursday night, this week, for Jerome, Arizona. Preceding the company, Richard V. Spencer, who, in collaboration with Fred J. Balshofer, wrote the scenario, left for Jerome last Wednesday, in order to make arrangements for the taking of a number of scenes at the United Verde mines, where 5,000 men are employed. Several large mob scenes will here be staged.

In "The Secret Spring" a real mining town is to be shown, with copper mines and smelters operating at full blast. The scenes, which are to be photographed at Jerome, include views of the copper city, with streets leading up to the mines, close-up scenes of the copper smelters, where beautiful light effects can be secured as the molten copper comes from the molds. In addition to the large number of actors who were taken along to appear in the picture, Director Hopper will make use of scores of miners who are at work in the Arizona town. The company expects to be gone about two weeks.

General Manager Fred J. Balshofer, who has been absent in New York on business for the last two weeks, is expected to return to the Los Angeles studios some time this week. While in the East Mr. Balshofer made arrangements with several well-known publishers for the dramatic rights to a number of the most successful novels.

Carl Laemmle Returns East.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, after more than a month's stay on the Pacific Coast, left Universal City for New York on Tuesday evening, March 13. P. A. Powers, treasurer; R. H. Cochrane and H. O. Davis, first and second vice-presidents of the company, escorted Mr. Laemmle to the station and bade him godspeed on his trip across the continent. Several hundred of the Universalites gathered at the entrance to Universal

City and gave the little big chief a rousing send-off as his automobile started from the picture-making plant.

The office of president of the Universal Company by no means is a sinecure if Mr. Laemmle's last day at Universal City is a criterion, for during the eight hours he spent there he met exchange men and exhibitors from twelve cities, had two trans-continental telephonic conversations—one with Chicago and the other with New York—entertained friends from Chicago, St. Louis and Portland, Ore., at luncheon, saw three five-reel pictures in the projection theater and participated in the entertainment of a delegation from Washington, D. C., consisting of Congressman L. T. Padgett, chairman, and the other members of the House Committee on Naval Affairs who visited Universal City at his special invitation.

"War Brides" Opens in Los Angeles.

The Majestic theater was the scene Monday, this week, of the first presentation in Los Angeles of Herbert Brenon's "War Brides," in which Nazimova makes her debut to the motion picture public. The work of the star and the artistry of the director were greatly enhanced by Mr. Selznick's lavish expenditure upon the production. Comment also must be made upon the perfectly mooded score provided by Paul Sternberg. The acting of Nazimova and Gertrude Berkeley as the mother made a great impression on the audience. Another feature of the presentation was the unfailing courtesy with which we noticed B. F. Fitzgerald, the box office treasurer, accorded each of the patrons of his attractive house.

"The Garden of Allah" for Quinn's Rialto.

J. A. Quinn will soon open his new theatre, Quinn's Rialto, on South Broadway between Eighth and Ninth streets.

Mr. Quinn paid a visit to the World office this week and informed us that he had closed a deal with Manager Irving Lesser, of the All-Star Feature Distributors, for the Los Angeles exhibition rights of "The Garden of Allah," Selig's great spectacular 12-reel production.

The opening will probably be around the 10th of April, and "The Garden of Allah" will be presented to Los Angeles in an elaborate manner at admission prices at 25c, 50c and 75c.

Mr. Quinn stated that he is at present arranging for a large orchestra to play the musical score and that he is endeavoring to secure the services of an internationally known composer and musician to direct the music.

The opening of the theater promises to be a real event. The mayor and the elite of society and motion pictures will be present.

MAY ALLISON LEAVES YORKE-METRO.

May Allison, the popular Yorke-Metro star, has severed her connections with that company.

"My only reason for resigning from the Metro was that we have found it almost impossible to secure suitable co-starring vehicles, where Mr. Lockwood and myself had an equal division of the story, and, in addition to this, much larger opportunities have been offered me to star alone," said Miss Allison. "I am not at liberty just now to give you further information regarding my new contract, but will do so at an early date. I will probably be leaving for New York about the 24th."

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

At the Lasky Studios, in spite of the rainy season, the company is now filming its August and September releases, and Studio General Manager Milton E. Hoffman is now arranging a schedule whereby each of the directors will be granted, in turn, four weeks' vacation.

The old office building at the corner of Vine and Selma, which was at one time a garage and then the cradle of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, is shortly to be remodeled into a new two-story property building, the floors of which will be connected by a freight elevator. A big truck bearing props from the stages can be driven on to this elevator and unloaded on the second floor.

A completely equipped cutting room has been fixed up in the compartment of a private car which will bear the Lasky director, Marshall Neilan, and the co-stars, Jack Pickford and Louis Huff, to location at the Santa Cruz lumber camps. Mr. Neilan was recently directing two pictures while cutting the third. Owing to the advance of a release date on one of his productions, it was necessary for him to cut and assemble the productions while journeying northward on the train. A special compartment was secured for the cutting room and the electrical department put in the necessary lights and equipment, and Mr. Neilan will while away the hours he is traveling by cutting and assembling the picture, shipping it back from Santa Cruz to the studio.

Dustin Farnum has started work on his second production for William Fox, under the direction of Richard Stanton. For the last few months Director Stanton has had charge of Gladys Brockwell.

Dusty's first William Fox photoplay, "North of Fifty-three," will shortly be released. In this second production he is supported by a cast of well-known players. Winifred Kingston once more plays the leading feminine role. Tom Mix is the heavy. Victoria Forde, Lee Morris, Amy Jerome and little Frankie Lee complete the cast.

Work on the new production is being carried on at Camp Stanton in Cahuenga Canyon, near Los Angeles. There Technical Director George Grenier has provided a "location" which gives day and night quarters to the company. Within a few miles of the Hollywood studio they are camping out until the picture is finished.

Helen Holmes and the Signal Film players are soon to leave the Los Angeles studios for the Nevada desert, where they are to make the remaining nine chapters of their latest serial, "The Railroad Raiders."

This plan is the result of the two sets of stories which they had written for the serial, one set to be used if conditions permitted them to remain in California; the other to be used if rainy weather drove them back from the coast. The two sets of stories were completed and compared and then it was discovered that the series they had intended to hold in reserve against the possibility of continued rains contained better picture material than the other. Arrangements were accordingly made for a general exodus from the Los Angeles studios upon the completion of the sixth episode.

Thus far it has not been decided whether they will go to Las Vegas or to Caliente. The company will leave within a week.

Carmen Phillips, vampire star, has been especially engaged by the Lasky Company to play the heavy feminine role in support of Vivian Martin and Sessue Hayakawa in their forthcoming vehicle which is now being filmed under the direction of Robert Thornby.

R. A. Walsh, director of "The Honor System," this week moves into new quarters on the Fox "Lot." While he was in Truckee with the company of players he is now directing the carpenters in Hollywood were erecting a special set of offices for the director's own use when he returned.

An entire stage has also been set aside for Mr. Walsh's exclusive use.

Jack Blystone, director general of the L-Ko, completed this week a pretentious two-reeler, "The Worshippers of the Cuckoo Clock," in which Alice Howell is the featured comedienne. Many of the scenes were taken at Long Beach, Cal., and many were the hazards in getting the scenes. The tearing down of a lighthouse was as sensational a piece of work as has been accomplished by the L-Ko in many a day. It was necessary to employ one hundred and fifty men and two steam dredges to get the lighthouse to move, and then in order to get it to fall they employed a tug whose tow line was fastened about the building.

Director William H. Taylor, who has returned to the Morosco studio after a little holiday, will shortly begin work on a new production in which House Peters will be co-starred with Myrtle Stedman, the latter having recovered from an illness which has confined her to her home for nearly a month.

House Peters, the Morosco star, who is now finishing a Western production under the direction of Edward J. LeSaint, has for his leading woman Nina Byron, a comparative newcomer to the screen. Miss Byron's talent for the silent stage was discovered by Nicholas Dunaew, the disinguished Russian actor and playwright. Before her present engagement in support of Mr. Peters, Miss Byron had appeared in but one picture. Among the other members in the cast are Eugene Pallette, John Burton, Adele Farrington and Henry Barrows.

Shorty Hamilton figured in a number of thrilling deep-sea scenes while on a recent yachting trip for the picture, "Shorty Solves a Wireless Mystery," which has just been completed by the Monogram Film Company, under the direction of Bob Gray, for the Mutual Program.

Despite the fact that the water of the Pacific Ocean is rather cold in March, even in Southern California, Shorty and his leading woman swam and dove in the water for half an hour while the cameraman caught the scenes from the awning rail of the steam yacht which was secured for the picture.

Al. E. Christie has engaged a new leading woman for Christie Comedies. Her name is Hazel Alden and, though quite young, she has had considerable stage experience and enough work in pictures to become "camera-wise." She was leading woman for Lew Fields in several of his musical comedies, and played for some time with the Metropolis Stock in New York. She then came to the coast and here played a large part with Fanny Ward in a Lasky production, which was made under the title, "For the Heart of Her Child," and also in the first Margaret Illington picture. She is very petite, of the blond type, and photographs well.

The picture which will introduce Miss Alden to Christie Comedy audiences will be started in a day or two under the direction of Al. E. Christie, and called "Practice What You Preach," from a story by Samuel D. Eccles. Neal Burns will play opposite, with Eddie Barry in support.

Ida May Park, who is directing Dorothy Phillips, William H. Stowell and Lon Chaney in her own Universal photoplay, "The Fires of Rebellion," took one hundred extra men and extra girls into the factory district of Los Angeles one day this week for the purpose of filming a number of mob scenes. The unloading of automobiles filled with players attracted considerable attention and it was not long before several hundred spectators were on hand. All were perfectly willing to work in the picture. Miss Park obtained some gratifying atmosphere for her photoplay.

Universal City's wild animal population was augmented this week by the arrival of three baby lions. They were born on Monday last, and Daisy, the mother, who has played star roles in many jungle photodramas, and the little ones "are doing quite well."

General Manager Davis suggested that the triplets be named, respectively, Laemmle, Powers and Cochrane, after the president, treasurer and vice-president of the company, who were at that time spending their vacations on the coast, but in deference to the wishes of these gentlemen other names will be given to Daisy's furry children.

President Carl Laemmle, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, a few days before he left was the host of the managing directors of the Chicago Cubs, who came to Universal City with the other members of the party, which came from Chicago to Pasadena on a special train to witness the spring training of the ballplayers. The guests of honor were A. D. Lasker, Charles F. Weeghman, A. D. Plamandon, W. M. Walker, Adolph Spielman and their families.

During the morning they were escorted over the big stages by Vice-President H. O. Davis and at noon were the guests of President Laemmle at luncheon. At the conclusion of the luncheon Mr. Laemmle took his guests to the animal arena, where they witnessed Director Henry McRae film scenes for his current photoplay, "In African Wilds," featuring Eileen Sedgwick and Kingsley Benedict. The owners of the Cubs were placed in safe positions where they could see the lions and leopards working before the camera and with the players.

"You people are welcome to your jobs," said Weeghman, "and I'll tell you, McRae, I'd much rather direct ballplayers than lions and leopards."

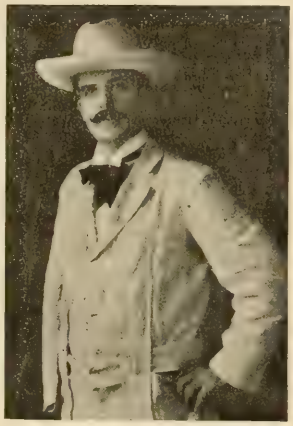
Bonavita Killed by a Polar Bear

Famous Animal Trainer Succumbs to Injuries Inflicted at the Menagerie in Los Angeles.

CAPTAIN JACK BONAVITA died on Monday, March 19, following a short and fierce fight with a polar bear at the menagerie in Los Angeles, where for more than two years he has been pursuing his dangerous occupation of animal training. Captain Bonavita had become well known to photoplaygoers by reason of his appearances in pictures produced by David Horsley, who two years ago bought out the Bostock animal show and built a large studio on the plot containing the buildings in which the animals were housed.



Captain Jack Bonavita.

The trainer had been putting the bear through his customary performance when the beast became enraged and attacked him. A policeman killed the bear by putting six bullets into him. Captain Bonavita sustained a fractured jaw and was badly lacerated about the face and body.

Captain Bonavita was one of the best known animal trainers in the country and his exhibitions have never been equaled for their daring and skill. Before he lost his arm, as a result of his encounter with the lion Baltimore at Coney Island in 1904, Captain Bonavita appeared in the arena with twenty-seven lions, a performance which no other trainer had ever attempted. Baltimore was an untrained and particularly vicious animal. The trainer was attempting to put him through the first "stunt," that of mounting a chair. The captain took his eyes off the animal and Baltimore bore him to the ground. For eight months the trainer fought against the amputation of his arm, but was compelled to submit in February, 1905. Even the loss of his right arm could not stop him from continuing his chosen work.

Captain Bonavita was married in 1905 to Princess Mercy d'Argenteau de Montglyon of Belgium. In private life the captain was John F. Gentner.

SLOMAN DIRECTED "MY FIGHTING GENTLEMAN."

In a recent issue of the Moving Picture World credit was given Frank Powell for directing the Mutual production, "My Fighting Gentleman." From various sources of an official character we are advised that the picture mentioned was directed by Edward Sloman of the American Company at Santa Barbara, Cal.

Lillian Walker Going to Utah

Will Be Starred by the Ogden Pictures Corporation—Aaron Hoffman to Write for Her.

A COMBINATION has just been effected in the motion picture world which will bring into one company Lillian Walker, whose attractions as a player are known throughout the industry; Aaron Hoffman, author of scores of dramatic and screen successes, and Harry Revier, director. The Ogden Picture Corporation will produce a class of pictures that will deal with themes of modern life. They will not be preachments, but five-reel comedy-drama features, fitted to Miss Walker's talents. A distributing arrangement is being worked out which will give these features the widest possible circulation.

The Ogden Pictures Corporation, capitalized at $100,000, at Ogden, Utah, is backed by Ogden capital. Lester Park, vice president and general manager, is in New York organizing a supporting company. Work on the first feature is expected to begin within a few weeks. Albert Scowcroft, a leading Utah business man and a pioneer in the film business, is president. The secretary and treasurer is W. Fred Bossner, familiarly known to Broadway as "Boz." J. J. O'Connor is general representative. The other directors are W. H. Battis, president of the Utah Construction Company; Mayor Abbot R. Heywood, of Ogden; Fred G. Taylor, secretary and general manager of the Amalgamated Sugar Company; R. B. Porter, of the Dee interests in Utah, and Dr. W. H. Petty.

The Ogden studio will be the first motion picture studio to be placed in operation between Chicago and the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Hoffman is well known. Of his numerous playlets, "The Cherry Tree" was considered as attaining the high-water mark in dramatic acts for vaudeville until his present sketch, "The Question," at Keith's Palace on Broadway last week, proved to be a still greater success. Not only is he a leader among vaudeville playwrights and producers, but he has also written most of the clever monologues used in recent years by Sam Bernard, Nat Wills, Lew Dockstader, the late Cliff Gordon, Julian Ross, Joe Welch and others.

Franklyn Hanna, Metro Player

FRANKLYN HANNA, who plays the part of a physician in Metro's wonder serial, "The Great Secret," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are co-stars, is a relative of the late Mark A. Hanna and for many years lived with the Mark A. Hannas in Cleveland. Mr. Hanna had an opportunity to enter politics under the guidance of his celebrated relative, but chose the stage instead, and during the time he was devoted to it has made a splendid record for himself.

His work in the spoken drama earned him steady engagements and much critical praise. His last creation on the legitimate stage was the role of Senator Murphy in the popular success, "Potash and Perlmutter," playing the part both in this country and London.

He then received a flattering offer to appear in pictures and created the much-talked-of character of the Russian Chief of Police in "The Cossack Whip." Since then he has played many notable roles and is much inclined toward the field of motion pictures.

Franklyn Hanna.

Mr. Hanna was born in Maine, but went to the Middle West at an early age and "grew up with the country." Though differing in politics from the great Marcus Hanna, he has named his only son after him. But the son is not destined to follow in the footsteps of the man for whom he was named. He is attending Columbia University and is being educated as a Wilson Democratic lawyer, in spite of his resounding Republican name.

Richardson Hands Out Bumps and Bouquets

Sees Things to Praise and Then Things to Condemn in Southland Operating Rooms—Finds it Chilly at Jacksonville, but Other Towns are Cordial

Columbia, S. C.

NO GLAD HAND of welcome was extended when I climbed out of the Southern Railroad sleeper at Columbia. In fact, although I had written three letters to the union no reply had been received, nor had any of the managers with whom I had attempted to communicate vouchsafed a reply. The first place visited was the Strand. I entered this house at 1:20 P. M., paying 20 cents admission. The following is what I saw before I left, just four minutes later. In the first place, two or three times during that brief space the picture could hardly be seen at all, and during the entire time the illumination was very faint. Weak as it was, however, there was travel ghost, and most certainly those machines must have been in anything but good condition when travel ghosts showed with that faint light. Near the screen, on the front wall, was a clock plastered with white light; also there were bright red lights near the screen, all of which makes for unnecessary eye strain and injures the high lights of the picture. At the end of the reel the operator ran the film clear through and flashed the white on the screen; crude work—very crude. In addition to this, there was a bad flicker. Now mind you, I only stayed in this house four minutes. I don't know what I would have found had I remained longer.

Passing out I saw a young chap standing in the doorway of the ticket office talking to the cashier, which, of course, meant that neither was attending to business. When I had succeeded in prying his attention loose from the cashier, I asked for the manager, to be told that he was absent. "Is there anything I can do for you," asked the boy—he was nothing more. Nothing, I replied. I want to see the Manager to ask him if he calls that thing on the screen a picture. (Very plain talk, yes! but you should have seen the provocation!) The young man immediately made the following brilliant retort: "If you don't like it, you can have your money back." Now he probably imagined that this squared the matter, and that I was very thoroughly and completely squelched.

He very evidently had absolutely no conception of the fact that the producer, who had spent thousands of dollars in getting out the photoplay they were literally murdering on the screen, had at least some rights in the matter, and he would doubtless have been amazed had some one set forth the fact that the artists, whose art he was outraging, had also some rights in the matter, to say nothing of the audience who were paying their 20 cents admission on the assumption that they would be shown a photoplay—not a dim, half visible assortment of shadows.

I went into the "Broadway" at 1:35 P. M. The house is managed by Mr. Craver, brother of R. D. Craver of Charlotte. The picture was small and fairly well illuminated, but the screen was at the front of the house, which is, as Brother Craver agrees, not desirable. There was considerable jump and movement to the picture. The lens ports were round in form, and of goodly size. The speed of projection was correct. At 1:37 the picture was out of the frame for a short distance, and ran that way until it framed itself again, which showed lack of attention on the part of the operator. There were occasional faint shadows on the screen, but on the whole the work was fairly good, and, considering the conditions under which it was being done, not discreditable to the operator.

A visit to the operating room showed the machines to be in a very bad state of repair; also they were very old; also the operating room was literally flooded with daylight, all of which operates to reduce the value of results on the screen. In the auditorium is a clock with considerable white light near the screen; also some unprotected colored side lights, but these things Brother Craver agreed to remedy. Mr. Craver explained to me why he had not replied to my letters, and stated that it would be quite possible to get the men together at his theater at 11:30 that night, and at that hour every operator and manager in the city appeared and listened attentively for almost two and a half hours to the gospel of better projection.

The president of the union assured me the organization had never received any of the communications I sent; the secretary said the same thing. Well, all I can say is that someone got those letters, and that someone ought to be discovered and punished, for it is nothing short of a crime for any individual member to withhold business communications from an organization.

Augusta, Georgia.

Over in Augusta H. B. Moultrie, president of the Local Union 547, met me at the train, and in the afternoon we visited a few of the theaters. Brother Moultrie impresses one as a live wire, progressive man, but I am sorry to say, according to all reports, a portion of the Augusta operators, and most of the Augusta managers are decidedly non-progressive, in so far as pertains to the projection of the pictures.

At the Strand, F. J. Miller, manager, I found a well ventilated operating room of goodly size, equipped with two Power Six A machines, taking current through two General Electric Mercury Arc Rectifiers. S. W. Welch and J. G. Murphy were the operators in charge of projection. The observation ports are of goodly size; the picture is small and very fairly well illuminated, but it was run at excessive speed, and you all know how dearly I do (not) love that. It is perfectly beautiful to see Anita Stewart go across the screen like a sky-rocket, and President Wilson do a sailor's hornpipe instead of walking sedately, decently and in order the way he really did walk.

At the Modjeska No. 1 I climbed into the operating room by the combined aid of a rope and a grand staircase. That was a star performance. I have entered operating rooms by many processes, but never before literally yanked myself up by means of a rope. I found the room to be of goodly size, but with a low ceiling; also the ventilation is decidedly poor. L. O. Dressel and H. D. Chapman are the operators in charge of projection. Current is taken through two Mercury arc rectifiers, which, with all their green light, are in the operating room. The projectors are Powers Six A. The room has black walls. In all the operating rooms I have visited I find the lens system to be inefficient, and the crater pointing almost directly toward the bottom of the lamp house, instead of toward the condenser.

Perhaps, gentlemen, you may not believe in projection departments and hand books, but allee samee, if you studied them just a little bit, you might not be doing back-number stunts of that kind, and wasting half your light. I am told that Augusta managers are quite liberal in the matter of equipment, and that their chief sin (a very bad one, by the way), consists in a tendency to overspeeding the projections, a practice which is highly injurious, and entirely inexcusable.

Modjeska No. 2 is the new house, managed by F. J. Miller. It has a really beautiful, imposing front and the arrangement of the rest rooms over the lobby provides great possibilities for some really fine decorative effects, which would be exceedingly attractive to patrons. This, however, has not yet been done, and in my humble judgment it was a serious mistake to open the house until this important detail had been carefully worked out and completed. The operating room is of fair size, well ventilated, and has black walls. The observation ports are good. The walls and floor are of concrete. The equipment consists of two simplex machines, taking current through a Transverter. E. H. Batey is the operator in charge. The house runs mostly vaudeville, and the pictures are a secondary consideration. The seating capacity is approximately one thousand. The interior is pleasingly decorated and the house is a credit to the city. H. B. Moultrie, president of Local 547, has charge of the stage. Brother Moultrie is an operator, but was offered and accepted the stage management of the new house.

During the afternoon Brother Moultrie "bubbled" us around over the city and proudly displayed its beauty. At 11:30 P. M. the entire operating force of the city gathered at the Modjeska No. 2; also Harry H. Kerr of Tampa, Florida, now working in Augusta, was there, but not a manager appeared. True there are only two or three of them, as friend Miller manages three theaters. The affair was, however, one which vitally concerned receipts at the box office, and one would have supposed the managers would have been interested. The opportunity to learn the things they might have learned that night is not likely soon to come again. The lack of interest thus shown is not to the credit of Augusta managers. This is said in all kindness. The Moving Picture World is sending me out, at very heavy expense, in an endeavor to assist managers and operators to put on a better picture, and put it on with a less tremendous waste. It would seem that the very least the manager could do would be to spend a couple of hours listening to what we have to say. Managers of other cities have pronounced the lecture to be not only helpful, but of large value. If that is true of other cities, it certainly is true of Augusta.

Savannah, Georgia.

If I were a poet, right here is when the muse would begin to work overtime pronto, for only a poet could do justice to the quaint beauty of this gem of the Southland.

At the depot I found A. S. Guckenheimer, manager of the Arcadia and Star theaters, and Max L. Wolff, manager of the Odeon theater, and Ernest Morrison, manager of the Bijou theater (vaudeville) waiting, and right there let me say that Messrs. Guckenheimer, Wolff and Morrison are not only three thoroughly good fellows, but they are also three real theater managers, who study their business, seek suggestions and are willing to act upon them. After locating at a hotel we all motored out eight miles to Thunderbolt, where dinner was served at the far-famed "Bannon Lodge," a restaurant which serves only sea-food, but serves it in a way which, for the time being, makes one forget there ever was any other kind of food on earth. After dinner we "bubbled" around the city and viewed a few of its many beauties, meanwhile discussing various problems concerning matters theatrical.

First we visited the Savannah theater, claimed to be the second oldest theater in these United States. Mr. Guckenheimer has just taken over the management of this house, which will play high-class road shows, with pictures on the dark nights. It is a roomy, very comfortable, but rather badly planned old playhouse, and Mr. Guckenheimer wanted my advice as to operating room location and other things. From here we visited the Odeon, managed by Max L. Wolff. This house has a nice front. In the lobby is a display of posters in neat frames. The picture is of proper size for the house, is well illuminated, and was, during the time of my visit at least, run at approximately correct speed. The screen is set in black; the auditorium lighting is excellent. The house seats 800. J. J. Rebeske is chief operator, assisted by H. F. Baisden. Two Power six A's are in use. At the left front edge of the lamp-house cone, friend Rebeske has attached a frame which sticks out towards the machine, angling to the left about 45 degrees. In this frame is a colored spectacle lens. The spot is shielded from the operator's eyes by a solid metal screen, but he sees it, by reflection, in the spectacle lens, and without the least eyestrain. In front of the first lens, and about half-inch away, is a second colored spectacle lens, through which the operator views the reflection of the spot in the first lens, thus making it absolutely impossible to in any way strain the eyes. The house is very thoroughly ventilated by typhoon fans.

At the Colonial, also managed by Max Wolff, W. E. Lee and W. P. Kehoe are in charge of projection. Two Simplex machines are in use. The room is of ample size, but is flooded with daylight, which is distinctly bad. The Colonial is a five-cent house. When I entered there was a shadow at the bottom of the screen, which remained until I entered the operating room. The reason for this was very evident. Friend Lee leaned comfortably back against the wall, instead of watching the screen, also with all that daylight in the room he could only see a shadow after it became pretty bad, even if he were watching. There is altogether too much light in the auditorium—daylight I mean, but Brother Wolff is trying to eliminate this, also he has agreed to cut the daylight off the operating room.

The Arcadia is managed by A. S. Guckenheimer, a manager who studies his business and is anxious to improve screen results in any possible way. The house seats 757, all on one floor; admission ten cents for adults, five cents for children. The programme is Paramount and Metro. Thorough ventilation is supplied by six typhoon fans. Music is supplied by a $4,500 Seaburg piano. The house is pleasing as to its interior, and at the time of my visit, 5 P. M., was completely filled. The operating room is of more than ample size, and has a ceiling fully twelve feet high. It is thoroughly ventilated. The walls are not black, as they should be, also the rewinder runs too fast, as it does in both the other houses. Brother A. F. Rehm is chief operator, assisted by Brother J. B. Waters.

Taken altogether, Savannah managers have impressed me as being live, progressive men, who are quite willing and anxious to add to their stock of knowledge. Operating room equipment, while not exactly up to date, seems to be in reasonably good condition. The rooms themselves are of goodly size, and have ample ventilation. The operators impressed me as an intelligent, wide-awake group of men, who, however, have not done their duty in the matter of studying the technical end of their profession.

At 11:30 every operator and manager in Savannah gathered about a banquet table in the grill room of Hick's Hotel —one of Savannah's finest hostelries—and did ample justice to the goods things provided. The Editor started talking at about 12:30, and at 3:15 the audience expressed itself as quite willing to have him continue, but mental and physical exhaustion called a halt. As has happened before, the union had been just a little skeptical, not to say hostile, but after the lecture was finished the president, secretary and members came up, shook hands and expressed themselves as thoroughly satisfied and convinced of the value of our visit to the city.

This was, of course, gratifying, but it would certainly seem that now that I have lectured before nearly fifty unions during the past year, and all have expressed themselves as pleased and satisfied, the rest might, purely as a matter of common sense, conclude that the lecture really has large value. A very few unions have expressed opposition, because the Moving Picture World does not carry the union label. This is pure unadulterated piffle. The paper is printed by the Charles J. O'Brien Printing Company, 22 North William street, New York City, a thoroughly union shop, which has the label. If the Moving Picture World, for business reasons, sees fit not to order the label put on, I can't help that.

as the projection machine, the pliers, the motor generator sets, the wires, switches, etc., are the tools you work with. Do your tools have the union label? Think it over! People who live in glass houses will do well not to throw too many rocks. But just to show you how foolish you are, examine the projection department in the next issue, or the one following. Mind you only a very few unions have taken any such foolish position—less than half a dozen out of the ninety involved.

Into Florida.

I had written the Jacksonville local offering to give that city one day, but they replied: "We cannot afford it." Just why the local could not afford something that would not necesarily cost it anything but a little trouble, I do not know, but inasmuch as they took that view of it I passed Jacksonville up and went right on through to Miami.

Miami, Florida.

Miami the beautiful! I wish I had words to adequately express to you boys up in the Northland the charm of this little Southern city. I presume they are shoveling snow off my sidewalk in Brooklyn this morning. Down here, however, flowers are in bloom, the grapefruit orchards are loaded with yellow fruit; men are walking around in white duck, and women are in the lightest possible summer raiment. In fact, the stenographer (now don't get excited when you read this, Friend Wife, for it is a man) is, aside from a neck-tie of peacock blue, dressed in pure white. I have been shedding clothes ever since I left New York, and now my grips look like a couple of stuffed toads; I have to get on top of them with both feet to get them shut, but I will soon be back up in Cincinnati and that will relieve the tension temporarily, until I ramble back down to New Orleans.

The Southern Florida men are distinctly enterprising. When I started to plan this trip the Tampa and Miami unions demanded that I include Southern Florida. It was found, however, that it would entail a very heavy expense—an expense all out of proportion, when we consider that I could only visit two comparatively small locals, so I told them it could not be done; whereupon Tampa Local Union No. 321 and Miami Local Union No. 609 promptly replied: "We cannot accept your excuse; lay your plans to visit Miami and Tampa; we will pay all expenses." Now local unions, especially when they are quite small ones, which are willing to voluntarily assume a pretty stiff expense in order to hear a lecture on projection, are in the progressive class. They are the kind of men I like to meet. There is quite some considerable contrast between unions of this kind and a few—be it said to the credit of the men, a very few—unions which, although they lay directly upon the "line of march" (Jacksonville, Fla., for instance), who didn't have enterprise enough to even go to the slight trouble necessary to make the necessary local arrangements. I came into Miami on the train, arrixing three hours in advance of the one I was supposed to take, therefore found no one at the depot, but at the Fotosho theater, Brother Robert E. Lewis, president; Donald Barnhill, business agent, and Brother J. J. Hall, were quickly located—three bright, energetic looking men, who, unless I am not good at estimating such things, are, or will be a credit to the profession of operating. Brother Barnhill hustled around and secured an automobile; also he brought along with the machine a most charming lady, Mrs. Barnhill. Be it noted that Friend Donald is quite some considerable picker himself. We motored around the city and out several miles into the country, where we climbed up a 137-foot tower and had a good view of the famous Everglades of Florida, or at least a corner of it; also I secured several interesting snapshots on the way, which I probably won't dare show in New York City, as the Editor and Mrs. Barnhill figured conspicuously in most of them.

On the way out we saw what seemed to be a moving picture company. Stopping to investigate, it was discovered that the Garford Motor Truck Co. was taking moving pictures showing their road building apparatus in operation—another application of the moving picture to industrialism.

And now I want to say a word about the Fotosho theater. In that house I saw something which impressed me very favorably indeed. The front half of the auditorium was done in woodwork; the front wall itself being entirely of lattice, and the whole thing stained a dark green, the screen itself being surrounded by a border of black. The back half of the house, on the other hand, was plastered and decorated in very light colors. Now here is a thing which, in my judgment, is absolutely ideal from the projection point of view. The light walls at the rear of the auditorium provide for ample illumination of the auditorium, back, away from the screen, where the light ought to be, while the comparatively dark front half absorbs the reflective light from the screen and brings out the full value of the finer shades of photography and picture highlights. The Fotosho is managed by H. Leach, a wide-awake type of manager. Robert E. Lewis, president of the local, is chief operator, assisted by Brother J. J. Hall. The only fault with the Fotosho is its utterly inadequate operating room—inadequate as to size, I mean, and the queer part is, it might just as well have been made fully twice as wide and considerably deeper from front to back. Put a stretcher in that operating room, Friend

Group of Miami, Florida, Managers and Operators.

Leach, and make it larger is my advice. Demand results in your screen, BUT give the men a chance to deliver results.

At the Hippodrome, managed by J. B. Foster, a most pleasant gentleman, I saw a really excellent picture, of proper size and bordered in black. The Hippodrome is a large and pretty house, with a pleasing front and lobby; save for one or two minor points as to the lighting, which Friend Foster promptly gave orders to have attended to, there was nothing to criticise in the auditorium. The operating room (Brother E. L. Prince, chief; H. R. Bethel, assistant operator) is of even more than ample size, has a ceiling fully ten feet high and is well ventilated. But the walls are white, and that is very bad from a projection point of view. The parts are of good size. Two Power Six A machines and a G. E. motor generator set constitute the equipment. The picture is brilliant, using forty amperes, and the photographic values are well brought out. If the screen result I viewed in the Hippodrome is a fair sample of Brother Prince's work his work is indeed excellent.

At the Paramount, managed by Joseph C. Boss, I found an excellent operating room, of ample size, triangular in shape, in charge of Brother Donald Barnhill, chief, and C. Collor, assistant operator. Two Simplex machines are supplied current by G. E. rectifiers. That the screen result leaves things to be desired is by no means altogether the fault of the operators. Too much light near the screen makes the fixture gray, and too much light in the operating room, daylight at matinees and rectifier light at night render high-class work difficult, particularly in view of the fact that the walls are light colored. The management set forth as excuse the fact that the house is a new one and not yet entirely finished. As to that, gentleman, I can only say that you are running high class photoplays under conditions which render their proper presentation not only difficult but utterly impossible. In two hours, or less, a painter can blacken these operating room walls; a carpenter can shade those windows effectively in short order, and a metal worker can build a shield for the rectifiers in short order. As to the auditorium lights, it is up to you to lower those musicians at least two feet and place a shield in front of them or else get proper lamp shades, place the music racks differently and put in smaller globes. You owe this to the audience and to the artists whose work you are showing on your screen; also that entrance curtain is entirely inadequate. Place a light shield against the back row of seats.

The Paramount is a pretty house, and seats 1,375. At half past eleven thirty men and women gathered at Rector's Cafe and partook of the hospitality of Local Union 609 in the form of a banquet which certainly left little to be desired, after which this entire gathering, ladies and all, adjourned to the Paramount theater for the lecture, which lasted until 3:15 A. M. At 4 A. M. I crawled between the sheets, only to be routed out again at 6 A. M. to take the 7 o'clock train for Tampa, a trifling run of 371 miles and change cars twice. The life of this editor is filled with just one demad (try it backwards) thing after another. F. H. RICHARDSON.

New Portable Projector

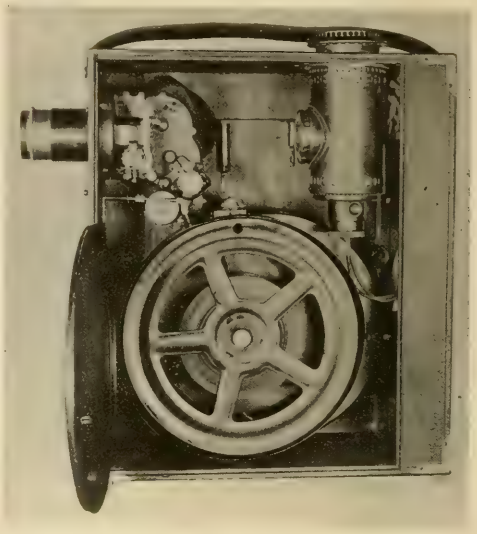
Named the American Projectoscope and Weighs But Twenty-one Pounds—S. S. Hutchinson the Promoter.

THE American Projectoscope is the name given a new type of portable projection machine, the manufacture of which has just begun. The American Film Company, 6225 Broadway, Chicago, Illinois, is the firm behind the new projector, Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American, heads the new enterprise and expects shortly to incorporate a special company to handle the manufacture and sale of the American Projectoscope.

A number of unusual features distinguish the American Projectoscope from other small projection machines. The new device is light—weighing but twenty-one pounds; compact—folding up to a size no larger than a small suitcase; uses any ordinary electric light socket as its means of securing current—the light being generated in a specially made nitrogen bulb which casts a light fully as brilliant as that secured from the ordinary professional projection machine; can be started or stopped at any point and held stationary on the screen without danger to the film; permits the film to be turned backward if it is so desired, and has numerous other features that will instantly appeal to the buyer seeking a portable projection machine for the display of industrial or commercial films. The cost, too, is a feature, for the American Projector sells for but $175.

President Samuel S. Hutchinson of the American in discussing the American Projectoscope said: "Here, at last, is a machine that can be offered without an apology. It has overcome all of the handicaps that marked previous attempts to construct such a piece of apparatus, and contains many features never before attempted. The American Projectoscope is a perfect device. Its light positively amazes projection experts. It uses three condensing lenses and throws the picture equally good, whether projected on a screen eight feet across, or a bit of card only eight inches in width. It is mechanically perfect in every respect. It is fool proof and so easy to manipulate that a child can operate it. Standard size film is used, and the film can be run forward or backward, or if desired for lecture purposes can be stopped at any point and held stationary on the screen like an ordinary stereopticon slide, without the slightest danger from fire or other damage to the film.

"In actual tests," continued Mr. Hutchinson, "169,000 feet of film have been run through the American Projectoscope without a stop of any kind other than to change reels in the reel boxes. The film was not torn for any cause and the light never gave trouble. In fact, the actual wear and tear on the film itself is far less when used in the Projectoscope than when run through the ordinary standard projection machine. We have found it ideal for inspection purposes at our plant and the stop and start feature alone made it superior for this purpose, when it came to the examination of sub-titles, where it is sometimes hard to find a typographical error when the film is constantly on the move.



American Projectoscope, Showing Mechanism.

"Already a tremendous demand exists for such a projector. Hundreds of big commercial organizations already possess thousands of feet of commercial film that they find it difficult to make use of. They have the pictures, but the showing of them has been a difficult problem. With the Projectoscope their salesmen are prepared to visit customers anywhere and in a moment display before them in motion pictures the product they are being asked to buy. It means the elimination of the small working model of locomotives, huge tractors and ponderous machinery of every kind from the salesman's equipment. Instead of asking his customer to examine the small model or look over still photographs of the machinery, the salesman now pulls down the curtains of an office, sets up his Projectoscope, and in ten seconds is prepared to show the actual machines themselves being assembled at the factory, tested out, and in actual operation. It will revolutionize salesmanship. Anybody can learn in a half hour's time to operate the Projectoscope. It will screen pictures anywhere—on a white wall—a window shade—a piece of white cardboard—even on the ceiling. It weighs but twenty-one pounds, carries like a suitcase, draws current from any ordinary electric light school, uses either alternating or direct current, throws a perfect light, costs but a small sum.

"So far," went on Mr. Hutchinson, "we have only considered the use of the American Projectoscope for commercial purposes, but when we have our new plant operating to capacity we will aim undoubtedly to turn out a model for use in schools, churches and for educational work. The field is practically unlimited for such a device."

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard, Reel Editor of Boston Budget.

JULIA ARTHUR, whose Seremonda is repeating its success in New York and who is to be filmed in this literary gem at the end of her season, was a guest and speaker at the reception given by the Film Club Friday, March 9, at the Vendome, where more than 100 club presidents were privileged to hear her. There is rejoicing that the play will be seen in the future by millions and Miss Arthur's pantomimic art and beauty thus immortalized. Others to speak were Thais Lawton, who has been in the pictures, notably in "The Battle Cry of Peace" and one or two Pathe films. She is playing here in "The Masqueraders," and for a time was leading woman at the Castle Square. She extolled the drama on stage and screen and made a favorable impression. Miss Nena Fales Peck, of Hartford, gave a program of musical numbers chiefly in caricature and aroused much merriment. The founder, Marion H. Brazier, told of the objects of the club, stating it was opposed to censorship as un-American, unnecessary, undemocratic; was not a highbrow or uplift club, but made a study of the photoplay and the industry as well. She mentioned the brand of pictures which are indorsed as clean entertainment and urged mothers present to keep their children away from the picture houses in the evening, and turn their attention to co-operation with the managers to have matinees on Saturdays for children and parents. She declared that men were not in the business of philanthropy, and so they should see to it that the box office had patronage sufficient to warrant giving what was clamored for but not supported.

William Jefferson, who was here with Roscoe Arbuckle's party, paid a visit to his venerable mother down in Buzzard's Bay, where the Jefferson brothers were born, and he renewed some pleasant acquaintances. My invitation to the banquet for "Fatty" read "Dear Sir," but I went along, only to find myself in a minority as to the alleged weaker sex. I noted especially the spirit of harmony among the men present, and of loyalty to the cause and to the pioneers there. It was a pleasure to hear Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky, Walter Greene, of the Artcraft Company, and Charles F. Wright, of Governor McCall's Council, who spoke "agin" censorship and got a hand.

Carelessness in titles may be unavoidable, but to label Mr. Roberto in "A Man of Mystery" as Theodore Roberts was some error. A man next me said "Gee, how he's changed since I saw him with Farrar." Another break was in a Metro picture. "He prefers his assistance," instead of proffers. A Pathe put this over, "Palet knife." And all these on the same evening.

Well, we had a good laugh over "The End of the Tour" (advertised in the press as "Tower"), as it was sane, full of color and—different. Metro has a good seller in this, I feel sure, for small towns, too, where the scenes of the play apply and will strike home a bit. We were glad to see Lionel Barrymore in such a part and once again to laugh at the rotundity of Walter Hiers, who looks like Dickens' fat boy. Good wholesome laughter is created and the one or two slips are overlooked, like digging up a situation already stale, as in the case of the watch saving the hero from a bullet wound. William Harvey was a dandy village booby.

"Oh, my, Mame, what stunning clothes!" said a young girl near me on seeing Vivian Martin in "The Wax Model," a splendid offering by Paramount, which gave her good support in Thomas Holding, Helen Jerome Eddy (seen the day before with George Beban) and George Fisher doing his first naughty part—a cad of an artist. One bad blot in permitting Mr. Holding, who was something of a prig, to cast suggestive glances at a window filled with feminine underwear and so out of keeping with his character. However, not many noticed it, so what matters?

"The Mysterious Mrs. M." was great with its surprise twist at the end. Ever see Harry Kendall Thaw? No? Then look at Harrison Ford, his image in feature, physique, mannerisms and general stolid air. It was startling, having seen the aforesaid Harry at close range. He did a fine piece of work all through. Mary MacLaren does not appeal with her surly expression and lack of beauty, and I cannot find anyone here who enthuses over her. The part called for a more appealing type, one who can smile once in three reels.

A message has gone forth to the ninety and more Daughters of the American Revolution throughout the country to see and advocate "The Eagle's Wings," as shown in the Daughters' Memorial Continental Hall in Washington before members of the Cabinet, House and other distinguished citizens and indorsed by President Wilson. Mrs. William Cumming Story, of New York City, the president general, has signed the call in strong words of approval. This Universal picture has been placed in the hands of a competent man here, who will handle New England. Though an eagle picture, it is nevertheless a "Bluebird."

Well, I went over to see "The Girl Philippa" and found it a rattling melodrama, rather jumpy and it might have been given in fewer reels. No wonder Anita Stewart is again on the "sick list" after her work in this, yet all through she is ever the central figure and good to look at. "Sid" Drew's boy, S. Rankin, had some work to do in writing the scenario, directing the details and playing the hero to boot. A feature of the presentation was the fine playing of "The Marseillaise" by Jarvis Jocelyn on the new organ at the Exeter. This was done twice and the house applauded as vigorously as if it was our own national air.

The best picture from my point of view of late is "The Courage of Silence," featuring Alice Joyce and Harry Morey in something entirely new in the working out of the theme. Here we have the man with no excuse for his course at the outset, being punished in a way quite unusual. "Frailty, thy name is man"—not "woman" here. Alice Joyce has broadened in her art and played the nun with restraint and convincingness. This is the sort of play to reissue often for its strong lesson. The kids were especially good all through, and such outdoor photography is good to see.

"Each to His Kind" made a hit and many went twice to see it to study the art of Mr. and Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa (Tsuru Aoki), who do such team work. Its novelty, too, appealed in having a Japanese actor to play an East Indian. Of course, it does not compare with "The Cheat" or any other of the Lasky plays for this distinguished star, but it compels attention through its intelligence, and so the comments were worth noting as made by large and fashionable audiences at the Exeter theater.

I have seen some good reissues of late at the Fenway in which Vitagraph players appear, one "The Seventh Son," with Earle Williams as one of the sons, Mary Maurice the mother, and Ralph Ince playing Lincoln, and reverently, too. Recently we had "The Battle Cry of Peace" with Julia Swayne Gordon as Julia Ward Howe and again Ince as the martyred president. This was a stirring picture to put on at present, as it inculcates patriotism.

Serials do not attract me greatly, but I am trying to enjoy "Patria" and "The Great Secret," both of which are drawing cards at several of our theaters. At a matinee yesterday, while the house was absolutely silent, during the Bushman-Bayne picture, we suddenly heard this exclamation: "Say, but that's our friend Charlie Fang, George Dewey's cook on the Olympia." This emanated from one of the sailors present in a party of five from the Navy Yard. His remark led to an acquaintance, with the result that quite a story appeared in a daily about Charlie, of his culinary art, which so pleased the late Admiral. According to Mr. Fang, who was born in this country, the H. C. L. would be solved if we adopted Chinese cookery.

Among the short subjects of interest is East Aurora, N. Y., with its industries pictured so well and a monument to the late Elbert Hubbard. Another is on the subject of birds, their variety, habits and beauty. Others show how milk is handled, starting with the feeding and pasturing of cows, then on to the bottling; others on the building of subways and tunnels, all of interest to young and old alike. Burton Holmes' easy chair journeys are of great value to the student of geography and of many other things. A garrulous young thing behind me said, "Here's where we get our money's worth sure—only 25 cents to go up the Rhine with him, and it cost us $2,500 to tour Germany before the war."

Interesting Educationals

Five Travel Subjects, One Mining, Two Scientific, Four Topical, Three Industrial and One Zoological Subject.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

"Gabes Oasis, Tunis" (Mutual-Gaumont).

ONE OF the most beautiful spots that could be imagined is the Gabes oasis, which lies at the extreme northern edge of the Sahara Desert, watered by a small stream which empties into the Gulf of Gabes. This subject will be found in "Mutual Tours Around the World No. 19," where it is fully illustrated. Here we see the travelers arriving from the desert and following the paths that wind in and out among the palms, along the banks of the quiet stream, and on to the village of Gabes, which we are told has a population of 20,000. In the village we are attracted by the numerous types of humanity, and we see the native barber shaving the head of a customer, using his leathery arm for a razor strop. Other scenes on the oasis show us the Bedouins hauling millet, the chief food of that part of the world, and gathering dates, many of which are exported.

It is interesting also to see the Bedouin women making urns and weaving mantles, and lastly we watch the travelers mount their camels preparatory to returning to the desert.

"The Luck of Horseshoe Basin" (Educational Films Corporation of America).

Horseshoe Basin, situated at an altitude of several thousand feet in the western mountain region, is one of the numerous spots on the earth's surface where gold has been located in large and rich quantities, but where Nature takes a hand in making it difficult of extraction. The fact that it must be transported a considerable distance for shipment is one of the difficulties which confront the miner, along with others pertaining to the actual extraction of the gold from the basin. This picture covers principally the scenic beauties encountered in the ascent of the mountain. In it we see the snow rivers flowing underneath the ice and eventually coming to the surface. The closeup views of the icy slopes and scenes at the camp of the mountain climber are all exceedingly attractive.

"On the Mississippi River" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In "See America First No. 79" will be found a number of interesting and instructive scenes along the Mississippi river. Starting at New Orleans we are shown the docks where a negro dances the "buck-and-wing" for us. As we sail up the river we are treated to attractive views of estates which touch the river edge, and finally reach Baton Rouge, the capital of Louisiana. Here we see the capitol, and various points of interest about the city. Our attention is drawn to the ranch known as "One Hundred Oaks," which was once a cotton plantation, and is now given over to the raising of cattle, and to the Baton Rouge National Cemetery, where 4,500 soldiers who fell at the siege of Baton Rouge are buried. A contrast is drawn between the condition of the negroes a few years ago, without facilities for education or progress, and the opportunities open to them today; the illustrations used being an overcrowded little negro hut, and the Southern University, where negroes are taught all kinds of trades. A glimpse at the various classes in bricklaying, sewing, etc., adds interest to this portion of the picture.

"New Mexico" (Pathe).

New Mexico is the state chosen for illustration in the third number of the "Know America, the Land That We Love" series, now being made for the Pathe Exchange, Inc., by the Combitone Pictures Corporation, under the supervision of A. L. Westgard, president of the National Highways Association. This is another striking example of the excellence of the new process of tone combination, and of the wonderful scenic beauty of the southwestern State. In the picture the sheep industry in its different branches is covered, and views in and about the towns of Las Vegas, San Jose, Santa Fe and other towns are shown.

"Koursk, Siberia" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In "Mutual Tours Around the World No. 19" will be found an excellent illustration of things as they are in the frontier village of Koursk, Siberia. We are somewhat astonished to find this village so modern in style, equipped with telephone, telegraph system, trolley cars and apparently all modern conveniences. In fact, the only dissimilarity to the modern American city in general appearance will be found in the Russian signs displayed in front of the stores. And it is not until our attention is drawn to odd sights, such as camels hitched to sleds on the streets, or a fire drill, showing the old-fashioned apparatus used that we fully realize that we are viewing scenes in far-away Siberia. Other interesting points in the picture show us a portion of the Trans-Siberian railway, which touches Koursk, and the fish market of the nearby village of Ouralsk.

"Gold Mining in Alaska" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In "Reel Life No. 46" will be found a well-illustrated study of gold mining in Alaska. Scenes near Nome, Seward Peninsula, show us how the gold was extracted from the beach sands by the old "beach rocker" method. We are then shown how the work is conducted with more modern methods, such as the hydraulic and dredge. A view of the Bessie road house on Dexter creek, a short distance outside of Nome, is also reminiscent of early days.

"The Fluid of Life" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In this subject, found in "Reel Life No. 46," the heart of a frog is shown in motion. There are also shown microscopic studies of the blood circulating through the veins and arteries of a frog. A drop of human blood is shown before and after eating. The leucocytes are pictured; the blood of a chicken and of a rat, and blood parasites are shown under the microscope. This is an especially interesting subject well illustrated.

"Club-Rifle for the Police" (Mutual-Gaumont).

A short subject of current interest, appearing in "Reel Life No. 46," shows a new device by which the policeman's revolver gains in precision. This device invented by Frank Barnett, a Californian, places the barrel of the revolver inside the club, which has first been "rifled." There is also shown a sporting barrel for other than police purposes.

"Making the Cactus Useful" (Mutual-Gaumont).

Many varieties of the cactus are shown in "Reel Life No. 46," including the uses which are now made of this ungainly and somewhat cruelly inclined member of the plant family. We learn in the picture that it is a native of the desert, that the birds eat the pulp of certain varieties, and that certain kinds stripped of their spines can be used as food for cattle. We learn also that from the octillo cactus rubber can be made, and that the spines of the "water barrel" cactus are used extensively for phonograph needles. We are given a glimpse of Luther Burbank in his experimental garden, near Santa Rosa, Cal., showing where he developed the spineless cactus, and made the cactus fruit fit for food. We also learn that the "water barrel" cactus is used for making candy. In so doing it is first stripped of its spines and shipped to the factory, where it is cut in slices, and the soft part of the pulp is made into a delicious crystalized form of candy. We are also taken to a garden in Phoenix, Arizona, where all known kinds of the cactus family are cultivated. Another garden where no less than eighty varieties can be found is in San Diego, Cal. This is a most instructive and entertaining number.

"Assaying the Nation's Gold" (Paramount-Bray).

The enlightening scenes, which are shown us in the Paramount-Bray-Pictograph No. 60, in connection with the assaying of gold at the New York assay office, the United States Government's refinery for precious metals. In the picture we learn that each day loads of bullion, varying from $100 to $100,000,000, are brought to the assay office. We learn that the pawnbroker also delivers gold at this office in the form of family heirlooms and other articles, which have congregated unclaimed at his office, and have the pleasure of seeing these articles turned into molten metal, and the actual assaying of same.

"The Proper Care of the Finger Nails" (Universal).

The Universal Screen Magazine No. 13 contains a lesson in manicuring, which is quite comprehensive. We are shown how to shape the nails with a steel file, and we are told not to cut the cuticle, but to remove it with an orange stick tipped with absorbent cotton. We see the nails rounded with an emery stick, whitener applied under the nails with an orange stick, and the finishing touches given with paste and cake polish.

"A Modern Hotel's Kitchen" (Universal).

In this subject, which will be found in the Universal Screen Magazine No. 13, we learn with considerable surprise of the care in matters of sanitation taken in some of the modern hotel kitchens. We learn that the Health Department Inspector demands medical cards from employes, that each employe is manicured daily, that the bread and butter is served without handling, and that a mechanical dish washer is used, which cleans hundreds of utensils a minute. We find also that the steward transmits his messages to the kitchen by means of a telautograph. The arrival of meats in the kitchen ready to be cooked and the squad of cooks at work are also interesting sights.

"Porpoise Fishers" (Universal).

An especially well illustrated article on porpoise fishing on the Atlantic coast will be found in the Universal Screen Magazine No. 13. We see the fishermen planting their nets, we see the porpoises at play, and we are also given closeup views of the nets being hauled in laden with the huge fish. We learn that the oil extracted from the porpoise sells for 40c an ounce, and that it is used for lubricating the works of chronometers and fine watches. We learn also that the porpoise weighs on an average 200 pounds, and that the hide makes an excellent leather.

"Americanizing an Oriental Art" (Paramount-Bray).

The manufacture of "Batik," a kind of cloth which had its origin in Java, is one of the interesting subjects of the Paramount-Bray-Pictograph No. 60. Here we learn something of the process by which this cloth, which has now become fashionable in America, is decorated. We find that the design is traced on with a concoction of which paraffine is the chief ingredient, after which the cloth is placed in the dye. The process succeeds in leaving free from color the part covered by the design. Entertaining and instructive.

"Crab Fishing in Virginia" (Paramount-Bray).

In this picture, which will be found in the Paramount-Bray-Pictograph No. 60, we learn considerable about how the crab-fishing industry is conducted. We see the fishermen baiting their lines with pork and hauling in their nets hundreds of crabs, which are taken to the canning factory, where they are boiled and stripped of their meat. The final scenes show the shredded meat ready for the cans

"Feeding the Fish Eaters" (Educational Films Corporation of America).

An unusually interesting animal picture, in which we are treated to some excellently photographed scenes, in which the sea lion is the central figure. We see him catching good sized fish, which are thrown to him from a considerable distance and swallowing them whole. Other scenes in the picture show the feeding of pelicans, penguins and other aquatic animals.

A New Color Process and an Interesting Whale-Hunting Picture Combining Natural History and Industrial Scenes.

Prizma Pictures.

THIS new color process now being exhibited at the Strand theater in New York and which it is announced will now be shown regularly each week for some time is indeed very pretty. The making and exhibiting of colored moving pictures has long been the ambition of many producers. The ambition is a most worthy one, and one, the fulfilment of which will be second only to the discovery of the moving pictures themselves. Kinemacolor is not to be forgotten even if for a while means are being sought to perfect that which has so far always pleased, it being understood that its little use for some time is alone owing to a desire for the further perfecting of the same. To just what perfection and permanence Prizma has arrived remains to be proved, the first beginning is very acceptable and we are promised greater things as its powers are revealed. In comparison with Kinemacolor, it would seem that Prizma is softer in tone, with shadings which drive away all harshness; where Kinemacolor was positive Prizma blends with a tender pleasing effect. At present no technical description can be given as to the relation of these two colorings, both are good and both are serving a purpose the combined outcome of which will under any circumstances be beneficial. We welcome Prizma, the moving pictures are improved, greater possibilities are assured by this new and beautiful addition and we look for the richness of nature upon the screen. The pictures so far shown are only sections of landscape and flowers, we are, however, promised additional adaptions each week, which it will be a pleasure to record.

Whale Hunting in the Northern Pacific.

That whales are hunted is not a new story even to the schoolboy, the new and very modern method of hunting them, however, is full of thrills and will give a new interest to this subject in natural history, as also one of an industrial pursuit which has become of great value and wide importance.

The old method of hand harpooning has been superceded by the use of a large cannon placed on the prow of the vessel, which fires a huge harpoon into the body of the monster in exactly the same way that a cannon ball is fired at any mark. Only after the harpoon is safely lodged in his body does the great fish begin to show his power, weighing upwards of a hundred tons and thus possessing a "horsepower" superior to the steam vessel essaying its capture; the monster is seen towing the vessel even with engines reversed at great speed through the waters; this it did for two hours before means could be taken to bring it into subjection by repeated shots. When finally landed, the industrial uses of all parts of the body are shown and described. It is here that there appears in detail the greatness of this sea monster, its powers and their varied uses for the service of man. This makes a very good threefold picture, which will captivate the school children: there is the whale as subject in natural history, the thrill of a hunt, the chase and the excitement of the capture; this in turn followed by a study of whale-fishing industrially and the value of its varied parts as oil, food, skin and bone, all being of some especial use and value, making the whale as valuable in its benefits as it is great in its size. This is an unusually fine picture filmed by a private individual and was exhibited at the Strand prior to being generally released.

Items of Interest.

A conference meeting was held at the high school, White Plains, N. Y., on the evening of March 12, by the Woman's Club in connection with the Better Film movement. Those present desired to know the actual facts in connection with the distribution of pictures, the rental arrangements, the methods by which the various organizations could co-operate with the exhibitors, and the success in other places. Mr. Orrin G. Cocks, of the National Board of Review, presented the facts of the question, after which an interesting discussion took place. The sense of the meeting was that definite co-operation should be developed, both with the National Committee on Films for Young People and the exhibitors of White Plains.

At the entertainment given in Atlanta, Ga., on the evening of March 12 for the A. B. F. B., permanent blind relief war fund, some remarkable pictures were exhibited, showing how the war's blind are being trained for various professions. The pictures, illustrating, how in spite of their affliction, the blind are able to master various arts and industries, were brought from France by George A. Kessler, a member of the executive committee of the A. B. F. B.

A picture was recently made for the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, entitled "The Link." This film was made for the purpose of showing the salesmen the importance of linking advertising with salesmanship. The facts of the picture are presented in story form.

The all-important question of reducing the high cost of living is about to be discussed on the screen in a novel and entertaining way. A series of illustrated lectures is being prepared by Caroline B. King, editor of the woman's page of "The Evening Telegraph" of Philadelphia, and staff writer on "Good Housekeeping." Mrs. King is also a lecturer and expert on domestic science and dietetics.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Build Up On It.

APPARENTLY in good faith, a correspondent calls attention to the advertisement of a certain soap which merely reads "Use ———." He argues that if so successful and experienced a concern can use an advertisement so devoid of argument, that his own advertising which reads "Go to the Blank Theater—Always Good" is also good advertising. The point might be well taken were it not that it took the soap company dozens of years and millions of dollars' worth of advertising argument to get to the point where this line could be used where greater detail could not be run, and even now the "Use———" merely supplements the argument advertising. Don't look for an excuse for not doing good advertising. Look for practice and experience. Reminder advertising is all right when it is backed up by argument, but the argument must come first if the reminder is to be of any value.

Differing With Ruffner.

Ralph Ruffner opines that his pen and ink sketch of Bill Hart is just about the last word in niftiness. We hate to have to differ with "Ruff," but it is too black. It is all too much of a color. It is not black that makes stuff effective. It is black and white. If Hart's face were lightened so that you could see what he looked like, then the black mass about him would throw the likeness into high relief, but with the face so nearly the color or that semi-cubist background, the effect is completely lost. We like better one of his recent stands, which is reproduced here. This shows up well and the aptness of the text will do more to rouse curiosity than an allusion to the play itself. This was used just before inauguration and it came at a time when the only woman member of the Congress was being boomed anew. Probably the line made more talk than any amount of straight advertising could have done. Those who see it pass it along with a "Seen that sign in front of the Liberty?" and they go on to tell about it. They would not tell that the Weaker Sex was playing. They will talk about the humor of the connection.

Emanuel Moves.

J. Emanuel, sometime of the Ridge avenue, Philadelphia, has taken on the Park theater as well as the Jefferson, and is running them along the live wire lines that made the Ridge. He writes that he has bought another carload of printing stock, but this time he had to pay war prices. He says he is willing to do that, though, since his earlier experience has shown him that it pays. It will be remembered that he bought an entire carload of stock at a bankrupt sale at foolish prices. We never could persuade him to date his days, but otherwise he gets out a very neat program to cover the two houses, giving each a page to the week. The stock is pea green, printed in a two-tone blue and embossed. The back page carries this unusual announcement:

A CHANCE TO SEE YOURSELF AS OTHERS SEE YOU!

We have arranged to take a series of Motion Pictures of the people living in this locality. Our Camera Man (the time to be announced later) will call at the different schools during recess, noon time and after school hours to Photograph the Children Free of Charge. Also any person specially interested can have Motion Pictures taken of themselves or their children if they will make their wish known to the Manager either in person or in writing. These pictures will be shown at a later date at the PARK THEATER, 33d and Ridge Ave., and the JEFFERSON THEATER, 29th St. bel. Dauphin. Watch for the Camera Man.

The scheme is by no means new, and it has always been a big business maker. Probably there is a chance to sell positives of the family pictures, and possibly of the school groups. An alert manager can make the scheme more than pay for itself, selling film to the subjects and perhaps running the private reels after the regular performances for a small fee. Aunt Mary comes to visit and is taken to the show. After the performance is over she is given an opportunity to see the private film. He is using some stock evidently prepared for the ball programs of Scottish clubs and societies to advertise The Pride of the Clan, and it words as well as though done to order. Mr. Emanuel is a good business builder and should put his new charges on a paying basis in short order.

Miss Spurr Changes.

Mindful of the high cost of paper and inks and things, Miss Dolly Spurr has gone in for plain black front for her program for the Royal Grand, Marion, Ind. It is a little less vivid, but she gets a very good effect, probably with a stock border. It is so useful that we reproduce a couple of pages here, showing the handling of the border to let in different styles of cuts. Some such effect is within the range of any printer, but good work on lock-up will be done only by the good ones. Miss Spurr has a good printer you will note. In a recent issue Miss Spurr wonders if the mothers of the town will co-operate with her in showing "Snow White." We are surprised so energetic a lady has not tackled the subject of Kid Matinees before. It is right in her field and it will help her in her fight for Sunday shows. It drives home the fact that the pictures are not all blood and thunder and sex stuff. If we were in Miss Spurr's place, and could possibly afford it, we would give a free showing —on Sunday of just such a subject, and if the town did not burn down that Sunday night because of the sacrelige we would yell for regular Sunday shows.

Money in Sheets.

S. S. Stevenson, of the Princess, Henderson, N. C., does some effective advertising very cheaply. The other day to advertise "The Dollar and the Law," he obtained the use of a book store window and dressed it with $500 in new bills uncut. Any bank can obtain these very cheaply from (for the expressage) the Treasury Department, yet few persons have seen the bills in the strips of four as they come from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and they are a real novelty. On the night of the performance these new dollar bills were cut apart and used in making change. Alternating with the bills were stills from the play, and it made a real money getter. The money was placed in the safe each night and the window dressed fresh each morning.

It might help a little to give an uncut sheet of four as change for each five dollar bill. In this connection it might be handy to use this text, which is so old that it has been forgotten:

> All United States Treasury Notes are printed in sheets of four and each of the four plates from which the bills are printed is given an identifying letter from A to D. As all bills are numbered serially, knowledge of the number will enable a person to tell the letter without having seen the bill. Discard all figures save the tens and units. Divide these by four. If there is no remainder the letter is D. If one remains it is A, if two, B, and if the remainder is three the letter is C. Try this on the bills in your pocket, then amaze your friends.

The plate letter is engraved and not that printed in blue as a part of the number.

Good Talk.

We have lost the popular "Stillman stuff," for Mr. Madden has gone from there, but perhaps the Turner and Dahnken man in Oakland, California, will take his place. He will if he can keep up such program talk as this:

> Real motion picture entertainment today means giving patrons a square deal day in and day out. Good programs, rather than long programs, courteous attention and service in every detail, anticipation of the desires of patrons as to the pictures preferred and house conveniences then giving just a little bit better than they expected—this means success and is the policy of the T & D. Theaters, with its clean bright cheery, cordial and comfortable atmosphere. And this is the reason WHY some 40,000 photoplay followers patronized Oakland's "First Theater" last week.

Particularly note that "good programs rather than long programs." The long program is almost never a good one. It may be good in its various parts, but if it leaves the spectator tired or even fully satisfied, it is in no sense a good program either for the house or its clientele. Some day the program stuffers will find this out.

Getting Back.

This is from the Palace theater, Philadelphia, one of the Masthaum houses. The boss censor does not like Chaplin, and said so, which explains the allusion.

That's a nice quiet get back.

Jimquins.

Jimquin, of L. A., has been up in Portland, Oregon, with his State Rights stuff, and found snow on the ground, which is something of a novelty to a man from Los Angeles. He also found the censors and they leave a bad taste in his mouth. The Oregon censors seem to be a bit worse than the usual breed, which is bad enough in all reason, and one Jimquin calls the gnat. He writes that the activities of the board hurt business, and throws patronage to the vaudeville and dramatic houses, which are permitted to give full performances. One house, the name being forgotten, was troubled by some hooligans of the neighborhood who threw torpedoes against the outside walls and made other efforts to break up the show. The house manager caught a couple of them, and at their trial they were given their choice of a short sentence or appearing before the outraged audiences and apologizing. Naturally they preferred crow to jail, and the house manager advertised widely and got a two day headline attraction that jammed the house without showing on the salary roll. The Broadway had a "Patria" week and put up a sliver cup for the best dressed "Patria" show window, and a lot of merchants decorated in the hope of getting the prize, and then advertised their window display to bring people to see it. This is something new. The value of the prize would not equal the rental of a single window, and brings not alone several important displays, but newspaper advertising as well. If the decision were left to the public, by vote, the idea would be even better. We'll be sorry when Jimquin settles down in L. A. again, for we shall lose his chatty travel notes, but on the other hand we'll get some of his house advertising stunts again.

Elmwood's Latest.

It keeps us busy tabbing up the Elmwood, Buffalo, on its program enclosures. The latest differs from the usual card. It is an envelope about 2 by 3½, printed up as shown in the cut. The flap is so tightly sealed as to suggest unusual value. Inside is a stage greenback advertising Lillian Walker in The Dollar and the Law, the "V" appropriately standing for Vitagraph. The Elmwood enclosures certainly do a lot to keep interest up. It keeps someone hustling to supply the ideas but so far they are holding their own and a bit better.

A Combination Poster.

E. Marshall, who does not mention the house he conducts, offers an idea for a general program announcement in which a lettered slip is used to change a set painted three sheet board in the lobby. The board is painted with the house announcement times of showing etc. In the center is an opening into which is slipped a special card for the day's feature, with a "today's attraction" just above. Other posters may be used as desired or as the lobby space permits but the public soon learns to turn to this particular board to see what the current offering is, and herein lie its chief advantage. Mr. Marshall also sends in a changeable slide, but does not make the modus operandi clear enough.

That Printer Again.

Vernon W. Sell, of Reeseville, Wis., sends in a program and asks for commen on its make-up. He says he knows there is room for improvement, and there assuredly is. It is seldom that we have seen more

Come and See
At the Opera House
Sunday, Feb. 11, 1917.

The title gets a two line letter, bold, and the star a lighter all cap face. The type takes the same relative space that the advertising on the back pages get, the line around the cut shows the waste space there. There are eight trade advertisements on page two and not a single line of house stuff anywhere, and the nearest we come to a display is in the "Let us print your sale bills." If they make no better a job of the sale bills, they should not be permitted to print them. It is not to be expected that a country print shop will have the same variety of type faces as can be found in a larger printing office, and printers who can do artistic work generally go to the cities where the pay is better, but even at that, the small shops should at least have a little good display type and should at least be able to set what they have, and even the biggest ass of a printer should know enough to either match his type page to the cut sheet or cut his sheets to match his type page. Here only the front page type fits the size of the paper. On the other three the printer has not even tried. It is positively the poorest job we have seen in a great many months. But Mr. Sell is partly to blame, for he does not give much copy for the space he uses. Most companies will supply him with advertising matter, and he can get the synopses or reviews out of the paper. "We would like to see you there" and "You surely will enjoy this show" are not arguments. Tell why the reader should be there; why he will enjoy the show. Give a hint of the story. Tell something about its good points. Tell something about the house, and its aims. Tell something about the players.

If we had the job we would remake that front page. We would put "Opera House Program" at the top of the page in two lines, the program being smaller than the house name and separated by white space. Below we would give the date. Then we would mave a two bank head across the page and a story set in eight point in regular column width (two columns to the page), telling about the pictures and how Reeseville gets the same pictures, the same stories and the same actors that are seen in Milwaukee, in Chicago and in New York. We would tell what was coming on future nights, we would talk about plays and players and we would talk as though we knew, and we would wind up with some snappy sentence, pulled from this department if original matter does not offer. On page three we would split the page between the two days, and have plenty of room, at that, by using the smaller display sizes and six point for descriptive matter, the six point opened with two point leads. We would break up those advertising pages, four at the top and four at the bottom of the page, and run a few paragraphs of gossip in the space gained. This will round out the page and make it look like a regular job and not like something little Johnny does out in the woodshed on his hand press. It would not cost much for composition, and it would be worth the difference in price. It would be worth so much more that the advertisers could be taxed a little more for their space. If we could not do that, we could be taxed a idea of a program and use merely a throwaway, one page, with advertising on the back, if there are enough offered. If Mr. Sell will write some of those mentioned in this department from week to week as getting out programs that seem to be about what he wants, he can get some good samples, if he encloses a return cover. Perhaps a good starter would be Eugene Upstill, Long Pine, Neb., who gets out the nicest looking inexpensive program that we know of.

An Idea.

Here is a paragraph from Variety, a vaudeville paper:

> Jake Rosenthal has inaugurated a unique business pulling scheme for the Bronx Opera House, which he directs for Cohan & Harris. Besides having made the lobby a pictorial show place for all Bronxites, Jake has paintings made of the leaders or officers of societies having a special night at the theater. These are also displayed in the lobby for weeks previous to the evening, then contributed by the theater to the organization.
> At present there is the painting of Ed. W. Curley, a prominent borough man, who leads a delegation securing the theater for April 11. The Kossuth Democratic Club has the house March 8, and in the lobby is a frame containing oil portraits of all its officers.

These are the Kraus oil portraits, of course, for Jake is a brother-in-law of the Kraus Manufacturing Co. and probably gets the pictures at a special price, but the pictures are gotten out so foolishly cheap that managers of average size neighborhood houses can afford to use the small sizes at least as bait for the club business. The Bronx is a combination house and not a picture theater, but there is nothing to prevent the picture theaters from trying for the club business, and we are surprised that Kraus company has not incorporated the idea into its catalogue.

Another Campaigner.

Universal has issued a very comprehensive campaign book for "The Voice on the Wire," but has neglected to print the press stories on one side of the sheet only, and these must be copied if they are to be used, which works some hardship. A number of novelties have been devised for the series and there is a twenty-four, six and three sheet, two ones and a window card done in colors that the exhibitor may see just what the paper is. There is a full campaign planned with all material provided. Some of the stunts are apt to be loaded. The title suggests teaser stuff on the wire, and this is most likely to react, for no householder cares to be called up on the 'phone to be told that "This is the Voice on the Wire." You are apt to get more goats than patrons by this means. It would be a good plan in making up these books to back the press stories with other material that the stories may be cut out and sent to the paper. An even better plan, and a money saver at that, would be to have the books smaller and print the press stuff on straight news, one side only, as a supplement, using column width.

Chips From Carpenter.

George Editor Carpenter means these fake advertisements to be humorous, and we'll admit they are, decidedly so, but they drive home some unpleasant truths as well, and do it all the better because they get a laugh at the same time. He ground out about half a column, but this is the pick of the lot from Real Reels.

> SITUATION —WANTED—Four years' experience as manager. During this time I have managed 48 houses. Am at liberty at present, salary no object, but must be paid thirty days in advance.
> WANTED—Film to use for MEN ONLY. Something to make them sit up and take notice as the old White Slave stuff don't draw any more at my house and the decent people stay away anyway.
> VENTILATION—Why install an expensive ventilation system when Skunk's Otter for Noses kills the other bad smell? What your audiences don't detect don't matter.

Doubled.

R. C. Schmidt, formerly with the Pittsburgh office of the Famous Players Film Service, has connected with the Exhibitors' Publishing Co., who get out the neat V. P. program we have mentioned several times in this department.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing adressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses by critized, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Models.

HARRY Wendland writes us a nice, soothing letter. It is nice and soothing because he plays the game the real way, but he says one thing that is worth taking up, for he writes:

> An intended-to-be-writer once told me that he had an idea that if produced would be greater than The Birth of a Nation, but the unfortunate one averred that he had no model to write it by and so had to give it up. I am glad he did. Anybody who is as helpless as this does not deserve help.

We echo that Pollyana. A man who really has an idea as great as The Birth of a Nation, either does not need a model or has sense enough to get one. The great idea is not a matter of technical form, but of brains, and there is no model for brains. He has to have technical form in order to give his idea the fullest exposition, but his idea will be bigger than an ytechnical form ever devised and if he has an idea so good, he can override any and all ideas in any book on technique costing up to nine dollars a copy and still be all to the good.

We get a dozen requests a week for model scripts. There is no such thing as a model script. It is the idea that counts, but the better you plan and exploit that idea in action, the better chance you stand of making a sale.

Get away from the model script idea. Throw away yours if you have such a thing. The third edition of Technique of the Photoplay has several "model" scripts merely to show that there is no such thing as a standard. It is idea and idea alone that counts.

Edison Wants.

This circular is being issued by the Edison Company:

> Thomas A. Edison, Incorporated, will pay worth-while prices for stories suitable for and appealing to youth, as well as maturity.
> Quoting Mary Austin in the Dramatic Mirror: "It has always been assumed that child psychology is grown-up psychology diluted with sugar and water . . . Children do not think of themselves as children, but as kings and pirates and heroes and fairy princesses . . . Always they figure themselves as grown-up, or at least doing grown-up things.
> "The first condition of a successful child's play is that it should deal with a world of which children are not childish or 'sweet' or 'cute' or even pathetic, but heroic and triumphant. . . ."
> Send us stories in which the "heroic and triumphant" are the dominant notes. Ideals are natural to Youth and we want them in our pictures, but not the goody-goody negative and colorless ideals which it is sometimes assumed that Youth should cherish. We want stories that are wholesome, but in which there is danger and adventure and fighting towards a goal.
> We are searching for new Stevensons who can reveal the thrilling romance in the complexity of contemporary life. We do not want costume plays unless they are so exceptional as to stand with the accepted classics. There are plenty of pirate tales and fairy stories to be picturized. Give us something of the same spirit in stories of today.
> One and two reel subjects especially desired

Amateurs.

There is no such thing as an amateur author, as we have said before. Writers are divided into three classes: those who can write, those who will presently become author, and those who never will realize their ambition, but until they can write acceptable material they are not authors, amateur or otherwise. A beginner stands no chance of selling because he does not know how to write. The only hope for him is to do his practice work and graduate into the staff of practiced writers. The beginner has no technique and so he can not sell. Homer Croy, a veteran in spite of his middle age in his introduction to Henry Albert Phillips' Universal Plot Catalogue, says that it was told him by a really great editor that the novice sells his first story through sheer force of the idea and the rest on technique. This is more than true. The only reason honest editors have for looking through the mass of stuff piled upon their desks is in search for the one idea. Almost anyone has one good story he can write. The rest must be workmanlike. Only the first sells on the strength of idea alone. Any "amateur" can sell one story, provided it is good enough. More than this he can seldom do until he becomes an author and creates ideas. This is something that one student out of a thousand can comprehend. It is the basis of many a heart-ache. It is best not even to try to sell until proficiency comes.

A Super.

May heaven defend you from an idea so very much better than your average that you cannot live up to it. Recently a well known writer with an unexpected hit complained that while the story was making his fame it was wrecking his bank account. He could not write another yarn as good and no one would be content with less. This condition is even more common in photoplay. You sell a better than usual story. It is given a better than usual production. The result is so much better than a merely good story with an average production that in later stories you seem to have fallen back, and you cannot sell as good a story as other authors can, because more is expected of you. This is not to urge you not to do your best but to cheer you up in case you have done better than your best. In that case the only thing to do is to live down your big hit and either grow up to it or wait until it has been forgotten. It is seldom that you can hit the same mark twice. We remember once writing a story for a minor magazine that made an unexpected hit. Nearly a hundred letters were received by the editor asking for a sequel that should lead to a happy ending. In our inexperience we took the commission to work a sequel to a happy ending, and for every letter the editor had received asking for a second story, he now got fifty telling how poor and disappointing that second story was. Here endeth the second lesson. If you do make a hit, for the love of mercy don't try to build up on it or you will pull the first structure down.

Things You Must Do.

About every so often a man or woman wants to know what sort of stories editors will "except." One author wanted to know if "hert intrust" stories were in demand. If you cannot write fluently, if you cannot spell correctly, do not suppose that you can have a message. Think things over for a moment. Hundreds of people who never would have the nerve to get up in the school room or their own church to entertain their admiring friends want to write plays that must interest several MILLIONS of people. How can they do it if they cannot spell, cannot write, cannot think? Photoplay has the broadest appeal of all the arts having to do with plot-expression. It is more ample in its opportunity than painting and sculpture, more elastic than written fiction, and more direct than music. It is the one form of art that appeals to the literate and illiterate alike with the fullest effect, and yet the man who blindly tackles this universal art wonders why his stories are not "excepted." Is it any wonder that we speak of boobs?

Easy.

One writer complains that he cannot practice writing synopses because he does not think of enough plots to give him practice material. If he can think no more deeply than that, we do not think he uses his brain to its proper capacity. If you want practice material, go see a program. Then go home and write out that synopsis. Take the Stories of the Films and see if you cannot rewrite these more interestingly. It will not only be good practice, but good study.

Unhappy Endings.

Not all stories must have happy endings. There are tragedies as well as comedies in life. Write them, but remember that there must be something more than merely an unhappy ending if you are to sell your story.

Varying.

There are no new plots, but you can do new things with old ideas

Always.

Your best friend is your hardest critic.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Reply to Question No. 173.

By J. H. Anderson, Fort Dodge, Iowa.

The Question:

What do you think ought to be the attitude of the operators' organization toward the manager who is willing to pay above the union scale, but demands a higher class operator than the local union is able to supply?

The Answer:

In my opinion, it will be a benefit to any local to accept into membership an advanced operator; that is to say, if he is advanced above the average of the membership of the union, or the average of the operators in the town or city. Suppose the manager be himself an old time operator. He certainly could make it so extremely hot for the local man that he would not want the job anyhow. When a manager makes up his mind an operator does not suit him, it is not going to be at all pleasant working in that theater. Just simply "getting along" under those conditions would be worth the entire salary to say nothing of the work. It therefore follows that under this condition the manager usually gets a change anyway, and I believe the union ought to be glad to bring in an outside operator, provided he really be a really high class man, and further provided he, the manager, is willing to pay a higher salary for superior ability. I believe the local should demand due consideration for the rights of its members, and should concede to the manager the same consideration it demands for itself.

If a manager wants a better operator than the local can supply I believe the best move would be to appoint a competent committee to ascertain whether said manager has the equipment, etc., which would enable a high class man to meet the manager's demands. If found that the manager has the right outfit, I believe the local should select a "bit of good timber" and proceed to make the desired article. The information necessary for doing this is now available.

[I would like to elaborate somewhat upon this matter myself, but it is getting close to time of leaving, and I cannot spare the time to give the matter the consideration an adequate comment would demand.]

He Disagrees.

H. W. Griggs, Milwaukee, Wis., says:

I remove my hat to you for breaking into the front pages of the editorial columns and giving the high priced stars the just rap you did. The whole high priced star business is an outrage on the public, who have, after all, to pay the piper. If reports are correct one star is getting more than $1,800 per day, and another one more than $700, while the man cooped up in a hot operating room oftimes gets less than four dollars per day for projecting the finished product, notwithstanding the fact that if the projecting be not properly done it at least very materially lessens, if not practically ruins, the screen value of the whole thing. Still there are many managers who "never read the projection department." The report is that star salaries are going still higher. Such crude work almost ceases to be funny.

And now just a word as to the geneva movement, January 6 issue of the department. Have you not shown the wear on the wrong side of the star, or don't the arrows show the direction of rotation the wrong way? My own experience in testing and truing up the cam and star shows the wear to be on the opposite side. Another thing: I maintain that if the cam is a true circle, and the star a perfect quadrant, movement will be perfect even though the circles are a little small, and even if the other surface of the star were removed, or with a worn pin, it would be merely a question of noise, so far as the star and cam be concerned. I made a test of this with a rattle trap of a machine, and the projection was rock steady, though, of course, the condition would not be maintained very long.

With regard to the geneva movement: no, the wear is as shown in the drawing, but I don't care to enter into an argument on that particular topic just at this time. That article stirred up a very lively fireworks celebration, with a number of the roman candles aimed in my direction.

A New Reel.

L. Sollisch, New York City, has presented to the department a new combined reel and shipping case, of which he is the inventor and patentee, patent number being 1210113; date of patent December 26, 1916.

The reel itself is made practically the same as in any other reel, except that instead of having four holes in either side it only has one, the rest of the side of the reel being solid sheet metal. The advantages of this reel consists in the fact that it is accompanied by a metal band, split in two halves and joined on one side by a substantial hinge. This band has two grooves around its outer edge which allow it to be clasped around the reel and locked thereto by means of a suitable catch or latch. Attached to the band are two metal discs, one upon either side, held inward by a spring. These discs come immediately over the single hole in either side of the reel, thus forming a fireproof package suitable for shipment. When the band is removed, the reel, aside from the fact that there is only one hole in its side, is the same as any other reel, and is used on the machine precisely as any other reel is used.

Mr. Sollisch claims for the reel are, first, that it protects the film from injury, thus affecting a direct saving to the exchange, and, second, that it makes an effective and a light shipping package.

The reel will be placed on the market, and, like all other things, will stand or fall according to its merits. I could not presume to pass judgment on it at this time, but if the exchange men, after examination and test, decide that it is suitable for their business we will then publish a photograph and full description of the device.

He Is In a Hurry.

M. Langley, Melbourne, Australia, says:

Just excuse this note, as I am in a great big hurry to catch the mail. It is like this: Another operator wants a copy of your Handbook after seeing mine, and you will find money order enclosed. Ship the book to H. Clark, 131 George Street, Fitzroy, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia. (Some address, my boy, some address.—Ed.). So you see, Brother Richardson, we are not quite dead over here, though the more I read the department and the Handbook the more sure I am I don't know anything. This is the third Handbook that has been bought on my recommendation. Do I think it is any good? Well rather.

Now see here, Brother Langley, you just cease from your tremendous rush for a moment, secure the stub of a lead pencil, some good, substantial paper, a chair and a table, and then squat down and tell us your troubles. What's happening over there in the land of the kangaroo anyway? What kind of machines are you using now? What salaries are you operators getting? What kind of screens are used? What size picture? How many amperes of current are used for projection? Do you use mercury arc rectifiers, motor generators, alternating current, or what? In fact let us have some dope on projection affairs in Australia. I don't, and never did, believe that you are "dead" over there, but allee samee it would not strain your wrist to write a letter once in a while.

In Holy Horror.

Los Angeles, Cal., begins with

This is my debut in the department, of which I have been an enthusiastic reader and booster for more than two years. I notice you hold up your hands in holy horror when anyone mentions pulling 70 amperes. Now in the school where I am running, we pull 70 to 75 amperes D.C., and would take 95 but the circuit breaker in our plant goes out at 85. We have a 12x14 picture at 80 feet, and the house is so light and the air so dusty that the picture is no good even with that high amperage. At the new school we will have a Simplex motor drive, a Power's, and a dissolver; also we will have A.C., and want something which will allow each machine to get 70 amperes with both arcs burning. What do you think would produce the best results, a mercury arc rectifier, Wagner converter, or a Martin converter? The stage of the new school when completed will be the best in the city, and will have five-color border lights. The main switch will be fused for 400 amperes, and every circuit in the auditorium will be controlled by a dimmer. Kliegel apparatus will be used exclusively, so you see we are not so slow in our schools. When you are here next winter don't forget to drop in to see us.

As to the current rectifying device, Los Angeles, I could not possibly, through the department, make recommendations as to specific apparatus.

As to the 70 amperes, why, my brother, I do not hold up my hands in "holy horror," but do say that with the present optical system of the projector, between 50 and 60 amperes you don't gain more than probably 25 per cent. of the additional light; between 60 and 70 I don't think you gain 15 per cent., and beyond 70 the percentage of gain is very, very small indeed. This is due to the fact that the spot is a photograph of the crater, and it is magnified as many times in diameter as the distance from the optical center of the condenser to the crater is divided times into the distance from the optical center of the condenser to the spot, thus; if distance Y (optical center of condenser to spot) is 20 inches, and distance X (optical center condenser to crater) is 5 inches, then the magnification will be four times, and if you have a crater ½ inch in diameter you will have a spot 2 inches in diameter. Under the same conditions if you increase the diameter of the crater to ⅝ of an inch, you would have a spot diameter equal to ⅝ x 4, or 2½ inches, result being that you would have to pull the arc back in order to reduce the size of your spot, and thus you would rob Peter to Pay Paul, and be very little ahead in actual illumination at the screen.

Change Over.

Geneva, Nebr., says:

Am writing you for the first time. I am a reader of the department; also have the third edition of the Handbook, which certainly is worth every cent I paid for it. I would like to ask your opinion as to the best way to change-over. Am about to take charge of a theater in another city where there are two machines, and, never having had any experience with a two-machine house, am up against it. Don't care to use the "meal ticket punch," as some operators do.

No, Geneva, for heaven sake don't do that. You need not be in the least nervous with regard to the change-over matter. It is a very simple affair. I would suggest that you proceed as follows: First it is necessary that you know when the end of the reel comes in order to switch in on the next, and that is the only difficult part of the whole proceeding. Some operators watch the first show by jerking open the magazine door, estimating amount of film and watching the scenes. At the end of the reel they make a note something like this: Miss Stewart seated at table raises hand-mirror—change-over. Other scenes are noted on the other reels. The method of accomplishing the change-over is to put two small pulleys in the ceiling of the operating room, one immediately over each lamphouse dowser, and then get enough of the small brass chain, such as is used for the toilet flush, and connect the handles of the dowsers to the two machines with each other in such way that the closing of one dowser pulls the other one open automatically. Another and better way is to make a dissolving shutter somewhat similar to the one shown in Figure 294, page 695 of the third edition of the Handbook, except that the handle is omitted, and in the one shown at A the blades are attached to the bars so that the saw-teeth stick out from either end of the bar, the bar being long enough to reach from one lens to another. A slot is cut in the bar and is attached to front wall of the operating room in such manner that you can shove it sidewise, thus opening one lens and closing the other. About one minute before change-over time comes you strike the arc of the idle machine, get it burning nicely, and when the time comes to change, open one dowser and close the other. If you are using the dowser method, or slide the shutter sidewise, if you are using the shutter method. There are other methods, but this will give you a line on it. It is just a matter of a little practice, Geneva, and I don't think you will have any trouble at all.

He Made it Work.

R. E. Wicker, Pinehurst, N. C., says:

Will you kindly write the nearest local to me and advise them I would like to join their ranks. I know very little about the organization, but believe it stands for improved projection. If it does I am for it.

You doubtless remember I wrote you some time ago concerning the running of a 110 volt generator at 70 volts to supply current for the arc. You did not encourage me very much in this matter, but I could not see why it should not run that way, therefore I connected it up and have gotten very satisfactory service from it for nearly two months. The set is made up of a 5 K.W. Lincoln compound wound generator, direct connected to a Wagner 220 volt, 4 H.P. A. C. motor. I set the field resistance back so that I get 65 volts and can pull 36 amperes at the arc without over-heating the motor. The generator does not even get warm. The voltage is very steady; the needle of the ammeter varying not more than two amperes through the whole show. I pass this along to those who have over-loaded private plants. A gasoline engine, pulling a 110-volt generator for use at the arc, is generating a whole lot of power which is wasted in the rheostat. Of course, if one is depending on his private plant for house lights and fans, then this scheme is of no service.

Well, Brother Wicker, if you will cast your memory back, I think you will recall the fact that I said that while the thing might work, I did not believe it would work efficiently. Still, it must be admitted that you are gaining materially by reducing the voltage; also I thank you for report on same.

As to the union, why some locals stand for better projection and some do not. I do not know what local you are nearest to. However if you will write to H. C. Shelton, secretary Local Union 451, Box 725, Winston-Salem, N. C., I think he will look the matter up, and advise you as to whom you should write.

Having a Tough Time.

Friend Kirner, who wrote from the Province of Cagliari, Italy, with regard to a puzzling lens proposition, comes forward with another communication, and much to my surprise I find that he is an Austrian prisoner of war, confined in a military prison at Senis. It seems that the solutions thus far offered don't fit the case very well, and he suggests that I take the matter up with the lens manufacturer, Ed. Liesegang, Vollmerwerthersstrasse, 21, Dusseldorf, Germany, it being impossible for him to get a letter through to that country under present conditions. Brother Kirner then continues as follows:

And now I want to tell you another thing which may be interesting, both to yourself and the readers of the department. You surely know of the Pathescope, and of the Kinox, made by Erneman, which project small moving pictures by means of an incandescent light, the maximum width of the projected picture being about 6 feet. But have you by any possibility heard of anyone getting a very brilliant 8 foot picture by the use of an extremely tiny electric lamp, consuming but 11 watts. I think you have not. However I get this result. There are three secrets. First: The lamp in question gives a very white light coming out from a point no larger than a grain of sand. In fact about 1/32 of an inch in diameter. Second: An extremely short focus condenser is used, having a diameter which just covers the aperture, to which it is attached. I made this condenser achromatic in order to obtain equal illumination, although the focus is so short that the light point is one inch from the condenser. Third: Light is supported by a small hemispheric, or, better, a paraboloid reflector. As this latter extends to the aperture plate, and covers the light completely, there is no lamphouse, or lamp jacket of any kind, except the reflector itself, and you practically work with the mechanism alone, the same being fitted with motor and film boxes, the lighting device being quite invisible. It is an odd thing to see a great, modern machine subtracted from its lamphouse, and working in this way while projecting more perfectly than it can possibly do with an electric arc. Two years ago when in Paris I presented a dramatic photoplay projected in private show room, giving a 7½ foot picture with 11 watts, and what may seem a joke to the arc men proved to be a factor in selling the film, the show being given to State Right buyers. The projection was marvelous for the absolute steadiness, purity and uniform color of light.

Of course in any photoplay theater, even of the smallest size, the picture I produced in this way would be decidedly too small; at least it would be so by comparison with size of picture now demanded. I am giving you this data more to show what can be done by optical economy. I get this marvelous result on an 8 foot picture with 11 watts of power, because there is no wasted light, or at least the part wasted is negligible, whereas with arc projection 50 per cent of the produced light is utterly wasted in the lamphouse (Phew! That is a pretty strong statement.—Ed.), while my incandescent gives fully 90 per cent to the condenser, and I thus obtain with 11 watts the same result (comparisons were made several times) we get with a 20 ampere arc. I also wish to point out the fact that there are no serious difficulties in the way of increasing the light power of the little incandescent to the proportion required even for the largest screens. But, unfortunately, at the present time, astonishing little attention is paid to this extremely interesting matter. However this will not long be so, and in the near future I prophecy that the arc will suddenly and completely disappear, leaving the field to perfect projection and economy. Think of an absolutely steady, pure, uniform light without carbon feeding, adjustment or other trouble to contend with. No heat, no fire risk, no fire-preventing devices necessary, no cooling devices, no condenser breakage. Achromatic condensers possibly giving a spot as white as the sun clear to the border. No carbon dust, no carbon gas, therefore greater health to the operator and cleaner films. The overvolted incandescent which I use is quite inexpensive.

And now, Mr. Richardson, allow me, across the thousands of miles of ocean to shake your hand, with the hope that I may be able to do it personally in the not far distant future.

This is certainly interesting and I am taking the liberty of referring the letter to the National Lamp Works, which for a long time has been experimenting with incandescent lighting of moving pictures. The particularly interesting feature of this proposition is found in the fact that, according to Friend Kirner, the light emerges from a very small point and the smaller you can get the light source the more efficiently it can be used with the lens system. I cannot, of course, vouch for Brother Kirner's statements as to the value of this particular thing, but at any rate it is very interesting, and I shall be glad to meet Kirner personally and discuss the matter with him.

As to taking the lens matter up with the German manufacturer, why I don't think it would be practical at this time. It is, perhaps, an easier job to get a communication to Germany from the United States than from Italy, but it is, nevertheless, no task to be lightly undertaken.

The advantages of the incandescent lamp such as Kirner describes, which would have sufficient power to give brilliant illumination to a 16 foot picture, would be innumerable, provided, of course, there be no seriously objectionable features to offset its advantages.

A New Scheme.

Mr. E. Anderson, of the Minusa Cine Products Company, St. Louis, Mo., says:

> The writer has recently experimented to some extent in using colored lights thrown directly on the screen upon which a moving picture is being projected. The idea is not entirely mine. It was first suggested by Mr. Schubert, Arcade theater, Gooding, Idaho, who uses one of our screens. We have, however improved somewhat upon the original suggestion he made by using a large reflector lamp, secured from the local electric light company, containing six socket lights, which were connected up on different circuits. We were thus enabled to get some very satisfactory effects on the screen. We covered this reflector with a sheet of clear, white gelatine, which diffused the light evenly over the entire surface of the picture. (I presume Friend Anderson means frosted gelatine.—Ed.) With a very delicate shade of amber the interior scenes were brought out very beautifully on the screen. Red gives considerable tone and an appearance of extreme richness to sepia tints. We find that green brings out exterior scenes wonderfully well. The writer is offering these suggestions to exhibitors in general, feeling sure they may be used to good advantage.
> We use color backgrounds in the manufacture of the Minusa Gold Fibre screen with great success. We have spent large sums of money in experimental work, adding tints to the final surface, but this method, while entirely successful so far as it goes, does not offer the field of variation that the plan outlined above holds forth. By means of flood lights the exhibitor will be able to secure results of great interest, without lessening the efficiency of the screen, where the film requires different color tones. We honestly believe that after the above plan has been worked out, and the exhibitor becomes thoroughly familiar with the wonderful effects possible, the projection room of the future will be equipped to light each scene automatically, with the color best suited to it, as the various scenes come on the screen.

If I remember rightly a letter came a few days prior to the receipt of Friend Anderson's communication, describing this same identical thing. Presumably it was from Brother Schubert. At first glance the presumption would be that any light thrown directly upon the screen would not only kill the high lights of the picture, but would utterly ruin the screen effect, and unquestionably this is true in so far as white light be concerned, but with colored lights it may be an entirely different proposition.

I don't wish to comment at any length on this particular thing at this particular time, except to say that I am quite sure Brother Anderson would not make the statements he does unless there was good ground for them. I therefore recommend to operators and exhibitors that they do some careful experimenting along the lines pointed out. If there is possibility of any considerable improvement by this plan it has the advantage that the expense attached is comparatively slight. I think, however, it will be highly essential that the colors used be selected with extreme care, particularly with regard to the depth of the color tone.

More Than Is in Them.

Ralph W. Martin, Los Angeles, Cal., says:

> In issue of January 6th I noticed Griffiths' correction of his former error, which is again misprinted. I detected the error in his article of November 11th, therefore my reply to that article was not affected. I am also interested to know just how Remillard, Manchester, N. H., came out on that proposition. Methinks Friend Griffiths is trying to get more out of those condensers than is really in them.
> The geneva movement discussion by Mr. Nicholas Power is certainly very interesting, but why do the pins in Figures 2B and 3B wear to a kind of hexagon shape? This would seem to indicate that the pin bumps very hard against the star at periodic intervals during the shift, instead of imparting a steady movement, which latter would naturally wear the pin to more of a uniform curve instead of the shape shown. Perhaps my article, issue December 26, 1914, would have some bearing on this matter.

Just why the pin wears in the shape shown I am not prepared to say. I find, to my surprise, that the bound volume covering September to December, 1914, inclusive is not in evidence in my files, therefore I can't say as to whether the article in question applies or not.

Unless I am mistaken there is a letter from Remillard now awaiting publication, in which he gives you the desired information. I have for the time being rather shut down in the lens discussion, because the department seemed to be becoming too technical. We will have more of it later on.

Operating Room Feed Wires and Equipment.

John Elingerman, Linneus, Mo., says:

> I am contemplating the erection of a moving picture theater in a near-by city. My capital being limited I cannot afford to employ an architect, and would like to ask you the following: The current supplied will be 60 cycle, 220 volt alternating. What size wires should run to the operating room, the same being the two outside wires of a 110-220 volt three-wire system? Also what should be the size of the operating room for two projection machines, and what materials would you recommend me to use for its construction?

To begin backwards: For the protection of your audience, your operating room should be thoroughly fire-proof. There are four forms of construction available, viz: hollow tile, concrete, brick, and what is known as the "asbestos board operating room," the same being asbestos mill-board built up on an iron frame.

Presumably your theater will be of brick or concrete, and if you can secure the proper foundation to carry the weight, you cannot do better than make the operating room of concrete, with 4 or 6 inch concrete floor and ceiling. Brick is rather costly, no better, and much heavier than hollow tile, and if you cannot secure a foundation to carry the weight of concrete, I would suggest the use of either 4 or 6 inch hollow tile set in good, strong cement mortar, and plastered inside and out with cement mortar. The conduit for the wiring to, in either event, be put in place before the room is built, so that it will come inside the walls, and not on their surface, the outlet for the projection machines coming out of the floor right under the lamphouse of each machine. If you use hollow tile construction you can also have a hollow tile ceiling by the use of what is known as T irons, but the floor should be concrete. This form of construction is most excellent, and not very expensive. The mill-board operating room is very good, except that it is a god deal of a sounding box, with result that any noise in the operating room is distributed through the auditorium. It is the cheapest form of fireproof construction. No matter what form of construction you may adopt, be sure that you have an ample vent flue from ceiling of operating room to open air. This flue should be not less than 16 inches in diameter, with a first class electric fan installed therein, and if of metal should be thoroughly insulated from any woodwork, because in case of fire it is apt to be very hot. As to the size, the minimum should be 8 feet from front to back, with 6 feet of width for the first machine, and with three feet for each additional machine, a stereopticon or spot light to be counted as a machine. Minimum height from floor to ceiling 7 feet, with as much more as you can get, within reason, of course.

The size of wires presents a more difficult problem, because you have not told me what amperage you propose to use; also you have not told me whether you propose to install a mercury arc rectifier or motor generator set, or use alternating current through an economizer—a rheostat is, of course, out of the question on 220 volt sets, since the waste would be enormous. I would suggest, however, that if the run is not a long one it would hardly be worth while figuring the thing down very closely, and if you wish to install number 4 feed wires from the main house switchboard to the operating room you will certainly have ample capacity, since No. 4 rubber covered is rated at 70 amperes, and with a motor generator, rectifier or economizer this would supply more amperage at arc voltage than you could possibly, under any possible circumstances, use. If you will tell me whether you propose to use a mercury arc rectifier, motor generator set, or economizer; what the size of your picture will be, and what kind of screen you will use, I will then be able to advise you more nearly exactly what size wires you should have. But on the whole, as I before said, I think it is hardly worth while figuring down so close unless the distance is considerable.

Motion-Picture Portraits.

By applying the principles of motion pictures and of modern enlargments on paper, says the Scientific American, G. Bettini, of New York city, has evolved a new system of photography which is revolutionary in many respects. The inventor states that all the expensive apparatus in the professional studios will be unnecessary when his camera is introduced, and in portrait work, because of the certainty of natural expression selected and the simple manner of controlling the light effect, the average amateur will be able to make artistic portraits quite as readily as the foremost professional.

The new process consists of nothing more than the taking of motion pictures of the subject while the latter is assuming a number of natural poses, then developing the negative and printing a positive from it, followed by the projection of the positive for the subject so that a selection of poses may be made, and, finally, the printing of the desired photographs on paper to any size desired.

For his photography Mr. Bettini depends upon a motion picture plate camera. At the rate of about twelve per second the various poses assumed by the subject are photographed on a standard glass plate negative in horizontal and vertical rows, the plate being sufficiently large to take something like 500 or more exposures. Each exposure or image is one-fourth or three-eighths of an inch square, the former dimensions being that of the existing camera, while the latter will probably be that adopted for the commercial cameras. When the camera has recorded the series of poses, the negative is removed from the light-proof magazine and developed in the usual manner.

A positive glass plate or lantern slide is then made from the negative, and the subject then has an opportunity of seeing himself on the motion picture screen, just as others see him. Since the glass plate is non-inflammable, the subject can have the motion picture projector stopped at any desired point. Thus a selection is made of one or more poses, and by means of two indices—one for the horizontal and one for the vertical rows—the operator can make a note of the images approved of.

The photographer then returns to the negative, which he places in an enlarging machine. The latter, in its main essentials, is a counterpart of the projector; in fact, the projector may as well be employed for this purpose if there is no occasion to use both machines at one time. Referring to the notations of the poses selected, the photographer brings the desired image into position by adjusting the pointers on the horizontal and vertical indices which correspond to those on the projecting machine. The enlarging process now resolves itself into the usual procedure. The powerful arc lamp is turned on; a piece of plain paper is placed on a stand in the path of the rays of light in order to focus the negative image properly, and, finally, the sensitized paper is substituted for the plain paper and the exposure made.

Because of the tremendous enlargement which is occasioned by the employment of so small a negative for so large a print—7½ by 9½—the inventor has had to overcome the appearance of prominent grain in the print, particularly when fast plates are employed. Mr. Bettini has solved the problem by causing the rays of the enlarging machine to pass through a piece of silk bolting cloth, held between two sheets of glass, just behind which is placed the sensitized paper. The fine screen thus interposed effectually destroys all traces of the coarse graining, and its mesh is barely discernible in the enlargements. Naturally, the screen necessitates a longer exposure for the paper, but this is not a troublesome feature to contend with when one is dealing with seconds.

The finished prints made by the new process have the soft, harmonious effect that is so much in vogue among leading photographers today, and despite the intense enlargement the amount of detail demanding attention is surprisingly high.

But most commendable of all is the naturalness—unusualness, one might say, since the naturalness is such a rarity in studio photographs—of the expressions and poses, for the subject has been photographed at moments when these were beyond voluntary posing. Finally, it should be remembered that in this new process the subject is not obliged to assume a number of expressions and poses under the guidance of the photographer; instead he smokes, laughs, reads a letter, and chats with the photographer while the camera is recording every move that he makes. "Painless photography" is what we are tempted to call it.

The New Panchroma Combination Lamp for Motion Pictures.

In the new model H series the resistance is mounted on the lamp itself, thus permitting the removal of the toplight from the stand for use independent of the stand, such as hanging above the setting. Another important improvement is the new switch box which is fused throughout. This improvement is an invaluable time saver and has been called one of the most advantageous innovations.

Especial attention is drawn to the lamp shells or reflectors, which have been improved to such an extent that undue heating is avoided and the reflecting surface thus kept in condition for many months. An exclusive feature of the new shell is the device by which the carbons may be renewed without detaching the shell from the lamp. This, too, is a time saver.

Great attention has been paid to the scientific construction of the reflecting surfaces so that the light is evenly distributed over a given area designed to be covered, gradually diminishing so that additional units may be used and the light perfectly blended where the rays join. Additional reflectors are supplied which may be attached to the lamp while in position, so that the operator may spread the light over a large surface or concentrate it upon a small space. The lamp is not a spot light under any circumstances. By giving the operator a great range of usefulness the manufacturers are trying to place in the hands of the motion picture maker the greatest volume of actinic light with the least possible trouble for the electrician and the director.

The lamp furnishes 12,000 candle power of pure actinic light, pleasant to the eye and consuming 25 amperes at 110 volts. It is mounted on a balanced stand with easy adjustment from the floor to 9 feet 10 inches high, and can be wheeled into any position. Full information will be furnished by applying to the Allison & Hadaway Corp., 235 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Burke and James Take Entire Output of the Universal Camera Company.

The exclusive wholesale selling agency for all the products of the Universal Camera Company has been acquired by Burke & James, Inc., of Chicago. This motion picture camera—and other Universal Camera Company's products—is used and esteemed highly throughout the trade. An interesting and well illustrated catalog describing the Universal camera and accessories is now ready for distribution. Among the users of this camera are many of the most prominent motion picture men in the world, and also many large institutions, such as the Selig-Tribune Weekly and the Herald Weekly. The camera is also being extensively used in Europe. One of the great advantages of this camera is that it is so quickly set up and operated that the man equipped with it "gets the picture and gets away before the other fellow gets set up."

Kodelon Replaces Metol.

For the information of those interested in the development of motion picture film, I would advise that we are using the Standard Eastman formula substituting the new Eastman Kodelon, and I find that better results can be obtained than the formula using Metol. The film is snappier and has great detail in shadows. I have used it on snow scenes, and by comparing the development I find that the Kodelon formula excels the Metol formula. The only change found advisable from the Standard Eastman formula is the addition of 1-10th of the amount by weight of sodium carbonate above the amount called for in the Standard formula. This gives clearer film and apparently hastens the development to a slight extent. We have tested this formula for the past three months and have found it to have excellent keeping qualities. In fact, were we able to obtain Metol, we would still continue to use the Kodelon element in the development.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN and NORMAN STUCKEY

THE design of this department is to diffuse among musicians and exhibitors correct information on all important subjects pertaining to music for the film, to improve the quality of playing and to raise the standard of music in motion picture theaters.

Any question concerning music; suitable instrumentation; questions relating to the organ and mechanical players; in fact, any queries, criticisms or suggestions dealing with the musical interpretation for moving pictures will be answered through this department.

The Importance of Tone Coloring in Relation to Musical Interpretation.

By Norman Stuckey.

MUSICIANS interested in tone color and its application in portraying the varied emotions on the screen will find much to interest them in the study of symphonic music. The musician playing for moving pictures should never miss the opportunity of hearing as many symphony concerts as possible.

From each concert he will derive many suggestions for his work in depicting emotion on the screen.

First in importance among symphonic music are Beethoven's nine symphonies. Beethoven, after he had emancipated himself from the influence of Haydn and Mozart, wrote a succession of musical epics, setting forth with the boldness, sureness and strength of a master hand, human life and its destiny, man's struggles with fate, the aspirations of the soul toward liberty, the nobility of human brotherhood, the grandeur and beauty of nature, and its mighty mysteries. His faith rested upon a pantheistic abstraction which he called "Love," and that emotion is the keynote of his work.

It imparted majesty, nobility, elevation, and profound seriousness to his music. His ideas not only reflected the sentiment of his own time, which is one of the tests of a great artist, but they were broad and far-reaching enough to comprehend the great world of humanity, like those of his favorite Shakespeare before him, and this it is that insures immortality.

Space does not permit me to deal with each of Beethoven's nine symphonies, but for illustrating tone color in relation to musical interpretation we will analyze the Sixth Symphony known as the Pastoral Symphony. There are five movements in this symphony, as follows:

1. Allegro ma non troppo (the cheerful impressions excited on arriving in the country).
2. Andante con moto (By the Brook).
3. Allegro (Peasant's Merrymaking).
4. Allegro (Thunder Storm).
5. Allegretto (The Shepherd's Song).

This symphony reveals Beethoven as a lyric piet. It is by no means the sentimental strain of the conventional Spring poet, but the masterly expression of that happy and contented feeling which the lover of nature experiences during a ramble through a lovely country. The motives employed are apparently of the simplest kind, but demonstrate the evolution of intense thought. They cannot be altered by a note without the sacrifice of their meaning.

The first movement is an allegro ma non troppe in F major, 2-4 time, and in keeping with the general description of cheerful impressions excited on arriving in the country.

The Andante molto moto in B flat, 12-8 time, gives voice to the listless dreaming of the wayfarer, who is resting at the banks of the brook.

The first violins give out the principal melodic theme, while the wind instruments respond with the second phrase. Short figures abound, flitting about with the different instruments, sometimes in imitation, again in euphonious thirds or sixths, and at time a brief trill or the short snapping of pizzicato notes. Its effect is that of the evening air alive with the songs of birds and the buzz of insects. In the last twelve measures of this movement, the composer even introduces the bird-songs—a proceeding which has been pronounced childish and unworthy of Beethoven, but which to the unprejudiced listener seems to belong in its connection. When we consider that its use by Beethoven cannot possibly have sprung from a desire to write catch-penny claptrap, it would perhaps be well to accept the intention of the composer.

The third movement, Allegro, in F major, 2-4 time, representing the Minuet, in troduces the purely human element. The first eight measures usher in the good country people tripping briskly along. In the next phrase, the fair damsels carry their part of the program quite gracefully. Then we strike the dance proper with its "band accompaniment." The minuet-like movement is interrupted by a short tempo d'allegro, 2-4, which seems like the change to another dance, though being more boisterous, it comes to a close by two short pauses, as if to give the dancers a chance to catch their breaths before returning to the triple time of the minuet closing the movement.

The next movement, an allegro in A flat, is entitled "Thunderstorm," and brings before us the lowering sky, the distant rumbling of thunder, the sultry air, and the cumulous clouds as they rise higher and higher above the horizon until we are almost in darkness, and the storm breaks forth in all its fury. It soon passes over, however, the clouds break, and sunshine illuminates the refreshed landscape. Without interruption, the closing measure leads into the last movement, a shepherd's song of joy and his feeling of relief from the dangers of the tempest. The movement closes with one of those dynamic contrasts in which Beethoven delighted.

Goldmark is another composer whose symphony, "The Country Wedding," lends itself well to descriptive tone coloring. Its brightness freshness, make it a favorite among concert goers in this country and abroad. "The Country Wedding" is a suite of series of musical pictures woven and held together by the slightest of symphonic threads. Its program is a sketch of a country wedding. The march procession, the nuptial song, which we may imagine sung by the friends of the happy pair, the inevitable serenade, the discourse of the lovers in a garden, interrupted by the entrance of friends whose greetings lead up to a genuine country dance in the finale, are the various scenes in this series of cheerful pastoral pictures.

The various movements are so characteristic and tell their story so simply to the hearer that they hardly need detailed analysis. The first movement is a march with thirteen variations. Though treated very freely and fancifully the movement never loses the "country" spirit of the work.

The second movement, "Bridal Song," is a charming melody in genuine aria form. It is short, but graceful and delicate, and admirably fills its place in the fanciful scheme of the work.

The third movement, "Serenade," comes nearer the sonata form, and yet preserves the pastoral characteristics throughout.

The fourth movement, "In the Garden," well known by organists and orchstra musicians, is a charming picture of the lovers tenderly conversing with each other and exchanging vows of constancy. The scene changes and in the final movement we have the dance. It is very brilliant and picturesque in its effects and contains many charming episodes, among them a return to the garden music in the middle part.

Mendelssohn's Symphony, No. 3, in A minor (Scotch), is another descriptive musical masterpiece and was suggested by a visit to Scotland, where the composer went in 1829. The day after he arrived in Edinburgh he heard a competition of the Highland pipers, which, it may be imagined, gave him a good idea of the national melodies. The next day he visited Holyrood and the chapel where Mary was crowned. It was there that he found the beginning of the Scotch symphony, and on the spot he wrote down the first sixteen bars of the introduction, announcing the theme which not only opens but closes the movements and thus gives an unmistakable clue to its meaning. The melancholy grandeur of this introduction shows how the influence of the scene affected his imaginative and poetical mind.

The Scotch Symphony is not the only souvenir of the visit. To it we also owe the overture to "Fingal's Cave."

This symphony is intended to give expression to the romantic and poetic phases of Scotch life. Its introduction begins with an andante theme, a melody of somber and melancholy cast, which admirably reflects the influence of his visit to Holyrood.

The second movement, the scherzo, is purely a caprice, and while at the same time it differs from all his other scherzos in the absence of their sportive, fantastic quality, it is a picture of pastoral nature, characterized by a continuous flow of rural gayety. As one writer has characterized it: "It is a most wonderful compound of health and life, heath and moor, blowing wind, screaming eagles, bagpipes, fluttering tartans and elastic steps of racing Highlanders, all rounded off and brought into one perfect picture with consummate art." Schumann says: "I doubt whether a scherzo full of genius has been written in modern times."

The third movement (adagio cantabile) presents a picture, evidently a reverie in which the composer meditates upon the ancient state and grandeur of the country. In the finale, the romantic sentiment disappears and we have the heroic expressed with astonishing force and exuberant spirit in its three themes, which finally give place to a short second part, maestoso, colored by national melody, and closing this exquisite picture of the Scotch visit.

Art of Accompanying.

G. Schirmer have just published a book by Algernon H. Lindo, on "The Art of Accompanying." The author's valuable advice is based upon an experience of more than twenty years of accompanying at every kind of concert and for every grade of artist. The author moreover enjoyed the acquaintance of nearly every well known English accompanist and has carefully studied their methods, as well as the methods of many famous Continental accompanists. The musician will find hints as to reading at sight, technic and repertoire, transposing, alterations in accompaniments, airs from oratorios, folk songs, violin and violincello solos and the special requirements for accompanying them, orchestral accompanying, etc.

Exchange Efficiency

Conducted by John J. Rotchford

THIS department aims to discuss and, thereby, remedy some of the difficulties experienced by exhibitors in their dealings with exchanges. It is believed that progressives among the latter have devised methods benefiting their end of the business and they will take advantage of this channel to promote its general welfare.

A Plea for Uniform Prices.

Grave abuses have crept into the film business on account of the unsystematic way in which rental prices are determined. As a general rule the exhibitor in small towns is charged a higher proportionate rate than is secured in the larger cities. If a customer should happen to be blessed with a trusting disposition or be a new man in the business, he pays a top-notch price, regardless of location or any other consideration. We knew a good-natured Irishman who ran a small neighborhood house in Philadelphia who actually paid higher rentals than all the theaters on lower Market street except one.

Price schedules based upon the age of the film are rapidly disappearing, due, no doubt, to the enormous number of subjects available. When the supply and demand were more evenly balanced this system automatically protected the exhibitor and the distributor. Present day attempts to regulate prices are generally based upon the populations of the towns, and nearly always fail because the amounts are arbitrary, and also are applied to all cities in specified groups instead of individually.

The population of a city or town (particularly as determined by the last Government census) is a poor index to the amount of revenue that can reasonably be expected from it. In the case of New England, for instance, the figures given, except those covering the larger cities, represent an entire township as distinguished from a built-up municipality. And then in the South the heavy colored population prevents one from considering the returns at their face value. A third reason is the sudden and rapid increase in the size of places, such as munition, oil and mining towns, together with exceptional cases like El Paso, where the population just about doubled last summer when the militia was mobilized.

Whatever bearing population has upon prices must necessarily be tempered by the industrial conditions existing in that particular section.

It would be a stupendous task to place individual rates upon the 7,000 different towns in this country where there are one or more theaters. Probably we would be near the goal if someone could devise a method of determining the exact amount an exchange section should reasonably be expected to produce, after which the various managers could pro-rate their allotment among the towns included in their territory.

"Salesmen Who Stick."

A recent article under the above title which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post carried a message which was particularly applicable to film solicitors. The gist of the story was that the great amount of extra labor performed by a hardware salesman to enable his customers to first determine what part of his line they really needed, and then to market the goods quickly and profitably was the real cause of his finally being made Sales Manager.

There are a hundred and one details connected with running a theater about which the majority of managers would welcome tactful criticism. No one is in a better position to supply this than the traveling solicitor, who, if he keeps his eyes and ears open, soon becomes a compendium of useful information relating to exhibiting. Having acquired this knowledge he is duty bound to impart it to those interested with whom he comes in contact and who will be benefited by knowing how the leaders in their business are solving the many problems with which they are confronted.

Roadmen who are willing to perform the extra duties outlined are almost positive to receive the highest kind of reward.

Effective Circularizing.

The great mass of advertising matter brought to an exhibitor with each mail makes it difficult to call to his attention something which the exchange manager feels confident is really worth while. This condition very often operates to the disadvantage of the exhibitor as well as the exchange.

One concern has favored the relatively expensive method of telegraphing to circumvent this drawback.

It would seem that an effective method would be to address these important notices to the exhibitor's residence, which could be obtained from directories or by roadmen and listed for future reference.

Great care, however, would have to be taken to prevent the abuse of this privilege. It is hardly likely that an exhibitor would relish having routine announcements sent to his home.

Booking Elasticity.

Branch managers of feature concerns releasing one or more subjects a week are not generally disposed to make changes in schedules or bookings in order to enable their customers to run desirable super and state-right attractions. This is adding an unjust burden upon exhibitors who are forced to pay for and shelve a subject that could very easily be made available for some other date. The similarity between this treatment and that accorded by regular service exchanges a few years ago tends to prove the contention that history repeats itself. Now, as then, a disposition to cheerfully perform whatever extra work is occasioned by new conditions will undoubtedly bring large dividends in good-will. It will be found also, that the work entailed is very likely to be overestimated and that the requirements of customers will very often balance each other.

Florida Manager's Suggestion.

> I would ask that you place this suggestion in a prominent place, as it will benefit thousands of exhibitors all over the States. If exchangemen would pay more attention to this part of THEIR business, viz.: The empty reel in bad condition is almost as bad as the film being in bad condition. If the hub of the reel is bent or, as the expression goes, lopsided, it causes the film to run in jerks which, nine times out of ten, will cause a break. Again, if the reel has no fastener, it means a minute or so lost (especially when you have only one machine.) If the reel is bent on sides it makes it very bad when winding or unwinding.

This is a timely suggestion, and one we will have more to say on at a later date. Using old bent reels or ones with uneven or imperfect hubs is costly economy, when we stop to consider the wear and tear and breakage of films. Right here we might remark that there are reels and reels. Some are stamped out of what is little more than tin and are easily bent out of shape. They are a poor investment for any exchange, no matter how low the original cost. Reels made out of strong, serviceable metal, even thin steel sides with a properly fastened hub that will run true under all conditions, will effect an unbelievable saving in the wear or tear of film and in their life, to say nothing of the scratching that results from winding with the swaying motion due to uneven hubs.

Easter Programs.

It is well that exchange managers should recognize every opportunity to co-operate with the theater managers in every move that secures or adds to the goodwill and increasing the popularity of the pictures. There are not yet very many films especially suitable for special Easter programs, but one will immediately recall Kalem's "From the Manger to the Cross." Pathe's, "The Life of Christ" and "The Passion Play" and a few others. The showing of suitable films at such special seasons adds to the number of picture fans and thereby increases public patronage, something in which the exchange manager should be as vitally interested as the theater manager.

A Theater Manager's Complaint.

A manager with many years' experience in the West writes a strong protest against the unfair and unbusinesslike dealings that theater men often receive from exchange managers. In closing a second letter on the subject he says: "We are not the kind of people who complain about little things which come up in every-day business dealings, as we are perfectly able to take care of ourselves, but we do protest against the way exchanges treat the exhibitor. It is not the first time we have gone through similar deals." The only excuse for taking up this case in this department is that it directly condemns exchange management almost in general. The particular "deal" in question was the cancellation of service after a long satisfactory business relationship by telegram and without giving the customer a chance to even meet the increased price offered by another for the service. If the facts are as stated, and the exhibitor's letters present a very straightforward story that we have not the least excuse for questioning, the transaction would seem to be the work of a new manager (and they do change rather frequently in many sections), or it would seem to indicate an utter lack of usual business courtesy on the part of the manager of the exchange. Possibly the "home office" is pressing for better results in the territory or the manager may be working for a record or a commission, but in any event all should be guided by good business practice and principles in every case. No good will and mutual confidence can be built up or maintained without just and proper regard for the rights of others.

COMPILED BY THE STATISTICAL DEPARTMENT

MADISON, Cleo. Born in Bloomington, Ill. American parentage. Is five feet four and weighs 135 pounds. Fair complexion, gray eyes, red-brown hair. Like so many photo-players, Miss Madison gained her experience in stock, the varied demands of the weekly change of bill giving the necessary versatility. She worked five years on the dramatic stage with Oliver Morosco, James K. Hackett, Virginia Harned, and as the head of her own company. In 1913 she turned to the photoplay and for some time was with the Universal. She is now at the head of the Cleo Madison Feature Films. Some of her notable parts have been Hermion, in Damon and Pythias, the leads in Love Victorious, A Soul Enslaved, Her Bitter Cup, The Chalice of Sorrow and Black Orchids. About her only fad is the collection of rare cameos of the better sort.

Cleo Madison

STARKEY, Buckley. Born in Manchester, England. English parentage. He is five feet six inches tall, and weighs 127 pounds. Dark complexion, dark brown hair and deep blue eyes. For fourteen years he played on the dramatic stage, appearing in musical comedy, drama and vaudeville. He came to America with his parents when a little more than a year old, and has visited every part of the country. About five years ago he made his screen debut in From Pen to Pick, a Pathe picture, directed by Leo Wharton. He has also been with Eclair and The World, but is now free lancing. He was Blinkey Davis in Alias Jimmy Valentine; Porky McCoy in The Boss; Skein in the World's Great Snare, and Razloff, the spy, in Hearts in Exile. He is a devotee of pocket billiards, is fond of a good boxing bout when he can find one and likes anything there promising novelty or excitement, for his idea of a good time is action.

Buckley Starkey.

HARVEY, William Leo. Born in Cleveland, Ohio. Irish-American parentage. Is five feet seven inches tall, and weighs 135 pounds. Light complexion, blond hair and blue eyes. He made his stage debut January 28, 1908, and has played with Charles B. Hanford and in numerous stock engagements. In June, 1913, he played his first picture, and has appeared with Vitagraph, Biograph, Reliance, Metro and World. His present studio connection is with the Rex Beach Company. Some of his better known parts have been the Young Fisherman in The Impostors; Green, in The Light of Happiness; Hen Springer, in The End of the Tour, and in the Ralph Hertz comedies, produced by Metro. In stock work Mr. Harvey was something of a matinee hero, playing juveniles and character parts, but he is not out for the flirtation record in films, and his mail is not heavy because he prefers character parts.

William L. Harvey

CLARK, Marguerite. Born in Avondale, Ohio. American parentage. Is four feet ten inches tall, and weighs 89 pounds. Light brown hair, hazel eyes and fair complexion. Miss Clark made her stage debut in 1899, and for a number of years was a favorite light operatic star, her work in the support of De Wolf Hopper being best remembered, though she has won successes in drama as well as the singing stage, for unlike most soubrettes she is equally at home in vivacious and sympathetic parts, as her work in photoplay has proven. She made her debut with The Famous Players Nov. 18, 1915, her bow being made in Wildflower. Other notable parts have been Baby Mine, Snow White, Little Lady Eileen, Molly Make-Believe, Miss George Washington and others, but to enumerate her hits would be to list her complete program of appearances. Her fad is country life. No Great White Way, but country lanes for her.

Marguerite Clark

TRIMBLE, George Samuel. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y. Irish parentage. Five feet eleven and one-half inches tall, and weighs 260 pounds. Iron gray hair, brown eyes, dark complexion. Mr. Trimble made his stage debut in 1892 with the Augustin Daly company. For three years he was a minstrel, with Haverley and the Gorman Brothers. Then came several seasons in light operatic productions with Pauline Hall, and then back to the drama with the Warde and James, Lewis Morrison, and Mansfield. For six years he was featured as Mephisto in the Morrison Faust. He has played in London in The College Widow, and in the Hawaiian tour of Nance O'Neil. His first photoplay appearance was in 1909 in The District Attorney. In the past eight years he has been with Lubin, Selig, Famous Players, Fox, World, Metro, and is now occupied as secretary of the Fraternity Films, Inc.

Geo. S. Trimble

PHILLIPS, Joseph H. Born in Providence, R. I. Portuguese-Irish parentage. Five feet seven inches tall, and weighs 180 pounds. Dark complexion, black hair, with gray temples and dark complexion. Mr. Phillips made his stage debut in 1884, and for twenty-two years did speaking parts, fifteen of those years being spent in the support of Mattie Keene, in vaudeville, playing sketches written by Ella Wheeler Wilcox. They presented her first stage offering. In 1912 he turned to photoplay, but does not remember the title of his first picture. He has appeared with the Thanhouser, Metro, Fox and Peerless companies, and was in the cast of The Million Dollar Mystery, The Vicar of Wakefield, The Pretty Fugitive and other well known productions. He plays general characters, and like Edward Harrigan he spends his leisure time adding to his character wardrobe. To him an old hat is more precious than an Old Master.

Montagu Talks Early Days

Foreign Representative of Selig Polyscope Company Traces Growth of Industry from Beginning.

The following letter, intended for publication in the Tenth Anniversary Number, was delayed in transmission:

THE first appearance of your paper must have coincided almost with the opening of the first moving picture show in the United States. Well do I remember the first number, and what a thin number it was compared with its appearance today. Very few manufacturers and producers who are turning out the finest films today had then been heard of, although for the benefit of those who may not know I would like to point out that the Selig Polyscope Company was then existant, and is today one of the oldest established firms in the trade.

E. H. Montagu.

Moving pictures in those days were only thought of as amusement for the masses. Interest, artistic and educational films were looked down upon, and a topical film was practically undisposable. No artist from the legitimate stage could then have been tempted to appear in the pictures. Special posters for films had only just been introduced, and it was only for an occasional film that they were made and then the only size was a one sheet.

A thousand foot film was a terrific feature, and corresponded with the super film of today, and the majority of the films then produced were from 200 to 600 feet. There was no such thing as a release date. The manufacturer sold copies of films to one dealer one day and the same films to another dealer a month afterward.

There were no big studios or plants. Films were made either on the roofs of buildings in the city or out in the country, the theaters then being started for showing moving pictures continually being of the roughest possible kind, generally a store with the front removed and benches as seats. What a change ten years have brought!

I need hardly point out to your readers the difference of today in the palatial houses provided for the public with pictures on the screen costing tens of thousands of dollars to produce, and enacted by artists who command the biggest prices on the legitimate stage. No longer do these artists look down upon cinematography; no longer is the cinematograph theater considered merely a cheap amusement for the masses. In ten years it has progressed until it is the universal provider of amusement and education to rich and poor alike.

Unfortunately, not having been over to the U. S. A. for the last few years, I know only from hearsay the great progress which has taken place there. In Great Britain I have, however, watched the wonderful progress during the last six years, and one sees people who a few years ago would not go into the cinema going in now every week, and sending their wives and children. The Royal family are constant visitors at one or two of the leading Cinemas in the West End of London.

Again, the great difference ten years has brought is noticeable in the daily papers, the weeklies, and the monthlies In the old days one could not discover the mention of a cinema in the paper unless it was to magnify and exaggerate some fire, where a careless operator burned up the films, which was a very frequent occurrence eight to ten years ago. Today every newspaper is anxious to get hold of news with regard to cinemas, and there is hardly a day that one does not find the cinema mentioned in the daily press, and the weeklies and monthlies devote articles to film favorites.

I wonder what a manufacturer would say today if he were to sell 160 prints of every film that he produced? Yet this was the number of standing orders we had at Pathe Freres at the time of the formation of the General Film Company in 1910. Again, I do not think I am betraying any secrets when I state that of the old original "Passion Play" of Messrs. Pathe, which was a little over 2,000 feet long, 350 copies were sold in the United States alone.

Coming to more recent times, since I have been in England, I have on many occasions sold 100 copies of a film on the open market in Great Britain alone. Those days, however, are past. The increase of production, and the making of the big feature, has altered all this, and the film business has got down today to a commercial basis, as one of the leading industries of the world. It is up to those who are in it today to look to its future. Competitors must work more in unity for the general benefit of the trade and the public, and overproduction, which is the curse today of the business, must be stopped.

When I was in Chicago, representing Pathe Freres, I worked in unison with all the other agents and manufacturers. We lunched together daily, we compared notes, and we were successful. Today the business has grown, and the same element of friendship and unity that helped with competition to keep the business up on the plane it has now reached must continue. Otherwise I am afraid we shall see it topple and fall.

E. H. MONTAGU.

Harold Lloyd as "Lonesome Luke"

HAROLD LLOYD, the star of Pathe's "Lonesome Luke" Comedies, has, in less than a year and a half, become one of the few great screen comedians in the country. Certain it is, that he is wonderfully popular in all parts of the country—so much so that he is an advertised attraction with many theaters.

Harold Lloyd.

Lloyd is the "Luke" of the comedies. He was born in Pawnee County, Nebraska, 1894, of Scotch, English and Welch ancestry, and attended school in Omaha and Denver. His experience on the stage dates from his twelfth year and continued up to the time when he entered motion picture work with the Edison Company at Los Angeles. During his experience he played stock in Omaha, Chicago, San Diego and Los Angeles, his last legitimate engagement having been with the Morosco Stock Company of Los Angeles.

His first screen work was playing light comedy parts for Edison. Later he played leads with the Keystone, where his work attracted the attention of Hal Roach of Rolin, who promptly hired him and created for him the part of "Lonesome Luke." In this character Lloyd has to date starred in sixty-four pictures.

Screen comedy, especially of the rough and tumble sort, demands unusual athletic ability. Mr. Lloyd possesses this to a marked degree, being an excellent rider, swimmer, fencer and boxer. He also excels as a tumbler, and it is this accomplishment which enables him to do stunts in his comedies, which do not seem humanly possible. He also shines as a dancer, and with Miss Bebe Daniels, who plays opposite him in the "Luke" comedies, has won a number of valuable trophies in dancing contests.

Today Mr. Lloyd is only twenty-two years old, and the Rolin Film Company value him so highly that he is under contract with them for a number of years to come. He is very temperate in his habits and uses neither tobacco nor intoxicating liquors. From his first day with Rolin he has been under the exclusive direction of Hal Roach, to whom much of the credit for his success must be given.

Studio Improvements for Tom Ince

New Western Triangle Supervising Director Will Have Large Facilities for Making Pictures.

THE announcement that Thomas H. Ince will have charge of the Triangle-Fine Arts studios in Hollywood, Cal., in addition to carrying on his work as director general of the Kay-Bee studios in Culver City, has aroused unusual interest among exhibitors throughout the country. Since the news was wired from the Coast last week telegrams of congratulation and indorsement have poured into the Culver City and New York offices of the contracting interests. The tenor of these messages makes it plain that from the exhibitor's point of view no move could have been taken to give a better guarantee of leadership to the Triangle program. Triangle executives in the East are also being congratulated upon securing the services of Allan Dwan as supervising director of the new Triangle studios, recently opened on the former estate of Clara Morris at Yonkers, N. Y.

W. H. Seligsberg, secretary of Triangle Film Corporation, issued the following statement regarding these important changes: "The announcement that Thomas H. Ince will in future have charge of production at the Fine Arts studios in Hollywood, as well as the Kay-Bee studios in Culver City, while Allan Dwan will be installed as supervising director of the new Triangle studios at Yonkers, has aroused so much favorable comment that we feel sure these moves have met the desires of our patrons in all parts of the country.

"According to the most carefully compiled reports of unprejudiced film critics Triangle releases, produced under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, have been the best box-office attractions of any program releases produced during the past year. This fact confirms the claim of Ince adherents that the presiding genius of Culver City is perhaps the greatest supervising director that the motion picture industry has yet produced, that it is a noteworthy fact that Ince has outdistanced all competitors in his ability to keep his organization running at the top-notch of efficiency month in and month out. No other producer can be called to mind with a list of successes equally imposing, turned out in the regular course of events. Ince is not only a director of the highest quality himself, but he possesses the much rarer accomplishments of being able to stimulate his subordinates to their best endeavors under all circumstances.

"Allan Dwan is also a man who has proved his work by the production of features of remarkable box-office value. Many of the most successful Fine Arts plays were done under his direction, and like Ince, he has the faculty of getting results out of directors working under his supervision."

For some weeks past extensive construction work has been under way at both the Culver City and Hollywood plants. A fifth huge light studio is already nearing completion at Kay-Bee headquarters. This is said to be one of the largest glass buildings in the world. There is only enough structural steel being used to support the great glass sashes, so that the volume of light necessary for the taking of perfect exposures will be unobstructed. In order that sufficient electric current may be guaranteed at all times a large generator is being installed for the new Kay-Bee power house, which is being erected between Studios 2 and 3. This power house is of hollow tile construction, faced with concrete stucco, to harmonize with the other buildings at Culver City. The generator has a capacity of 450 horsepower, and will supply current to all of the buildings covering the ten-acre inclosure.

Recent additions to the Fine Arts studios at Hollywood have put that plant in excellent shape to take on a new lease of life under the Ince regime. A new central scene dock, 180 feet in length and 70 feet in width, has been built to house the elaborate interior settings that are being utilized for forthcoming releases. On either side of the scene dock is a runway, leading to each of the new stages, while large baggage trucks with low wheels are employed to carry sets and properties to their proper destinations.

The new light studio nearing completion at the north end of the property is up-to-the-minute in every particular. It is said to have the highest roof and the best facilities for overhead lighting of any building of its kind on the Coast. Some idea of its unusual construction may be gathered from the statement that there is a distance of 48 feet from the floor to the first roof girder. A new electric generator has also been installed, and under the guidance of efficiency engineers the entire plant is being overhauled.

The new management has taken over the existing agreements with Bessie Love, Wilfred Lucas, Seena Owen and Alma Rueben.

Work is being rushed to completion upon the new Triangle studios on Riverside avenue, Yonkers. As previously mentioned, this is the former Clara Morris estate. The old twenty-room mansion, overlooking the Hudson river, has been remodeled into an executive building. H. E. Aitken, president of the Triangle Film Corporation, will have a suite of offices here, together with his associates. Charles M. Parker, vice president of the Triangle Film Corporation, will also make his headquarters at the Yonkers studio when he is in the East.

A new light studio, with an adjoining outdoor stage, is now being equipped with every modern appliance to meet the needs of three companies. The walls and roof of the building are made of ground glass, instead of the ordinary florist's glass, so that the diffusion of light will be uniform under all circumstances. The eastern walls, opening on the outdoor stage, have been swung on hinges, to allow the shifting of entire sets indoors or out to meet weather conditions.

It is proposed to make the plant entirely independent of outside assistance, and to carry out this idea a large carpenter shop and machine shop is being erected, as well as a developing laboratory. Projection and cutting rooms will also be the best that money and brains can devise.

Among other interesting plans that the unification on Triangle producing interests will make possible will be the exchange of players between the Western and Eastern studios. The first exchange of this kind will take place early in the summer, when Enid Bennett will come East to appear under Dwan's direction for several months, and incidentally to get the benefit of Eastern environment.

R. W. France, general manager of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, has issued the following statement pursuant to the changes in Triangle's producing plans, outlined above:

"On March 23 I received a telegram from Mr. Hodkinson, the president of our company, who is now on the Pacific Coast, stating that Messrs. Aitken, Sennett, Ince and Hodkinson are signing jointly a wire to all of our first-run exhibitors forecasting the adoption of a new plan, which will be of great interest. The details of this plan will be announced to the trade through the press at the earliest possible moment."

A. J. COBE RETURNS FROM MIDDLE WEST.

Andrew J. Cobe, president of the Ultra Pictures Corp., returned Friday from a trip through the Middle West. He reports that business is brisk, with promises of immediate improvement. "The most impressive thing to me," he states, "was the interest manifested by the exhibitors in their demand for independent bookings of features.

"The exhibitor knows that he is bound to get better pictures for his houses if he can judge the individual excellence of the picture than to take program offerings," Mr. Cobe said. "The independent exchange man can see what he buys and the exhibitor has a far better chance of getting something good for his audience by keeping in touch with the independent exchange.

"Nothing more clearly proves this than the fact that the companies that put out program pictures themselves offer any particularly attractive picture which they may make on a state right basis."

JEANNE EAGELS AND FREDERICK WARDE TO CO-STAR.

Due to the success of her initial Thanhouser-Pathe feature, "The World and the Woman," Mr. Edwin Thanhouser has engaged Miss Jeanne Eagels for further productions. Desiring to start work with her immediately, Mr. Thanhouser has made arrangements with the management of "The Professor's Love Story," in which Miss Eagels is playing with George Arliss at the Knickerbocker theater, New York, to permit the actress to resume her studio work immediately. Mr. Frederick Warde has been assigned by Mr. Thanhouser to co-star with Miss Eagels.

SINGER, OF L-KO, RETURNS FROM TRIP.

Julius Singer, special representative of the L-Ko Motion Picture Kompany, has returned to New York, after an absence of ten weeks, covering 11,000 miles, on an extended trip throughout the country.

Mr. Singer spent thirty days at the Hollywood Studio of the company, and then started on a tour, visiting exchanges and exhibitors, stopping off at Salt Lake City, Denver, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines and Chicago.

Passing of "Pieces of Cheese"

W. A. Brady Tells of His Method of Transforming Them Into Regular "Brady Mades."

THE photomotorial activities of William A. Brady for at least another year will be devoted to World-Pictures Brady-Made. A contract to this end has been executed, to take effect from next month. Referring to his experience as director general for the past twelve months Mr. Brady said to a reporter:

"When the board of directors finally induced me to take an active interest in World-Pictures I consented to try it for six months only, and that with some reluctance and upon the strongest assurance that I should have an absolutely free hand. I had been my own master from boyhood, and was sure I should not relish consulting with any man or body of men concerning any step I might contemplate, however drastic that step might be. I am free to say that I have not been hampered in the slightest degree, and the fact that I have already remained twice as long as I had agreed to stay, coupled with the present renewal, indicates that the situation is satisfactory all around.

"One of the first things I did was to go over to the studio and ask to see the five completed pictures, which I had heard of as having been placed on the shelf for the reason that they were worthless.

"'Oh,' said one of the great motion picture experts, then in the company's employ, 'those pieces of cheese are not worth bothering with.'

"I told him I was not looking for expert opinion or advice, but wanted to see those pictures—and he would do well to hurry up with his end of it. Well, as I have said before, all five of those elegantly termed 'pieces of cheese' have since been remodeled and sold, not only recovering the dead loss, as I found it, but cleaning up a fair profit and winning strong commendations on the quality of the finished work.

"I have never given out the names of these five picture plays (formerly 'pieces of cheese'). I do not now see any end to be served by identifying them. It is sufficient to say they made good.

"We do not have 'pieces of cheese' any more in World-Pictures Brady-Made, and I will tell you why: In the first place, we are extremely careful in the selection of our material, and before the work is started everything is laid out in detail and made ready for use on short notice. Then when the director finishes with his work I take hold of the picture and supply any deficiencies I am able to detect. After that, perhaps two months before the release date, I go over the play again, and if I find anything of a serious nature requiring time to fix up, the date of issue is postponed, another picture substituted, and we go at our work with all the deliberation we need.

"In this way our product is made as nearly perfect as lies within human possibility, and we have no percentage of failure at all.

"Every little while somebody asks me why I do not direct our pictures from start to finish. There are several reasons. First, we issue a picture every week and frequently have three or four under way at the same time. Second, under the present system I am able to give my best attention to putting the finishing touches upon all of them. And finally, when the director has done all he possibly can to a picture I approach it with an entirely new viewpoint and am enabled to discover flaws which might escape me if I had gone along with the production process from the start.

"This has been my system through all my years of producing spoken plays. I keep away from the rehearsals until two or three days before the opening, and then I 'go to it' in earnest. If results are what count, anybody who looks over my list of successful stage plays will be likely to concede the value of my plan in that field, while reference to the list of World-Pictures Brady-Made to date will show how it has worked out in the film business."

PICKFORD PACKS NEW HOUSE.

Mary Pickford's latest Arteraft picture, "A Poor Little Rich Girl" marked the opening of the new Madison theater in Detroit, John H. Kunsky's latest motion picture palace. For the entire run the theater witnessed capacity business and proved a fitting attraction as the opening feature for such a fine theater as the Madison. In speaking of Miss Pickford's newest offering Mr. Kunsky said: "Without a doubt, this is the finest, the brighest motion picture I have ever seen, and little Mary is wonderful—wonderful! There is nothing better in the market today that could be used for the opening of our new theater and business has been enormous."

Ora Carew

ORA CAREW, the little black-haired, brown-eye Keystone star, is a little better than five feet of vivacity and beauty. She was born in Salt Lake City and was educated at the Roland Hall Seminary, where she paid far more attention to entertaining than her three R's.

Her talent for dancing and her trained voice early gave her a chance to appear in vaudeville, and she was well known on all the big circuits in "sister" acts, single acts and in sketches.

Ora Carew.

In between whiles Miss Ora joined various stock companies, and it was during an engagement she had with the Gaiety stock company at San Francisco that the longing to act in pictures brought her to Los Angeles and secured her the chance to act with the Reliance-Majestic concern, now known as the Fine Arts.

Keystone next claimed her, but a business trip to New York took six months from her photoplay career and on her return she played one picture at Culver City and then rejoined the Keystone, where her heart was. She is now under contract and is being starred in comedies under the direction of Walter Wright.

During the eight months she has been under the management of Mack Sennett she has been seen in "Saved by Wireless," "Love Comet," "Wings and Wheels," "A la Cabaret," "Dollars and Sense," "Her Circus Knight," and "Skidding Hearts.'

Ora Carew loves pretty frocks and knows how to wear them, has a keen sense of humor and is a delightful companion and an all-round clever girl.

SCOTT SIDNEY, DIRECTOR.

The combination of Billie Rhodes as star and Scott Sidney as director, under supervision of Al Christy, promises something out of the ordinary in the Strand comedies which will be released by Mutual starting April 11.

Miss Rhodes has had experience on the legitimate stage in dramatic stock and musical comedy and an extensive screen career as leads in both comedy and drama.

Mr. Sidney possesses the accumulated knowledge of twenty-seven years as actor, manager and director on the speaking stage, and an experience of four years as picture director. Mr. Sidney was an early producer with Thomas H. Ince and directed about seventy one and two reel subjects. He also produced in all about fourteen five reelers for Mr. Ince. His entering the comedy field follows a well-considered decision that this is destined to be the popular and most permanent branch of pictures, and in large measure take the place of the machine-made features which form the great bulk of the present day offering. He is now engaged on the third of the Mutual-Strands for the Caulfield Photoplay Company.

MARSTON RETURNS TO PATHE.

Theodore Marston, one of the best known directors in the industry, has returned to Pathe and is now at work in the Astra Studio in Jersey City directing a new serial featuring Mollie King and Creighton Hale. This is also Mr. Hale's first picture since his return to Pathe after his great success in "The Exploits of Elaine" and "The Iron Claw."

Theatergoers remember Mr. Marston as Horrigan in "The Man of the Hour," as Ursus, the giant, in "Quo Vadis" and as the Judge in "The Virginian." His experience as an actor has been extensive. Mr. Marston directed his first motion picture in the Pathe studios five years ago under the guidance of J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, and Louis J. Gasnier, president of Astra. Pearl White appeared in Mr. Marston's first picture.

Freuler Gives 'em the "Once Over"

PRESIDENT John R. Freuler, of the Mutual Film Corporation, has just completed a tour of the Western studios, contributing to the releasing schedules of the Mutual—and he's off again on a trip to New York to look over the Eastern studios.

"My first trip West in a couple of years," remarked Mr. Freuler, speaking with his characteristic telegraphic brevity as he tossed over a pile of contracts on his labor laden Chicago desk. "Had a fine time and lots of work." It might be observed that Mr. Freuler's idea of a fine time is "lots of work."

"When I landed in Los Angeles there was a flock of automobiles to meet me and to remind me of the thoughtfulness of my friends. I elected Charles Chaplin's locomobile and we hurried off to the Alexandria, and thence to the Lone Star studio.

"I had a good deal of fun and some instruction in watching Mr. Chaplin at work in 'The Cure,' and then I took a look at the Signal studios and spent a couple of sessions with John P. McGowan, the Signal's director general and director of "The Railroad Raiders." Then I took a trip up to the American studios at Santa Barbara and visited with the various companies. I saw Miss Gail Kane at work on "Whose Wife," directed by Mr. Sturgeon; William Russell, hard at work with Director Edward Sloman on "High Play," and a mighty busy general staff.

"Then I turned back to Los Angeles and took up negotiations with various directors and stars—from all of which the exhibitors and the motion picture industry will hear in due time."

As one of the incidents of the excursion to California Mr. Freuler closed a contract with the Caulfield Photoplays Company for a series of fifty-two one-reel comedies, featuring Billie Rhodes, and to be made under the direction of Al Christy.

"I gave a good deal of attention to the 'featurette' or short release proposition while in the West," observed Mr. Freuler. "And while a deal of attention is necessarily focused on the big feature productions I have come to the conclusion that the exhibitor wants and must have a good high feature quality in his short length pictures. As I have so often stated before—the day of 'just pictures' has gone, and whatever there is of quality in the big pictures must also be expressed in the little pictures if the public and the picture show patrons are to be satisfied.

"With this idea in view I have opened up negotiations which will give the Mutual some important additions to its present schedule of short releases of feature quality 'featurettes,' we call them.

"Another important phase of my Western visit was in the conferences held with various stars, directors and studio managers on the subject of the trade requirements as evidenced by the experiences of the Mutual.

" I have been considerably impressed by the aspect of the motion picture industry viewed from Los Angeles, as compared with what it was a few years back on the occasion of my earlier visits. There is a new atmosphere of solidity and a very general striving for an efficiency which was unknown in the earlier stages of the industry."

Mr. Freuler has been in New York inspecting the new Empire All Star Corporation studios, where the Charles Frohman stage successes are being filmed for the screen and the Edna Goodrich and Powell studios.

O. HENRY SUBJECTS START LIVING LIBRARY.

If the plans of the General Film Company and Columbia College are carried out, the films of the series based on the O. Henry short stories will form the nucleus of a living library of American fiction to be inaugurated at the famous New York educational institution.

The plan is to keep a screen record by means of the films themselves of the works of all great American writers. As these great literary efforts are transferred to the screen the various manufacturers will be asked to contribute to this library, and it seemed only fitting to the college authorities to inaugurate this idea with the pictured short stories of O. Henry—long conceded to be the greatest of all short story writers.

Accordingly prints of the first of the series have already been placed in the departments to be devoted to the living library at the college, and as fast as the stories are picturized the reels will be filed in the department allotted to them.

E. M. Barrows Gains New Appointment

THE National Committee on Films for Young People has recently appointed E. M. Barrows secretary of their organization. Mr. Barrows has previously had charge of the editorial work of the Bulletin of the National Conference on Community Centres, is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, and was formerly a newspaper man of the Middle West. We find him also associated with various other prominent sociological organizations. As Field Secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, as special investigator for the Russell Sage Foundation on industrial problems, as district representative of the Extension Division of the University of Wisconsin, and as Recreation and Community Centre Organizer for the People's Institute of New York he has had many years' experience in the promotion and social betterment activities of both national and local character.

E. M. Barrows.

A few brief words that Mr. Barrows has let drop regarding censorship are worthy of note. They are as follows: "That censorship of motion picture films does not produce the results anticipated by those advocating it is being increasingly recognized in widely scattered communities throughout the country. Two years ago censorship was looked upon as the only solution of the local motion picture situation in many cities. The National Board of Review by placing emphasis on constructive effort rather than destructive censorship has proved that the motion picture does not present an amusement problem at all. It presents rather an opportunity for an expression of community ideals in the realm of amusements."

FAIRBANKS SIGNS FOR DUFFY STORY.

Douglas Fairbanks has just signed for the screening of "Far from the Maddening Girls," by Gerald C. Duffy, editor of the "Picture-Play Magazine," the Street and Smith monthly. Mr. Duffy was assisted in preparing this story by Keene Thompson, well known in fiction circles for his humorous short stories.

In connection with the exploitation of the Duffy story an elaborate publicity campaign will be conducted which will take in all of the Street and Smith publications, including a novelization in four instalments in "Picture-Play" to be published during the staging of the subject. The story is scheduled for production in about four months to be released by Artcraft, taking its turn with other already scheduled Fairbanks scenarios.

DR. BAYLIS TO LECTURE ON TRAVELOGUES.

A. H. Woods has engaged Dr. Charles T. Baylis of Brooklyn, the eminent traveler, writer and publicist, as one of the staff of noted lecturers who will present the Elmendorf Travel Talks throughout the country under Mr. Woods' personal direction. Dr. Baylis, who will lecture on Mexico, has for years enjoyed a considerable reputation as a lecturer on European travel subjects. He was one of the last civilians allowed by the Germans to traverse the ruined and devasted areas of Belgium. In an automobile journey of one thousand miles he covered thoroughly that section of Belgium which the German occupation made possible.

ANITA LOOS ILL.

Anita Loos, author of the initial Douglas Fairbanks-Artcraft release, "In Again-Out Again," has been confined to her home for a week, as a result of a serious attack of grip. Her sick room contains every possible species of flowers sent by Little "Anita's" many New York friends.

Beatriz Michalena Speaks

The Prima Donna-Actress Still Radiant With a Weight of Trouble on Her Shoulders.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

SEVERAL weeks ago Beatriz Michelena, who one scarcely knows how to classify, whether as a prima donna or a moving picture actress, so well has she filled the qualifications of both professions, started across continent from her home in San Rafael, California, with the object in view of spending a few days and perhaps a few weeks in New York City. There was another object also in her breaking away from the scene of her labors of the past two or three years, while in perfect health as far as outward appearances go, she felt the necessity that comes to most of us at times, of change and rest. And so it was that she loitered on her way east, having, as she herself states, "a wonderful time" in the various places where she stopped off. But, in the meantime, knowing that relations between Miss Michelena and the California Motion Picture Corporation, with which she had been under contract, had been broken off, several big producers in the east had searched madly for the liberated star, not knowing that a telegram sent to her home in San Rafael would be forwarded to her at whatever point of her journey she might be.

Beatriz Michelena.

Some time spent with Miss Michelena over a lunch table at the Hotel Astor revealed the fact that her usual radiant vivacity had surmounted considerable unpleasantness with which she has had to contend during the past few months. Her own version of a situation in which the young lady was pictured as being extremely temperamental may be of interest to readers. She states: "The report which appeared in several of the trade papers and newspapers to the effect that I had walked out on the production of 'Faust' was not true; and I have been too long honorably connected with the stage not to feel keenly the sting of such an accusation. The fact is, I was told when the picture was well on the way to completion that if it was not finished by a certain date it would have to remain unfinished, that no more work would be allowed to be done on it. What then could I do? The picture was not finished on that date and I was told that no more work would be done on it, and, of course, I stopped as I was told to do. I was then asked to finish the picture without salary, and in view of the fact that the company was already in my debt $12,000, I refused."

Readers will also be interested to know that replies to all of the numerous letters that have reached her on account of her recent series of newspaper articles have been dictated and signed by her. Miss Michelena has, in fact, always taken a kindly interest in mail directed to her personally, and of the hundreds of letters that have reached her from fans she has actually written or dictated and signed replies to each one.

Various interesting matters of which we are not permitted to speak at the present time enveloped in Miss Michelena's plans, and the near future will no doubt have something of interest to disclose. In the meantime, after spending a short time in New York, she will return to California.

ARBUCKLE TO BE SCREENERS' GUEST.

Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle will be the guest of honor at a beefsteak dinner at the Screen Club on Saturday evening, March 31. An entertainment of vaudeville and music will be provided in the club's parlor. A small stage is being erected for the "stunts" under rehearsal for the delectation of the guests.

HOPE HADLEY RESIGNS FROM MUTUAL.

Hope Hadley, the well known publicity man, left the Mutual Film Corporation on March 24. He has been with the Mutual about two years. As yet Mr. Hadley has not announced any new affiliation.

C. H. Bristol to Handle Advertising for Triangle

FOLLOWING the appointment of Cameron H. Bristol, of Philadelphia, as manager of Triangle's special department of advertising, R. W. Frazee, general manager of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, makes the following statement:

"Triangle Distributing Corporation has created a special advertising department which will be in charge of Cameron H. Bristol, whom we consider to be one of the best advertising men in the country.

"Mr. Bristol has been in the advertising business for over ten years. His most recent connection has been with the Electric Storage Battery Company of Philadelphia, where he conducted one of the most successful advertising campaigns ever carried on in this country. He made the word 'Exide' known throughout the entire world. He has been for some time past familiarizing himself with conditions in the moving picture industry, and, while this is a new field for him, he comes to us with a fresh viewpoint and full of new ideas with respect to moving picture advertising from which we expect big results.

C. H. Bristol

"He is now working on plans along special lines, and we are trying to devise the best method of adding to the knowledge which the general public has of the Triangle product. We expect to be able to make some interesting announcements along this line in the near future."

Skerrett Celebrates

JOHN FRANCIS SKERRETT celebrates his fourth year as general manager of the Nicholas Power Company on April 1. Mr. Skerrett came to the Power Company in 1913 and during his administration the now famous Cameragraph No. 6-B was introduced to the trade. To his efforts is due in great measure the present splendid organization which is so well known to all in the motion picture industry.

Prior to his connection with the Nicholas Power Company he was chief of the New York Municipal Bureau of Electricity. He is a man of very strong and forceful personality, and the Nicholas Power Company is to be congratulated upon having such a man as Mr. Skerrett at the helm. He has a host of friends in the industry and out of it and is extremely popular and well liked by the staff with which he has been associated for the past four years.

John Francis Skerrett

He is an enthusiast in his devotion to the Nicholas Power Company and their output, and has the happy knack of imparting his enthusiasm to all who are associated with him. His many friends and associates hope he will see very many celebrations of his birthday as general manager of the house of the "Cameragraph."

British Notes

THE first free moving picture theater to be inaugurated upon any pretentious scale will open in London in a few weeks' time. The new Australia building at the eastern extremity of the Strand, the headquarters in England of the Australian Government, proposes to utilize moving pictures for the advertising of the commonwealth upon a scale both extensive and novel. The theater will, it is announced, accommodate 2,000 visitors and be furnished and decorated in a manner to compare with the most modern kinemas in the country.

A well known Lincolnshire exhibitor, who controls four film theaters and three legitimate houses, has been giving his opinions, which he bases upon 25 years' continuous exhibiting experience, to the Famous Players Film Co. upon the trend of the American picture play. From his outspoken remarks I cull the following as bearing more than one point of interest to the American producer: "I certainly am of opinion that there are few audiences that care for four or five reels all comedy; that sub-titles should be Anglicized—good clean English (or any other) audiences are not impressed by American slang terms, nor complicated American stock exchange episodes. English audiences still like occasionaly a good "wild" western subject with a probable story well told, well acted and well produced, but the fewer knives and pistols there are in it the better. Our audiences of today include very few, if any, who desire to see half a dozen people shot or stabbed during the story. The day of the crook-gang and masked society subjects are as dead as the proverbial door nail."

The older members of the industry upon both continents will regret to hear of the untimely end of Sergt Ed. Lumiere, one of the brothers Lumiere of the old established French house Societe Anonyme Lumiere who was killed in an aeroplane accident during operations with the French army early this week. At the outbreak of war in 1914 M. Lumiere was devoting considerable time to kinemotographic research with a view to the application of the famous Lumiere "autochrome" process of still photography to the exigencies of the moving picture film. When I last discussed this matter with him the only obstacle was the varnish separating the screen from the emulsion. The Lumiere Co. possess a modern film coating factory at Lyons where most of the laboratory work was done. It is to be hoped the experiments with the "autochrome" process will continue and achieve the success they have achieved in ordinary photography.

The British Board of Film Censors are increasing the charge for censoring films submitted to them. The manufacturer in future will have to pay at the rate of fifteen shillings ($3.60) per 1,000 feet instead of ten shillings ($2.40).

A new act of Parliament of special moment to foreign firms trading or contemplating trading in England comes into force today (Feb. 23). Known as the Registration of Business Names Act it makes it compulsory for all individual or company (excepting only registered companies) concerns to reveal upon their notices and contracts the identity of the owners and also to file these particulars with the Government. There is a possibility of the provisions of the act being extended to registered companies in the near future, but even as it is many moving picture undertakings in the United Kingdom come under its scope.

Frank S. Phelps, representing the Randolph Film Corporation, is in London with headquarters at the M. P. Sales Agency (A. B. and Kalem) for the negotiation of the second Billie Burke subject, "Gloria's Romance."

Taking the cue from the Essanay Co. two renting exchanges in London are making commendable efforts to familiarize the trade and public with the kinematographic significance of the letters S. T. (screen time). The formal S. T. 1.10 printed on a trade show invitation does not, as one exhibitor interpreted it, mean that tea will be served at 1.10 p. m., but that the duration of exhibition is seventy minutes.

It does not look as though the National Council of Public Morals, the organization which is conducting the Kinema Commission at Central Hall, Westminster, will be content in drafting their findings merely into a printed report. There have already been suggestions among the members for the establishment of a scheme of national censorship.

Exhibitors in the south of France are faring much better than their comrades in Paris. Theaters in Nice, Marseilles and the Riviera are allowed to remain open six days per week as compared with two in Paris and environs. In Marseilles a stipulation in connection with their privilege demands that they shall exercise as great economy as possible in the use of electricity.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

LONG NEW YORK RUN FOR BEACH FILMS.

An important step in the progress of moving pictures was taken when Samuel Rothapfel closed with the Grand Feature Film Company for the opening exhibition of the Rex Beach Central and South American pictures. The pictures started Sunday, March 4, and the agreement calls for eight weeks, the longest continuous run ever given a picture in the Rialto Theater.

These pictures were taken in Central and South America and are the only pictures ever produced featuring Rex Beach in action. The scenes are laid along that part of the Western Hemisphere where the buccaneers once held sway. The features are released under the titles of "Rex Beach on the Spanish Main," "Rex Beach in Pirate Haunts," and "Rex Beach in the Footsteps of Capt. Kidd."

Because of the intense heat and humidity of the tropics little if any good moving picture photography has been brought out of Central and South America, but due to the precautions taken to protect his films, the photography in these pictures is beautiful, in fact, the best ever secured in the tropics.

The Rex Beach Expedition spent eighteen months in the tropics photographing their unusual adventures and the strange countries, people and customs—and apart from the absorbing interest of the subjects shown is the presence of Rex Beach throughout. His struggles with the tarpon in the Chagres River, Panama, furnish excellent thrills.

Arrangements are completed for the sale of state rights. The Grand Feature Film Co., distributors, have offices in the Candler Building, 220 W. 42nd street.

SYLVIA BREMER IN TRIANGLE PLAY.

Sylvia Bremer is the latest addition to the acting forces of Thomas H. Ince, and will make her first appearance on the Triangle program next month when she will appear as the heroine of the new baseball drama by C. Gardner Sullivan, starring Charles Ray.

Like Enid Bennett, Miss Bremer is a native of Australia, and was born in the city of Sydney on the 9th of June about twenty years ago. She is a brunette of unusual beauty and stands well above the average height. Patrons of the Triangle program will be accorded a pleasurable surprise in the screen debut of Miss Bremer, it is said, as she exhibits every quality essential to film success.

Sylvia Bremer's father was a sea captain and a commander in the Royal English Navy. As far back as she can trace, there have been no members of the theatrical profession in her family. Yet from her earliest years, she confesses, she has cherished the ambition to make a career as an actress. After her father's death, about three years ago, she played in various Australian stock companies, finally coming to America and filling an engagement with Grace George in "Major Barbara."

JOHN WILD IS LARGE FILM BUYER.

With offices in West 34th street John Wild pursues the noiseless tenor of his ways as one of the world's largest film buyers in the United States. Mr. Wild is the sole American representative of the Anglo-French Film Agencies, London, England, which buys films in this market for world-wide distribution.

Starting in the exhibiting and projecting departments of the movie business in Scotland a few years ago Mr. Wild, who is only 33 years old, has in the United States been identified with the Eclair, Gaumont, Hepworth and Mutual companies, and may be said to know the film game from A to Z. He is a quiet, undemonstrative Englishman of an admirable type and very popular with the executive heads of the great film companies.

Australian Notes

January 24th, 1917.

QUITE a sensation was caused among the picture interests here upon the announcement that Alec Lorimore, representing the Famous Players and Lasky concerns, had purchased a controlling interest in the Australian Feature Films Exchange, which is the releasing medium for Paramount Pictures in Australia. Mr. Lorimore has been appointed managing director of the exchange.

A social evening, to commemorate the event, was given by Mr. Lorimore in Ushers Hotel, Sydney, on Monday night, January 21st. A big gathering of sixty persons, including many prominent picture people and representatives of the press, sat down to a sumptuous repast. Mr. Lorimore, in a speech, referred to his plans for the future. He said that in America at present the picture business is much overrun, and the bigger concerns were looking for new ground. It was the intention of his firm to produce feature plays in Australia, with Australian artists, the stories being written by Australians. These would, of course, be made for the American market as well as for the Australian, as the market here was hardly sufficient to pay for the first hundred feet of a finished film.

The Progressive Film Service has started business in Sydney, at 129 Bathurst street. This exchange is handling all Mutual films with the exception of Chaplin subjects, releasing them on the open market principle. The first feature, "Dulcie's Adventure," was released last week, while the current screening is "And the Law Says." The Sydney showing of these subjects has been delayed three weeks owing to their phenomenal success in Victoria and the big bookings received there. The new service is under the guidance of C. Sudholz, recently associated with Australian Feature Films of this city. Mr. Sudholz has been in the picture business for a number of years, and is one of the most experienced men in the business.

Chris Richards, a well-known vaudeville artist, left for America this week. The popular comedian, who has just finished a tour of Australia, has been engaged at a big salary to star in pictures under the direction of Alex Pantages, the big American vaudeville magnate.

C. L. Yearsley, who has been Publicity Manager for Australasian Films, Ltd., for some time, leaves for America in a few months time, probably to start on business on his own account. Mr. Yearsley has been responsible for some of the best advertising "stunts" seen in Sydney in the picture line. He has made a specialty of lobby displays, and these have been a feature of the Crystal Palace ever since that theater was opened three years ago.

R. J. Dexter, who for the past seven months has managed the publicity work in Melbourne for Australasian Films, Ltd., returned to Sydney last week to take up similar duties here. It is understood that he will take Mr. Yearsley's place when the latter's contract expires.

John F. Gavin's feature, "The Death of Captain Fryatt," has been completed, and is scheduled for early release. Mr. Gavin is already busy on the script of his next picture, which will be a story of Russian life during the present war.

J. D. Williams, who left Sydney for the U. S. A. by last mail, took with him copies of the Australian-New Zealand production, "The Mutiny of the Bounty," which was produced by Raymond Longford. This picture is considered one of the best of recent productions, and should compare very favorably with the average American production.

The daylight saving scheme is still affecting attendances to all theaters, picture and legit alike. Many of the suburban shows round Sydney have put back their starting hour to half-past eight or even nine o'clock, the entertainment finishing at half-past ten or eleven.

It has been definitely decided to present the Griffith spectacle "Intolerance" at the Theater Royal, Sydney, about the middle of February, and so that theater is now being refitted and renovated generally. It has not been stated what prices will be charged, but after the failure of "Legit" theater prices with the "Birth of a Nation," it is improbable that the highest rate of admission will be over half-a-crown (sixty cents).

The Fox spectacle, "The Daughter of the Gods," finished its Sydney season at the Hippodrome last week, after a run of a month, during which time good attendances were the case every screening. The Fox Film Corporation is now presenting its usual weekly releases at this theater, which had been empty for some time prior to the "Daughter of the Gods" season.

J. Gordeaux, foreign agent for Australian Films, Ltd., leaves this week on a business trip to Java and the Eastern Islands. Mr. Gordeaux will be absent from Australia for a period of about six months.

* * *

"The Birth of a Nation" has just concluded a big season in Tasmania, and is to be presented by Australasian Films, Ltd., in Western Australia very shortly.

BUYING RIGHTS FOR "WOMAN WHO DARED."

State rights for "The Woman Who Dared," the first release of Ultra Pictures Corporation, are going quite rapidly. Territory recently closed is as follows: To Harry Schwalbe of the Peerless Film Exchange, Philadelphia, Southern New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia; to Samuel Grant of the Federal Feature Film Co., Boston, all the New England States; to Harry A. Samwick of 126 West 46th street, New York, for New York and Southern New Jersey.

A. J. Cobe, president of the Ultra Pictures Corporation, is off on another short trip through the middle west and will have more sales to report upon his return.

BRENON BEGINS "THE LONE WOLF."

Herbert Brenon is in New Orleans, where he took his company to begin work on his third Selznick-Picture, "The Lone Wolf." This is an adaptation of the novel of the same name by Louis Joseph Vance, one of the most popular of all American fiction writers. The book has run through several editions, and when it was decided to make a photo-drama from the story, it was discovered that not a single bookstore in New York had a copy remaining on its shelves. A new edition is now being rushed through the press to supply the constant demand.

ACTRESS CHANGES NAME.

Miss Helen Reaume, who is playing opposite Tyrone Power in the Nevada Motion Picture Corporation's 12-reel production of Herman Whitaker's book, "The Planter," has decided to change her name to Helen Bateman. The change was brought about principally by the difficulty experienced in having her name properly pronounced or understood.

METRO PROPERTY MAN DIES.

James J. Hussey, chief property man of the Popular Plays and Players studio, died of heart failure at Lakewood, N. J., whither he had gone in an effort to recuperate. Mr. Hussey had been with the Popular Plays and Players' Co. for a year and a half. He was twenty-three years old. The funeral took place at Bayonne.

BEATRIZ MICHELENA IN NEW YORK.

Beatriz Michelena, the famous prima donna and dramatic star, arrived in New York last week after a safe trip from the coast. Miss Michelena will stay in New York for a short time and in all probability will assist A. J. Cobe in the final preparations of "The Woman Who Dared," soon to be released by the Ultra.

GOVERNMENT PUTS INDUSTRY ON HONOR.

Many motion picture manufacturing and exhibiting companies in the United States have received a communication from the Navy Department warning them against showing in public any motion pictures of American naval or merchant vessels without first submitting the pictures to the Department for final censoring.

"The Eternal Sin"

Florence Reed as Lucretia Borgia in Six-Reel Screen Version of Victor Hugo's Drama, Produced by Herbert Brenon for Selznick Pictures.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THERE are but few persons in the United States today who have seen Victor Hugo's drama, "Lucretia Borgia," acted on the stage. A favorite part with the tragedy queens of fifty years ago, it will, in all probability, never be produced again in spoken form. Its theme would receive but little response from a modern audience, and it demands a style of acting long out of fashion.

In adapting the play to the screen, under the title of "The Eternal Sin," the scenarioist has used only the skeleton of the Hugo story, and has deprived that of its most objectionable features. In dealing with one of the most despicable women known to history, the French author sought to win sympathy for her by showing that, in spite of her unspeakable crimes, mother love was the strongest emotion of her nature. The screen version contrasts her one virtue with but one of her vices—cruelty. Her darker passions are barely hinted at. No attempt has been made to follow the construction of the original, but, as a revelation of Poisoning as a Fine Art, it is quite as instructive as the Hugo work.

"The Eternal Sin" opens with the visit of a mysterious gentleman to the home of a peasant family that is rearing an equally mysterious infant. When the child reaches manhood, we learn that he is the unacknowledged son of the Borgia, now married to the Duke of Ferrara. There is an under-plot dealing with the murder of Lucretia's brother, and a torture scene in which the five men who stabbed him to death are made to feel Lucretia's vengeance. The main interest, however, is built around the meeting of Lucretia with her son, and her husband's jealousy when he discovers, as he supposes, that his wife has a lover. The sons of the five murderers reveal to the young man, Gennaro by name, that Lucretia Borgia is the woman who, he imagines, sees in him only a passing fancy. The efforts of the Duke to have Gennaro poisoned, the risks run by his mother to prevent it, and her unwitting accomplishment of this very act, form the tragic climax where Gennaro stabs the guilty woman, and is told, with her last breath, that she is his mother.

Considered as a production, "The Eternal Sin" will add a number of new laurels to Herbert Brenon's reputation as a director. The scenes were taken in Florida, the courtyards and interiors of some of the most famous of its hotels serving admirably for Italy in the fourteenth century. In point of fact, the correct atmosphere is never lost. The movement is slow in the earlier part of the drama, and there are other times when it might have been sharpened to advantage, but the action is, generally, impressive, and the acting is in the hands of an evenly balanced cast, with the exception of Florence Reed as Lucretia Borgia. Her rendering of the character is the finest achievement connected with the picture.

Victor Hugo's one object was to win sympathy for his heroine, and the present version emphasizes the same point. Florence Reed makes one believe in the purity and strength of the Borgia's love for her son, without seeking to soften any of the woman's fiendish qualities, the human touch being present even then. In looks and bearing she is the woman of noble birth, and denotes her position without the slightest suspicion of overdoing. Her appearance in the "Gentlemen, you are all poisoned!" scene is superb, and her acting, also. If a new birth of this style of tragedy is to be welcomed on the screen, Florence Reed's method of acting it will go far toward putting such works in good repute.

Richard Barthelmess as Gennaro, William Shay as Duke of Ferrara, Stephen Grattan as Lucretia's brother, Alexander Shannon as Rustighello, and Jane Fearnley as the Princess Negroni are the leading members of the uniformly excellent supporting company. The remaining members are A. G. Parker, M. J. Briggs, Edward Thorne, Elmer Patterson, Anthony Merio, William Walsh, Henry Armetta, Juliet Brenon, and Henrietta Gilbert. The photographer was J. Roy Hunt.

"A Man and the Woman"

Five-Reel Screenplay Adapted from Novel by Zola on Art Drama's Program—Produced by U. S. Amusement Corporation.

THE adapter of Emile Zola's novel, "Nantas," Mme. Alice Blache, is indebted to the French author for none of her atmosphere in fashioning the scenario for "A Man and the Woman," a five-reel photoplay produced by the United States Amusement Corporation. The theme of the novel has often been used. It possesses a romantic quality that has a sure appeal, although its nature is essentially French.

The young lady of wealth and position who for some weighty reason must be married before a certain date, and who picks out a poor unknown and finally learns to love him, is no novelty in fiction. The heroine of "A Man and the Woman" has been deceived by a mock marriage and deserted. When she discovers the truth she offers a struggling young author his board and lodging at her home in exchange for the protection of his name. He accepts, learns to love the lady long before she has the slightest regard for him and, his equivocal position becoming too much of a burden, decides to blow out his brains. His wife experiences a change of heart just in time to prevent the tragedy.

Transplanted to prosaic America, the story does not always take kindly to the climate, but the large body of screen patrons that do not insist upon absolute truth to life, so long as they are being entertained, will find "A Man and the Woman" to their liking. The production is of fair quality and the featured players, Edith Hallor, Leslie Austen and Kirke Brown, are equal to the acting demanded by their roles.

"20,000 Feats Under the Sea"

A. Kay Company Presents Entertaining 800-Foot Animated Cartoon Burlesque by Paul Terry as Their First Release.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

ON THE strength of the growth of the popularity of the animated cartoon, the A. Kay Company, newly organized, has ventured as its initial release a cartoon burlesque on Jules Verne's "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," in an 800-foot length. This production is entitled "Twenty Thousand Feats Under the Sea," and was made from drawings by Paul Terry, the well-known cartoonist.

The production is distinctly entertaining, and represents an old sea pirate living in a barrel boat following his profession of sinking ships and eating raw fish. His daughter, a bachelor girl with romping tendencies, lives on an island, where her only playmates are elephants and lions. One day this fair maid goes for a swim, is attacked by a crab, and finally rescued from death at the bottom of the sea by the timely interference of her father, who promptly lassoes her, and pulls her into the barrel, head first.

Then we view familiarly the accomplishments of the inhabitants of the sea; for instance, the octopus manages single-handed a fish community kitchen. The sardine shoots the chutes on the back of an eel, and the mermaid goes walking with her dog fish, and the weak fish hobbles by on crutches, followed by the blue fish, who is blue because his pal, the weak fish, is weak. These and various other amusing things occur in the course of the picture.

This production will be found a desirable addition to any program, and will especially delight the children.

"The More Excellent Way"

Anita Stewart and Charles Richman Head Cast of Meritorious Five-Reel Drama Produced by Vitagraph.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

AN EXCELLENT cast, headed by Anita Stewart and Charles Richman; a story of considerable dramatic worth, by Cyrus Townsend Brady, and capable direction by Perry M. Vekroff combine to make "The More Excellent Way," a five-reel Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, a meritorious production. The picture is a problem photoplay, and, as such, will make its greatest appeal to adults. Children are not likely to appreciate it because its deep treatment of marital relations. There is emphatically nothing off-color in the film, however. To those who like forcefully presented domestic drama "The More Excellent Way" will be especially enjoyable.

Anita Stewart's work leaves nothing to be desired. She makes Chrissey Desselden live upon the screen, and compels the spectators' sympathy with and for the girl who did not really know her own heart. Truly Miss Stewart is an actress of ability. Charles Richman furnishes worthy support to Miss Stewart, making the most of a sympathetic role. Worthy, too, of especial commendation is the work of Rudolph Cameron. Others who help the plot move smoothly and convincingly are backgrounds in which the story is set show up to good advantage on the screen. The action is fast, there is lots of gun fighting, and, all in all, the number is an exciting one of its type.

Charles A. Stevenson, Gordon Gray, Josephine Earle and Katherine Lewis.

The production leaves in the mind of the viewer a strong argument against drink which is not in the least "preachy." This element has been handled adroitly by both author and director. Some excellent double and triple-exposure scenes are seen, and production details throughout are of the highest order. The release date was March 26.

Madge King, the "American Girl," and her father and his lieutenant frustrate the plans of a band of horse rustlers. The foreman of the ranch proves a traitor, but in the end is killed, as is the leader of the rustling band and several of his followers. The direction is up to Mr. Horne's standard, and the release strengthens the series. Marin Sais is seen in the leading role, as usual. Others in the cast are Frank Jonasson, Edward Hearn, Ronald Bradbury and Hart Hoxie.

"The Mystery of the Burning Freight."

An interesting story and several good thrills are contained in "The Mystery of the Burning Freight," latest one-reel episode of "A Daughter of Daring" series. Helen Gibson's two main feats in this number get across well. She leaps from the back of her horse to a wild freight, climbs hand over hand across a burning freight on a rope that she has thrown to bridge the space, and stops a wild train just in time to avert a collision. The freight train has been set running wild by an enemy of the fireman, who has been tied to the pilot. The fireman is a wealthy youth proving that he can earn his own living. With Miss Gibson on the screen are seen L. T. Whitlock, G. A. Williams and George Routh. Written by Herman A. Blackman. Directed by Scott Sidney.

"Man's Woman"

Ethel Clayton the Best Feature in Five-Reel World Picture Written by William Addison Lathrop.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE woman who permits her husband's relatives to steer her bark of life over the oftentimes tempestuous seas of matrimony is a rare article in these days of women's clubs, suffrage parades and the election of female members of congress. "Man's Woman," a five-reel photoplay produced by World Pictures, with Ethel Clayton starred, boasts such a heroine. William Addison Lathrop, the author of the story, is serenely unconscious of the existence of such a patient reality as the new woman and has harked back to the days when a wife's place was at home and the word obey had not been dropped from the marriage ritual.

Violet Galloway, a young girl reared in a home of refinement and wealth, is married to Roger Kendall, the petted nephew of two rich maiden aunts. Roger takes his bride to his old home and Violet soon finds that she is anything but its mistress. The two old ladies proceed to run her as they always have her husband. They repeat the same tactics when little Miss Kendall arrives, and finally, believing that Violet has become involved in a scandal, attempt to take her child away from her. Aroused at last to open rebellion, Violet seizes her baby and leaves the house. Roger learns that she has risked her reputation in order to save his life, and a happy ending is provided for without delay. This attempt on Roger's life, together with a realistic raid on a gambling house, forms the dramatic moments of the play. An under-plot, in which local politics figures, has considerable bearing on the story.

Taken on its own ground, "Man's Woman" is well made. It has been given the benefit of Travers Vale's direction and the excellent acting of Ethel Clayton. Miss Clayton's personality forces respect for itself even in so meek and submissive a character, and, thoroughly reliable as she always is, she never slights the role. Rockcliffe Fellowes is competent as Roger Kendall, and John Hines does a well-considered bit of character acting as Dopey Louis. Justine Cutting and Eugenie Woodward play the maiden aunts skillfully. Frank Goldsmith, Ned Burton and Edward Kimball are useful members of the cast.

"A Woman's Awakening," Five-Reel Fine Arts, by Frank E. Woods, and "Her Circus Knight," Two-Reel Keystone.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

"A WOMAN'S AWAKENING" shows Frank E. Woods to be a sure member of that small coterie of authors who can write screen stories to advantage through practical knowledge of screen limitations and possibilities. Mr. Woods has, besides a native gift of story telling, an intimate relation with studio requirements and the cast in hand. He begins his preparation in "A Woman's Awakening" with a delineation which would hardly be permissable in a script submitted for approval by an outsider. He goes at the gradual deterioration of character in a sweet country girl with the calm thoroughness of a novelist. Her emancipation from old fashioned home restraints is not a sudden one, and is therefore the more plausible. She grows weaker and weaker in her vain attempts to resist city lures, just as in real life, and finally marries a worthless adventurer who has been the leading instrument in her downfall.

Scene from "A Woman's Awakening" (Fine Arts).

Not until after marriage does the country girl get the true measure of the man to whom she is tied for life. She attempts to bargain with him when he is in peril of being thrown into jail for his financial operations. She secures a loan from a true hearted man, and her worthless husband, true to form, breaks his pledge and uses the kindly act against her. Retribution comes from a source unexpected to him, though carefully planted for the audience. All through the story is shown her crippled mother, a silent sufferer unable to move about except in a wheel chair. At regular and impressive intervals this invalid is shown, wholly inactive, but listening and thinking, a Nemesis destined to mete out punishment to the decadent husband, who finally kills him with his own revolver at a time when he received a note which might cause self-destruction. The verdict is that he committed suicide. The secret that there was no suicide is guarded by her daughter and the manly fellow who helped her in an hour of need, but it is the cause of distrust between these two—each suspects the other of having committed the murder. This condition of mutual distrust, the concluding tension, is relieved by the mother's confession that she killed the destroyer of her daughter's happiness, and the story ends with the reconciliation of two true hearts.

The release in a genuine screen story by a man who knows how to write one, who is steadily improving in his composition, and it will be welcome everywhere by those who enjoy real moving pictures. The cast is flawless and the direction without blemish, a fine example of the new art.

"Her Circus Knight."

"Her Circus Knight" is an amusing farce of melodramatic incident, lacking in continuity most of the time, but filled with ingenious mechanical contrivances, such as made Keystone popularity. There is a need in these light stories of more characterization and consequent humor, as well as greater coherence. It would be better to follow, as in the larger comedies, the adventures of one character throughout. It will be welcome, however, in spite of these defects wherever shown.

"The Trufflers"

Samuel Merwin's Novel Visualized by Essanay, With Nell Craig, Sydney Ainsworth and an Excellent Supporting Cast—Adapted and Directed by Fred E. Wright.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

AFTER careful viewing and afterthought I am impressed that the story of Samuel Merwin, in photoplay form, with a cast of unusual strength, does not quite come up to my expectations, and I am also convinced that this is due to the fact that the story does not lend itself readily to moving picture service.

The old Greenwich village in which the story is laid "is a Bohemia where men and women dress up ungoverned desires in sociological languages; preach the new naturalism; protest against conventionality; teach that woman must be as free as a man, and experiment with emotions that woman has had to suppress for ages; know no right or wrong; trust to their instincts; bow to their desires—for that in their creed is Truth."

In this atmosphere Sue Wilde (Nell Craig)—a beautiful young woman, motherless, and indisposed to accept the teachings of her father, which she pronounces criminal—grows up. He is the treasurer of a missionary society and editor in chief of its leading publication. Sue accuses him of making home a prison, and leaves him to make her own way in the world, which means the village of Greenwich. But this must not ben construed as hurtful to the self-reliant young woman, who is true and good at heart.

Scene from "The Trufflers" (Essanay).

The other characters in the story are all of Greenwich, and know and are known by Sue. I leave their introduction to the pictures and the untold part of the story as well.

Nell Craig's Sue Wilde will please all who view this picture, although the part affords insufficient range for her ability as an actress. In the scene which shows Sue at the deathbed of her father, Miss Craig displays fine emotional power.

It seems to me that the scene from the moving picture entitled "Nature," which is described in a subtitle as "The Great Superpicture," and which appears in this production, might have been more spectacular and invested with action. As it is the spectator remains unconvinced, as only two semi-clad figures appear—the character impersonated by Sue and that of her mate.

Peter Erickson Mann, a dramatist and an admirer of Sue, is very ably played by Sydney Ainsworth, and Ernest Maupain's Jacob Zanin is a fine character study. Richard C. Travers gives a very amusing characterization of the book reviewer. Henry Bates, who finally concludes to throw books overboard and engage in real work as a newspaper man. Patrick Calhoun's Henry Lowe, associate editor of the missionary paper, "My Brother's Keeper," and fond of musical comedy and the society of flirting girls, is a mirthful characterization. John Cossar's Doctor Wilde (Sue's father) is in full keeping with his customary art in character drawing, and Harry Dunkinson takes off well the peculiarities of Abe Silverstone, the Nature Film Company's president.

Five-Reel Melodrama Dealing With the Pennsylvania Mounted Police, Featuring George Soule Spencer and June Daye—Produced by E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation.

THE foundation of a stirring melodrama is contained in "Trooper 44," a five-reel picture built around the Pennsylvania Mounted Police, and produced by the E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation. The efficient body of men that have done so much to suppress crime and maintain order in Pennsylvania, especially among the lawless element in the coal region, form a novel feature of the drama. Troop A, under Captain Lynn G. Adams, taking part in the action. The scenario, by Garfield Thompson, is a good example of the honest, if elementary, melodrama supplied to patrons of the one-time popular price theaters. The author, who has spared the spectator any comic relief, is not always expert in the handling of his material, and Roy Gahris, the director, has not discovered the secret of how to sustain the interest in a story. The picture is worth while, for all that, and is a grateful change from the ever present Western melodrama.

Certain crudities in the production are to be regretted. The exteriors are well chosen and skillfully photographed, but many of the interiors are badly painted "studio stuff" and proclaim their origin in anything but "a still, small voice."

The acting, for the most part, is capable. George Soule Spencer makes a manly looking trooper and plays Corporal Jack with the proper effect, barring the fight he puts up in "The Coal Pit." If the recollection of the manner in which Bill Farnum wades into such a scrimmage be strong upon one, the Spencer scrap will seem rather tame. June Daye gives a very human characterization of Ruth Moreland, and Walter P. Lewis runs true to type as her father. Betty Dodsworth is an excellent Cora. Roy Sheldon is always within the picture as Arnold Davis, and the same judgment is due W. W. Black as Sanford and Roy Gahris as Sandy McLane. Captain Lynn G. Adams and his men perform their portion of the work with unexpected ease and finish.

THE approximate length of this production, which, by the way, is being handled as a state rights proposition, is 6,000 feet. It was exhibited for the first time in this country at a private showing held at Loew's New York Roof on Thursday, March 22, at 1.15 p. m., by the Cines Film Corporation of America. This firm is a newly organized one and has for its officers Philip Losipo, president and general manager, and John Rosso, secretary and treasurer. It is located at Room 1003, 145 West Forty-fifth street, New York City.

"The Fated Hour" is distinctly an old world melodrama, and has as the featured members of the cast Pina Minichalli, who appeared in the London production of "The Miracle," and Richard Vinci, whose face is familiar to many American audiences. The story of the play centers about the love stories of two sisters. In both instances the male side of the question reveals despicable traits, opening an avenue for the tragic vengeance which is dealt out to the second offender, after the heartbroken woman has drowned herself.

The most striking thing about the production is the beauty surrounding the main incidents of the story. Some excellent effects by way of illumination have also been gained; deep, old world perspectives and sometimes mirrored effects especially please the eye.

While the production is, as before stated, of a distinctly melodramatic type, there is little in it that might offend good taste. A spectacular theater fire scene appears in the last reel, and suicide on the part of the former lover of one of the sisters, followed by a reunion of the remaining sister and her father close the picture.

"Broadway Jones"

George M. Cohan's Screen Debut in Six-Reel Version of His Famous Stage Play a Marked Success—Artcraft Pictures Corporation Release.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel

THE stand of bills heralding the entrance of George M. Cohan into moving pictures shows the goddess of the spoken stage in tears and the lady of the screen smiling in triumph. The smile is more than justified. Comedian Cohan's screen debut is all kinds of a success and patrons of the silent drama are going to like the man and his methods with the same warm admiration that characterizes the many theatergoers who are familiar with his career on the spoken stage. The creator of "Broadway Jones" has the snap and the brand of humor which appeal to followers of the film, and the Cohanesque school of acting quickly adapts itself to the new medium of expression. The selection of "Broadway Jones" for his first release was a happy one. The plot has the same directness essential to the screen, the characters are easily recognized types of both city and country life, and the subtitles, taken from the dialogue of the play, fit the situations with the perfection to be noticed in the cut of a Cohan dress suit. That the story of "Broadway Jones" is another variant of "The Prodigal Son" does not make it the less welcome. It ranks above even "Cinderella" in popularity, and the Cohan version has many things in its favor, chief of all the spirit of Youth and the realization of its dream.

In regard to the author-actor and his new association, an exchange of felicitations is in order. If George M. Cohan has scored an emphatic hit, the Artcraft Pictures Corporation has given him every assistance in accomplishing such a result. The direction of the pictures was intrusted to Joe Kaufman, an excellent choice, from all points of view. Mr. Kaufman knows his Broadway quite as well as does Mr. Cohan, and the atmosphere of the famous street is never absent from the scenes relative to it. The sets are photographic in their adherence to detail, and the locations representing Jonesville, Ohio, are treated with the same care.

The cast measures up to the same high standard. George M. Cohan's screen performance of "Broadway" brings out the likeable qualities of the young chap from Jonesville as strongly as when he first introduced the character to the stage. Starting cautiously, he soon strikes his proper stride and is going at a great rate long before the finish. Certain mannerisms will stand toning down, and experience will add to his value, as in the case of less favored mortals. For the present, a more successful first appearance has seldom if ever been made before the camera.

Marguerite Snow as Josie Richards, Russell Bassett as Andrew Jones, Crawford Kent as Robert Wallace, Ida Darling as Mrs. Gerard, and the actor who played Rankin, are important factors in the auspicious opening in the silent drama of George M. Cohan and "Broadway Jones."

THE scenes of "Mayblossom," a five-reel photoplay, in colors, produced by Astra and released by the Pathe Company, are laid in the South in ante-bellum days. Pearl White is the featured player. The story is simple, recalling the tales that were once found in the New York Ledger and kindred publications. The picture is very well acted, and is intelligently directed by Edward Jose. Its chief merit is the beauty of the coloring given to every foot of the five reels. The work was done in France, with a skill not to be excelled. The quaint costumes of 1848 and the lovely exteriors and interiors of the same period lend themselves to a series of compositions in color that are a delight to the eye. This feature alone makes the picture an exceptional one.

The story is romantic. Anabel Lee, brought up in the prim and proper method of the time, contracts a hasty marriage with the "gay dog" of the town, and then foolishly consents to have the marriage kept secret. Her husband becomes infatuated with a concert singer, destroys the records of his marriage to Anabel, and weds his new flame. Anabel then weds an old sweetheart and is happy until her first husband returns and attempts to wreck her life. Drink gets the better of him, however, and a peaceful ending comes to Anabel and her troubles.

There is very little action in the picture; the one sensational feature is the burning of the house containing important evidence affecting Anabel. Pearl White as the heroine acts a role that is directly opposite to the strenuous young woman with which she has been identified. She is too generously proportioned and too vigorous mentally for the demure Anabel Lee, but acts with feeling and the skill of a well-schooled actress Hal Ford and Fuller Mellish give her excellent support.

"Kidnapped."

The game of kidnapping is played right merrily in the fourth installment of "Mystery of the Double Cross." Philippa is kidnapped by Bentley, and her arm is examined to see if it bears the mysterious mark. Then Bentley is kidnapped by The Masked Stranger, but his gang comes to his rescue, and Peter Hale, who is brought into the affair, is wounded. The Masked Stranger continues to be on hand at the right moment and, at the end of the number, there are indications of more and immediate excitement for everyone in the serial.

"The Blue Streak"

Five-Reel Fox Photoplay Written by William Nigh; an Unusual Drama of Exceptional Merit.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THERE is more than a suggestion of the influence of Bret Harte in "The Blue Streak," a five-reel photoplay, written, directed and acted in by William Nigh, and produced by the Fox Film Corporation. The theme is quite in the Harte vein, and, in the hands of a less discerning director, might easily have become offensive. The plot once fixed in the author's mind, he must have realized the vital importance of finding an actress for the part of "The Fledgling" whose fitness would leave no room for doubt. Unsophisticated to an extent almost beyond belief, and placed in a situation that the slightest touch of incredulity on the part of the spectator would turn into burlesque or worse, the heroine of "The Blue Streak" demands the perfect embodiment of youth and innocence. Fortunately for all concerned, such a personality was found in Violet Palmer. She fulfills not only the requirements just specified, but harmonizes with her environment in every particular.

It is not necessary to go into the details of the plot. Three bandits carry off a young girl and are led into the mistake of thinking that she is about to become a mother. They bring another woman to the cabin, who advises the girl that the deception be kept up until they can both get away in safety. The bandits imagine that they have discovered the man who is responsible for the girl's condition, and the leader goes after him. He brings him back at the point of a gun, also a minister. At the finish he marries the girl himself.

In telling of this unusual story, William Nigh displays both skill and judgment. His production of the picture and his acting of the leading male role come in for the same words of praise. Authentic character studies should be placed to the credit of Tom Cameron, Martin Faust, Ned Finley, Ed. Roseman and Ruth Thorp.

It would be difficult to suggest any feature of the production that calls for improvement.

another question. It has many of the characteristics of a fairy tale—it deals with great wealth bestowed upon a poor girl by a man who theretofore had been known to local fame chiefly as a tightwad, who suddenly decides to "die" in order to disappoint his ambitious relatives. In the absence of some kind of a funeral we are not shown how the deception was perpetrated.

Herbert Standing as the testy old man of money stands out in the cast. We may not understand how it happens there is a recrudescence of the romantic tendency of his youth, after all these years of hard hearted existence, but the transformation takes place, with most happy results, nevertheless. Miss Martin as Abby Lou Maynard makes the most of her role, that of the cheery miss bent on good works.

E. Mason Hopper has staged the story, which was written by George Hopkins. Mr. Hopper, by his employment of double exposure, has added color to the fanciful side of the picture. The construction of the secret room—aside from the fact that it is on the same level with the main floor of the dwelling, and, therefore, its presence should be discoverable—has been cleverly done. There is a bit of realism where Abby Lou sets out to treat to candy all the children in the neighborhood.

"The Bottle Imp."

In "The Bottle Imp" the Lasky company presents Sessue Hayakawa as Lopaka, the Hawaiian hero of Robert Louis Stevenson's well-known tale. The adaptation is by Charles Maigne. Marshall Neilan has effectively directed the production. This, too, is a fanciful story—of the magic qualities that go with the ownership of a bottle in which is confined Kono. While the bottle holder may have his wish granted, yet if he die with it in his possesion he cannot avoid going to hell. Again, the bottle must be sold for less than is paid for it. This latter restriction figures heavily in the story, by reason of the search for coins of small denomination.

In spite of the rank of the author, and of the care given to the making of the picture, it can hardly be said the subject is strong from the dramatic viewpoint. It does possess distinct charm, by reason of several factors—the southern California island backgrounds, the personality of Mr. Hayakawa and of the player who is cast opposite him, Miss Lehua Waipahu. The latter, as her name would indicate she might, finely fits into the atmosphere of the story. She has magnetism, agility, poise and—good looks.

"The Waiting Soul"

Mme. Petrova Starred in Five-Reel Drama Produced for Metro by Popular Plays and Players.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

THE opinion formed after having viewed "The Waiting Soul" under adverse conditions is that the picture, which was produced for Metro by Popular Plays and Players, is just an average offering. The print the writer saw in Metro's projection room was a poor one, broken in many places, and with "scratch" titles, of which there are an overabundance. A further opinion is that, seen even under the best possible conditions, "The Waiting Soul" would not get a mark very much above average. Its chief claim to attention is Mme. Petrova, who, with her customary ability and power, dominates the production.

Pre-natal influence and mother-instinct are the elements around which have been built a moderately strong story of fair interest. The story was written by Marion Short, and appeared in Snappy Stories magazine, the latter fact being an indication of the general classification of the story, which was prepared for the screen by Wallace C. Clifton, supervised by Aaron Hoffman, directed by Burton L. King, and photographed by George W. Hill.

The picture is not one for children, nor is it one that will meet with the entire approval of a mixed audience, for, at its very beginning, there is gotten over—more by inference than anything else, however—the fact that a married man is carrying on a liaison with an unmarried woman. The illicit affair is broken up by the death of the man's young son, and, in a rage, he leaves the woman. She tries to atone for her sin by becoming a nurse. In this capacity she meets a wealthy youth whom she later marries. When she is about to become a mother she is brought to realize that her child's character will be affected by her deceit and lack of courage. For the unborn child's sake, she tells her husband of her affair, and he surprises her by informing her that he knew of it even before they were married.

There is much padding in the five reels, and the continuity is none too good.

Chief in support of Mme. Petrova is Mahlon Hamilton, who does good work. Included in the cast are Mrs. Mathilde Brundage, Wyndham Standing, Wilfred De Shields, Mrs. Lottie Ford, Anna Laughney and Roy Pilcher.

"The Bronze Bride"

Five-Reel Red Feather Production Gives New and Entertaining Version of "Squaw Man" Theme.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

COUNTLESS stories have been built around the complications which inevitably follow when a white man marries an Indian maiden. This offering goes a step further than its predecessors, such as "The Squaw Man," "Strongheart" and others, by bringing about a happy ending to the union, an ending, moreover, which seems less strained than some of the disastrous ones.

Consistent development, picturesque locations and some admirable acting at the close by a clever juvenile named Frankie Lee do much to lift this production above the ordinary. Though the older players handle their various roles acceptably, credit must be given to the small boy for putting a decided punch into the story at just the right moment. His recognition of his mother, when she is surrounded by a circle of hard-hearted social dictators, save the situation and brings a happy solution to the problem.

Claire McDowell plays the role of A-Che-Chee, the Indian girl of the Canadian Northwest, whose marriage to the hero brings on the troubles. The latter young man, portrayed by Frank Mayo, has gone into the wilds to make a man of himself. He saves the girl from danger, and later she nurses him back to life after an illness. They are married upon demand of her brother, White Feather, played by Eddie Polo. The child is born, and later the father returns to civilization, taking the boy with him. The mother follows, and the solution is worked out in a satisfactory manner.

The story was written by Maude George and W. E. Pearson, and produced by Henry McRae. Others in the cast are Ed Clark, Charles Hill Mailes, Harry Archer, Winter Hall and Betty Schade.

Julius Stern, president of the L-KO Motion Picture Company, has returned from a six weeks' visit to the Coast studios of the company.

Fortune Features

"The Devil's Bait" and "The Yellow Bullet," a Brace of Four-Reel Melodramas, Produced by Balboa and Distributed by General Film.

"The Devil's Bait."

ACCORDING to the story, written by Wm. M. Ritchey, "The Devil's Bait" is jewels of every description. This four-reel Fortune photoplay, produced by Balboat and distributed by the General Film, follows the trail of unhappiness which a giant ruby leaves behind it as it passes from one owner to another. Two men, once friends, quarrel over the ownership of a ruby which comes into their possession during a landslide in the ruby mines of Mandalay. One man bears off the prize and makes a relentless enemy of his former friend. He steals his wife away, and tries his best to ruin his daughter. The author proves his contention about the jewels, and has put a number of dramatic situations in his story. Its greatest drawback is its lack of sympathetic characters. Ruth Roland, as the daughter of Dr. Sheldon, has the only part that shows a clean moral record. She plays the role intelligently, but is hardly the correct type. Wm. Conklin and Edward J. Brady are acceptable as the two one-time friends, and Harry King gives a consistent performance of the reformed hero. Lucy Blake, Myrtle Reeves and Chas. Dudley have the other important parts. The picture is a fair example of screen productions and was made under the direction of Harry Harvey.

"The Yellow Bullet."

This picture abounds in physical action. There are a number of desperate encounters between two men over a lost mine, the secret of its location haying been hidden in a cartridge case. "The Yellow Bullet" was written by Wm. H. Lippert and is a story of adventure. The human interest is supplied by the daughter of the man who finds the bullet, and a young army surgeon. Their love story rings true, but the greater portion of the four reels is taken up by the struggle for treasure and the revelation of the sordid passions of humanity. Some of these scenes would be the better if they were curtailed; the incident where Fowler drags the dead man through the sand of the desert is a case in point.

This picture and "The Devil's Bait" were made from magazine stories of adventure and retain too much of their old form of construction. Harry Harvey, the director of "The Yellow Bullet" also, has supplied good locations, and the cast, headed by Robyn Adair and Lucy Payton, work faithfully and to good effect.

"Motherhood"

Five-Reel Powell-Mutual Feature Portrays Modern Warfare In All Its Grim Psychological Tragedy.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

MARJORIE RAMBEAU is featured in this five-reel offering, adapted by Clara S. Beranger from a story by Frederick Arnold Kummer. Paul Everton plays a part of equal intensity, the whole offering being attuned to the horrors of modern warfare. The episodes picture grim tragedy in a most convincing manner. There is much in the story that is brutal, but it is brutal in the way that war itself is hideous and revolting. Of the truthfulness of the picture there can be no question.

The plot begins and ends with a happy family of Americans. The husband and wife are seen reading aloud a novel dealing with the present sanguinary conflict. As they read, the tale itself is pictured. Genuine scenes from the Western front have been interwoven into the production, giving it an authentic atmosphere. Perhaps the chief defect of the production is found in certain unprepossessing studio effects and at least one poor character makeup. These drawbacks are forgotten, however, in the tremendous sweep of action which follows as the plot unfolds.

The scenes of the story are chiefly laid in two villages near the opposing battle lines. Here are pictured two families, the husband in each instance being snatched into the service of his country. One husband, the father of two children, is followed in service. He is gradually brutalized by drink and war lust. Eventually he arrives at the home of the other man, where he debauches the wife. A child is born, and, during the course of events, the real head of the family returns. He is overjoyed at finding the child, thinking it is his own. When he learns the truth, dramatic scenes follow in which he claims it, and he and his wife decide to bring it up.

Others with important roles in the cast are Robert Elliott, Frank Lord and Aubrey Beattie.

"The Law that Failed"

Unusual Story in Five-Reel Drama Produced by Apollo For Art Dramas—Edward Ellis and Alma Hanlon Featured.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

VIEWED in its entirety, "The Law That Failed," a five-reel drama produced by Apollo Pictures, Inc., for the Art Dramas program, is an ordinarily good program offering. That the picture is not a far better photoplay is due solely to an apparent lack of care in the visualization of the story by Louis Reeves Harrison. The story is unusual and interesting, and contains several psychological possibilities that have been neglected in the filming. Despite the several weaknesses in production, however, interest is sustained throughout, and the author proves his thesis—that, although a man be guilty of murder, he must, according to New York State law, at least, be freed unless the corpus delicti be established; that is, unless the prosecution legally proves the murdered person's death.

Mystery is the element in the picture that concentrates the attention on the screen, but the mystery-tension is not entirely let down at the finish—the spectator carries away a feeling that everything has not been satisfactorily explained. This is due in a large measure to the fact that the hiding of the murdered woman's body is not registered clearly and forcefully enough. The general tone of the picture is in harmony with its ending, which registers the suicide of the man guilty of the murder of the woman who was his nemesis.

The players have been well selected, both as to type and ability. Edward Ellis plays his part with a commendable precision and restraint. Alma Hanlon, whose part is secondary to that of the leading character, is entirely satisfactory. Florence Ridgely directed, and the film is presented by Harry Raver.

"The Law of the North"

Picturesque Five-Reel Edison Photoplay of the Northwest Mounted Police Has Well Handled Plot and a Finely Balanced Cast.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE production of "The Law of the North," a five-reel photoplay dealing with the Northwest Mounted Police, reflects great credit upon the Edison company. The plot is not startlingly new, but the author, Edward H. Griffith, has handled his material skillfully, and for the most part made use of incidents of a plausible sort. The character drawing is particularly effective, and the entire story has been given settings admirably suited to the locale—winter scenes in the Canadian Northwest.

The man who is made to feel the weight of the law north of Fifty-three is the right Honorable Reginald Annesley, factor of Keewatin Trading Post. He wins the love of Marie Beaubin, a half-breed, and shoots her when she threatens to interfere with his wooing of the daughter of a lieutenant in the Mounted Police. Corporal John Emerson is his rival for the hand of the white girl, and Annesley manages to implicate the corporal in the murder of Marie. The factor is killed by Scene from "The Law of the North" (Edison).

Ba'tiste, a trapper, who was himself in love with the half-breed, and Emerson marries the lieutenant's daughter. A familiar chain of events, but much enhanced in the telling.

Three members of the cast are featured—Shirley Mason, Pat O'Malley and Richard Tucker. They deserve the distinction. Shirley Mason has the personality and the artistic skill to make Edith Graham lovable and attractive. Her indications of deep feeling always ring true. Pat O'Malley as Corporal Emerson looks and acts like the real article, and Richard Tucker plays the well-bred blackguard with the same fidelity to the original. Charles Sutton as Graham, Sally Crute as Marie, Fred Jones as Pierre, and Robert Keggerris as Ba'tiste complete a cast that is without one weak point.

"Max Wants a Divorce"

Max Linder Two-Reel Comedy Made by Essanay Is Full of Mirth—K-E-S-E Release.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE latest Max Linder comedy, "Max Wants a Divorce," is a good illustration of how easy it is to bear the other fellow's troubles. Max is forced to choose between losing his newly wedded wife and a fortune. He hits upon a brilliant scheme: He will give his wife grounds for a divorce, secure the money and then make his ex-wife Mrs. Linder again. He goes through any amount of trouble in helping her to get the necessary evidence, only to find that it is all a mistake on the part of a stupid lawyer—the money and the wife are both to be his. Max's mental anguish and bodily mishaps before he learns the truth will weigh down no one but himself. Whatever his own feelings, the spectator will experience nothing but a desire to smile, or grin, or laugh out loud, according to his nature. The speedy French comedian never worked faster nor more amusingly than in "Max Wants a Divorce," and the Essanay company has surrounded him with every aid to a correct screen production.

Variety in Five Weeks' Mutuals

Wide Number of Subjects and Stars in Forthcoming Features From Various Studios.

DRAMAS ranging from the grim desperation of "Motherhood," Marjorie Rambeau's war picture, to the pastoral Cinderella-sweet tale of "Sunny Jane," featuring Jackie Saunders, are embraced in the Mutual Film Corporation's schedule for the next five weeks.

In this period Miss Saunders and Nance O'Neil are making their first appearance in pictures released through the Mutual. Miss O'Neil will appear in two big pictures, Miss Saunders in a series of six. These Mutual productions in the order of their releases are:

"Motherhood," March 26. This production features Marjorie Rambeau in an adaptation of the novel under the same title by Frederick Arnold Kummer. It is the second production which Miss Rambeau has made for the screen, and shows her in the character of a French peasant living in a border town during the war.

"Sunny Jane," March 26: Jackie Saunders is introduced as a calico-clothed country girl, full of tricks and happiness. This is a real farm story, full of all kinds of animals and rustic scenes. Sunny Jane also possesses a most vivid imagination and dreams herself a heroine in various periods of history.

"The Devil's Assistant," April 2: Margarita Fischer plays the lead in this drama, which is a gripping preachment against the drug evil and shows the terrible tortures which the victims of this habit undergo.

"Mrs. Balfame," April 9: Nance O'Neil appears in this adaptation of Gertrude Atherton's novel. This is the first of this author's work to reach the screen.

"High Play," April 9: William Russell has in this five-reel production just the role which is best suited to his talent. It is a man's part, played in a man's way, and depicts a strong character with straight, clean principles.

"The Single Code," April 16: Crane Wilbur is the author, director and star of this production, which is the second of his series of five-part productions, "The Morals of Men." These pictures advocate that there should be but one code which applies equally to the man and the woman.

"Environment," April 16: Mary Miles Minter appears as the sensitive daughter of the town drunkard. The play is laid in a typical New England town and centers around the life of these simple people.

"The Debt," April 23: Marjorie Rambeau is presented in her third production for Mutual. This is an adaptation of a foreign success and portrays Miss Rambeau in an entirely different role from those depicted in her first and second productions.

"The Wildcat," April 23: Jackie Saunders has here another play in which she is allowed to play just the sort of role in which she delights—that of a ragged, hoydenish girl. The photoplay was written by H. O. Stechhan.

Next McClure Picture

Frederick L. Collins Announces New Series, to Follow "Seven Deadly Sins"; Will Consist of Nine Five-Reel Dramas, Divided Into Three Groups.

FREDERICK L. COLLINS, president of McClure Pictures, announces that "Seven Deadly Sins," the series of seven five-reel features now being released through the Triangle Distributing Corporation, will be followed immediately by a new series in a slightly different form.

The next McClure production is to consist of nine big photoplays connected as are "Seven Deadly Sins." This series will be divided into three groups of three dramas each, with the stories so told that an exhibitor who cannot devote nine consecutive weeks to the showing of the series will be able to book the nine plays and show them in three different periods, as best suits his program.

As in "Seven Deadly Sins," Shirley Mason, who has been firmly established as a star of great charm and box office value, will appear in the new series. Other stars of nation-wide reputation will be engaged for the next McClure production, which will be staged by the best directors that can be found.

Mr. Collins is now in Los Angeles negotiating for actors and directors for his new companies, and expects to announce within a few days that McClure Pictures has obtained a Los Angeles studio for winter work.

Most of the McClure Pictures will be made in New York, except scenery for exteriors in the first plays in the new series. Only temporary arrangements will be made in Los Angeles for the spring work, but next fall Mr. Collins expects to have a permanent studio established there for producing throughout the winter.

The new McClure plan of production calls for at least twelve features a year.

The title of the new nine-play series and the themes of the stories will be announced by Mr. Collins when he returns from Los Angeles.

On this trip to Los Angeles, Mr. Collins stopped in a number of cities to confer with exhibitors and to study the motion picture situation, that he might more accurately give the exhibitors just what they want.

MARY PICKFORD II ENTERS THE FILMS.

Mary Pickford Rapp, better known as "Mary Pickford the second," who is Lottie Pickford's small daughter and a niece of the famous Artcraft star, is having interesting times planned for her by aunty. Moving pictures have been taken of practically all the events of her little life. They have her in all sorts of baby poses, crying, laughing, being perambulated to important events, and in all sorts of interesting adventures with various members of the screen and stage. The reels are to be carefully put away, and they will be presented to Mary II on her twelfth birthday.

CHANGE IN O. HENRY STORIES RELEASE.

The General Film Company announces that there has been a slight change in the order of distribution of the O. Henry series. The first subject will be "The Third Ingredient," and following in the release order are "Friends of San Rosario," "The Marionettes," "Past One at Rooney's" and "The Gifts of the Magi."

Comments on the Films

EXCLUSIVELY BY OUR OWN STAFF

General Film Company.

THE MYSTERY OF THE BURNING FREIGHT (Kalem).—An interesting story and several good thrills are contained in this number of the "A Daughter of Daring" series. Helen Gibson leaps from the back of a horse to a speeding freight train. Later she climbs hand over hand across a burning freight car in the wild train. She climbs over a rope that she has thrown across to bridge the space. Her action averts a collision. A review is printed in another column of this issue.

EVERYBODY WAS SATISFIED (Selig).—A comedy reel of fair strength. Through a series of circumstances a tramp and a wealthy man both meet women of their choice. Through the plottings of a fortune teller, the tramp proposes to the first woman he meets. The wealthy man, whom the fortune teller thought the tramp was, falls in love with the fortune teller's sister. In the cast are John Lancaster, William Scott, William Hutchinson, Irene Wallace and Lillian Leighton. Written by O. A. Nelson.

THE DEADLY DOUGHNUT (Kalem).—Ham and Bud are seen as bakers in this comedy reel and they have a lot of slapstick fun with dough. Their boss invents a holeless doughnut, but a villain wants to steal the plans. Ham and Bud endeavor to make some holeless doughnuts, but their product is an explosive biscuit. They use one of the deadly doughnuts in rescuing the boss from a locked vault. The number is fair. Henry Murdoch is also in the cast. Directed by A. Santell.

CANIMATED NOOZ PICTORIAL NO. 27 (Essanay).—A split reel, embracing animated cartoons burlesqueing the news and magazine features and educational-scenic. The cartoon section is fairly funny. The educational-scenic explains interestingly on the screen in well-photographed pictures the vegetation that is produced on the once arid plains of Alberta, Canada.

THE SECRET OF THE BORGIAS (Kalem).—This release does not measure up to the standard set by previous releases of the "Grant, Police Reporter" series. The story is only fairly interesting and George Larkin's stunt is only mildly thrilling. His stunt of climbing across an areaway between two office buildings on a steel girder is not as thrilling as many of his previous stunts. The story tells of the murder of a wealthy man by means of poisoned needles in a Borgian vase. In the cast with George Larkin are Ollie Kirkby, Cyril Courtney, Director Robert Ellis and Harry Gordon. Story by Robert Welles Ritchie.

General Film Company Specials.

THE SKELETON CANYON RAID (Kalem).—A very gobd Western number is this two-reel episode of "The American Girl" series. There is much spectacular horsemanship seen and the Western backgrounds show up to good advantage. The action is fast, there is lots of gun fighting and, all in all, the release is an exciting one of its type. The story tells of the frustration of the Kings and their lieutenant of a band of rustlers. Marin Sais plays the lead. A review is printed in another column.

THE FINISH (Essanay).—One of the "Black Cat" features. Marbie Bardine and Ernest Maupain are seen in a two-reel offering with a surprise finish. A suspicious husband has his wife followed. He learns that she is intimate with another man. He surprises them in each others' arms. The interloper kills himself and the wife is about to do the same when the scenery is knocked down and it is developed that it is only a "movie."

THE WIFELESS HUSBAND (Essanay).—A unit of the "Is Marriage Sacred?" series. This two-reel number is an offering of fair strength. It treats of that phase of married life in which the wife pays more attention to outside interests than to her home. The wife and her mother engage in a realty business, neglecting their homes. The scheme is blocked by a counter-scheme of the husbands, and the wives go home happy. The cast consists of Marguerite Clayton, Edward Arnold, Lillian Drew, Sydney Ainsworth and Thomas Commerford.

THE THIRD INGREDIENT (Broadway Star Feature).—A fine story, adapted from one of O. Henry's. Alice Mann and Frank Glendon have the leading roles. Like all of these O. Henry's stories being made at the Vitagraph studio it is in two reels. The subject was reviewed on March 31.

PAST ONE AT ROONEY'S (Broadway Star Features).—An O. Henry story of the east side, strong in drama and in presentation. It was reviewed on March 31.

FRIENDS IN SAN ROSARIO (Broadway Star Features).—An adaptation from the well-known tale by O. Henry. It is a story of the remarkable friendship of two men, and contains genuine interest. It was reviewed on March 31.

THE DEVIL'S BAIT (Balboa-Fortune Photoplays).—Ruth Roland and William Conklin are featured on this four-reel screen drama, written by William M. Fitchey. The plot is founded on a magazine story, and tells of the evil that results from a struggle for the possession of a ruby of great value. The picture is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

THE YELLOW BULLET (Balboa-Fortune Photoplays).—A story of adventure by William H. Lippert, this four-reel screen play is filled with physical action, and demands strenuous work from the cast headed by Robyn Adair. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Artcraft Pictures Corporation.

BROADWAY JONES, March 26.—The entrance of George M. Cohan into the moving picture field is a great success from every point of view. "Broadway Jones" and its author fit into their new work perfectly. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Art Dramas, Inc.

A MAN AND THE WOMAN (U. S. Amusement Co.), March 22.—Edith Hallor, Leslie Austen and Kirke Brown head the cast of this five-reel photoplay founded on a novel by Emile Zola. The picture tells a story of a decided French flavor, and is fairly well played. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

THE LAW THAT FAILED (Apollo), March 29.—An ordinarily good five-reel drama. The story, by Louis Reeves Harrison, is unusual and interesting, but it has been weakened somewhat in its screen treatment. The film proves that, although a man be guilty of murder, he must, under New York law, be freed unless the State legally establish the murdered person's death. A longer review may be found in the review columns.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

THE PULSE OF LIFE, April 9.—A mediocre story has been given beautiful presentation in this five-reel drama, in which Wedgewood Nowell and Gypsy Harte are featured. The story tells of a girl who has been brought to New York by a wealthy artist and who meets with a love affair in Bohemia. There are some beautiful photographed sea scenes in the picture. The photography and production details are the things that make the picture at all worth while. A longer review is printed in the review columns.

E. I. S. Motion Picture Corp.

TROOPER 44 (E. I. S. Motion Picture Corp).—The Pennsylvania Mounted Police are utilized to advantage in this five-reel melodrama. George Soule Spencer and June Daye are starred. Its story is better than its production. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Fox Film Corporation.

THE BLUE STREAK (Fox), March 19.—William Nigh is the author, director and joint star of this five-reel western drama, Violet Palmer sharing acting honors with the author-director. The picture is unusual in plot, and has been carefully produced. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

THE MORE EXCELLENT WAY, March 26.—A meritorious five-reel problem photoplay in which Anita Stewart and Charles Richman are featured. The production will appeal strongly to those who like forcefully presented domestic drama. A review is printed on another page of this issue.

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay, Inc.

THE LAW OF THE NORTH (Edison), April 2.—There are many excellent features in this five-reel photoplay of the Canadian Northwest. The plot is interesting, the photography splendid and the cast, in which Pat O'Malley, Richard Tucker and Shirley Mason are featured, up to the mark. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

THE TRUFFLERS (Essanay), April 9.—Adapted from Samuel Merwin's novel and directed by Fred E. Wright, and played by an excellent cast, which includes Miss Nell Craig, Sydney Ainsworth, Ernest Maupain, Richard C. Travers, Patrick Calhoun, Harry Dunkinson and John Cossar. An extended review appears on another page in this issue.

MAX WANTS A DIVORCE (Essanay).—The fun in this two-reel Max Linder comedy is generous in quantity, the subject being well suited to the French actor's style. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Metro Pictures Corporation

THE WAITING SOUL (Popular Plays and Players), April 2.—A five-reel drama in which Mme. Petrova is starred. The production is only average. It is not a film suitable for children, although there is nothing offensive in it. It tells of a once-unchaste woman's fears and sacrifice of herself when, after marriage, she realizes that she is about to become a mother. Reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

LOCKED OUT (Metro-Drew), March 12.—An entertaining domestic comedy with the Sydney Drews getting over considerable subtle humor. The subtitles are written in rollicking jingles and add to the amusement of the spectator. The story tells of how hubby was locked out when he thought his wife had gone to her mother's. The story was written by Blanche Wood.

Mutual Film Corporation

MUTUAL TOURS AROUND THE WORLD, NO. 20 (Gaumont), March 20.—The subjects covered in this issue are "Montenegro," "The Island of Guernsey," and "Cintra, Portugal." These subjects are well illustrated and contain interesting information.

MUTUAL WEEKLY (Gaumont), March 21.—Interesting items of this issue are Somewhere-in-France; monster balloons for observing the movements of the enemy and gas making machines for inflating the bags; Sun Dance celebration at Palm Beach, Fla.; forest giants for ship masts, at New Orleans, La.; new sea sled for rescuing aviators; and the radio station at San Diego, Cal., placed under guard.

REEL LIFE NO. 47 (Gaumont), March 22.—In this issue the subjects chosen for illustration are "Making Food Cheaper," "A Home Made Motor Sled," "Artificial Exercises," "A Winter Pageant," "Pineapples Under Glass" and "A Snail Race Under Water." Some of these subjects are well illustrated, especially "Making Food Cheaper" and "Pineapples Under Glass," while "A Home-Made Motor Sled" is too brief to be interesting.

A STUDIO STAMPEDE (Vogue), March 24.—A farce comedy number that will be found extremely amusing to the ordinary audience. It might not, however, please a high class audience, and at times becomes monotonous because of a sameness of action. The principal portion of the picture represents the happenings in a certain moving picture studio where the chief comedian wins his way because of a roll of bills which he holds, and after ensconsing himself near the dressing room of the woman he loves, he is shorn of his money and kicked out. Some amusing action takes place near the close of the picture.

MOTHERHOOD (Powell-Mutual), March 26.—A five-reel number, adapted by Clara S. Beranger from a story by Frederick Arnold Kummer. It features Marjorie Rambeau, Frank Lord, Robert Elliott, Paul Everton, Aubrey Beattie and others. This is a powerful visualization of the horrors of war, most of the story taking place in two small villages in Europe along the fighting lines. It pictures the way in which war and drink so brutalize the nature of a man that he forgets his own family and despoils an enemy home. The opening scenes picture quiet family life, accentuating the grim effect of the later developments. The presentation is thought-provoking and forceful in spite of certain poor make-ups and studio sets.

Paramount Pictures Corporation

THE SPIRIT OF ROMANCE (Pallas), March 22.—A pretty picture, not strong dramatically, but one that should make an excellent matinee subject. Vivian Martin has the lead, and prominent in her support is Herbert Standing. The production is reviewed in another column.

THE BOTTLE IMP (Lasky), March 26.—A well-produced adaptation by Charles Maigne of the story by Robert Louis Stevenson. Sessue Hayakawa, the skilled Japanese actor, is featured, and he is given excellent support, especially by Lehua Waipahu. The theme is of the fanciful, magical sort, and will have interest for those who may find illusion in this class of pictures. It is reviewed in another column.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

CALIFORNIA (Combitone), March 18.—The first number of the Combitone pictures shows several of California's celebrated mountains, the Lowe observatory and the cities of Santa Barbara and Pasadena.

KATZENJAMMER KIDS (International), April 1.—"The Captain Goes a Flivvering," an amusing cartoon comedy with the celebrated Katzenjammers, and "From Bagnio to Manila," scenes in the Philippines, share this reel.

KIDNAPPED (Astra), April 8.—There is a double kidnapping in the fourth number of "Mystery of the Double Cross" serial and other existing incidents. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

MAYBLOSSOM (Astra), April 8.—The entire five reels of this picture is beautifully hand colored. The scenes take place in the South before the war and the story is a bit of old-time romance. Pearl White is seen in a different character from the ones she usually plays. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

MAX AND THE FAIR M. D. (Pathe), April 8.—A one-reel Max Linder comedy made in France, the subject is very amusing. Max and his company play with their usual spirit.

FLORENCE ROSE FASHIONS (Pathe), April 8.—"The Height of Fashion is the name of number 26; the number makes good its title. "Picture Postal Cards," scenes of life in Japan, is on the same reel.

ARIZONA (Combitone), April 8.—Number 4 of the Combitone pictures is devoted to the state of Arizona and shows, among other famous localities the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. The wonderful color effects are brought out clearly.

Universal Film Mfg. Company

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 64 (Universal), March 21.—Tornado scenes in Indiana, California speedway events, ball players in training, ice floes in Lake Michigan and war sidelights are among the interesting features included in this number.

NABBING A NOBLE (L-KO), April 4.—A comic number featuring Phil Dunham as Count Notta Jit, who turns out to be valet to the real count. The fake wedding at the close is a funny feature and is followed by a lively chase.

THE CARELESS COP (Joker), April 4.—A knockabout comedy, by Jack Cunningham, featuring Wm. Franey, Gale Henry, Lillian Peacock and Milburne Moranti. Franey plays the part of a "bonehead" cop in good style, and Gale appears as a lovelorn slavey. The action is characteristic and gets up considerable humor.

A BOOB FOR LUCK (Joker), April 7.—This excellent character comedy, by Jack Cunningham, features Gale Henry, Wm. Franey, Lillian Peacock and Milburne Moranti. The wife sells her husband's pants to a junk dealer, not knowing there is a lucky lottery ticket in one pocket. The husband's efforts to regain the trousers bring on some very laughable situations of the knockabout type.

UNDER THE BED (Nestor), April 9.—A comedy, by Eddie Lyons, featuring the author, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts. Two crooks invade the home of a young man about to be married. One pretends to be dead and the other makes the groom believe he killed him the night before while on a spree. Some amusing situations follow. The number has plenty of plot and proves quite enjoyable.

Universal Film Mfg. Company Special

DIPPY DAN'S DOINGS (L-KO), March 28.—Dan Russell is featured in this characteristic number as a taxi driver who is addicted to both speeding and flirting. His affair with the judge's wife leads to all sorts of trouble. The humor in this is but fairly strong. The chase feature at the close is one of the best of the kind shown in a long while, bringing the number to a lively finish.

THE BRONZE BRIDE (Red Feather), April 2.—A five-reel number, written by Maude Grange and W. B. Pearson and directed by Henry McRae. This tells the familiar story of a white man who marries an Indian girl and the difficulties which follow their return to civilization. Their child, a little boy, played by Frankie Lee, brings about an adjustment of all difficulties in an acceptable manner. While the main incidents of the plot have been used in various ways, the production is raised above the average by good acting, careful development and some very picturesque outdoor settings. Claire McDowell, Frank Mayo, Charles H. Mailles and Eddie Polo have important roles. A pleasing subject.

THE STAR WITNESS (Laemmle), April 4.—A two-reel subject by Grant Carpenter, featuring Lee Hill, Ernie Shield, Mina Cunard and Elizabeth Janes. The father, in charge of the shipping department of a big store, is accused of stealing some shoes and a doll for his little girl. The latter testifies in court that she found them and clears her father. A nice little story of the heart interest type, quite well presented.

SOMEBODY LIED (Victor), April 5.—A two-reel subject, by E. M. Ingleton, featuring Harry Carter, Priscilla Dean and Virginia Lee. The former plays the part of a "perfect husband," who has no bad habits, his wife believes. The night she goes to a masquerade ball he follows and then visits a gambling house, which is raided. He upbraids his wife for flirting at the ball and she then forgives him for his transgressions. This is presented quite acceptably and, while not particularly new in plot, proves entertaining.

THE MAN IN THE TRUNK (Imp), April 6.—No. 7 of "The Perils of the Secret Service" series. In this number Huntley is held as a prisoner in Mexico. Norroy and the girl go to his rescue. The detective makes up as the governor, whom he has made a captive, and succeeds in releasing his assistant in a dramatic manner. A clean-cut, well-developed number, strong in presentation.

BURNING SILENCE (Bison), April 7.—This is essentially a picture of men, and a strong two-part subject it is, because of a plausibly developed and really interesting plot and because of admirable characterizations contributed by George Pearce, James Farley and others. Practically all of the scenes are laid in or near a camp of forest rangers. There is plenty of dramatic conflict leading up to a stirring climax. These two reels thoroughly deserve a showing.

Selznick Pictures

THE ETERNAL SIN (Selznick), March.—A six-reel version of Victor Hugo's tragedy, "Lucretia Borgia," this picture, directed by Herbert Brenon, is a fine example of the scenic possibilities of the screen. The story is powerful and is acted with skill by Florence Reed and the supporting company. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Triangle Film Corporation

HER CIRCUS KNIGHT (Mack Sennett Keystone), March 18.—An amusing farce of the melodramatic kind of hair-raising incident, lacking in continuity, but amusing enough in spite of structural defects to entertain almost any audience.

A WOMAN'S AWAKENING (Fine Arts), March 25.—A true motion picture story by Frank E. Woods, depicting the gradual decadence of a pure girl of country breeding in the false environment of city dissipation with her eventual restoration to the wholesome and normal life through love of the right man. Good on any program.

HER FATHER'S KEEPER (Triangle Productions), April 1.—A five-part subject made in the east in which Irene Howley has the leading role. The subject is not characterized by any particular strength. It was reviewed in the issue of March 31.

THE DARK ROAD (Kay-Bee), April 1.—A strong but repellant picture. As was pointed out in a review printed on March 31 the showing at this time of a subject in which the chief figure is a most offensively unfaithful wife of an army officer will give offense and pain, too, in all parts of the country.

World Pictures.

MAN'S WOMAN, Apirl 2.—Ethel Clayton heads the cast of this five-reel photoplay, which is rather old-fashioned in theme, but has a strong human appeal. The production is well done. The picture is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Miscellaneous

20,000 FEATS UNDER THE SEA (A. Kay).—An amusing burlesque on the Jules Verne novel, presented in the shape of an 800-foot animated cartoon. The drawings for this picture were made by Paul Terry and will please not only adults but children. In fact this will be found an unusually good number for the children's program. The cartoon follows the fortunes of an old sea pirate who lives in a barrel boat following the profession of sinking ships and eating raw fish. The inhabitants of the sea are also shown at play and intent on business. One of the most amusing points in the picture shows the daughter of the pirate frolicking with her only playmates, elephants and lions. A full review of the picture appears elsewhere.

THE FATED HOUR (Cines), April.—This is a six-reel melodrama made in Europe. The production has many points of excellence, and is especially commendable for the effects obtained through careful illumination and fine photography. The story treats of the sorrows of two sisters of noble birth, whose lovers play them false. One of them, after having eloped and having been left stranded by her husband, becomes an actress, and later avenges her sister, who has committed suicide, causing the man in the case to do likewise. A full review of the production will be found elsewhere.

A Busy Week for Kalem

Marin Sais, Helen Gibson, George Larkin and Hammond Bud Are the Topliners—In Fact, All of the Kalem Productions Show Evidence of Careful Direction.

"THE Skeleton Canyon Raid" is the title the Kalem Company announces for the sixth episode, in two parts, of its successful series, "The American Girl," featuring Miss Marin Sais. Director Jas. W. Horne had his hands full with this picture. Had it not been for the riding skill of his cast, headed by Miss Marin Sais, it is doubtful if the production would ever have been completed.

Frederick R. Beechdolt's story has the Roger King of the series and his daughter Madge take a number of fine horses through Skeleton Canyon to the cavalry post on the other side of the range. Horne secured about twenty-five lively horses that had been on pasture for several months and carefully maneuvered them into position for the required scenes. Again and again they would stampede before the cameraman could "get set." With remarkable patience the company would round them up for another try, but it was the hardest kind of work and everybody heaved a sigh of relief when the canyon scenes were finished.

In "The Mystery of the Burning Freight" and "The Lone Point Feud," fifth and sixth episodes of "A Daughter of Daring" series, with Helen Gibson in the featured parts. Both episodes are framed by picturesque backgrounds of great natural scenic beauty and the director has handled his stories in masterly style.

Helen's stunt in "The Mystery of the Burning Freight" required an unusual amount of nerve. She faces a sheet of flame arising from burning refuse left in the bottom of a coal car sandwiched in between two box cars. How she crosses this gulf of flames after lassoing the brakerod of the car ahead, finally reaching the cab of the runaway engine, furnishes a real thrill.

In "The Lone Point Feud" she hangs from a bridge arching over the railroad right of way and by timing her drop perfectly lands in the tender of the speeding engine in time to warn the engineer of grave peril ahead.

The current adventure of "Grant, Police Reporter," which is called "The Secret of the Borgias," is a series of well planned surprises. Novelties in plot and direction have been the keynote of this entire series, but this next week's episode stands out in bold relief. George Larkin, as the intrepid reporter, discovers a way of trapping some clever schemers who cause the death of a wealthy antique collector with a poisoned vase.

An exceptionally good Ham comedy rounds out the Kalem program for next week. By double exposure methods Ham and Bud are made to do battle with themselves. Al Santell both wrote and directed "Doubles and Troubles."

Co-Operative Publicity for "God's Man"

Frohman Amusement Corporation Announces Advertising Will Aim to Aid Buyers.

PROMPTED by a belief in the justice of the contention of territorial rights buyers that there is a lack of co-operation between the exchange man and manufacturer in the selling and exploitation of motion picture productions, The Frohman Amusement Corporation issues the following statement:

"We have read with no little concern during the past two weeks several articles emanating from territorial rights buyers of motion pictures, and the impression which has been conveyed to this organization has been indeed vivid. As a result this organization has for the past few weeks been in active correspondence and consultation with its clientele, requesting suggestions for the correction of these errors, and in reply to queries we have been requested by the buying personnel to lend our attention first to the manner and method of advertising our productions. There has been a generous request that consideration be given to the advertising of a production at the time when it will do a material good to exchange men and producer alike—at that time when the production has been sold and is ready for its bookings. It is a just claim indeed and will have its application, at least from this office.

"Beginning with the release of our next production, 'God's Man,' in which H. B. Warner makes his bow under the Frohman banner, we will inaugurate a radically different style of advertising schedule, which we conscientiously believe is in part solution to the wants of our buyers.

"We propose with this production and with our productions of the future to give the greater consideration to the aiding of our buyers to market the product after they have paid their money to us. A number of weeks of consistent advertising of our production will, in all instances, be our rule, after the picture has been sold, and we will endeavor to prepare this style of advertising of the strength to carry return to the territorial buyer in the form of application for bookings. 'God's Man' will have an advertising equipment of unusual scale, included in which equipment are a number of novel ideas for exhibitors."

COSTLIER PICTURES FROM THANHOUSER.

The recent engagement of Directors Van Dyke Brooke and Emile Chautard presages more elaborate Thanhouser productions, Edwin Thanhouser announces.

"The business done by Pathe on such Thanhouser features as 'Saint, Woman and Devil,' 'The Shine Girl,' 'The World and the Woman' and 'The Vicar of Wakefield' has shown us that the largest profits are in the costlier pictures," said Mr. Thanhouser. "Pictures like the aforementioned play the best theaters in the country, and the production cost, no matter what it is, is well spent. Hereafter there will be no Thanhouser productions whereof the production cost does not come up to a certain figure.

"Nor will our features hold to a five-reel length hereafter. 'The Vicar of Wakefield' is in seven reels. We are just finishing an eight-reel production. We are preparing for a ten-reel production. There will be sumptuous six to ten-reel productions whenever we evolve stories that are big enough.

"The engagement of Messrs. Brooke and Chautard for the producing staff is in line with the new policy."

KERRIGAN EXTENDS TOUR.

J. Warren Kerrigan, the noted screen star, will extend his tour of the United States until June 1. This action is taken because of the numerous requests received from exhibitors in cities not included in the original itinerary, who desire to bring the photoplayer before their patrons. Seventy cities of the Southwest, South and East have been visited by Kerrigan to date.

The last half of the rearranged schedule includes the following cities: Albany, Troy, Schenectady, Rochester, Buffalo, Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton, Calgary (Canada), Cleveland, Toledo, Chicago, Bloomington, South Bend, New Albany, Louisville, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Omaha, Des Moines, Sioux City, Kansas City, St. Louis, Burlington, Topeka, Denver, Duluth, Salt Lake City, Ogden, Butte, Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma, Vancouver (British Columbia), Portland, Sacramento, Stockton, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Returning to Los Angeles, Kerrigan will immediately start work on the first of his new productions under his own banner.

NEW TITLES FOR TWO ART DRAMAS.

The coming Erbograph feature, the working title of which was "The Dragonfly," will be released on April 5 on Art Dramas program, under the final title of "The Inevitable." And the Apollo picture, formerly known as "Whose Hand?", will be released as "The Great Bradley Mystery," on April 12.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

The entertainment value of a film magazine is gauged by the interest it creates in all classes of spectators. It is the continuous recognition of this fact which makes the Gaumont reel, "Reel Life," such an important factor among the "featurettes" for the Mutual releases. In the fifty-first issue of this Mutual Magazine in Film there is a three hundred foot section devoted to the making of iron pipe which is undoubtedly a welcome picture for every one. Every process is seen from the time the raw ore is put into the great blast furnace until the pipe is threaded, ready for the market.

The American people are noted for "wanting to know."

"Making Iron Pipes" (Gaumont).

It is this inquisitive faculty which is responsible for our great success as a nation of inventors and users of short-cut methods in industry. Hence, anything on the screen which satisfies this "wanting to know" craving will certainly be profitable for the exhibitor who recognizes its value. It is just in this particular that Gaumont's "Reel Life" is such an important part of any program.

As an evidence of the thoroughness with which this policy is carried out by Gaumont, the same issue of "Reel Life" contains a series of views of how wooden legs are made and how to sterilize a cup of water by means of a pocket flashlight. Other pictures equal these in interest and afford that wholesome variety which gives the reel its magazine character. No matter what class of spectators an exhibitor is seeking to attract, he cannot go wrong by showing "Reel Life."

RIGHTS TO "NE'ER DO WELL" GOING FAST.

Since the withdrawal last week of "The Ne'er Do Well" from the V-L-S-E program, Sol L. Lesser, who controls the United States rights on Rex Beach's overwhelming story of the adventures of a young American in Panama, has already closed for a number of important territories, aside from those which his own offices control.

While in Chicago Mr. Lesser closed with Aaron Jones of the Lewis J. Selznick Productions, for Indiana, Illinois and lower Wisconsin. The New England States have been purchased by Louis Mayer, of the Metro Pictures Corporation of New England; Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota and Upper Wisconsin by the Supreme Feature Film Co., of Minneapolis, Minn.; Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky by the Masterpiece Film Attractions, Pittsburgh, Pa.; New York State and Northern New Jersey by Louis J. Selznick; Michigan, by Harry Garson, of Detroit, Mich.; Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana by the De Luxe Feature Film Co., Seattle, Wash.; California, Arizona and Nevada by the All Star Features Distributors, Inc., San Francisco, Cal.

The manner in which shrewd and experienced independent buyers have quickly bought up "The Ne'er Do Well" is a powerful testimonial of the worth of this feature, and Mr. Lesser is confident that before another week has passed every state in the entire country will have been disposed of.

WILLIAMSON BROTHERS ESTABLISH MUSIC DEPARTMENT.

For the first time in the history of the trade, a completely equipped and expertly managed musical department has been embodied as part of the Williamson Brothers organization—The Submarine Film Corporation. The step is taken for the benefit of exhibitors and territorial buyers of the Williamson Brothers' productions.

The department in question will be under the direct personal charge of M. Winkler, of the Carl Fisher Music Publishing House. Mr. Winkler has achieved an enviable reputation in this particular phase of amusement and is recognized as an authority upon the subject of music for motion pictures. In addition to acting as musical editor for several of the foremost trade papers, he has arranged music for such productions as "The Dumb Girl of Portici," "The Ne'er Do Well," "The Common Law," "War Brides," "The Battle Cry of Peace" and many others of like importance. As the first step in the perfection of his organization, Mr. Winkler has engaged the services of M. L. Lake, a composer of exceptional reputation, who is already engaged in preparing the musical themes for the first new production of the Williamson Brothers. In keeping with their plans to do the thing as perfectly as possible, the Williamsons have sent Mr. Lake to their producing headquarters in the Bahamas, where he will be enabled to descend into the photographic chamber at the bottom of the sea and there compose his themes and melodies in the exact environment of the production itself.

"THE WAITING SOUL," WITH MME. PETROVA.

The April 2 release of the Metro Pictures Corporation is "The Waiting Soul," with Mme. Petrova as star, a photodrama of power and fascination written by Marion Short. This production was adapted for the screen by Wallace C. Clifton, directed by Burton L. King, and supervised by Aaron Hoffman, for Popular Plays and Players.

"The Waiting Soul" combines beautiful photography and beautiful surroundings with an unusually strong story. It might be called "a photoplay of conscience." The scene is divided between England and America. One of the representative locations shown is the Ponce de Leon Hotel in St. Augustine, Fla.

The cast supporting Mme. Petrova to interpret "The Waiting Soul" has been carefully chosen. Mahlon Hamilton, who has appeared in numerous Popular Plays and Players productions, has the part of Stewart Brinsley. Roy Pilcher, seen as Captain Duval in "The Black Butterfly," plays Willard Ashbrook. Mrs. Mathilde Brundage, known to all patrons of Metro Wonderplays, is Mrs. Brinsley. Wilfred de Shields has the part of John Hargrove. Wyndham Standing plays Dudley Kent, and Mrs. Lottie Ford, seen with Mabel Taliaferro in "God's Half Acre," is Mrs. Hargrove.

Left to right: the Corsican fisherman, his brother the shepherd, the same brother six years later in Paris and a few months later imprisoned for murder; last, a detective disguised to pass for the shepherd in Paris.

"WHOSE WIFE?" GAIL KANE'S MUTUAL DEBUT.

Gail Kane, one of Mutual's latest stellar acquisitions, has completed her first production at the American studio in Los Angeles. The first subject chosen for Miss Kane, and in which she will make her debut as a Mutualite, is "Whose Wife?" an adaptation of the story by Cecil Henry Bullivant. This is a story which is peculiarly fitted to Miss Kane and gives her every opportunity to show the exceptional work of which she is capable.

Every assistance has been given Miss Kane in making her productions come up to the high standard she has set for them. As her director, was chosen Rollin S. Sturgeon, one of the greatest motion picture producers in the world. Mr. Sturgeon has gained an enviable name for himself as a director, and there are three qualities which stand out boldly in his work—daring in conception, execution and logic.

Worthy support has also been afforded Miss Kane in her company of players. Edward Peil plays opposite the star, and others in the company include Elizabeth Taylor, Harry von Meter, Ethel Ullman, Frank Rickert, Lucille Younge, Robert Klein and Amelia Widen.

GOLDWYN'S THIRD PICTURE IS STARTED.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is making good rapidly on its promise to complete twelve productions before releasing any of its subjects to the public. The first Mae Marsh and Maxine Elliott pictures have been completed, and Miss Marsh, without wasting a day, has gone to work in her second picture, under the direction of John W. Noble.

The most important accession to the Goldwyn ranks in several weeks is Robert Harron, who, leaving California, comes to New York to again play opposite Mae Marsh as her leading man. Other new players who come to Goldwyn to appear in Miss Marsh's second production are William Furey, Edward See, John Charles, W. T. Carlton and Isabel Berwin.

UNIVERSAL TITLES IN SIMPLIFIED SPELLING.

Exhibitors in all parts of the country have expressed their appreciation of the movement of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to adopt simplified spelling in the titles and subtitles of all pictures produced by the company. The idea originated with R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of the Universal, who is firmly convinced that the shorter spelling will meet with the approval of the patrons of motion picture theaters, because it will serve to shorten the length of titles.

"It has been my observation," said Mr. Cochrane, "that one great fault found in motion pictures is poor titling. In rare cases they may be ungrammatical, but in nearly every case they are too long. The exigencies of the story plot may demand a title which is introductory to a great extent. In such cases we find on the screen long sentences with longer words."

Since the announcement was made that the Universal would use simplified spelling several metropolitan newspapers have commented editorially upon it, stamping it as an important step in the progress of the film world.

NOTABLES IN "THE LAW THAT FAILED."

Concerned with the making of "The Law That Failed," an Apollo production on Art Drama program, are three persons who have singly won distinction of an extraordinary degree. These are Alma Hanlon, the leading woman, Edward Ellis, the leading man, and Louis Reeves Harrison, the author.

Mr. Harrison is one of the best known motion picture journalists and a regular writer for the Motion Picture World. Alma Hanlon, who plays the leading role in the production, has appeared in several earlier Art Drama releases, notably "The God of Little Children." Edward Ellis, who plays opposite Miss Hanlon, has won distinction on the speaking stage, in the field of literature, and on the screen.

Margaret Illington Makes Screen Debut

Noted Stage Star Heads Lasky List for April, Which Includes Blanche Sweet, Kathlyn Williams and Theodore Roberts.

INCLUDED in the Lasky productions on the Paramount program during the month of April is the motion picture debut of Margaret Illington in an adaptation of Basil King's well-known novel, "The Inner Shrine."

The advent of Miss Illington on the screen is one of the most notable events of the year, as she is one of the few great actresses of the day who had not previously succumbed to many alluring proposals to become a screen star. The tremendous success which she has won on the stage—gained entirely through her own distinguished talent—assures success for Miss Illington in her new fields of endeavor. Basil King's "The Inner Shrine" is one of the real best sellers of recent years. The adaptation of the story was made by Beatrice de Mille and Leighton Osmon, who have contributed many notable photoplays to Paramount program. The production was staged under the direction of Frank Reicher, whose reputation on the stage has been supplemented by his achievements in the Lasky studio. In the cast supporting Miss Illington there are a number of the most popular players on the Lasky roster, including Elliott Dexter, Hobart Bosworth, Jack Holt and Adele Farrington. "The Inner Shrine" is scheduled for release on April 9.

Fannie Ward in "The School for Husbands," which is to be released on April 6, has a remarkable opportunity to display the versatility for which she is famous. When the story opens she is a distinctly straight-laced, Puritanical little person, with parted hair and formidable eyeglasses, whose priggish costumes and mannerisms are the bane of her gay young husband's existence. To teach him a lesson she blossoms forth as the giddiest of the gay, wearing some of the costumes and jewels which have made the name of Fannie Ward known all over the world. In the supporting cast are such popular players as Jack Dean, Frank Elliott, Mabel Van Buren, Edythe Chapman and James Neill.

F. Hopkinson Smith's tremendously popular novel, "The Tides of Barnegat," which is scheduled for release on the 19th of April, should prove as great a success on the screen as it has in print. The quaintness of Mr. Smith's characters, and his marvelous descriptive powers, together with the real drama and pathos of the story, have furnished the producers with abundant material and one of the most powerful photoplays the Lasky company has produced. Among those in support of Blanche Sweet, the star, are Elliott Dexter, Tom Forman, Harrison Ford, Lillian Leighton and little Billy Jacobs.

The fourth Lasky production for the month is "The Cost of Hatred," in which Kathlyn Williams and Theodore Roberts co-star for the first time. The story was written by Beulah Marie Dix, the celebrated playwright, who has been studying photoplay conditions and requirements at the Lasky studio for several months before attempting to write an original script. George Melford is the director of this production, which is scheduled for release on April 26. The story is international in its scope, opening in the United States and quickly transferring the scene of action to Mexico. Theodore Roberts, who last appeared as the dreamy Middle West lawyer in "The American Consul," plans one of the most forceful characters he has ever delineated upon the sceen in Justus Gray, a man who is embittered against the world because of the elopement of his young wife. Later in life the son of his successful rival falls into his power, and Gray begins a systematic campaign to crush his victim in his wrath. In the cast which supports the co-stars are Tom Forman, Jack W. Johnston, H. B. Carpenter, Charles Ogle, and Lucien Littlefield.

ANGLO FILM CONTRACTS FOR FROHMAN PICTURES.

John Wild, American Representative for Anglo Film Agencies, Limited, of London, England, recently made arrangements with W. L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, whereby all of that concern's output for the next two years will be exploited in the British Isles, India, Burmah, Ceylon and Siam by Bolton-Stewart International Pictures, Limited.

Mr. Wild informs us that Anglo Film Agencies, Ltd., are open to consider the placing of first class features and serials in any part of the world. He also states that he will shortly place on the market here an excellent production of Marie Corelli's "Sorrows of Satan."

NATION-WIDE ADVERTISING FOR KALEM SERIES.

The General Film Company has inaugurated a nation-wide advertising campaign on the two new Kalem series "A Daughter of Daring" featuring Helen Gibson and "The American Girl" with Marin Sais as the star. In every city of any size in the United States, large advertisements on these two series are being placed in the leading dailies together with the list of theaters where they may be seen. Although this campaign has only been running a few weeks, the General Film branches are reporting steadily increasing bookings on the series and exhibitors are unanimous in praise of the campaign and its results as shown in increased patronage.

"BOBBY BUMPS AN OFFICE BOY" (Paramount).

In the course of the boyhood of every healthy young American, it has been estimated that something like "steen" million ideas crop out, and Bobby Bumps, who, as is freely admitted by his parents, relatives and millions of Paramount friends, is a shining example of what a red-blooded American boy really is, is certainly no exception.

In the 60th edition of the Paramount-Bray-Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen, Bobby Bumps decides that the old axiom, "all work and no play," is also applicable when made to read "all play and no work makes Jack a dull boy," and with this sterling thought in mind he hires himself out as an office boy to his doting but very much pestered father.

All goes well and Bobby proves himself to be a conscientious, though somewhat boisterous, assistant. Complications begin to arise, however, when pay day comes around, and reward for his services does not in his opinion measure up to their value.

Of course, no Bobby Bumps cartoon could be really worth while if the ever-faithful Fido were not a part of it, and he can be counted on for no little share in the means used, whereby Bobby finally gets his just reward.

APOLLO BUYS PLAY BY EDWARD ELLIS.

Contracts have just been signed by Harry Raver, president of Apollo Pictures, Inc., whereby a play by Edward Ellis, entitled "Whose Hand," becomes the property of his company for picture purposes. Work on the production has already been started at the Apollo studios in Fort Lee, under the direction of Richard Ridgely. The cast for this picture, which will be released by Art Dramas, Inc., is headed by Alma Hanlon, "America's Magnetic Screen Star," and includes Edward Ellis himself in an important role. Edward Earle, Florence Short and Bigelow Cooper lead in support.

NETTER ACTIVE IN OHIO.

Leon D. Netter of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, has just closed with Col. William N. Selig for the rights for the State of Ohio for Selig's masterpiece, "The Garden of Allah," featuring Helen Ware and Thomas Santschi. Mr. Netter will handle this production along with the many other features that he is now handling through this territory, including "Purity," Julius Steger's "The Libertine" with John Mason, the new de luxe edition of Annette Kellermann in "Neptune's Daughter" and Selig's earlier success, "The Spoilers."

"MAX WANTS A DIVORCE" (Essanay).

Max Linder, the noted European comedian, presents his funniest, inimitable self in this comedy. It is the second of the Essanay-Linder series, following "Max Comes Across." Fate plays a strange trick on Max here. He has just gotten married to a beautiful girl when an uncle dies leaving him $3,000,000 on condition that he remain a bachelor. The problem therefore is for Max to become a bachelor again—to get a divorce

Scene from "Max Wants a Divorce" (Essanay).

—immediately. How Max and his bride perpetrate their plot to secure the fortune presents a sequence of side-splitting situations which follow one another in rapid succession. Max appears to even better advantage here than in "Max Comes Across," perhaps, because the field for the exercise of his artistic talents is much broader. The comedy is absolutely clean and wholesome. It has a screen time of thirty minutes. The Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service is handling the releases.

Mutual Program Week April 2

Margarita Fischer, in "The Devil's Assistant," Heads Week's Offerings—Other Good Subjects.

MARGARITA FISCHER in "The Devil's Assistant," a dramatic picturization of the drug evil, will be released by the Mutual Film Corporation at the top of its schedule for the week of April 2. "The Devil's Assistant" is a six-part production from the Pollard Picture Plays studios at San Diego, made under the supervision of Harry Pollard. While the picture may be classified as a propaganda picture against the drug evil, it is presented in true dramatic narrative form, with a story which does not depend on the drug element for its interest and suspense.

"The Devil's Assistant" abounds in spectacular material, with startling use of storm scenes, a few views of Hades and many handsome interiors.

"Shorty Solves the Wireless Mystery," the twelfth of the stories in which Shorty Hamilton is appearing for Mutual, deals with many subjects which are of interest and form the topic of every-day conversation with the public at this time. This will also be released April 2. The story tells of intercepted wireless messages, of foreign submarines obtaining the dates of the sailing of American vessels, and the picture shows submarines appearing and receiving messages and submerging again.

"Kidnapped" is the fifteenth and final story in "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters" series which Mutual is releasing. It is a strenuous story of a caveman who, when the woman he loves will not do just as he says, kidnaps her and keeps her prisoner on a houseboat. The people who have admired the work of Zena Keefe in the previous "Girl Reporter" stories will be more than delighted with her in this picture when she does some wonderfully clever work in the water.

"The Counterfeit Five," the third of the "Jimmie Dale Alias the Grey Seal" series, will be released on April 6. These stories have raised many arguments among the people seeing them as to whether the good which Jimmie does for the deserving poor counteracts his criminal acts.

The Cub Comedy which goes to the public on April 5 is "The Lady Detective." George Ovey is featured in this picture, as he has been in the last seventy-five Cubs.

The Vogue "laughter," ready April 7, is "Why Ben Bolted." Ben Turpin enacts the principal role in the story, the plot of which hinges on the result of an April fool joke.

The Mutual one-reel topicals, "Mutual Weekly," "Mutual Tours Around the World" and "Reel Life" are program strengtheners.

"Mutual Tours Around the World," released April 3, is of special interest, as it shows two of the three islands in the West Indies recently purchased from Denmark—St. Thomas and St. Croix. First in importance is St. Thomas because at the town of Charlotte Amalia is an impregnable harbor, giving the United States the finest naval base in the West Indies. The small islands in the harbor and the mountain ridge back of the town form a natural protection against storms or hostile fleets.

"Reel Life," ready April 5, is made up of the following topics: "Rubber," showing the cultivation of rubber plants in northern Brazil; "A One-Man Submarine," demonstrating how these small but deadly subsea boats will be operated; "Making Bread the Modern Way," taking the spectators on a trip through the modern bakery; and "Magnetism," a series of simple experiments, showing how magnets are made, what substances have the property of attracting and how the compass operates.

GAUMONTS FOR WEEK OF APRIL 15.

With the Mutual Weekly as the pacemaker, the other single reels produced by the Gaumont Company naturally develop as much timeliness as it is possible for magazine and scenic releases to embody. This is particularly true of the Gaumont pictures shown the week of April 15. The first picture to reach the screen through Mutual is "Tours Around the World" No. 24, April 17. The outstanding picture of this reel is Russian Caucasia.

The recent change of government in Russia has caused that country's affairs to be of absorbing interest. What is going on in the hinterland, how it will accept the change of government, and what its developments may be are pertinent questions. A glimpse of this great undeveloped territory is given in pictures of Russian Caucasia, showing both the country itself and the natives.

Other divisions are given up to Copenhagen, the capital of Denmark, and Salzburg, an ancient town of Austria. For the former the mere mention that the pictures give a comprehensive understanding of the city will suffice. It is interesting to identify Salzburg as the birthplace of Mozart, one of the world's greatest musicians.

The second release of the week comes April 18. This is the Mutual Weekly. The pictures are of events that will not transpire until a few days previous to release date.

"Reel Life," the Mutual Magazine in Film, presents its fifty-first issue April 19. It will contain "New Legs for Soldiers," "Fishing Through the Ice," "A Traveling Dairy," "Making Iron Pipe," "A Vest Pocket Sterilizer" and "A Mock Bull Fight."

STATE RIGHTS WANTED.

United Film Service of Memphis, Tenn., is handling the "Mut and Jeff" cartoons in several Southern states, and is in the market for state right features for Tennessee, Arkansas, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

"Garden of Allah" Selling Fast

New Methods Adopted for Selig Company Prove Successful—Subject Well Received Where Shown.

THOSE who keep close tab on details of the state rights field are commenting on the successful exploitation of William N. Selig's "The Garden of Allah." New methods have been employed in placing this drama on the market and these methods have proved successful, for the Selig company announces that territorial rights for "The Garden of Allah" are being disposed of with unusual rapidity.

The All Star Features Distributors, Sol L. Lesser, president, have announced the purchase of exclusive rights to the States of California, Nevada and Arizona for "The Garden of Allah." The drama, it is announced, will be booked in a manner commensurate with its immensity and artistic worth.

The De Luxe Feature Film Company of Seattle, Wash., through M. Rosenberg, manager, has announced the purchase of the rights for "The Garden of Allah" for the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. This company will also spare no time or expense in presenting the Selig super-picture.

Messrs. Lesser and Rosenberg both claim that the feature "sells on sight" and that the production is one of the most artistic ever released. The famous love story of the Sahara written by Robert Hichens and filmed by the Selig Company features Helen Ware, supported by Thomas Santschi and an all-star cast. Among the most exciting episodes are a real desert sandstorm, the charge of the Bedouins, the forecast of the Sand Diviner, etc.

The Century theater, Indianapolis, Ind., announces "The Garden of Allah" broke all records in that city. S. B. McCormick, manager of the Circle, in a letter to William N. Selig, says in part:

"Inasmuch as the Circle theater has the distinction of giving the screen production of Robert Hichens' romance, "The Garden of Allah," its premiere in America, I feel that you will be interested in its success, both financially and artistically.

"There is a profound depth to this story of a great love that has lent itself to the scope of the screen, and Mr. Campbell's direction has surely made it a drama of majestic beauty, radiant with the color and poetry of the East. Its vivid spectacular scenes, particularly the sand-storm effect, appeals to me as one of the most imposing scenes of the screen. 'The Garden of Allah' was presented at the Circle theater the week beginning December 31 and exceeded by nearly 20,000 admissions any previous attendance record. The press as well as the public were lavish in their praise of the production."

MABEL TALIAFERRO TO WORK ON STAGE.

After having worked two years exclusively as a motion picture star, Mabel Taliaferro has been loaned by the Metro Pictures Corporation to the Shubert Theatrical Enterprises and she will soon be seen on Broadway as the star in a big speaking production.

Her new vehicle will be Hall Caine's "The Woman Thou Gavest Me." Miss Taliaferro, who now is busy rehearsing, expects to open in Boston on April 9.

The Shuberts for the past several months have been trying to get Miss Taliaferro for this production, but her contract with Metro held up the proceedings for some time. After several conferences, affairs were so arranged that the Broadway favorite could once again shine as a star of the speaking stage and at the same time proceed with her work on the screen.

"Miss Taliaferro will be back with us in a very short time, as we have several stirring plays we have prepared for her," said a Metro official.

BLUEBIRDS AT THE RIALTO.

Director S. L. Rothapfel is showing his fourth Bluebird at the New York Rialto this week, offering "The Clock," with Franklyn Farnum and Agnes Vernon the featured players. April 1 the attraction there will be "Even As You and I," a Lois Weber production. While this will not be a Bluebird, it will be a production by a woman who has made many of the best Bluebirds thus far released and a directress who has done more than any one person to bring Bluebirds to their forward state of popularity.

The Rialto will show "A Jewel in Pawn," another selection from the Bluebird program, on April 15, with Ella Hall the star and Walter Belasco and Antrim Short featured in her support. "The Clock" has been set for April 30 on the program and "A Jewel in Pawn" for April 16 in territory outside of Greater New York. It is said that Director Rothapfel has viewed other Bluebirds, carrying a likelihood of the Rialto showing them.

NEW STATE RIGHT SUBJECT.

The six-reel feature, "Hell Hath No Fury ——," produced by the author, James A. Stiles, for the Anchor Films, of Freeport, N. Y., has been completed and is now being offered state rights buyers. The director was Charles E. Bartlett and the scenes were filmed in Los Angeles, Santa Cruz, Big Bear Valley and Pasadena, Cal. The cast includes Melbourne MacDowell, Joseph King, Robert Warwick, Reeves Eason, Cora Drew, Corrinne Johnson and Grace Davison.

Famous Players April Releases

Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Marie Doro and Lou-Tellegen in the Month's Subjects.

MARGUERITE CLARK, Pauline Frederick, Marie Doro and Lou-Tellegen are the four stars who will appear in Famous Players productions on the Paramount program during the month of April, making one of the most important stellar aggregations ever announced by any one producer during a single month.

Following her triumphant appearance in "Snow White" and "The Fortunes of Fifi," Marguerite Clark will star in "The Valentine Girl," which is scheduled for release on April 16. In "The Valentine Girl" Miss Clark plays one of the child parts which have made her famous upon the screen. The story is a peculiar mixture of light fantasy and romance and powerful drama. The little Valentine Girl believes in all the lovely little fictions of life, and her one ambition is to see her father, a privilege which has always been denied her. When her wish is finally granted she discovers that the man who has been the idol of her dreams is a professional gambler and crook.

Frank Losee, who has done notable work in Famous Players productions, plays the role of the father. Others in the cast are Richard Barthelmess, Edith Campbell Walker, Adolph Menjou, Katharine Adams and Maggie Holloway Fisher. The production is staged under the direction of J. Searle Dawley.

On April 12 Marie Doro makes her first appearance on the screen since her transfer from the Lasky studio to the Famous Players headquarters in New York. "Heart's Desire," which was written for Miss Doro by Eve Unsell, is the story of a flower girl in Brittany whose loyalty and fortitude during a time of riot and rebellion against the hereditary owner of the island upon which she lives brings her a richly deserved reward. Among those in support of Miss Doro are Mario Majeroni, Albert Roscoe, Jean Jacques Gauthier, Helen Dahl, Harry Lee and Gertrude Norman.

On April 23 Lou-Tellegen makes his last appearance on the screen, arrangements having been completed for Mr. Tellegen's becoming a director on the staff of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company. "The Long Trail," written by Eve Unsell, in which Mr. Tellegen stars with Mary Fuller, the popular motion picture star who makes her first appearance on the Paramount program in this picture, is a story of the Canadian Northwest. Mr. Tellegen appears in the role of a French-Canadian trapper, and Miss Fuller appears as a society girl whom fortune places at the tender mercy of this cavalier of the woods. Among those in the cast are Winnifred Allen, Franklin Woodruff, Ferdinand Tidmarsh and Sidney Bracey.

On the last day of the month Pauline Frederick stars in "Sleeping Fires," an original photoplay. After Miss Frederick's success in "Sapho," it is interesting to note that the character which she portrays in "Sleeping Fires" is the direct antithesis of the heroine of the celebrated Daudet story. Zelma Bryce is the wife of a wealthy manufacturer who has tired of her and does everything in his power to banish her from his life. The sufferings of mind and body endured by Mrs. Bryce form the plot of the story, which was directed by Hugh Ford, the director of several of Miss Frederick's biggest photoplay successes. Thomas Meighan and John Sainpolis, both of whom did successful work in "Sapho," are members of the cast of "Sleeping Fires." The cast also includes Helen Dahl, Joseph Smiley and others of equal note.

HEFFRON FINISHING "THE PLANTER."

Director Thomas N. Heffron and the cast of the Nevada Motion Picture's twelve-reel production, "The Planter," in which Tyrone Power is starring, are now in Nevada filming the snow scenes. The company will probably be there for a couple of weeks, as some very spectacular effects are demanded in the story, and some unusual lighting and photographic results are also to be attempted.

The story of "The Planter" covers a wide range of territory, and, in constructing the scenario, it has been handled in such a way as to give the widest possible variety of settings and atmosphere. During the course of the story, the actors go from deep snow in the dead of winter to the most intense heat of the tropics. At other times they are transferred to the beautiful blossom time of the New England States; again they are on the deep sea, and later endure all the spectacular excitement and trails of a most intense rain and electrical storm.

It is claimed that when the picture is finished it will contain the widest range of exterior settings and seasonal environments of any picture ever produced.

SHERMAN-ELLIOTT CHICAGO OFFICE.

The Sherman-Elliott, Inc., of which Harry A. Sherman is president, has opened Chicago offices at 611 Schiller Building, from which all of the state rights purchases of the corporation will be handled for the state of Illinois.

Minneapolis is the headquarters of Sherman-Elliott, Inc. The corporation now has offices at 218 West 42d street, New York City, which are in charge of M. E. Mazur, the Chicago office is temporarily in charge of Nat S. Stronge and Jack Elliott is in charge of the Minneapolis office

"BE SURE YOU'RE RIGHT" (Cub).

"Be Sure You're Right," the Cub Comedy featuring George Ovey and scheduled for release March 29 through the Mutual Film Corporation, is a military picture. At this time anything military is a ticklish subject to handle but by ingenious treatment of his plot Director Milton Fahrney has been able to produce a picture which has plenty of comedy in it besides a serious note that makes his effort commendable.

The story concerns Jerry, who loves Tiny, the daughter of a retired army officer. No one but a military man shall marry his daughter, declares Tiny's father. Jerry is not a military man but he manages to win out just the same and on the manner in which he operates the fun of the picture is obtained.

George Ovey plays Jerry in his usually unctuous fashion and he is supported by the regular Cub stock company including Clair Alexander, George George, E. A. Browne, A. C. Horne and a number of others. Milton Fahrney wrote and directed the picture.

BILLIE RHODES COMEDIES FOR MUTUAL.

Billie Rhodes, the renowned comedienne, will be featured in a series of fifty-two one-reel comedies to be released through Mutual under the general title of Strand Comedies. Miss Rhodes will be assisted in the evoking of laughter by Jay Belasco, of the famous Belasco family, and well known for his work in juvenile leads on the stage, vaudeville and the screen. The production of the Strand Comedies will be under the direction of Al Christie.

John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, has signed a contract with H. B. Caulfield, of the Caulfield Photoplay Company, for the series of comedies. These comedies will be scheduled for release through Mutual on Wednesday of each week, starting April 11. The first three releases will be "Her Hero," April 11; "When Mary Took the Count," April 18, and "And in Walked Uncle," April 25.

"The Strand Comedies," says Mr. Freuler, "will give the exhibitor just the class of picture that will please every one. Utterly devoid of any element of slapstick, the Strand Comedies are filled with clean, wholesome fun. They are built around the love affairs, quarrels and adventures of young people, and depict laughable incidents of every day life played by real human people."

"THE WARFARE OF THE FLESH" (Warren).

"The Warfare of the Flesh" is the final title of Edward Warren's big state rights feature, heretofore referred to in these columns as the "Transgressors." The final title has been suggested by Mrs. Warren, the art director of the Edward Warren productions.

"The Warfare of the Flesh" has been registered with the United States Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks. The feature will be ready for release early in April, and will be shown at a Broadway theater within ten days

The story is based on the thesis that matrimony is a holy institution The action revolves about the colossal and perpetual conflict between the forces of good and the forces of evil. Ordinary human beings of the every-day type are used as pawns by the spirits of good and evil. The entire thesis proves that no state of virtue is complete until it is won by a conflict with vice.

The production has been staged very elaborately at the Herbert Brenon studios, and Mr Warren selected his cast with exceptional care. The leading roles are portrayed by Walter Hampden, Marie Shotwell, Charlotte Ives, Sheldon Lewis, Theodore Friebus and Harry Benham

"The Bronze Bride" Leads Universal

It Is a Red Feather Five-Act Drama—Many Other Good Subjects for the Week of April 2.

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company presents an interesting and entertaining program of releases for the week of April 2. Every subject has been selected with great care for its fitness for release, and the result is one of the best balanced programs ever offered by the Universal.

The leading offering is the Red Feather five-act feature drama, "The Bronze Bride," a thrilling human interest story of a wayward son who is turned out of the house by his father to shift for himself. In the wilds of the North his better side asserts itself. He marries the daughter of an Indian chief, and his regeneration is completed when he returns to civilization. The story was written by J. R. Burkey, put in scenario form by Maude Grange, and directed by Henry McRae.

The cast is headed by Claire McDowell, supported by Frank Mayo and Eddie Polo. Others in the cast are Edward Clark, Harry Archer, Charles Hill Mailes, Betty Schade and Frankie Lee. The photography is splendid, and the scenes taken in the Sierra Nevada Mountains are wonderful. "The Bronze Bride" will be released Monday, April 2. On the same day will appear the Nestor comedy, "Mixed Matrimony," with Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons and Edith Roberts.

An unusually strong three-act drama is offered Tuesday, April 3, under the Gold Seal brand, entitled "The Magpie," featuring Tina Marshall. This is a new type of crook play, enlivened by many comedy situations. It was written by George Dana Smith, and produced by Edwin Stevens. In the cast are Claude Cooper, Monty Brace and Dean Raymond. The Victor comedy, "Please Be My Wife," written and produced by Bob Leonard, who also plays the leading role, is the other Tuesday release.

The Laemmle two-act human interest drama, "The Star Witness," is the feature for Wednesday, April 4. It was written by Grant Carpenter, and produced by John McDermott. Lee Hill, Lena Baskette and Elizabeth Janes play the leading roles. The story has wide appeal, and the acting is of high quality. The L-KO comedy, "Nabbing a Noble," with Phil Dunham in the principal role, and the regular issue of the Universal Animated Weekly will also be released Wednesday.

"Somebody Lied," the Victor two-act comedy-drama which will be released Thursday, April 5, is a charming story of domestic misunderstandings, written by E. M. Ingleton, and produced by Ben Wilson, with Priscilla Dean and Harry Carter featured. The Big U one-act drama, "The Dawn of Decency," and the Powers educational, "Hagenback's Wild Animals," are other Thursday offerings.

"The Man in the Trunk," the fifth adventure in the Yorke Norroy series, "The Perils of the Secret Service," written and produced by George Bronson Howard, and the thirteenth issue of the Universal Screen Magazine are the releases of Friday, April 6.

The Bison two-act western drama, "The Burning Silence," is the chief offering Saturday, April 17. George Pearce and Jane Bernoudy are the featured players in this picture. On the same date will be released the Joker comedy, "A Boob for Luck," with Gale Henry and William Franey, and the Laemmle drama, "The Blue Print Mystery," with King Baggot.

On Easter Sunday four reels will be released. The Big U drama, "The Terrors of War," with Grace Cunard and Francis Ford; the L-KO comedy, "Crooks and Crocodiles," with Fatty Voss, and the Powers split reel, "The Ups and Downs of Phool Phan," a comedy cartoon, and "Magic India," an educational.

"The Next Victim," the fourth episode of the great mystery serial, "The Voice on the Wire," in which Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber are starred, and the fifteenth episode of the Grace Cunard and Francis Ford serial, "The Purple Mask," entitled "The Floating Signal," will be released during the week.

"THE EARLY BIRD" (Paramount).

The third Quacky Doodles Cartoon, entitled "The Early Bird," will be released in the 61st edition of the Paramount-Bray-Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen. As can be easily understood, the title is derived from the old saying that "the early bird catches the worm," and who if not the Quacky Doodles family is interested in a worm, be it early or late? The particular worm, however, which this cartoon tells about is not a worm at all, but a very attractive and luscious caterpillar. You see, Mother Doodles expects company for dinner, and since caterpillars, as everyone should know, are the "capon" of Duckland, one is ordered for the coming feast.

Now affairs social in the Quacky Doodles Family differ not a great deal from those among the "Upper Crust," and so the little Doodles are to have their dinner early and then to bed. This does not meet with their ideas one bit, and they forthwith set about to get their share of the feast.

When two such ingenious youngsters as the little Doodles put their heads together to accomplish a purpose, rest assured that there will be something doing, and many things happen in "The Early Bird" which might serve to prove the old axiom that that bird does not always catch the worm.

The Quacky Doodles family have served to amuse many thousands of Paramount patrons and "The Early Bird" will not fail to arouse many a hearty laugh.

Bluebird Advertising Contest a Success

Because of Excellent Showing Three Exhibitors Are Declared Winners—Gould, Caulfield and O'Keefe Take Prizes.

THE advertising contest among exhibitors of Bluebirds conducted during February brought out lively competitions for the cash and honors that went to the winners. The results are announced as decided on March 15, according to the conditions of the contest. Because of the close verdict it became expedient to award an extra $80 above the original first prize of $60 and $40 as the second. Here are the winners: Frank A. Gould, manager of the Rex theater, Reading, Pa., took first prize for the most ingenious and extensive general advertising campaign. Sixty dollars was the first prize. Mr. Gould was fortunate in having a week of Bluebirds to increase his opportunities for the display of his advertising genius. He devised many contests and awakened public interest in Bluebirds to a remarkable degree, giving Bluebirds the record week for his house.

Harry P. Caulfield, manager of the Garrick theater, Los Angeles, won second prize for general display as applying especially to billboards, the newspapers and his lobby. Because of the inventiveness Mr. Caulfield displayed, plus the elaborate and costly character of his advertising methods, Bluebird judges decided to vote a special and additional prize of $20 to the Pacific coast showman.

E. J. O'Keefe, manager of the Cort and City Square theaters, Atlantic City, N. J., was awarded a special first prize of $60 because the judges considered his campaign so remarkable in its excellence and showmanship and fully entitling him to share in the first prize honors.

Honorable mention for excellence of newspaper advertising and lobby display was given to G. M. Luttrell's Majestic, Jacksonvile, Ill.; E. W. Wing's Pastime, Coshocton, Ohio; W. A. Kaiser's Fourth Street, Moberly, Mo.; H. M. Thompson's Griffin, Owen Sound, Canada; P. C. & E. R. McIntyre's Rose, High Point, N. C., and W. Wock's Gay, Dauphin, Manitoba.

Under the conditions of the contest Bluebird offered to appropriate an extra amount in the event that two or more contestants should be considered by the judges to have submitted campaigns so nearly meritorious that the full value of each prize might go to all exhibitors in the tie. Thus it is that three showmen share in what was originally designed to be two prizes.

From all over the country exhibitors of Bluebirds entered the results of their advertising ideas, variously incorporating lobby displays, newspaper and billboard announcements and such "special stunts" as were used in promoting public interest in Bluebirds. As this was the first time such a contest has been conducted for moving picture men, the interest displayed may be considered extraordinary.

Because of the success of the initial competition Bluebird will conduct another contest, framed along similar lines, for showmen who exhibit Bluebirds in April, the awards to be announced May 15. To give full circulation to the many clever ideas and advertising plans that came to the surface in the February competitions, Bluebird is going to issue a special pamphlet describing and illustrating the many unique and effective schemes that were entered. This work will be generally distributed among Bluebird showmen.

BUSHMAN AS "FIGHTING PARSON."

Francis X. Bushman has begun work on a smashing big five-reel feature, with Beverly Bayne as co-star, in which he is seen as a "fighting parson." The title of the play is to be "The Voice of One." It was written by William Christy Cabanne, who also is directing the production in the Quality studios.

This is to be the first of a series of five-reel features with Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne as stars and Mr. Cabanne as the director. The Bushman-Bayne-Cabanne combination proved a brilliant one in "The Great Secret," Metro's successful screen novel, and it was partly because of the laurels won in this serial that the same combination was decided on for feature productions.

Mr. Bushman has in his time played many parts, all of which have brought him critical esteem and popular acclaim, but in his new character in the first of the Metro five-reelers he is furnished with the strongest role of his career. As a "fighting young parson" he is the dominant figure around whom all the action of the play centers.

SHOWS "DOUBLE CROSS" AND "LUKE COMEDIES."

Pathe's New York branch office showed at the New York Roof to the exhibitors of New York and the vicinity several episodes of the "Mystery of the Double Cross" on Monday, March 26, at 2:30 p. m. Manager A. S. Abeles and Assistant Manager H. E. Friedman had sent out a large number of invitations and a goodly number of acceptances were promptly received. In addition to the serial the second of the new two-reel "Luke" comedies, "Lonesome Luke in Tin Can Alley," were also showr to a very appreciate and enthusiastic audience.

Fox Studio Happenings

George Melford Becomes a Fox Director—Stanton to Direct Next Farnum Feature.

WILLIAM FOX makes two important announcements with reference to directors this week: The first, that George H. Melford, one of the Jesse Lasky film directors, will join the Fox organization in May; the second, that Richard Stanton will screen the next Dustin Farnum production.

Among Mr. Melford's features for Lasky are numbered "Young Romance," "Stolen Goods," "The Marriage of Kitty," "The Immigrant," "The Cheat," "To Have and to Hold," and many others. He also acted in and directed several subjects for Kalem.

Mr. Stanton has been in charge of Gladys Brockwell's photodramas of late. He came to William Fox about six months ago, and since that time has filmed "The Beast," with George Walsh; "The Love Thief," "One Touch of Sin," and another screen play not yet issued.

Included in Dustin Farnum's supporting cast will be such notable figures in the photoplay world as Winifred Kingston, Tom Mix, Victoria Forde, Lee Morris, and Amy Jerome. Frankie Lee, the capable youngster who is well known to the screen, will also be a member of the company.

Bert Delaney, still in his early twenties, but who confesses to years of experience in the silent and the spoken drama, has been engaged by Mr. Fox to appear opposite June Caprice in her next production. Mr. Delaney is a native of Minneapolis, and is a graduate of Notre Dame University. His stage career includes engagements with Lewis Waller in "The Five Frankfurters" and "Henry V." In motion pictures, he has been with Edison and Thanhouser.

Herbert Heyes, who has many splendid performances in Fox photoplays to his credit, has been cast for an important part in a forthcoming production in the studios at Fort Lee, New Jersey.

On April 2, probably for the first time in motion picture history, one director will have two features released simultaneously by the same film corporation. J. Gordon Edwards, who directs the Theda Bara subjects for William Fox, is the man thus honored. The photoplays which he made are "Tangled Lives," starring Genevieve Hamper, and "Her Greatest Love," a super de luxe feature.

"Tangled Lives" has an international touch in its cast. Henry Leone, a player of Turkish birth, and Hal de Forest, born in Portugal, are both among the principals.

Mr. Leone was on the stage for a number of seasons before his advent into films. His last performance in the legitimate was in "Sari." Some of his previous subjects for Fox photoplays were "The Green-Eyed Monster," "A Wife's Sacrifice," "The Blindness of Devotion," "Sin," "Hypocrisy," and a half dozen others.

Hal de Forest also had an extended career. Mr. de Forest was a classmate of ex-Senator James O'Gorman at New York University.

Out on the West Coast, George Walsh celebrates this week one year of stardom in Fox Films. His first starring picture was "Blue Blood and Red." His last is "High Finance," released for the week of March 26. Walsh's intermediate screen plays were "The Beast," "The Mediator," "The Island of Desire," "The Honor System," and "Melting Millions."

R. A. Walsh, the athletic George's brother, will have an office erected specially for his use on the Fox grounds at Hollywood. Mr. Walsh's office building will contain an elaborate library, where the film maker may spend his study hours, searching for details in the proper presentation of period and costume plays.

An entire stage has also been set aside for the exclusive use of Mr. Walsh. When he returns from Truckee, where he is at present screening snow scenes for the production which will star Miriam Cooper, he will take over his new quarters for the first time.

NEW FIXTURES ON BLUEBIRD PROGRAM.

There arrived at Bluebird's headquarters during the past week a production from the West Coast studio of that organization which struck such a true note of timeliness that it was set for release at the earliest possible date—May 14. Allen Holubar directed the piece and will be featured with Joseph Gerrard, Lois Wilson playing the leading female role.

"Treason" is the title, and the caption gives an epitome of the plot. The scenes are located in a mythical kingdom where war is under way and plots and intrigue reflect the political conditions that now prevail on two continents. The production was rushed through to completion.

More features on the Bluebird program include "The Clock," for April 30; "Little Miss Nobody," for May 7, with Violet Mersereau the star and Sidney Mason featured as her leading man, and "The Flashlight Girl," May 21, starring Dorothy Phillips, with Lon Chaney and Wm. Stowell featured as her principal supporters.

There are enough shows produced and ready for release to complete the Bluebird schedule well into the summer, assuring Bluebird exhibitors of good material for combating the out-of-doors. The formality of fixing the dates for these releases will doubtless be complied with during the coming fortnight, when a complete announcement of Bluebirds for several months will be submitted to the trade.

Forum Film Getting Many Inquiries

Will Begin Distribution from Own Exchanges Inside of Thirty Days.

WITHIN the next thirty days the Forum Films, Inc., will have exchanges at all the important distributing points and the regular release of Edison-made "Conquest Pictures" will be started. Kenneth Hodkinson, general manager of the Forum Films, has issued a statement regarding the immediate activities of the organization.

"Ever since the first announcement was made in the trade papers relative to the formation of Forum Films, Inc., to handle Edison Conquest Pictures in a national way," he says, "we have been receiving a great number of requests and inquiries from all parts of the country regarding these films. Our notices seem to have aroused particular interest among churches, schools, colleges, universities, humane societies, women's clubs and organizations of a similar kind.

"Within the course of thirty days we will have exchanges opened at all important distributing points throughout the country and we will then be in a position to book these films in all cities as well as the smallest communities. Personal attention will be given on the part of each exchange manager to all the inquiries and orders, rather than have them handled by a subordinate. Our watchword will be service."

The first program of Forum Films, Inc., will include "The Half-Back," a picturization of Ralph Henry Barbour's story of school life and football; "Captains of Tomorrow," a dress parade at West Point; "The Dinosaur and the Baboon," presenting a new group of animated manikins; "The Sea Horse," a short study of a little known fish; "A Vanishing Race," a scenic taken on the Blackfoot Indian reservation, and "Puss in Boots," a fairy tale told in silhouette.

"HEART'S DESIRE" COMPANY RETURNS FROM FLORIDA.

Marie Doro, Director Francis J. Grandon, Jean Gauthier, Albert Roscoe, Harry Lee and other members of the Famous Players company, who went to Jacksonville several weeks ago to stage the exterior scenes for "Heart's Desire," in which Marie Doro is to star on the Paramount program, in the latter part of April, have returned. Eve Unsell, the author of the story, set the action on a small island in Brittany, and the director picked Anastatia Island, off St. Augustine, as being exactly suited to the requirements of the story.

WAR DEPICTED IN "MOTHERHOOD."

War and hate and mother-love, patriotism and fear and daring—all are mingled elements in "Motherhood," Marjorie Rambeau's second production for Mutual made under the direction of Frank Powell.

Miss Rambeau in the role of Louise, a peasant woman, is called upon for all of her ability in emotional portrayal, and, in the opinion of many of her critics, succeeds remarkably in the scenes where her mother-love is awakened for her child—a son of the lust of war.

"Motherhood" is a story which will appeal alike to the promoters of peace and those who are anxious for war. It is not a preachment for peace, but shows war in all its hideousness when the glamour has been removed. It is not a picture of battlefields and great armies engaged in conflict, but rather shows the woman's side of war. It shows how even the innocent children are forced to share their burden of the warfare, and brings out strongly the fact that there is as much suffering for those left at home as for those in the midst of battle.

Lasky Making Another Royle Picture

Wallace Reid Will Be Seen in "The Squaw Man's Son," Successor to "The Squaw Man."

THE Lasky company has purchased the motion picture rights to Edward Milton Royle's "The Squaw Man's Son," which is a sequel to that author's play and screen drama, "The Squaw Man." It was with an adaptation of "The Squaw Man" that the Lasky company made its bow as a producing concern. The success of this adaptation established the newly formed company as a factor in photoplay production. "The Squaw Man" was released by Lasky on February 23, 1914, with Dustin Farnum in the stellar role.

"The Squaw Man's Son" relates the history of the boy Hal, who appeared as an infant in the first picture. It will be released by Paramount on April 26, with Wallace Reid in the stellar role, and Anita King and Dorothy Davenport in important parts.

Just as his father experienced many thrilling adventures, and was torn by great strife in sacrificing himself to his devotion to the Indians, Hal is in turn a victim of dual loyalty—one to his English wife, who is an opium field, and the other to an Indian girl of high education and attainments, for whom his love is so great that he is finally forced to leave America in justice to the girl. Reviled by his wife, who openly loves another man, and worshipped by the Indian girl for his nobility of character, Hal finds himself living in double torment, for he realizes his wife's life depends upon his presence, while all his ambitions point to America. If the Squaw Man's history was a dramatic and intense one, the legacy of romance and drama which he left his son Hal was even more fertile and richer in adventures and heart interest.

"The Squaw Man's Son" was staged by Edward J. LeSaint, and the cast includes Raymond Hatton, H. B. Carpenter, Charles H. Geldert, Ted Duncan, Frank Lanning and Donald Bowles.

ASHLEY MILLER CLAIMS AUTHORSHIP.

To correct an erroneous impression as to the authorship of the novel form of comedy in which sculptured or modeled figures are the actors, Ashley Miller, formerly director of productions for Edison, Pathe, Famous Players-Lasky and Art Dramas, calls attention to the fact that for about a year he has been manufacturing and releasing on the Paramount program a line of these cartoons, antedating thus by a large margin any claims to originality that may be made by any one else.

"WHO SHALL TAKE MY LIFE?" (Selig).

Maibelle Heikes Justice's latest drama, "Who Shall Take My Life?" an argument against capital punishment, is said to be the most forceful work she has yet written for the screen. William N. Selig considered the drama so comprehensive in its scope that he placed the story in the hands of Colin Campbell, dean of the Selig corps of directors, with instructions to spare neither time nor expense in production. "Who Shall Take My Life?" is the story of "Big Bill" O'Shaughnessy, the bridge tender, who is convicted of murder on circumstantial evidence.

Scene from "Who Shall Take My Life?" (Selig).

It is a powerful plea against the evils of capital punishment, and is indorsed by pulpit and press.

The Selig company announces an all-star cast for "Who Shall Take My Life?" including Thomas Santschi, Fritzi Brunette, Edward Coxen, Bessie Eyton, Harry Lonsdale, Virginia Kirtley and other stars. "Who Shall Take My Life?" is said to be a worthy successor to "Beware of Strangers" as an attractive state rights proposition. The Selig company points out that there is not only a stirring plot enacted by an exceptional company of players, but elaborate scenic effects and beautiful photography.

Maibelle Heikes Justice, the famous authoress, who wrote "Who Shall Take My Life?" was a guest of the warden of Sing Sing prison while studying prison life, and the results of her investigations are embodied in the drama. Thomas Santschi, Fritzi Brunette, Ed Coxen and Bessie Eyton have prominent parts in the play, and are given unusual opportunities for versatile work, according to those who have been accorded preliminary viewings of the production.

GENERAL FILM'S POPULAR PRICE SERVICE.

President Benjamin B. Hampton of the General Film Company has inaugurated a new "popular priced service" for the smaller exhibitors who are patrons of the General Film Company which, it is believed, will meet with instant favor. The outline of the plan is revealed in the following circular which has been distributed to exhibitors:

To Our Customers: Many exhibitors have asked us for service at a price lower than we can accept for our new subjects.

We want all the business we can get at a profitable price, and, also, we want to do all we can to assist all classes of exhibitors. Therefore, we submit the following plan for a service at popular prices.

We have on hand about 50,000 reels of various subjects in various lengths. These pictures are our regular program subjects from our regular manufacturers—dramas, comedies, etc. Our exchanges are now prepared to serve exhibitors with programs booked from this vast assortment of products at very low prices—prices at which any exhibitor can make money.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY.

President Hampton believes that the small exhibitor has been neglected to a considerable degree in late years, and, with the increasing cost of production and distribution, the price of new features has gone up to a point beyond the reach of a large number of these smaller theater owners. It is for this reason that he has inaugurated the new popular price service, which seems destined to meet a big and immediate demand.

IVAN PLAN MEETS APPROVAL.

The Ivan Film Productions' new distribution plan has met with unprecedented response. The answers to the inquiries following the very first announcement have borne unexpected fruit. Without going into details at this time of the arrangements entered into with the different exchanges, suffice to say that, judging from the remarks of all parties involved, the mutual interests of producer and distributor have been taken care of in a most equitable manner. A strong forward movement in the policy of the Ivan people in the production field has been announced; enlargement of the producing, as well as the general staff, has been made.

The addition of Dr. Oscar I. Lamberger as assistant to the general manager, I. E. Chadwick, in itself speaks well for the company's pretensions. The Doctor will be best remembered because of his joint activities with the late Professor Charles Sprague Smith in the establishment of what now is known as the National Board of Review, unquestionably one of the organizations that in their liberal and forward look have been of the greatest benefit to the industry at large.

A. KAY OFFERS SHORT REELS.

The A. Kay Company, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, was recently organized with the purpose of confining itself to putting out short length topical features. Their first release is a novelty subject of unusual length, an 800 foot animated cartoon burlesque entitled "20,000 Feats Under the Sea," the first animated cartoon of that length ever released. The thread of the story of "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" is followed closely in the burlesque, and the many incidents are treated with the extreme humorous touch of the master animated cartoonist, Paul Terry. Several thousands of the leading exhibitors of the country have been circularized on the plan on which this first picture of a series is being handled. The short subjects are treated as big features, and close co-operation with exchange man and exhibitor is the company's slogan; heralds, slides, feature lithographs, stills, etc., and this policy, coupled with releases of striking novelty and high standard, gives complete assurance of marked success.

LOUISE HUFF'S FIRST PALLAS PICTURE.

The first production in which Louise Huff will appear upon the Paramount program since leaving the Famous Players studio for the Pacific Coast will be "The Lonesome Chap," in which she will co-star with House Peters. The production comes from the Pallas studio, where Miss Huff has been engaged ever since she departed for the West several weeks ago, and is scheduled for release by Paramount on April 19.

In this picture Miss Huff plays the role of a little school girl who captivates her guardian, a man somewhat older than she is, only to be convinced that he does not care for her. For his own part, the man is doing his best to conceal his feelings, in the belief that he is doing so in justice to his ward. House Peters is, of course, the guardian in question.

Others in the cast besides Miss Huff and Mr. Peters are John Burton, Eugene Pallette, J. Parks Jones, Senor Buzzi and Betty Johnson.

Paramount Program

Introduces George Beban in a New Character—Fanny Ward in a Comedy—Other Pleasing Subjects for Week of April 2.

MANY salient features in the productions that will be released by Paramount Pictures Corporation during the week of April 2 make it one of the banner weeks of the year. Primarily, George Beban, in his own play, "The Bond Between," and Fannie Ward, in "A School for Husbands," the Pallas and Lasky productions, respectively, are the two five-reel features which are surrounded by three single reels—the sixtieth edition of the Paramount-Bray-Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen; the sixty-first of the series of weekly trips around the world, personally conducted by Burton Holmes, and a Black Diamond comedy, entitled "Getting the Evidence."

Deviating from the character of an Italian, George Beban, who has won for himself an enviable reputation of being the greatest Italian delineator, will play a Frenchman's part in "The Bond Between," and, from reviews that have already been given the critics, it is declared to be far superior to anything that this actor has yet done. Mr. Beban wrote the story himself—for himself—the play giving him an opportunity of demonstrating his inimitable screen personality and characteristics.

Donald Crisp, who directed Mr. Beban's latest success, "His Sweetheart," is also the director of this picture. In "The Bond Between," Mr. Beban is seen as Papa Duval, a Frenchman living with four cronies in a French restaurant in New York City.

Supporting Mr. Beban in the cast are the following players: John Burton as Hans von Mayerinck, Miguel de Bruillier as Feole Zelnar, Paul Wiegel as Carl Riminoss, Colin Chase as Jacques Duval, Eugene Pallette as Raoul Vaux, W. H. Bainbridge as John Fowner, Vola Vale as Ellen Ingram, Signor Buzzi as M. Lorillard, and Mrs. Buehler as Mme. Lorillard.

Fannie Ward, in "A School for Husbands," will again create as much of a sensation as she did in "The Cheat." This Lasky production is a superb comedy in which the star gives a few valuable visualized hints on the subject of how to manage a husband. The production gives her a wonderful opportunity to wear some marvelous gowns, and many of the scenes were taken at Tia Juana, the most celebrated race course of the Southwest. Another senational scene is that of a real Hawaiian ball.

The production was made for the Lasky company under the direction of George Melford. Supporting Miss Ward in the cast are the following players: Jack Dean as John Manners, Frank Elliott as Sir Harry Lovell, Mabel Van Buren as Mrs. Airlie, Edythe Chapman as Mrs. Manners, James Neill as automobile salesman, Frank Borzage as Hugh Aslam, Irene Aldwyn as Claire Manners.

The sixtieth edition of the Paramount-Bray-Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen, deals with four very interesting subjects, entitled "Rivaling Nature's Flowers," "Assaying the Nation's Gold," "Crab Fishing in Virginia," and "Americanizing an Oriental Craft." The variety of the pictographs has long made it one of the most sought after single reel productions that are being shown in theaters.

Burton Holmes, in the sixty-first of his weekly trips around the world which he is personally conducting for Paramount, brings to the photoplay lover the mid-winter sports that are enjoyed in Canada, the photography of which is par excellence, and the action of such a degree that there is not a lagging moment during the entire release.

"Getting the Evidence" is the title of the Black Diamond comedy that will be released this week, and is based upon an extremely funny situation of a girl detective, who, in her endeavors to earn a livelihood, turns detective, and runs down what appears to be a plot to blow up a munition factory, only to find that it is a company staging a wild, woolly west "movie."

SOL LESSER'S EXCHANGE TO MOVE.

During his recent trip to New York, Sol L. Lesser, of the All Star Features Distributors, San Francisco, acquired the rights to so many features that upon his arrival in San Francisco he was forced to the realization that it would be impossible to handle all of these productions in his old quarters at 234 Eddy street, although Mr. Lesser occupies one of the largest exchanges in San Francisco.

While in New York, Mr. Lesser purchased the California, Arizona and Nevada rights to D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance," "Panthea," "The Argyle Case" and the Art Dramas program. He is already exploiting in this territory such big productions as Jules Verne's under water spectacle, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," "Civilization," "The Garden of Allah," "War Brides," "The People vs. John Doe," "The Libertine" and the Louis J. Selznick releases, including the Clara Kimball Young productions.

Mr. Lesser said: "I have just signed a long lease for the new three-story building located at Golden Gate avenue and Leavenworth street, in the heart of the film row, and it is my intention to make it the most thoroughly equipped and up-to-date film exchange in San Francisco. During my visit to New York I carefully studied all of the New York exchanges and intend to embody all of their conveniences in my new home, having in mind the idea of making my exchange a place where the visiting exhibitor can feel entirely at home."

"THE GIRL IN THE CHECKERED COAT" (Bluebird).

The Bluebird to be released on April 23 will be entitled "The Girl in the Checkered Coat," with Dorothy Phillips as the star, and Lon Chaney and William Stowell featured as leaders of her supporting company. Countess Du Cello, Jane Bernoudy, Nellie Allen, Mrs. Witting and David Kirby will also be in the presenting company.

Joseph De Grasse directed the piece from Ida May Park's scenario. A story by E. M. Ingleton formed the basis of the feature. Miss Phillips is called upon to present two separate and distinct roles—playing sisters who are unlike in personal appearance and characteristics. So much does the star enter into the drama that she is on the screen practically all the time, playing one role or the other.

The assertion is made by the Bluebird publicity department that in this feature Miss Phillips has the best opportunity of her screen career to show her native artistry, and the result attained by her impersonation of two entirely different roles is said to be remarkable.

ASTRA COMPANY GROWING FAST.

The success of the Astra Film Company, the destinies of which are presided over by Louis J. Gasnier, has resulted in a remarkable extension of activity in the Jersey City studios. Two new serials are now in course of production, one under the direction of George B. Seitz, and the other under Theodore Marston. Two features are also being produced by George Fitzmaurice and William Parke.

In other lines the activities of the Astra company are being extended. With the addition of Mr. Seitz to the staff of directors, Philip Bartholomae, author of "Very Good Eddie," and one of the noted playwrights of the day, is in charge of the Astra company's scenario department. There have been many recent additions to the Astra players, who now include Pearl White, Mollie King, Creighton Hale, Leon Bary, Warner Oland, Earl Fox, Ruby Hoffman, Helene Chadwick and Mattie Ferguson.

The new serial which Mr. Seitz is directing is based on a popular adventure serial by Fred Jackson. Pearl White will be the featured player. The cast will include Warner Oland, formerly leading man for Theda Bara, who played the part of Baron Huroki in the "Patria" serial; Earl Fox, Ruby Hoffman and Mattie Ferguson.

EXHIBITORS INDORSE ONE HOUR SCREEN TIME.

Ever since the General Film Company made its first announcement of the "Fortune Photoplays" series the executives of that company have been receiving letters from exhibitors indorsing the "One-Hour Screen Time" idea. "Fortune Photoplays" are all founded on stories that have appeared in the Street & Smith group of magazines—Ainslee's, the Popular, Smith's, People's, etc.—and when the General Film Company made its first plans for the series it was decided to limit the length to four reels, since that length of picture was found after careful investigation to be the most popular with exhibitors. Letters were sent to five thousand prominent picture theater managers throughout the country, asking them what length of picture they preferred, and by far the great majority answered the inquiry by placing their vote in favor of the hour length. Accordingly, this length was adopted, and featured prominently in the advertising and publicity.

With the nation-wide advertising campaign of the Street & Smith magazines behind them, the "Fortune Photoplays" are rapidly becoming one of the most popular series on the market. The first subjects in the order of release are "The Inspirations of Harry Larrabee," "Mentioned in Confidence," "The Devil's Bait," "The Yellow Bullet" and "Vengeance of the Dead." A famous film beauty is featured in each picture.

The Selznick Line-Up

"The Eternal Sin" Is Now at the Broadway Theater and Other Strong Features Are Coming.

THE great spring drive of Selznick-Pictures is on. With four new features ready for release and four more well under way, the assault of the Selznick forces upon the trenches of the program producers looks more formidable than ever.

The next Selznick-Picture to be released on the general market is Herbert Brenon's presentation of Florence Reed in "The Eternal Sin," now playing its second week at the Broadway Theater, New York City, where it is drawing even larger houses than "War Brides."

The production to follow "The Eternal Sin" on the Selznick schedule is Norma Talmadge's second feature under the management of Joseph M. Schenck, a drama from the pen of Wilson Mizner, entitled "The Law of Compensation."

In April two Selznick productions of extraordinary interest will be released, the first being Robert Warwick in "The Silent Master," a picturization of E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel, "The Court of St. Simon." This marks the American premiere of the famous French director, Leonce Perret, and everyone who has had private glimpses of this picture predicts a real sensation. The second April release will be Clara Kimball Young in Eugene Walter's tremendous play, "The Easiest Way," produced under the direction of Albert Capellani.

Meanwhile the Selznick stars and producers are busily engaged on their new production. Herbert Brenon and his company return this week from New Orleans, where they have been making the exteriors for an adaptation of Louis Joseph Vance's widely read mystery story, "The Lone Wolf." Norma Talmadge and her associate players have already returned from the South to complete the filming of "Poppy." Director Charles Giblyn has finished the scenario adaptation of Virginia Terhune VanDeWater's story, "Why I Left My Husband," for Clara Kimball Young, and Robert Warwick is well advanced in the production of an original story by his director, Mr. Perret, entitled "The Modern Othello."

It is expected that the schedule of two productions a month will be maintained throughout the spring and summer. The May releases as planned will be "The Lone Wolf" and "Poppy," and for June the new Clara Kimball Young and Robert Warwick pictures.

"THE INEVITABLE" (Art Drama).

Intending to avenge her father's death by ruining his enemy's son, and discovering when she has nearly completed her work that she loves the youth, Florence Grey, the heroine of "The Inevitable," an Erbograph Art Drama, is a character of force and distinction. As played by Anna Q. Nilsson, the beautiful "Star of the North," as a countryman—a poet—once called her, the character takes on reality in a surprising degree, and the tense drama woven around her is made into a masterpiece of the shadow art.

A brilliant cast, headed by Miss Nilsson, and containing such names as Chester Barnett, Lucile Dorrington, and William Bailey, enacts this notable drama in a way worthy of its unusual story. It will be released April 5.

WARREN COMPLETES FIRST SUBJECT.

Edward Warren returned from Florida and North Carolina the other day and celebrated the completion of the first production to be released under his own trade mark, "The Warfare of the Flesh," by making plans for his next feature. The play he has just finished for the state right market has engaged his attention for sixty-nine hours a day since early last January. The interiors were finished a week ago at the Brenon studios and the allegorical prologue was staged and whipped into shape in the warm states of the south. The announcement of the release "The Warfare of the Fesh," heralds Mr. Warren's debut as a producer-director-manufacturer.

New Erbograph Company Formed

Marion Swayne Will Lead and Joseph Levering Will Direct —Features for Art Drama Program.

A SECOND company of players, headed by Marion Swayne and directed by Joseph Levering, has been orgazined by Erbograph to produce features for the Art Dramas program, according to announcement made this week by Ludwig G. B. Erb, president of Erbograph.

Work has already been started by this new company on a play written especially for Miss Swayne by the Rev. Clarence J. Harris, the prominent scenario writer. In this story Miss Swayne, long one of the most popular screen stars, is given an opportunity to enact the sort of characterization which has made her such an admired player.

Marion Swayne, who will be remembered for her work in "The Adventurer," a recent U. S. Amusement Corporation production on Art Dramas program, and in "The Deemster," the picturization of Hall Caine's story, has been in pictures for four years. She started under Edgar Lewis, and almost immediately attracted attention. From the beginning her rise was rapid.

Joseph Levering, who will direct Miss Swayne, is a man with proven genius and long experience. He has been with Solax, Pathe, Edison, and Gaumont, where he was managing director for several years. Among his most successful productions are "The Cup of Chance," with Alice Brady; "The Tides of Time," with Mary Nash, and "Capital Punishment," with Lenore Ulrich.

"THE TRUFFLERS" (Essanay).

Strong bookings are reported on "The Trufflers," Essanay's picturization of Samuel Merwin's Cosmopolitan Magazine story. This feature, presenting Nell Craig, and an all-star cast, was released through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service April 9.

The story proved to be immensely popular through the country. It was read by millions. This fact should provide a juicy bit of free advertising for exhibitors who book the picture. According to reports from advance showings of the film, it presents a more fascinating entertainment, even, than the story.

Another attraction which "The Trufflers" is said to hold forth is its cast. Besides Nell Craig, who is a star of nation-wide prominence, others appearing in the picture are Sydney Ainsworth, Richard C. Travers, Ernest Maupain and Harry Dunkinson. All of these have a good individual following among photoplay patrons. Fred E. Wright adapted the story to the screen, and directed its production.

"The Trufflers" is based on life in New York's colony of artists—Greenwich Village. A gripping love-drama is interwoven into the plot, which has to do with the fascinating Bohemian life led by the artists.

The picture has a screen time of 1 hour 10 minutes.

"ON TRIAL" NEARLY FINISHED.

Half the scenes for "On Trial" have been filmed by Essanay. The picturization of Cohan & Harris' tensely dramatic stage hit is steadily progressing. Its release date will be announced shortly.

"On Trial" was one of the most vivid and like-like portrayals of a big murder trial ever put on the stage. It ran a year solid on Broadway, had a run of five months in Chicago, and created an equal sensation throughout the country, from coast to coast.

The nation-wide acclaim with which the stage drama was received is counted upon to prove a powerful box office magnet for the Essanay picturization. Reports from the studio are that the photodrama will hold far more interest, not being hampered by the limitations of the stage.

James Young is directing the production. Sydney Ainsworth, who has won popularity throughout the country with his strong character roles in "The Prince of Graustark," "The Chaperon" and other productions, plays the part of the half crazed Strickland. Mr. Young has the role of Trask, Barbara Castleton will be seen as Mrs. Strickland, Corene Uzzell as Mrs. Trask, and little Mary McAlister as Doris Strickland.

"On Trial" will have a screen time of approximately 1 hour 15 minutes.

"THE TIDES OF BARNEGAT."

Scheduled for release by Paramount on April 12 is F. Hopkinson Smith's "The Tides of Barnegat," a most popular book, adapted by the Lasky company. Mr. Smith's wonderful descriptive powers and his knowledge of the sea, combined with the quaintness of the setting which he chose for his story, make "The Tides of Barnegat" realistic and absorbingly interesting. It is a peculiarly human story of self-sacrifice and sisterly devotion which, in itself, would have a strong appeal were it shorn of its fascinating elements.

A marine architect by profession, but a painter and writer by inclination, F. Hopkinson Smith had the deft touch and the broad vision of the true artist, as every one who is familiar with his novel already knows. In the cast of this exceptional production are Blanche Sweet, Elliott Dexter, Tom Forman, Harrison Ford, Lillian Leighton, Norman Nichols, Walter Rogers and the ever delightful little Billy Jacobs.

Pearl White Heads Pathe Program

Appears in "May Blossom," a Gold Rooster Pathecolor—Also a Linder Comedy for the Week of April 8.

THE feature of Pathe's big program for the week of April 8 is Pearl White's second Gold Rooster Play, "May Blossom," in Pathecolor. "Hazel Kirke," the first feature starring this very popular actress, scored a big hit throughout the country. "May Blossom" has the most popular star in the world, supported by the celebrated Hal Ford and Fuller Mellish. The combination of Pearl White and Pathecolor should bring big business.

The fourth episode of "Mystery of the Double Cross" is entitled "Kidnapped." The star of the serial is Mollie King, and she is supported by Leon Bary, formerly Sarah Bernhardt's leading man, Ralph Stuart and Gladden James. The picture was produced under the direction of William Parke, formerly Mansfield's stage director.

Mrs. Vernon Castle is seen in the thirteenth episode of "Patria," entitled "Wings of Death." The best known, best dressed woman in America in thrilling aeroplane feats guarding our country against invasion is the feature of this episode. Patria's success everywhere continues unabated.

"Max and the Fair M. D." is a one-reel comedy featuring Max Linder. These comedies issued by Pathe have been selected as the best work of this famous actor. It would be a mistake for the live exhibitor to fail to take advantage of this opportunity. In this one, Max is desperately in love with the fair lady doctor. He wins her heart and hand, but ——!

"Know America, the Land We Love," is the title of the beautiful Combitone Scenic pictures about which there has been so much favorable comment, and the fourth release deals with "Arizona." The most interesting parts of this great state are shown, including the famous Petrified Forest and the Bottomless Pit—soundings of twelve hundred feet have failed to touch bottom.

"The Height of Fashion" is the title of the 26th release of the Florence Rose Fashion films, showing beautiful models in advance style. Theater patrons who want advice about how to dress should write Miss Florence Rose, 303 Fifth avenue, New York.

Beautiful Scenes of Japan presented in an original manner are shown in "Picture Postal Cards" in Pathecolor on the same reel with the Fashion Film.

An International split reel cartoon and scenic and the Hearst-Pathe News No. 30 and No. 31 complete the program.

It is interesting to note in this connection that the circulation of big newspapers is increasing as the international situation grows more intense. Interest in Hearst-Pathe News increases likewise.

GAUMONT SHOWS SIDE LIGHTS ON WAR.

There is a decided difference of opinion as to the reason for the retreat of the Teutonic forces on the west front to what is called the "Hindenburg line." Mutual Weekly No. 117 shows what the Allies are pleased to regard as the reason. This is the heavy artillery, which is massed almost wheel to wheel. The great guns are seen in action, the heavy projectiles being belched forth to pulverize the positions of the invaders.

The U-Boat Chasers which the United States has ordered for the protection of its ships are pictured in the trial trip of one of the first which has been turned out. This maneuvers in Boston harbor, showing how it will search out enemy submarines.

Ambassador Gerard is welcomed to New York, his home city. The camera follows him from his arrival at Communipaw until he has listened to the laudations of his work by speakers at the city hall.

Naturally patriotism is bursting to the surface in many demonstrations worthy of recording in motion pictures. This issue of the Mutual Weekly shows the unfurling of a big flag in Boston, and a visit of a Girls' National Honor Guard to the Destroyers Monaghan and Sterrett on duty at Galveston, Texas.

Americans in service abroad are represented by the departure of an American ambulance section from Paris for the front.

FIRST FAIRBANKS-ARTCRAFT SUBJECT READY SOON.

Work on the initial Douglas Fairbanks-Artcraft production, "In Again—Out Again," written by Anita Loos and staged under the direction of John Emerson, has progressed rapidly and it is expected that this subject will be finished in the course of two weeks.

Upon completion of this picture activities in connection with the next offering will be commenced immediately. Although the title of this story has not as yet been announced, it is stated that it will present an unusual comedy of New York and California. The production will therefore be started in New York following "In Again—Out Again," and as soon as these scenes are taken the entire organization will journey to the West Coast, where the principal scenes are laid.

Bill Shay, who for the past three years assisted D. W. Griffith in the cutting of the latter's spectacles, is now on his way East to fill a similar position with Mr. Emerson, whose staff now includes Jack Scott, as assistant; R. W. Nichols, technical director; Eric von Stroheim, location scout, and James P. Hogan, master of properties.

BIG SCENES IN "THE SINGLE CODE."

One of the many highly effective scenes in "The Single Code," Crane Wilbur's latest starring vehicle, which is to be released through the Mutual Film Corporation April 16, and which tells a morality story, is that wherein the woman forgives the man when she learns of his past life.

"The Single Code," as the name of the picture suggests, treats with the problem of the double standard. The man becomes involved with an adventuress, and the woman falls into the toils of an unscrupulous man. They leave their paste behind them, as they believe, meet and are married. Later the ghosts of early days reappear. The woman is the first to learn the truth, and, with true womanly heart, forgives her husband. This scene, as played by Mr. Wilbur and Miss Florence Printy, furnishes one of the most touching incidents in the play.

VIOLA DANA FINISHES "LADY BARNACLE."

Viola Dana and her company, under the direction of John H. Collins, have practically completed work on Miss Dana's next offering on the Metro program. "Lady Barnacle," which is produced as a photoplay by Columbia Pictures Corporation, will appear in the All Story Weekly simultaneously with its release on the Metro program. It is from the pen of Edgar Franklin and has been adapted for the screen by Juno Mathis.

The title role of this production provides Miss Dana with one of the most charming parts she has ever played, that of Lackshima, daughter of the Maharajah Bahartari of an East Indian province. The scene is laid in India and later in the United States. The Indian scenes have been taken in and around St. Augustine, Fla., where a beautiful hotel was used to represent the palace of the Maharajah.

Robert Walker will be seen as George Morling, the American. Augustus Phillips has the part of Lackshima's father. Henry Hallam plays the elder Morling, and Marie Adell has the part of Morling's fiancee. William B. Davidson has the part of Krishna, a young East Indian; Ricca Allen plays Anna Stone, the Boston stenographer, who is determined that Lackshima shall not be either a white nor one of any other color, and Fred Jones plays Asoka Kahan Roy, adviser to the Rajah.

THRILLING "PATRIA" EPISODE APRIL 8.

Mrs. Vernon Castle in thrilling aeroplane feats guarding our country against invasion is a feature of the thirteenth episode of "Patria," entitled "Wings of Death," and announced for release by Pathe the week of April 8. Mrs. Castle is supported by Milton Sills, Warner Oland, William Nye and Marie Walcamp—all of them well-known players.

In this chapter Bess Morgan, played by Marie Walcamp, is captured by Mexicans. She is rescued, and reveals to Patria the plans of invasion by Huroki and his army. Nogi, commander of Huroki's forces, has been wounded, but escapes from Pillsbury. Crawling through the woods, he comes upon Patria, who has landed in the course of a scouting trip in her flying machine. Nogi forces her, at the point of a gun, to take him back to his lines across the border. This she does, but, as they reach his lines, she volplanes, and Nogi falls to the ground—dead.

FIVE "RAILROAD RAIDERS" CHAPTERS COMPLETED.

Although the first chapter of "The Railroad Raiders," the new Mutual serial, in which Helen Holmes is once more a railroad girl, will not be released until April 9, the first five chapters have already been completed at the Signal studio, under the direction of J. P. McGowan. The titles of the chapters already completed are "Circumstantial Evidence," "A Double Steal," "Inside Treachery," "The Deal in Silks" and "A Woman's Wit."

Kalem to Produce Two-Part Comedies

Lloyd V. Hamilton and A. E. Duncan as the Featured Funmakers—Ideas for Scenarios Wanted.

FOLLOWING close upon the announcement that Kalem has signed its two principal comedians, Ham and Bud, to long term contracts comes the news that these celebrated laugh creators are to be featured in two-part comedies under the direction of Al Santell. The brand name, "Ham Comedies," will be retained; this in order that its advertising value gained from long association with Kalem will not be impaired.

Scenarios and ideas for scenarios for the new two-part comedies are desired, but they must conform to a certain standard, that is, they must contain material and business that will be suitable for Ham and Bud and not be lacking in plot. The Kalem Company states it will be a waste of anybody's time to submit scripts if they do not show on the face of them that the author is familiar with the pictures that have heretofore been released.

Inasmuch as the exhibitors themselves are the ones responsible for the change in policy—that of lengthening the "Ham Comedies" to two reels—they are to be invited to submit their ideas of the course that the new series shall take, and if acceptable their names will be featured in the advertising and publicity that the pictures will be given.

For a number of months the question of producing two-part "Hams" has held the attention of Kalem's executives. The demand for the double length comedy has grown steadily until there is no denying that the major portion of the exhibitors favor them above the singles.

Ham and Bud constitute a team of comedians that has stood the test of time. As one sensible exhibitor said: "They wear well with my patrons." Never vulgar or coarse in what they do, they typify all that is best in comedy. A close-up of Ham's face is sufficient to move the most hardened fan to merriment, which would seem to prove that facial expression is a better barometer of talent than almost anything else.

Director Al Santell is assembling a company of able players to support Ham and Bud and arrangements have been made giving him the run of the Glendale studios and a goodly proportion of the space available in the new enclosed studio. Henry Murdoch will continue to give his talents to this company. Indeed both Ham and Bud look upon Murdoch as the third party to all of their comedy business.

It is a bit too early to give the title of the first of the two part "Ham," but it is to be a revelation, so we are told, and is to be the standard pattern by which all the succeeding ones are to be produced. An animated Kalem trailer will be one of the new features to be incorporated, somewhat after the style of the famous Kalem spider. Other novelties in titles will be introduced as the series gets under way.

GEORGE M. COHAN PICTURE A TRIUMPH.

The advance showing of George M. Cohan's initial Artcraft photoplay, "Broadway Jones," attracted an unusual audience to the Forty-fourth Street theater last Tuesday morning. One of the guests was J. J. Murdock of the United Booking Offices, who congratulated the famous actor-author-producer, as well as Director Kaufman, and proved the sincerity of his enthusiasm by doubling the bookings of this picture over his circuit.

Mitchel H. Mark, president and general manager of the Strand theater, New York, in a letter to Walter E. Greene, president of Artcraft, said: "'Broadway Jones' is a most happy combination of star and play, well produced, and to our mind fitting the most popular taste and fancy."

"Never during my eight years' association with motion pictures have I seen such an instantaneous demand for bookings on a picture," said Al Lichtman, manager of the Artcraft exchanges, late Tuesday night. "Immediately after the showing there was a great rush for bookings at the New York exchange. An idea as to how big this demand became can be had from the fact that in a little over a half-hour we signed $3,000 in bookings."

NAOMI CHILDERS' FIRST ART DRAMA.

"The Auction of Virtue" is the title of the picture in which Naomi Childers, the new U. S. Amusement Corporation star, will make her debut on the Art Dramas program. The story was written by Joseph Poland, the famous novelist and writer, especially for the star. Mr. Poland is the author of "The Cloud," a recent Art Drama, in which Jean Sothern was starred, and which is to be published shortly in book form.

Leslie Austen, Wyndham Standing, Kirke Brown and Evelyn Dume are in support of the star in this picture, while Herbert Blache was in charge of the direction.

Miss Childers takes the role of Phyllis Shaw, the daughter of an invalid mother, whose life has become embittered by poverty. Mrs. Shaw married a poor man, who died soon after the marriage. Her life has been a struggle. She has consequently brought Phyllis up with one aim—to marry a rich man.

In the role of Phyllis Miss Childers finds her greatest opportunity. Both physical beauty and acting ability are hers, and they are employed with artistry and skill in the characterization.

"FATHER AND SON" (Selig).

"Father and Son," directed by Otis B. Thayer, from the drama written by Olive Harper, is the latest of Selig productions to be released in General Film Company's regular service. The Selig Company claims that this production is exceptional both as to plot, direction and photography.

"Father and Son" is an amplification of the Biblical adage, "And the sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the sons, etc., etc." Robert Harris is a typical "gilded" youth, and shows every inclination to follow in his father's footsteps. How that selfsame father arises from the gutter to save his only son from following in his own footsteps to wreck and ruin creates a climax and proves a forceful lesson that cannot but be impressive.

"THE COSSACK WHIP" REBOOKING.

The attention that has been turned toward Russia by reason of the recent abdication of the Czar and the overthrow of the old dynasty of the Romanoffs has awakened a new and phenomenal interest in "The Cossack Whip," a five-reel Edison production featuring Viola Dana, that was released a few months ago through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service and has proved to be one of the most attractive features ever produced by the Edison Company. This picture is believed to have established a rebooking record, approximately 65 per cent. of those programing it showing it twice or more, and the sudden demand for it that immediately followed the announcement of the internal troubles in Russia indicates that it is due for another big run. Both the Edison Company and the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service are receiving many queries from all parts of the country from exhibitors who desire to book or rebook this picture, which is so timely in its interest. interest.

"SPANISH MAIN" GOING WELL AT RIALTO.

Manager Rothapfel of the Rialto theater made no mistake when he contracted for an eight weeks' showing of "Rex Beach On the Spanish Main," at a record price. The capacity houses which each day greet the presentation of this feature is a testimonial to the judgment of the Rialto management.

One of the many interesting scenes in last week's installment was the first and only moving picture of the total eclipse of the sun. This was photographed from a mountain peak in Costa Rica. The scenes of the bird life along the coast of Nicaragua and Honduras provide great interest and amusement.

The pictures also show the government lottery at San Jose, the native coffee and sugar industry and many "shots" of strange tropical customs little known to the people of the north. Throughout the picture there is a vein of human interest unusual in films of travel and adventure.

BACKER BUYS TWO FOR JERSEY.

In accordance with his recenly announced policy of exploiting only features of undoubted merit and maximum box office value, F. E. Backer has purchased for the recently formed Dreadnought Features Corporation, of which he is president, Hall Caine's "The Deemster," starring Derwent Hall Caine, and acknowledged to be a film classic, presenting with great vividness and wonderful local color the novel which made Hall Caine famous as a writer of virile stories. "A Mormon Maid," also purchased for the Dreadnought, features Mae Murray and Hobart Bosworth, and is a thrilling six-reel special, depicting the life of the early Mormons, the vengefulness of the Danites, and the fate which overtook their victims.

Both of these features will be booked through the Mammoth Film Corporation, controlled by Mr. Backer as president, and will be released in the near future, dates to be announced later.

Notes of the Trade

GATHERED BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS

Manager Corbett to Maine Exhibitors

Pathe Manager at Bangor in Interview Given to Moving Picture World Correspondent Calls Attention to Danger of Cheap Shows.

From John P. Flanagan, 151 Parkview Avenue, Bangor, Maine.

MANAGER Grafton Corbett of the Bangor office of the Pathe company gave an interview to the "Moving Picture World" correspondent Wednesday, March 21, that he hopes the exhibitors of Maine will take in the spirit in which it is intended—entirely friendly but straightforward and stating facts only. Here is the gist of it:

"The attitude of the State of Maine exhibitors is gradually bringing about conditions in the film industry in this particular territory which are sure to prove derogatory to their own personal interests at no very distant date.

"The average Maine exhibitor, in dealing with the representatives of the various film exchanges, insists that the principal requisite for his theater is a cheap service. Cheapness seems to be emphasized above all other considerations and it would seem that quality is apparently of only secondary importance.

"The man who demands a cheap service usually gets it, but strange to say, when his patrons fail to enthuse over the mediocre plays which are shown, the exchange is generally held to blame and the exhibitor feels that he is being unfairly treated by the booker.

"Some of the exchange representatives have made the mistake of trying to furnish their best productions at prices dictated by the exhibitor regardless of the actual value of the feature and with no consideration with reference to local conditions. The result has been a loss to the exchanges in the encouragement of unfair methods of competition.

In northern Maine especially the conditions are such that the exhibitor will soon be obliged to pay more than double the present cost of his show if he intends to continue in the business. Most of the theaters in this section are being supplied by the exchanges located at Bangor.

"The Bangor branch offices are a great convenience to the exhibitors in the northern and eastern territory inasmuch as they save them time, trouble and money. The express charges on shipments from Bangor are only half what they would be from the Boston offices. At the present time there are four exchanges operating in Bangor. One office has been closed recently, having found it unprofitable to meet the condition imposed by the exhibitors with whom it was dealing.

"We are of the opinion that no service which is fit to run at all is worth less than $1.00 and we belive that an exhibitor who cannot afford to pay $1.00 a reel would do better to devote his time and energy to some other line of business. We have found numerous instances where service has been supplied at a rate of less than 50 cents per reel per day, and one case in which only 15 cents a reel was paid for service which included a serial not older than 40 days. Two dollars a day for a serial featuring some of the most prominent screen stars is a common thing in many Maine towns, while there are many exhibitors who are paying only $5.00 for five-reel features which they use two days. Three or four years ago these same exhibitors paid three times as much for service showed to far fewer people than now and were prosperous. Why, then, under the improved conditions, can they not pay a reasonable price now and do business? If the Bangor exchanges were to close, exhibitors of northern Maine would soon find that they would be under a far greater expense than they would be if they paid a fair price for service from Bangor. The Boston offices cannot afford to book service at a price equal to the Bangor schedule, especially since every shipment to this section would necessitate a loss of at least two days consumed in transportation.

"Another thing that I have noted about certain Maine exhibitors is that they do not appreciate the value of running serials while the producing company is conducting a general advertising campaign—just the time when the public would be most anxious to see it—when advertisements about it stare them in the face from every billboard and magazine. To save a couple of dollars a week on the cost of the serial they will wait three or four months to get it cheaper, not realizing that they are losing the benefit of the heavy advertising that was caried on for them, or else they do not believe in the power of advertising.

A Popular Film Salesman.

Bangor, Me.—Claude Fredericks, who was in Bangor visiting last week after a highly successful tour through Maine and other states with the "Battle Cry of Peace," is well known to theatrical men in this state. For severel years he has been manager of Riverside Park theatre, the summer house of the Bangor Railway & Electric Co., and two years ago introduced motion pictures to that resort. It is now the only theater in eastern Maine giving motion pictures on Sunday. Claude is magnetic, persistent popular and accommodating, and the exhibitors of Maine always treat him the best they know how.

Alice Brady Visits Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Alice Brady, the charming and beautiful daughter of William A. Brady, came to Baltimore on Wednesday night, March 14, to sing to aid the Allied Bazaar, at the Fifth Regiment armory. She appeared, beautifully gowned and dazzlingly radiant, at 9 p. m., and the crowd enthusiastically received her. She sang several selections with her rich, musical voice, and was repeatedly encored. After singing, she was conducted around to the different booths and aided very much in selling things from many of them. As she walked from booth to booth many moving picture fans recognized her and she graciously greeted many of them with a cordial handshake. She was the guest of Harry Webb, president of the Parkway Theater Company, at their beautiful playhouse, after she left the armory.

Zeppelin Destruction Shown in Film.

Baltimore, Md.—War pictures, showing the destruction of a Zeppelin over London, which are the property of the United States Government, gave a very vivid effect to the lecture of Count de Besa, the war correspondent, which he gave at the Eleventh Ward Democratic Club, 847 Hamilton terrace, on Wednesday night, March 14.

Princess Theater Changes Hands.

Baltimore, Md.—The Princess theater, Eager and Bond streets, for some time in the hands of Grectag and Selkman, has just been sold by them to Robert L. Byrum, a former business man of Savannah, Ga. D. A. Neeley, also of Savannah, has been selected by Mr. Byrum to manage the house. Mr. Neeley has had experience in the film game in the south and managed the Tomo Chi Chi theater, Tybee, Ga., for a time. The Princess has taken on quite a new aspect, as the exterior has been redecorated, while the lighting system of the interior has been entirely changed.

Walbrook Deal Goes Through.

Baltimore, Md.—On March 26 the Walbrook theater, North avenue and Rosedale street, passed into the hands of the newly formed Walbrook Amusement Company, of which the officers are: Thomas D. Goldberg, president; Nachman Goldberg, vice-president, and John Goldberg, secretary-treasurer. Several other companies were interested in this house and were negotiating for it. It was reported recently that the Parkway Theater Company had purchased it, but this was found to be erroneous. Further information comes to light which reveals that Julius Goodman, owner of the Ideal in Hampden, was another negotiator.

Adds Vaudeville at Pictorial.

Baltimore, Md.—It is announced by Harry Blechman, manager and owner of the Pictorial theater, 3310 East Baltimore street, that after April 15 he will run several acts of vaudeville in conjunction with his program of high class photoplays. Mr. Blechman has just had the stage enlarged and a new curtain hung for this purpose. The Pictorial has a seating capacity of 350.

"War Brides" at Ford's.

Baltimore, Md.—Charles E. and John T. Ford, proprietors of Ford's opera house, have booked the feature, "War Brides," featuring Mme. Nazimova, from Sidney B. Lust of Washington for the entire week of April 2. It seems to be the coming rage at this house to interpolate the big screen productions with the stage successes.

Farrar Rises and Sings National Anthem

At Premier of "Joan the Woman" in Boston Noted Singer Gives "Star Spangled Banner" With American Flag Draped Around Her—Gets Ovation.

BOSTON, MASS.—The first presentation to Boston of Jesse Lasky's picture de Luxe, "Joan the Woman," was given Tuesday night at the Colonial theater to a crowded house. It was an occasion for a display of American patriotism and for the refutation of the assertion that Mme. Farrar declines to stand when "The Star Spangled Banner" is played. Farrar not only stood twice for the anthem, but she sang it as well for good measure, to the applause of the state and city officials and the entire audience, who cheered her to the echo. When Mme. Farrar arrived at her box at the theater she was presented with a basket of American beauties which were wrapped in an American flag which the prima donna tied around herself. After many minutes of applause the picture began and many times during the course of the photo play the scenes depicting heroic acts on the part of the Maid of Orleans were applauded and cheered. Farrar's performance was very satisfactory and the part was well suited to her personality.

After the show a crowd gathered at the main entrance of the Colonial theater, and when Mme. Farrar appeared she was again cheered and found some difficulty in reaching her motor at the edge of the curb. On her way to the Touraine Hotel, which is but a short distance from the Colonial, she was followed by the cheering mob, and on arriving at the hotel she mounted the steps and made a brief speech of thanks, after which she disappeared through the entrance. The mob cheered wildly and kept it up until finally Mme. Farrar came to the window to acknowledge the applause, and thus it was that "Joan the Woman" was welcomed to Boston.

W. Mahoney Comes to Park Theater.

Boston, Mass.—William Mahoney, treasurer of Keith theater, Providence, R. I., has accepted the position of assistant manager of the Park theater, Boston, and will begin his duties in that capacity under Manager Thomas D. Soriero on Monday, March 26. Mr. Mahoney has been associated with the Keith interests in Providence for a number of years and is considered one of the best showmen in Providence.

Changes in New Brunswick Board of Censors

Two Conservatives Will Probably Be Replaced by Liberals Now That the Complexion of the Administration has been Changed.

By Frederick F. Sully, the La Tour, St. John N. B.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—That two members of the New Brunswick Board of Censors are to lose their appointments as soon as the government-elect comes into office is rumored in moving picture circles, and one of the members of the board, whose position is in question, has acknowledged that he does not except to censor many more pictures for the New Brunswick exhibitors. The board is now made up of Dr. H. S. Bridges, St. John, chairman; Michael Coll, St. John, retired merchant; Charles Nevins, broker and commission merchant, and Alfred E. McGinley, editor of the St. John Standard, one of the local dailies. Mr. Nevins and Mr. McGinley, who have been loyal Conservative workers, will undoubtedly be succeeded by two Liberals as soon as the new government, which is Liberal, is fully organized.

The present board has had its personnel unchanged since 1912, and has apparently given very little trouble to either producer or exhibitor. Dr. Bridges, chairman of the board, is superintendent of the St. John public schools, is widely read, and, besides being a Liberal in politics, is liberal in his views. The board, however, has felt the increasing need of drawing the lines ever closer, and scenes exaggerating drunkenness, women partially nude, the showing of female limbs, and other such types have been reduced to a flash on the screen. Plays that would tend to influence the youthful mind toward crime or wrongdoing have likewise been heartily condemned, and the board, guardian, as it is, of the public morals, has been fair, just and impartial in its rulings. A member of a board sits in one of the four projection rooms in the city, say, three days each week. A picture condemned by him is usually taken by the exchange before the entire board, who pass judgment upon it as a board. A picture, however, that is passed by an individual member of the board is not carried before the other members. Nova Scotia will accept a picture that has been passed by three other provinces, but New Brunswick still maintains that no other province should judge for her. It is understood from good authority that there have been some fifty-five applications from Liberal workers for positions on the new board. A choice will probably not be announced until early in May.

Steve Hurley's Talent in Demand.

St. John, N. B.—Steve C. Hurley, manager of F. G. Spencer's Unique and Lyric theaters, and secretary of the Maritime Provinces Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, is one of the most popular local amateur readers. "Steve," as he is familiarly known to his friends, has frequent demands made on his time and talents to contribute toward the programs that are continually being arranged for the entertainment of the soldiers. He has appeared not fewer than a dozen times during the winter, and was recently one of the features of a program given in conjunction with "The Man of the Hour," at the St. John opera house. His dialect impersonations are clever and original.

"Patria" to Open at the Unique.

St. John, N. B.—R. G. March, local manager for the Specialty Film, is making arrangements for the booking in this territory of the great Pathe serial, "Patria," featuring Mrs. Vernon Castle. Mayor Robert T. Hayes, Commissioner of Public Safety H. R. McLellan, other prominent city officials, and members of the New Brunswick Board of Censors recently witnessed a private screening here in the city, and all declared themselves very much impressed with the elegance of the first three episodes, and the attractive personality of the star. The picture will open in this territory with a run at the Unique theater, this city, and bookings have been made for the Empire theater, Halifax; the Gem theater, Dartmouth; the Itzit, New Glasgow, N. S.; the Princess theater, Truro, and at the Amherst and Charlottetown theaters controlled by F. G. Spencer.

Regal Gives Two Private Screenings.

St. John, N. B.—Regal Films, which recently opened offices in this city, is meeting with splendid success. William J. Reid, the resident manager, gave a private screening last week of Clara Kimball Young in "The Dark Silence," and Holbrook Blinn in "The Weakness of Man," two Brady-made pictures. Both productions were said to be very well staged, and carry stories with intense heart interest.

Newark News Letter

By Jacob J. Kalter, 25 Branford Place, Newark, N. J.

Says Board of Review Is Right.

NEWARK, N. J.—Miss Mary Gray Peck, a member of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, addressed an open conference on "Motion Pictures—A Momentous Question," held March 15 in the Y. W. C. A. by the civic department of the Contemporary. Miss Peck declared that the theory of review by the National Board of Review was right, whatever its shortcomings. Miss Peck also made some interesting statistics show what the problem of the pictures means. She said that from eight to eighteen millions of people go daily to the moving picture theaters, of which there are 15,500 in the country.

That there is an improvement in the screen productions was a fact not to be belittled was emphasized by the speaker. "Moving pictures," she said, "are no longer an entertainment or amusement alone—they have the status of an art."

H. Harris, General Film Manager.

Newark, N. J.—H. Harris, whose picture is herewith published, is the progressive manager of the Newark office of the General Film, the offices of which are located at 16-18 Beaver street. Mr. Harris gained his first experience in the film business with the General Film, with which concern he has been since identified. He was formerly connected with the 23d street branch of the General Film, under the managerial reins of H. H. Buxbaum. Through hard work Mr. Harris gained his present executive position and is working industriously to put General Film more prominently on the Jersey map.

H. Harris.

Mr. Harris is an exceedingly popular film man about town. He is interested in many of the activities of the "boys," and is a member of the F. I. L. M. Club. Mr. Harris is a sincere believer in co-operation between the exchange and the exhibitor, and it is this one thing, more than any other, that has brought the business of General up to its present height.

The Newark branch of the General Film is no longer a buying exchange, but is now a direct branch of the New York office, and is under the personal supervision of H. H. Buxbaum, who is well known to Jersey exhibitors.

Miss Perle Burger is the office assistant and stenographer in the exchange. She is a busy little miss, and very popular among the Jersey exhibitors. Elwood Brant is the man in charge of the distribution at the General office.

New Theater Ticket Company.

Montclair, N. J. — The International Ticket Company, whose office is at 3 Russell terrace, has filed articles of incorporation with the county clerk at Newark. The authorized capital is $500,000, in shares of $100 each. The incorporators are Louis F. Dodd, with eight shares, George Rosendale and Augustine J. Brett, with one share each. The company will print theater, amusement and other tickets.

Little Miss Stahl Returns.

Newark, N. J.—Dorothy Sybil Stahl, three years old, daughter of Harry H. Stahl, superintendent of the film and poster departments of the Universal Film, has just returned from a six months' sojourn at Huntington, West Virginia. The little miss has been screened several times, and while in the south took part in the production of a film.

Hatch Building Addition.

Newark, N. J.—J. Frank Hatch, owner of the Grand theater, 653 Springfield avenue, is having an addition built to his theater after plans by William B. Lehman, 738 Broad street. The Grand is a one-story brick and stone structure.

$250,000 Picture Corporation.

Jersey City, N. J.—The Mena Film Company, with registered offices at 143 Bidwell avenue, has been incorporated here with an authorized capital of $250,000. E. M. Peacock is the registered agent. The purpose is to operate moving pictures, etc. The incorporators are J. C. Kuehn, L. W. Jones and R. R. Hollister.

Lincoln Theater Reopened.

Newark, N. J.—Adolph Fleishman, 352 Broad street, this city, and Joseph Levin, 883 Eastern Parkway, New York, have filed the Lincoln theater as the trade name of the moving picture house located at 352 Broad street.

Combitone Pictures Incorporates.

Jersey City, N. J.—The Combitone Pictures Corporation, with registered offices at 1 Exchange place, have filed articles of incorporation with the clerk at Trenton. The registered agent is James J. Reardon. The concern is authorized to conduct a moving picture business, and is capitalized at $200,000. The incorporators are Frederick W. Hochstetter, William G. Bumsted and H. R. Cruse.

Holy Name Urges Stricter Censorship.

Newark, N. J.—A law providing stricter censorship of moving pictures was advocated at a meeting of the Essex County Federation of Holy Name Societies. It was contended that under present laws it is impossible to prevent the exhibition of objectionable films, as the exhibitors have the power of obtaining injunctions.

H. F. Karasik at Terminal.

Newark, N. J.—Harry F. Karasik is the new resident manager of Fox's Terminal theater, Park place and Broad street. Mr. Karasik previously held the position of manager of the Regent theater, Fulton street and Bedford avenue, Brooklyn.

Miss Fanny Slavin at Bluebird.

Newark, N. J.—Miss Fanny Slavin is the new stenographer and office assistant at the Bluebird exchange, 286 Market street. Miss Slavin is well liked by the Jersey exhibitors because of her readiness to show them little courtesies and favors whenever it is within her power.

Philadelphia Film Trade Is Prosperous

Many Expensive Organs Are Being Added to the Local Picture Theaters—Some of the Recent Examples of Fine Instruments—Other Notes.

By F. V. Armato, 144 S. Salford St., West Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Indications here point to the continuance of good business. One of the signs which indicate the confidence of local managers is the number of new and expensive organs which either have just been installed or will presently be installed.

General Manager Frank W. Buhler of the Central Market Street Amusement Company announces that the Savoy theater at 1211 Market street is having a splendid new organ put in place. The instrument is being built from original plans, and when completed will be noteworthy for its originality. A full orchestral effect will be one of the features of the instrument. Among the theaters of this company already possessing fine organs are the Victoria at Ninth and Market streets and the Market Street theater, 333 Market street. A new and very fine organ is also being installed by Manager Earle Fort at his Baltimore theater. It follows the lines of one which was very recently dedicated at his Sherwood theater.

The Ruby's new organ is possibly the finest of all the new instruments. It is the work of the M. P. Moller Company and is considered to be a gem of organ building. It is a two manual instrument with all the latest improvements, and there are many of these, including a concert harp of thirty-seven notes, a complete set of orchestral bells and chimes and other attachments.

"The Barrier" Coming to Opera House.

Philadelphia, Pa.—E. A. MacFarland, traveling road manager of "The Barrier," which has just closed a two-weeks engagement at the opera house here, writes from the Pitt theater, Pittsburgh, where the attraction is booked for five weeks. His present pride is an elaborate Alaskan scenic effect which has been installed at the Pitt theater to give "The Barrier" added atmosphere. Twenty Eskimo dogs have been secured and will be driven through the streets as one of the features of the advertising campaign.

Harry Schwalbe Gets Triangle Features.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Considerable interest attaches to the announcement by Harry Schwalbe that he has secured the future showings for this city and the surrounding territory of the film production of the Triangle. It was stated that Mr. Schwalbe intends shortly to launch a widespread publicity campaign and it is his intention to offer two releases of pictures each week. He is now negotiating with the directors of the Stanley theater to exhibit the first showing of the Monday release. He has already completed the details and obtained an exclusive contract with the management of the Arcadia theater for the exhibition of one feature weekly and he is making arrangements to completely district the city so that every section will be afforded the opportunity of seeing these plays while they are still in the stage of novelty. Through the agency of his proposed publicity campaign these theaters will reap the benefits of the advertising which will exploit the Triangle pictures in a manner not heretofore attempted.

Mr. Schwalbe is regarded as one of the most enterprising and energetic of men who are leaders in the motion picture world. "It is with a feeling of delight that I am in a position to announce that I have secured a long term contract with the Triangle Film Corporation for the exclusive exhibition of their pictures in this section," said Mr. Schwalbe last evening. "By many they are regarded as the final word in such productions and I fancy the showing of them as quickly as they are released will find quick response among the lovers of high class photoplays."

"The Double Cross" Shown Privately.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Pathe's latest serial, "The Double Cross," starring Mollie King, was given a private showing here this week before a large contingent of local exhibitors. Four episodes were shown and it seemed to be the consensus of opinion that each succeeding chapter was superior to the last. Leon Bary's work as the hero was the subject of particularly favorable comment. First presentations will be made at the Liberty and Fairmount theaters as well as at several vaudeville houses. H. Osborne, Pathe's manager here, announces that his exchange will soon move to new and larger quarters. The new building which he has in view is ideally fitted as a home for the large and rapidly growing business and will be occupied shortly if the fire underwriters consent to its use as an exchange.

Elliott Goldman Gives a Benefit.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Elliott J. Goldman of the Bluebird theater held a special matinee on March 16 for the benefit of the Consumptives' Dispensary of Kensington.

P. S. Spruill Takes the Cayuga.

Philadelphia, Pa.—P. R. Spruill has recently taken over the Cayuga theater at Germantown avenue and Cayuga street. Frank E. Russell, the former owner, was doing a splendid business at 10 cent prices before he relinquished his ownership. As he prided himself on keeping the house in first class condition, Mr. Spruill seems to have "struck it right."

The Week's First Runs.

Philadelphia, Pa.—First run showings of widely diversified interest were on view here last week. Pauline Frederick in "Sapho" at the Stanley played a week's stand. William Desmond in "Blood Will Tell" divided honors at the Arcadia with Jack Pickford in "The Dummy." Viola Dana in "The Mortal Sin" at the Victoria proved sucessful. "Womanhood," the special Vitagraph release, began a limited engagement at the Chestnut Street opera house. A feature is being made of Burr McIntosh, who preludes the picture with a patriotic address. On Monday night Commodore J. Stuart Blackton and Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady, the co-authors of the picture, were present, and each made a short address.

"The American Girl" Makes Decided Hit.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"The American Girl" series, the Kalem release of the General Film, featuring Marion Sais, made a decided hit at the Family theater, which house has recently been acquired by Alexander Boyd.

Park and Jefferson Theaters to Have Topical.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Jay Emanuel of the Park and Jefferson theaters will present his own film of local events in the neighborhood of his houses. The cameraman engaged by him some time ago has collected several interesting views of school children at play and other local events which will presently be shown.

Columbus Stamper Books Big Films.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Columbus Stamper, general manager of the New Coliseum, Cedar, Tioga and Frankford theaters, is planning a series of surprises for his patrons, as one of his recent bookings was Ince's "Civilization," which played for a week at the New Coliseum, and he announces that he is negotiating for other pictures of at least equal merit.

Loew Will Build Big Theater

Washington, D. C., to Be Favored With Monster Vaudeville and Picture House to Seat 3,500 Persons—Site Is Corner of 13th and F Streets—Lowe's Columbia Is to Be Remodeled and Enlarged.

From Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Plans are now being rushed, according to an announcement just made by Marcus Loew, for a new million dollar theater to be erected on the southwest corner of Thirteenth and F streets, northwest. This is the site on which another group of men recently announced they would build a motion picture theater. In this group was George Mann, manager of the Famous Players exchange in this city. The site is better known as the Willard estate. Mr. Loew is going somewhat further in the matter, however, for he has secured additional ground for his project.

The new theater, which is to offer a daily bill of eight vaudeville acts, in addition to motion pictures, is to have a seating capacity of 3,500. There will be about 2,000 seats on the first floor, a series of boxes will accommodate 250 people, and the balcony will be designed to seat about 1,250. The building will be thoroughly fireproof in construction and will contain nothing but the most modern equipment. The ventilating and lighting systems are to be the best procurable.

It is said that the success of the present house here, Loew's Columbia theater, at Twelfth and F streets, northwest, prompted Mr. Loew to enter into the new enterprise. It is said that he feels that Washington will support a good vaudeville and picture house of the type that he is offering in other cities of the country at popular prices. Lawrence Beattus, who is manager of the F street house, will continue in that capacity and will also be in charge of the new theater.

At the same time that this announcement was made came a statement that the Columbia will be remodeled and enlarged and be continued as a house devoted entirely to feature photoplays. Mr. Loew contemplates enlarging this theater to the extent that it will have a seating capacity of 2,500, or double its present seating capacity. Property adjoining the building on Twelfth street will be acquired and the stage will be moved from the east to the south side. The work will not be started until the new structure is completed.

Mr Loew now controls eighty theaters in the east and a number of others in the south. It is said that theaters which he now has under construction throughout the United States are said to represent an outlay of close to $10,000,000. Thomas W. Lamb, of New York, who has planned the majority of Loew theaters, is drawing the plans for the proposed new house in this city.

E. K. Fox Buys Penn Gardens.

Washington, D. C.—Edmund K. Fox, a local real estate man and the original owner of Penn Gardens, is sending out letters to the exchanges here advising them that on March 16 he purchased at public auction, under foreclosure, "Penn Gardens," together with its equipment, and, after taking possession of the property, would again operate the theater and gardens. This theater has been in the hands of several parties since its former operation by Mr. Fox. It is a very attractive house and has enjoyed a good patronage.

Work Begins on New Film Building.

Washington, D. C.—Last week saw the commencement of operations which will result in the erection of the much heralded motion picture film building on Sixth street, between F and G streets, northwest. The work of demolishing the houses now on the property has been started, and Costello Brothers, who are backing the project, are prepared to go ahead with the greatest possible speed. It will probably require close on to five months to build the structure.

At the same time comes the announcement that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will hold a public hearing on the subject of the new fire regulations, which regulations are largely responsible for the activity in building circles which is resulting in the erection of the Costello building here referred to. The hearing will be held in the board room on the fifth floor of the District Building, on March 29. The call is for 10 o'clock of that morning. The exchange managers are getting together for a preliminary discussion among themselves, at which time speakers will be selected and subjects apportioned.

There are quite a few objections to the proposed regulations, the managers believing that some of the provisions are very drastic and will work a hardship upon the exchanges as well as put them to a considerable amount of unnecessary expense. On their part, the commissioners are inclined to be very fair in the matter, and it is believed that a great many of these objections will be met by the amendment of the regulations wherever possible.

Victor L. Abbey on Road to Recovery.

Washington, D. C.—Victor L. Abbey, who for the past four or five weeks has been absent from his desk at the Mutual exchange here, is reported to be on the road to recovery, although it will be a number of weeks yet before he can return to work. It seems that Mr. Abbey is suffering from blood poison following an affection of the foot. He has been very ill and at one time the situation with respect to his life was very serious.

During the absence of Mr. Abbey, who is in charge of the serial department at the exchange, all bookings for serials will be attended to by E. G. Evans, manager of the exchange. This throws a lot of work upon the latter, for the exchange will soon have the new Helen Holmes serial, "The Railroad Raiders." All told, things are humming in Mr. Evans' office just at this time.

Floods Hamper West Virginia Film Trade.

Washington, D. C.—Many of the local exchanges doing business in the West Virginia territory are suffering from a loss of bookings following the recent very destructive floods which visited a number of the West Virginian cities. In Buckhannon the flood was the worst in twenty-one years. A large part of the city was under water and many people were driven from their homes. The railroad was under from three to five feet of water in some places and no trains were operated. Transportation through the city was by boat alone. Manager M. E. Himes, who operates the opera house, was forced to shut down. Charleston, Sutton, Weston, Gassaway and Elkins are similarly affected by the high water. Aside from this the houses would be unable to operate because of the fact that the power plants are closed down also. These are located along the waterfront and naturally are flooded. The theaters are heavy losers and sufferers from water damage.

Strike Threat Gives Trade to Post Office

Capital City Film Distributors Patronize the Post Office When Express Companies Send Warning That Shipments Must Be "Subject to Delays."

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The recent announcement that the railroad trainmen were going to go out on strike attracted considerable attention in local film circles, but it was not until one of the express companies notified the local exchange managers that it would not accept films for delivery along its lines unless the shipments were made "subject to delays" that real concern was evidenced.

It was on Friday that this latter announcement came—shipments were not to be received after 6 o'clock that night unless forwarded under the condition specified. It is true that the Postoffice Department has done everything possible to secure a share of the motion picture business for the parcel post service, but up to this time the exchange managers and exhibitors have not patronized it as liberally as they might have. The managers threw their entire Saturday's shipments into the mails and that meant about four hundred film boxes and bundles of paper.

One prominent manager said: "The local postal force is to be congratulated upon the way in which it handled the business. Of course, I expect it was a pretty good thing for us that Sunday intervened as it did, for the postoffice was probably not fully equipped to handle the big rush, and it had had no previous warning of what was coming. It gave these officials a very good idea of just exactly what the film business amounts to—while several of the exchanges were well supplied with stamps to be affixed to the packages it is said that the automobile drivers who collect the film cases turned in something like $150 in cash.

"There was naturally some little confusion, for a majority of the exchanges had not the time to advise the exhibitors that their shows were coming by parcel post, and as a result the exhibitors, many of them, were looking for the films at the express office, and only learned of the mode of transportation adopted when wired to the effect that their shows were probably at the local postoffice.

"I consider that the Postoffice Department did very well under the circumstances. And I think the manner in which they handled the business is responsible for a greater permanent business for the parcel post service. The department is getting far more shipments that it would otherwise have received. It demonstrated what it could do in a situation of this kind and that will do more to place it on an equal footing with the express companies than anything that could have happened. The reason for the flood was that all the managers knew that if nothing else moved the mails would and they were preparing to take advantage of that fact to the fullest extent."

It is said that some shipments were more or less delayed, but this will probably be overlooked by the managers in view of the fact that they had not given the local office warning that they were preparing to swamp it.

"Fatty" Arbuckle at Crandall's Savoy.

Washington, D. C.—Thousands of Washingtonians last week had an opportunity of seeing their film favorite, "Fatty" Arbuckle, in person, for while passing through this section he stopped off long enough to meet a large number of exhibitors at luncheon and later to appear at many of the theaters in this city using Paramount service. At Crandall's Savoy theater he was given a royal welcome. He made a big hit here, for he had a jolly visit with a big crowd of residents of Mount Pleasant. Later he attended the ball of the motion picture operators.

MORE BALTIMORE NOTES.

American Standard Buys "Passion Play."

Baltimore, Md.—Arthur P. Gans, manager of the American Standard Film service, announces that he is now able to accept bookings for "The Passion Play," which has been bought by this company. He is also able to furnish equipment for the screening of this feature in churches, schools and lodges.

Private View of "Railroad Raiders."

Baltimore, Md.—Owen D. Weems, manager of the Mutual exchange in this city, gave a private screening of the new serial drama of this company entitled "The Railroad Raiders," on Sunday night, March 18, at the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, through the courtesy of L. A. DeHoff, manager. It was well attended.

IN PITTSBURGH.

T. C. Bronstetter to Manage Local Universal.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—T. C. Bronstetter, formerly assistant manager of the Pittsburgh Universal branch, known as the Independent film exchange, has been appointed manager succeeding L. Baum, resigned. Mr. Baum took charge of the office only a few weeks ago, succeeding M. C. Hughes, now manager of the Montreal, Can., branch of Metro. Mr. Bronstetter is a Pittsburgher and his promotion to the position of manager meets with much approval among the trade. He has been connected with the sales department of the Independent for several years as assistant to Mr. Hughes and is familiar with every phase of the film business. Having covered the western Pennsylvania and West Virginia field for the Universal, he is exceptionally well known and popular with the exhibitors of this territory, and the fullest measure of success is assured him in his new position.

Mr. Bronstetter states that the office and sales organization of the exchange is in every way an efficient and able one and no changes are contemplated. The business of the office has been experiencing a healthy growth and the outlook is declared to be excellent.

D. F. Horner to Build in Brushton.

Brushton, Pa.—Ground has been broken at Brushton, Pa., a suburb of Pittsburgh, for a handsome new moving picture theater. The house is to be erected for D. J. Horner & Sons, well known exhibitors and proprietors of the Brushton theater. The new house is to be of fireproof construction and up-to-date in all the details of its arrangement and equipment. It will have a seating capacity of 800 and will cost $50,000 to build.

Pittsburgh Personal Notes.

Arthur Meyer of the Supreme exchange is covering the Ohio territory at present and reports much success with "The Masque of Life." This big feature opens a week's engagement at the Alhambra theater, Toledo, O., March 25.

H. F. Grelle, manager of the Supreme exchange, 1212 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, is visiting the western office of the company at Kansas City, Mo. He will be gone several weeks.

Manager Schwerin of the Pittsburgh Selznick exchange gave a largely attended private showing of two of the latest Selznick productions at the Columbia theater, Fifth avenue, Sunday evening, March 18. Several hundred exhibitors and their friends were present. "The Price She Paid," featuring Clara Kimball Young, and "The Argyle Case," featuring Robert Warwick, were shown to a very appreciative audience.

National Film Booking Service Incorporates

Company Has Been a Partnership—Capital Is $25,000—Temporary Officers Chosen —Will Release State Rights in Three States.

From Pittsburg News Service, 6016 Jenkins Arcade Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The National Film Booking service, Film Exchange building, Pittsburgh, which has been operating as a partnership, was incorporated this week with a capital of $25,000, and will operate on a more elaborate scale than heretofore. Mr. Johns, who is secretary-treasurer of the company, states that the capital is to be increased in the near future. The temporary officers elected were Edward J. McGurty, president; R. Gilchrist, vice-president, and L. S. Johns, secretary-treasurer.. These officers will probably be permanently appointed at the next meeting of the Board of Directors.

The National has announced its entry into the field covering Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia as an exchange, releasing large state rights productions in addition to its work as a booking organization. E. A. McQuiggan, who formerly held the position of booker with the late International, and who has been a partner in the National, is manager of the Pittsburgh exchange of the National. The selling organization will be in full swing within the next few days. Mr. Gilchrist will take care of his old territory, Erie and northern Pennsylvania, while Mr. McGurty will make a trip over his old stamping ground, West Virginia and a portion of eastern Pennsylvania. Chris Wolcott will again meet his city and Allegheny county patrons.

"The Barrier" Opens Brilliantly at the Pitt Theater.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Pitt theater, Penn avenue and Seventh street, opened the premier Pittsburgh engagement of the magnificent Rex Beach production, "The Barrier," in a brilliant manner on the evening of March 19. "The Barrier" follows Selig's "The Crisis," which broke all previous records at the Pitt during its long run closing March 17. Managing Director Patch spared neither time nor expense in arranging for "The Barrier" and has surpassed himself in the elaborate and effective manner in which it is presented. The opening performance was witnessed by a capacity house that registered in a stirring fashion its enthusiastic approval throughout the nine splendid reels. As a unique and striking prologue, a big scene from the play was staged. The leading roles were played in person by Russell Simpson, Mabel Julienne Scott and Mitchell Lewis, the stars of the production. A special set, comprising a picturesque Alaskan background, was used with excellent effect. The Pitt symphony orchestra of forty pieces supplied a perfect musical setting for the production.

Two Pathe Stars in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Manager Fuller of the Pathe exchange gave film showings at the Olympic theater March 22 and 23 complimentary to two notable Pathe stars who are playing at Pittsburgh theaters. The guest of honor Thursday evening was Charlotte Walker, who was accompanied by members of her company appearing in "The Cheat" at the Nixon theater. The new Pathe Gold Rooster drama, "Mary Lawson's Secret," in which Miss Walker starred, was shown and met with the highest approval of the actor folk. On Friday evening Lois Meredith, who is appearing at the Duquesne theater in "The Man Who Lost," was the guest of honor. Her latest film success, "Sold at Auction," was the attraction that furnished an interesting evening's entertainment for Miss Meredith, her company and friends.

G. B. Meyers Opens His New Gem.

Derry, Pa.—The new Gem theater, Derry, Pa., was opened in an auspicious manner recently and is enjoying a very active business. The owner is G. B. Meyers, a well known exhibitor, who is personally looking after the management of the house. He has closed his old theater in Derry, as his patronage had considerably outgrown its capacity. The Gem is an attractive house, seating 500, and is modern in every particular. Fox, Metro, Vitagraph, Triangle and Pathe pictures are shown and the admission price is 10 cents. An orchestra supplies the music, which is of a high order.

Only Four Exchanges Escape Fines.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—One of the most fruitful raids of the agents of the moving picture censor board took place recently in Pittsburgh, with the result that every exchange in the city but four was fined for not making the proper eliminations in censored films. Some twenty exchange managers appeared before the alderman's court in what resembled a general meeting of the trade, and each was assessed a fine ranging from $25 to $150 and costs. An exhibitor was included in the list of defendants, being fined $25 for using a poster last November that was alleged to have been condemned.

Claude Moorehouse With Local Famous.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Pittsburgh branch of the Famous Players has secured Claude E. Moorehouse, a well known newspaper man, as advertising and publicity manager. His experience in the advertising game covers twelve years and for some time past he has been night editor of the Pittsburgh Post. His acquisition by the local Famous Players office is considered a valuable and important one.

James Velas Building Beautiful Theater.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Work has been started on a large new moving picture theater in Wheeling, to be known as the Liberty. The builder is James Velas, a prominent and successful exhibitor. The Liberty will be one of the most beautiful and commodious picture houses in the state. It will have a seating capacity of 2,500 and will cost upward of $100,000 to build. Mr. Velas was a recent visitor in Pittsburgh, contracting for part of the equipment for the new theater.

Charles Brockheim Visiting Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Charles L. Brockheim, of New York, efficiency manager of the Universal, is spending several weeks at the Independent exchange looking over the local field. He is calling upon the exhibitors in person, visiting the theaters and making an observation of business conditions generally.

T. E. Dillard Goes to Montreal.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—T. E. Dillard has resigned as booker of the Red Feather features at the Independent exchange and has left for Montreal, Can., where he has accepted a position as assistant to his former chief, M. C. Hughes, now manager of the Metro branch there. Mr. Dillard had been associated with Mr. Hughes for a number of years, having been with him when the latter was manager of the Atlanta office of the General Film, prior to their coming to Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Manager George P. Jacobs of the Masterpiece attractions has just returned from a very successful trip through northern Ohio, booking "The Libertine" in Cleveland, Youngstown and other cities in that territory. Howard Goetz, an experienced film salesman, has been added to the road staff of the Masterpiece exchange.

Film Trade and the R.R. Agreement

Buffalo Picture Men Relieved When Threatened Strike Is Averted—Shows Would Have Been Distributed—Effects of the Higher Wages for the Railroads on the Local Film Business—Admissions Will Probably Go Up.

By Joseph McGuire, 152 North Elmwood Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Buffalo film exchange men were considerably relieved when they learned that the nationwide railroad strike had been averted. This city is an important center for the distribution of films and had the threatened embargoes become effective for a considerable period, exhibitors in this territory would have been alarmed about the possible delay in the arrival of shows.

Local exchange managers are not men who wait until the eleventh hour before taking action in an impending crisis. They believe in "taking the bull by the horns, instead of throwing it." The very nature of their work makes them resourceful. They were determined to give the exhibitors top-notch service, even if every wheel on the railroads in this territory had stopped. Their plan, in case of a strike, was to use a co-operative motor truck service, sending the films from Buffalo to Rochester, Syracuse and Albany, from which points a thorough distribution would be made. This plan would have been expensive, but, according to the exchange managers, good service takes precedence over expense in a time of a crisis, when the requirements of exhibitors and the show going public are to be properly filled.

Buffalo film men are wondering how the settlement of the railroad strike will affect their business. The concessions granted by the railroad managers, according to conservative estimates, mean that the combined salary lists of the roads will be increased approximately $60,000,000 a year. Buffalo, being an important railroad center, will receive a good share of this money, some of which will find its way into the local box offices. The railroads, on the other hand, to offset their heavy expenditures, will undoubtedly advance their shipping rates and the financial burden will probably fall eventually on Mr. Ultimate Consumer. The opinion has been expressed here that the rates on film shipments by express may also be advanced. This action would mean more expensive shows, and, with other unforseen handicaps, nickle admissions may become a rarity.

In fact, nearly everything in Buffalo, necessities and luxuries alike, has advanced in price during the past year. The notable exception is the cost of seeing a good moving picture performance. Even the public is wondering how soon Buffalo exhibitors will have to raise their prices. If the expected advance comes this year, the public will bow to the inevitable, just as the cigar and candy devotees have done, and the local moving picture theaters will do a capacity business as they have done under the old price schedule.

Hippodrome Books Paramount and Triangle First Runs.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, recently closed a contract for the exclusive first run of Triangle and Paramount pictures of the William L. Sherry Feature Film Company. The Triangle plays have been shown at the Hippodrome for the past year. The Triangle and Paramount service each release for this house two five-part features a week, but the present policy of two features a week will be continued, that is, changing the pictures on Sunday and Thursday. Competent judges select the two best pictures each week.

Screeners Have Good Time.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Buffalo Screen Club held an enthusiastic meeting Monday evening, March 19. After the regular business session the time was given up to a social program. The club is in a flourishing condition and continues to be among the live wire organizations of this city. During the severe weather of the past winter the clubrooms radiated with all the good cheer and comforts of home. Hardly a day passes that does not see a dozen or more out-of-town representatives of the industry call and partake of the hospitality of the club. "Welcome" is not only printed on the doormats of the organization but is emphasized in the greetings of all the members.

Billy Sunday Lessens Show Receipts.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Billy Sunday's campaign in Buffalo is drawing to a close. It would be folly not to think that his attracting of hundreds of thousands of persons and many thousand dollars to his tabernacle in the past eight weeks has not hurt the local moving picture business. Film men who were disposed to cast aspersions at Mr. Sunday before and at the beginning of his campaign, are now inclined to praise the hynotic power by which he sways the multitude. Exchange men and exhibitors realize, however, that during February and March the famous evangelist handed the moving picture business of this city a real body blow. In a few days they will be glad to bid him good-by and wish him good luck in his New York campaign. They will also earnestly hope that at the end of Lent Buffalo will have another lively revival, not of the Sunday variety, but in the local film field.

Family Theater Makes Improvements.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Harry Marsey, who took over the Family theater, Buffalo, is making extensive improvements on the inside and outside of that house. The box office has been placed directly at Washington street and Broadway, facing Main street. This conspicuous location is helping business at the Family, which uses a regular program of first-run pictures, good comedies, etc. The admission is ten cents. Mr. Marsey is also general manager of the Elmwood, Allendale, Columbia and Colonial theaters of this city.

Toronto News Letter

Mutual Loses in Two Fires.

TORONTO, ONT.—The Mutual Film sustained two losses by fire during the week of March 12. On Monday, March 12, the Red Mill, Toronto, was partly destroyed through the ignition of film in the projection booth. The Mutual feature, "Youth's Endearing Charms," was destroyed. On Tuesday, March 13, the former Canadian headquarters of the Mutual at 178-180 Victoria street were badly burned. Fortunately the premises were being used only for storage purposes and no film was lost, but a large quantity of posters, still photographs, heralds and other literature for the Mutual's Canadian branches, and a projection machine. The damage to the Mutual was estimated at $800.

Manager Barrett Goes to Vitagraph.

Toronto, Ont.—On March 17 W. F. Barrett, Toronto manager of the Mutual, resigned to assume charge of the local office of the Greater Vitagraph in succession to L. H. Watrous, who returned to the United States to fill another position. Mr. Barrett is well known in both Toronto and Winnipeg. He lined up the Winnipeg exhibitors for a 15-cent admission rate, after which move both exhibitors and exchanges made money. Barrett was originally with the Crystal Palace exchange, one of the first in Canada, and he is one of the Toronto film pioneers.

Manager J. C. Brady Not Leaving Madison Theater.

Toronto, Ont.—Emphatic denial is made by Manager Brady, owner of the Madison theater, Toronto, to the statement that he had arranged to retire from the active management of his house, which is one of the best and busiest theaters outside of the downtown area. Many local managers and exhibitors rushed to secure the Madison when they heard that Mr. Brady was stepping out, but they were quickly told that he had no such idea in mind. After receiving so many inquiries, Mr. Brady thinks more of his house than ever before.

Clever Advertising Helped James Travis.

Toronto, Ont.—James Travis, of Cooper's exchange, Toronto, and special representative in Canada for Max Linder comedies, recently put over a clever advertising stunt for an Essanay feature which was eventualled booked for first run by the Toronto Strand. On successive days, Travis sent out a series of post cards to the members of the film business, all referring in some way to a dress suit. "Will you lend me your dress suit?" read the first post card which was signed by "Haroid." The postals had 'em all guessing. Travis finally came out with the announcement about the release of "Skinner's Dress Suit."

Canadian Topical Opens Montreal Office.

Toronto, Ont.—R. S. Marvin, 259½ Yonge street, Toronto, publisher of the "Canadian Topical Review," recently visited Montreal for the purpose of opening a Montreal branch to facilitate the booking there of his news weekly and to serve as the headquarters for his Montreal cameraman. Loew's theater, Toronto, has arranged for the first run of the "Canadian Topical Review," the contents of which are strictly Canadian in character. Marvin also has a cameraman on the job in Vancouver, B. C., and is making arrangements for current viwes from Winnipeg and the Middle West.

"Patria" at Shea's Vaudeville.

Toronto, Ont.—The highly interesting news was divulged on March 16, that the Pathe serial, "Patria," had been booked for Shea's Vaudeville theater, Toronto, where heretofore nothing but one and two reel comedies or news pictures have been run to open or close the show. "Patria" will be given No. 5 on the bill each week, and the first episode, presented during the week of March 19, was featured as the headliner in both the newspaper advertising and the posters.

"Patria" was shown at a trade screening in the Rialto theater on March 13, when almost a hundred exhibitors and exchange representatives obtained their first view of the much talked-of serial. After the exhibition the crowd was taken to the St. Charles hotel, where the film men became the guests of Manager Wally Davidson, of the Pathe office, for an after-theater supper and cabaret.

"The Whip" Shown to Exhibitors.

Toronto, Ont.—Toronto film men responded in large numbers to the invitations issued by Charlie Stevens, of Super-Features, Limited, 59 Victoria street, Toronto, for a private screening of "The Whip" at the Regent theater, Toronto, on the evening of March 16. "The Whip" is the first subject to be released by Toronto's latest exchange.

Mr. Stevens has just received a carload of oil paintings of film stars, post cards and advertising novelties from the Kraus Mfg. Co., New York, which concern he will represent throughout Canada with the exception of the Province of Quebec. The latter territory is covered by the J. T. Malone Company, Montreal.

Ken Finley Resumes Management of the Francais.

Ottawa, Ont.—Ken Finley, of Ottawa, has resumed the management of the Francais theater, Ottawa. This house was closed for a time, and the fittings and accessories were sold on February 24 at a bailiff's sale to satisfy a claim of $1,200 for rent by Patrick Labelle, the landlord. The theater has now been reopened, however, with Mr. Finley in charge. He had the theater some time ago.

Toronto, Ont.—Manager J. A. McCulloch, of the Royal George theater, Toronto, has returned from a winter's sojourn in Florida, bringing back with him good health and a good fish story.

Cleveland News Letter

By M. A. Mataney, 218 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.

Strike Fear Worried Film Men.

CLEVELAND, O.—Conditions bordering upon a panic were prevalent in the film exchanges of Cleveland last Monday, due to the supposedly impending railroad strike.

Films coming from out of town were delayed and lost so that many of the exhibitors had to make switches. At one time during the day, certain express companies announced that they would not deliver the films and there was a wide scramble for the depots, but later they relented and deliveries were made in part.

Last Saturday the exchange managers held a meeting in the Vitagraph exchange at which plans were laid for delivery of films to out-of-town theaters, in case there was a strike. But these plans were not needed, fortunately.

The exchange men were making use of the parcel post during the situation and no doubt will continue to do so.

Local Exchange Men Organizing.

Cleveland, O.—At a meeting of exchange managers of Cleveland last week, at the Chamber of Commerce, arrangements were made for the organization of an association similar to that in Cincinnati. All of the managers present signed applications for membership in the chamber, which was the step necessary.

It is understood that the first thing to be taken up after organization will be the express service and a vigorous fight will be made to improve it.

Sydney Rosenthal With Tri-State.

Cleveland, O.—Sydney Rosenthal, well known Ohio film man, is now on the road for the Tri-State Film exchange, out of Cleveland. He has been doing fine work. "Syd" formerly was an exhibitor, having managed the Savoy theater in this city.

Sydney Rosenthal.

His portrait is printed with this notice and we promise any and all good friends of the moving pictures that they can safely introduce themselves to him on sight whenever and wherever he can be found and apprehended.

Harry Ross Goes to Detroit.

Cleveland, O.—Harry A. Ross, one of the most popular exchangemen in this section, has resigned as manager of the Mutual Film, local branch, and is now maneger of the Paramount exchange in Detroit.

Mr. Ross formerly was an independent exchangeman in Columbus, Ohio, and previously to that was a roadman in Michigan, so he is very familiar with the territory to which he has attached himself.

Burton Garrett has succeeded Mr. Ross as Cleveland Mutual manager.

Richardson Made Welcome in Cincinnati

Lecture on Practical Projection by Moving Picture World Man Is Well Received —Exhibitors, Exchange Men and Operators Help Along the Occasion.

From Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First Na tional Bank Building, Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O.—One of the cost interesting gatherings which moving picture men in Cincinnati have held for some time, in many respects, was that on Wednesday evening, March 21, to hear a lecture by F. H. Richardson, of the Moving Picture World, on "Practical Projection," and to attend the dinner in honor of Mr. Richardson which followed the lecture.

The affair was held under the joint auspices of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League and the Associated Film Exchanges, both affiliated with the Chamber of Commerce, and President Fred Emmert, of the Exhibitors, and President W. C. Bachmeyer, of the Exchanges, acted jointly in supervising the affair and its preliminaries.

The committee in charge of arrangements consisted of Charles Weigel, of the Alhambra, chairman; J. J. Huebner, Jr., of the Twin City theater; A. G. Hettesheimer, of the Orpheum; L. W. Greenstein, of the State Film Service; R. H. Haines, of the Mutual; J. P. Gruwell, of the K-E-S-E; R. E. Peckham, of the Tri-State, and H. Serkowich, secretary of both film organizations.

Mr. Richardson's lecture was highly appreciated, and the dinner which followed, informal and therefore more enjoyable, gave those present an opportunity to meet him on an intimate basis.

"Birth of a Nation" Begins Cincinnati Run.

Cincinnati, O.—"The Birth of a Nation" began its long-delayed run at the Grand opera house on Monday, March 19, under the most favorable auspices possible, and at the highest prices which have ever prevailed for moving pictures in Cincinnati, the top being $1.50. The fact that the picture has been seen all over the country and that its story is well known does not seem to have interfered in the least with the interest noted, the contrary rather being the case. Moreover, the German crisis, by a peculiar coincidence, reached a climax on the day the run began, lending additional interest to a picture of warlike flavor.

"Nation" Film Opens in Spite of Protests

Dayton, O.—In spite of the protests of colored residents and the fear that the city authorities would take some steps looking toward the prevention of the exhibition, the Dayton run of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Victoria theater, began on March 16 without any interference whatever. As the exhibition at the Victoria was the first in Ohio, after a three-year fight, unusual interest attached to it, many exhibitors from Cincinnati, Cleveland and other cities attending to get their first view of the picture and to see how it took with the public.

Handling Films to Good Advantage.

Dayton, O.—F. B. Chase, handling the new McClure series, "The Seven Deadly Sins," was in the city in connection with the initial run of the first picture at the Columbia, and incidentally the management received the full set of posters which will be used with the pictures. A different color scheme is used for each picture, and the paper as a whole is extremely effective.

Quick Work of Operator Battinger Stops Fire.

Piqua, O.—The possibility of a sure-enough fire was spoiled at the Favorite theater by the coolness of Operator Elmer Battinger. A film caught fire in some manner, and the blaze shot through the opening into the theater. Mr. Battinger promptly threw his coat over the box and smothered the blaze, not even the whole film being burned. He was somewhat signed during the process, but not seriously burned, and the money loss was trifling. The fire department was called out, but there was nothing for it to do when it arrived.

Dayton Theater Co. Incorporated.

Dayton, O.—The Dayton Theater Co. has been incorporated by Sidney G. Kusworm, Charles W. Dale, Harry I. Schenck and others, with a capital stock of $15,000. The company is planning to build a handsome and modern theater, for moving picture use exclusively.

Hamilton, O.—Manager Goodwin, of the Grand theater, knows how to handle the publicity end of his business. He started the engagement of Nazimova in "War Brides" with a private showing of the picture for the benefit of the press, and the newspaper men were so much impressed with the film that they gave it plenty of space. The picture had a three-day run at the Grand, with large houses at every performance, according to Manager Goodwin.

Jim Dunlevy to Build New Theater.

Akron, O.—The Bank theater, Akron, O., will soon be a thing of the past, as the owners are going to convert it into a business place. Manager Jim Dunlevy has plans for a new house in Akron.

Theaters Made the Goat Again.

Cleveland, O.—According to the Cleveland Foundation's Survey, the photoplay theaters are to blame for the delinquency of children. The Foundation is making a survey of the theaters, assisted by the Exhibitors' league, and the first thing they reported was the above. True, they did not say motion picture theaters in so many words, but they did say "cheap theaters," and that may be taken for what it is worth by the film men.

Amberlux Office Moves.

Columbus, O.—Wm. Deshler Warner, the United States distributor of "Amberlux" lens filters, has moved into new and larger quarters at 8 East Broad Street. He has agencies at 1,604 Broadway, N. Y.; 166 North State street, Chicago; 12 Charing Cross Road, London, Eng., and Calle Tucumar, 737 Buenos Aires, S. A.

Shelby, O.—The Opera House at Shelby, O., under the up-to-date management of Messrs. Allwein & Shreffler, is showing Paramount, Triangle, K-E-S-E and special productions.

Cleveland, O.—"Hearts and Flowers," a Cleveland-made photoplay is missing and the owners have sued Mrs. Anna Seibert to recover it. She claimed it was given to her by Charles Weston, director, on a loan. W. G. Rose and S. S. Wilson, the owners, also promoted the company which recently made a "Snow White" picture in Cleveland.

Fine Union City Theater Opens

Frances Theater, Just Completed, Opened on March 12—Auditorium Has Seats for 600 Persons—Manager W. C. Morris Is Jubilant Over the Friendly Press of Patrons the First Night—A Good Picture Town.

By J. L. Ray, 1014 Stahlman Building, Nashville, Tenn.

UNION CITY, TENN.—Under most auspicious conditions, the Frances theater was opened to the public on Monday, March 12, in the new Beck building. Many hundreds were turned away from the first night performances, while those fortunate enough to gain admittance were well repaid for their trouble. The street for many blocks in front of the showhouse was jammed with automobiles, and the pavements in front of the theater were packed with crowds for many hours. A reception committee presented pictures of Marguerite Clark as souvenirs, and the program featured this star in "Miss George Washington."

The new structure is of red pressed brick, three stories in height, and finished in an artistic manner. The forty-foot lobby is of tile, arcaded above with heavy plate glass, and the auditorium is provided with concrete floors. The interior finishings are in ivory and gold. A three-color electric flash sign is placed outside the main entrance, alternating the words "Frances—Motion—Pictures" in three shades of light. The auditorium seats 600, and, everything considered, the theater is one of the handsomest of the smaller photoplay houses in the state, and would do credit to a city the size of Nashville or Memphis.

Manager W. C. Morris is jubilant over the successful beginning of the new theater during the first few days of its existence, and predicts continued patronage the year round, as Union City is a good moving picture town. Mr. Morris is the pioneer picture man in this section, having operated the Gem and other theaters in Union City for the past ten years, and patrons of the new Frances may be assured of continued high grade entertainment under his capable management.

Negro Theaters in Nashville.

Nashville, Tenn.—Owing to the large percentage of the population of this city consisting of negroes, the picture houses for this class of trade have enjoyed a marked degree of prosperity in recent years. While the leading theaters playing road shows have divisions of the gallery set aside for the colored trade, this is not so in connection with the picture houses, and to successfully fulfill the demands of the colored patrons for pictures a number of high class theaters are in constant operation.

The largest and handsomest of these is the Bijou, managed by Milton Starr, which was formerly used for road shows catering to white people, but since the negro business section has extended into this territory it has been converted into a negro house. In the same locality are located the Star, Excel, and Lincoln, the latter having been closed for some weeks.

In addition to these houses, the new Liberty, on South Fifth avenue, recently put in operation by Manager John C. Krech, enjoys a goodly share of the colored patronage, as well as suburban houses of this kind, such as the Alpine etc. Managers of the various houses agree that their class of trade are great admirers of the sensational western films, thrilling serials, fast comedy, and pictures of this character.

General to Close Memphis Office.

Memphis, Tenn. — Announcement has just been made that the local office of the General Film will be closed, and the distribution of film from this city discontinued. A. S. Parker, cashier of the Memphis division, has been appointed office manager to handle current business, and states that, while the branch will be discontinued, it will probably require five or six months before the office will cease to carry on its regular business.

Vendome Shows War Relief Pictures.

Nashville, Tenn.—An unusually large attendance was recorded at the Vendome theater during the exhibition of the pictures shown under the auspices of the Permanent Blind War Relief Fund of New York. Slides were shown on Nashville screens announcing in advance that Sergeant Major Middlemiss, of the British army, blinded in service, would lecture, and prices were set at 50 cents, 75 cents, $1 and $1.50. The fund is maintained for the relief of Belgian, French and British soldiers blinded in the European war.

Sunday Talks at Fifth Avenue.

Nashville, Tenn.—The Crescent Amusement Company has always come to the forefront when a theater has been required for Sunday use by some religious speaker, conference, etc., and recently extended the use of the Fifth Avenue, its largest picture house, for this purpose. On Sunday, March 18, Dr. Allen Fort, of the First Baptist Church, spoke to a young men's gathering, and the company is to be complimented upon its liberality in furnishing the house for this worthy purpose, made possible through its president, Tony Sudekum.

Pickford Sets Record in Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala.—Attendance records at the Alcazar were shattered during the run of the Artcraft feature, "A Poor Little Rich Girl," starring Mary Pickford. The picture was originally booked for three days, but during that time 8,126 persons saw the play, and Manager Sid Griffin held it over for the balance of the week. Even after this time hundreds clamored for admission, and it was retained for an additional two days, making a grand total of 22,102 admissions in the eight days' run. This sets up a new mark for local attendance, as well as establishing a precedent for continued run of an ordinary feature.

New House for Montgomery.

Montgomery, Ala.—A contract has been placed with James Hodgson for the erection of a moving picture theater on Montgomery street, between Moulton and Lee streets. This house is to be erected by the N. J. Bell estate, and plans call for completion by June 1. Hoxey Farley will be in charge of the theater when placed in operation.

Atlanta Exhibitors Withdraw Sunday Shows

Picture Theaters Have Been Giving Sabbath Shows for Charity, But Opposition Has Developed and Managers Will Give Them Up.

A. M. Beatty, 43 Copenhill Avenue, Atlanta, Ga.

ATLANTA, GA.—The managers of the various moving picture theaters have decided to abandon Sunday pictures, regardless of what action the city council may take in the matter of the Buchanan ordinance, and there won't be any quarrel over the anti-Sunday motion picture ordinance, after all. Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Criterion theater, announced that the theater men had decided to discontinue their Sunday charity moving picture shows, rather than enter into a fight with "any faction or element in the city."

"The motives of the theater men seem to have been misunderstood," he said. "Strange as it may seem to some reformers, the theaters have not been making money on the charity shows. All we got out of it was publicity. We considered it good publicity, when, at times, as many as 4,000 persons visited our theater on a Sunday afternoon and night. I can't see any more harm in it than an organ recital at the Auditorium, or band concert in a public park.

"Then, this theater alone has turned over to worthy charities more than $2,000."

The Atlanta Council Ordinance Committee met Thursday, March 15, to consider the Buchanan ordinance, which would absolutely prohibit the opening of motion picture theaters on Sunday. Chairman A. J. Orme said he thought the ordinance was in conflict with the state law. Finally it was decided to postpone action on the ordinance until a meeting Friday, March 23, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. All persons interested in the matter were invited to come to the meeting and express their views.

The attitude of the moving picture men, however, has removed the object of the ordinance, and it is expected that it will die as a useless measure.

J. G. Evins Buys Out Alpha Fowler.

Atlanta, Ga.—John G. Evins, one of the pioneers in the Atlanta motion picture field, returned to the business Tuesday, when he purchased the interest of Alpha Fowler in the Vaudette and Strand theaters. Mr. Evins established the Vaudette several years ago, and made it one of the most successful moving picture houses in the city. He will have charge of both theaters.

Mr. Fowler, who had active management of the two houses, will remain in Atlanta, it was reported, with plans he will announce in a short time.

Atlanta Man Member of National Board of Review.

Atlanta, Ga.—W. L. Percey, secretary of the Dods & Wey Co., and a member of the Atlanta Board of Motion Picture Review, has been elected to a place on the National Board of Review, the members of which are representative men and women from cities throughout the country.

Mr. Percy was a recent visitor to New York City, where he was complimented by W. D. McGuire, executive Secretary of the national board, with a special screening of the Farrar picture, "Joan the Woman," at which members of the executive committee and several frends of Mr. Percey's were invited guests.

Tandy & Lynch Buy "Joan the Woman" State Rights.

Atlanta, Ga.—One of the biggest moving picture deals of the year was reported Tuesday, when it became known that C. E. Tandy and S. A. Lynch, leading spirits in the Southern Paramount exchange, had purchased the Southern rights of "Joan the Woman," the Geraldine Farrar masterpiece.

The purchase price, Mr. Tandy states, was $110,000. This is the highest price ever paid for territorial rights to any screen production. It was held for a price of $180,000 for many months, the purchasers eventually obtaining it at the $70,000 reduction.

Stone Mountain School Showing Educational Films.

Stone Mountain, Ga.—The Stone Mountain schools have placed themselves on a circuit, and will receive films from the Bureau of Commercial Economies in Washington. This service is secured on the condition that they be exhibited without any charge for admission, either at the door or by collection.

The subjects of the program for Monday night were "Making Good Roads," "The Manufacture of Matches," and "International Football."

Walter J. Price's Father Dies.

Atlanta, Ga.—Walter J. Price, manager of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company, was called to Brooklyn Tuesday on account of the death of his father.

Herbert E. Rivers Drowned at Eastern End Isle of Palms.

Charleston, Ga.—Herbert E. Rivers, of Atlanta, a traveling salesman for the Mutual Film Corporation, was drowned Sunday off the eastern end of the Isle of Palms, near Charleston. He was on a business trip to Charleston, stated his fellow employes at the Mutual. His home here was at 44 Boulevard circle. He is survived by his wife and one small child.

Mushroom Heaters Under Discussion.

Louisville, Ky.—Theatrical men have been discussing with interest an editorial which recently appeared in one of the local newspapers relative to the mushroom type of heaters as used in some of the best and most modern theaters in the country. Following the announcement of plans for the new Louisville Auditorium, a $250,000 building, which is to be equipped with the mushroom type of heater, the paper came out with an absurd editorial condemning this type of heating, and stating that one theater so equipped had proved very objectionable, and referring to the fact that it was overheated, uncomfortable, and that the audience roasted throughout the shows.

In fact there are two theaters equipped with this type of heating equipment in this city, one being the Keith National theater, and the other the Alamo picture house, seating about 1,000 persons. Manager Fred Dolle of the Alamo reports that he has never received a complaint, and has received many compliments on the excellent washed air heating and ventilating used in the theater, which is recognized as one of the best ventilated houses in the south. The management of the Keith house made a similar statement. Joseph & Joseph, architects who designed the Keith house, stated that the system had proved very satisfactory, and was coming into general use in theater heating. D. X. Murphy & Brother architects, who designed the Alamo, also drew the plans for the auditorium. This concern has had many years' experience, and would not have specified this type of heating for the auditorium had it not proved eminently satisfactory in the Alamo. The system costs more to start with, and that would be one factor against it if it was not able to deliver.

Penal Suits for Sunday Opening

Frankfort, Ky., Moving Picture Show Managers Indicted for Opening Theaters on the Sabbath—Heavy Damages Claimed by the Commonwealth's Attorney—Several of the Local Theaters Are Involved in the Action.

From Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky.

FRANKFORT, KY.—Penal action suits against three local moving picture theaters for operating their shows unlawfully on Sunday, March 4, 1917, were filed in the office of the circuit clerk on March 17 by Commonwealth's Attorney Victor A. Bradley. One suit, naming D. D. Smith as defendant, asked damages of $150; another, naming H. V. Whitney as defendant, asked damages of $250; while a third, naming the Capital Theater Company as defendant, asked $300 damages. H. V. McChesney, E. C. O'Rear and Hobson & Son will assist in the prosecution.

On March 17 the management of the Columbia theater came out with an announcement to the effect that no more Sunday shows would be seen in the theater, stating that after taking the matter up with many patrons it had decided in favor of public sentiment.

Fire Guts Shawnee Theater.

Louisville, Ky.—Although of brick and tile construction in most part the Shawnee theater, 3725 West Broadway, one of the outskirts theaters, and the newest in the city, was partly gutted and the roof half burned off in a severe fire which recently swept the building. Fortunately the fire started after midnight, the alarm being sounded at 2:20 in the morning. The stairway, box office and operator's room were gutted, and two new machines ruined. The loss is placed at between $6,000 and $7,000. There were no films in the theater at the time of the blaze. The management reports that the house will be repaired and reopened as soon as possible.

Song Boosters in Local Theaters.

Louisville, Ky.—Music publishers are said to be behind a movement to get singers back into the theaters to push the popular new sheet music. During the past few days a number of song boosters have been working in the local theaters without recompense in an effort to get their new songs over the footlights. Louisville picture theaters have been away from warbling with screenings for the past two years, and it is not thought likely that they will return.

Small Orchestras Coming Back.

Louisville, Ky.—Local theaters are coming back to small orchestras again after using pianos and electrical instruments for several months as a result of differences between the exhibitors and the musicians' unions. The Casino, Star and Orpheum theaters are at present all using the piano and drum combination. Since these theaters raised their admission price from five to ten cents, they have suffered a falling off of about one-third in the number of persons entering their portals, but the box office receipts have increased in a proportionate amount.

Keep Close Watch for Broken Seats.

Louisville, Ky.—Old, dilapidated or cheap seats have proved a penny wise and pound foolish way of economy, it has been found in several cases in Louisville. Small houses as a rule endeavor to do everything as cheaply as possible, and generally equip with cheap or second hand chairs. The result has been that they have been steadily having seat trouble, seats breaking and injuring patrons, splintering and causing some one to be scratched, or in upholstered seats springs get loose and tear clothing. One suit has been filed three different times before the correct defendant was located in a case where a seat let go and a spine was injured. A few days ago a man was slightly injured in one of the legitimate houses when a seat on the back row in the balcony gave way, throwing him backward into an aisle. To protect the patrons it is necessary to keep very close watch on seats, and see that they are firm and in good repair.

Louisville, Ky.—Work was started on Monday, March 19, by the Jefferson Film Company of Louisville on a one-reel comedy entitled "A Bad Good Little Girl." This company was recently organized by prominent local people, and, while the capital is only $500, there is no stock for sale. The stock is held entirely by a few persons who are playing the parts in the productions, it being an amateur company to make amateur pictures.

Arrangements have been made with Charles Koch, photographer for the Broadway Amusement enterprises, and manager of the Rex theater, whereby the company will only pay for acceptable film, that is, film which is first class so far as photography is concerned. Jack Brehme, formerly of Detroit, Mich., is directing the work. The leading part is being played by Miss Caroline Hutchings, of Louisville, supported by A. J. Shaw, Miss Nellie Conklin and Miss Priscilla O'Brien. Everyone connected with making the picture, with the exception of the photographer, is a member of the stock company, and are putting their best into the production, which, when completed, will be shown through the chain of theaters controlled by the Broadway Amusement Company, and later released. Interiors are being made in the home and in the old studio at Riverside Park owned by Colonel L. Simon, and temporary headquarters are in the Republic building. If the first picture proves successful the company will make others. This company is apparently a legitimate enterprise, out to make pictures, and not to job stock, and its work is of much interest.

Pertinent and Personal Items.

Louisville, Ky.—Nelson Van H. Gurnee, of Lexington, Ky., connected with the Ada Meade and other theatrical interests, was in Louisville recently, where he called on Fred Dolle of the Alamo and other exhibitors. He reported that business was good in Lexington.

Louisville, Ky.—The offices of the Gateway Motion Picture Company, over the Casino theater, Louisville, were closed last week.

Louisville, Ky.—John Fentress, formerly connected with the Crystal theater, who has been at the front with the First Kentucky regiment on the Mexican border, returned last week. On leaving Louisville he weighed 130 pounds, but returned with 168 pounds. He stated that a private even had a good time, and much valuable experience.

Lexington, Ky.—The Colonial Amusement Company has sued the Merchants' Transfer Company for $1,000 as damages for breaking a mirror screen while transferring it from the Colonial theater to the Strand.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

Michigan Censor Bill Still In Committee

Eaton Bill Will Probably Not Be Reported Out by the Ways and Means Committee, But Legislature Still Has a Couple of Weeks—A Sunday Bill.

By Jacob Smith, 503 Free Press Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, Mich.—At this writing we understand from good authority that the Eaton censorship bill, now in the hands of the Ways and Means Committee of the Michigan Legislature, will not be reported out, although considerable pressure is being brought to bear by the members of women's clubs to have the bill go to the senate and house for final vote. But as the legislature will not adjourn before the early part of April there is no telling what will happen between now and that time, but we are all hoping for the best.

There is also pending before the state legislature a Sunday closing bill, which is practically the same as one now on the statute books. The new bill would increase the penalty for offenses. This bill is not favorably thought of, even in the legislature, as it calls for the elimination of all Sunday amusements, and the closing of all places of business except those which are vitally necessary to the community.

William H. Sheik of the Detroit Exhibitors' League, George Weeks, M. S. Bailey, Col. W. S. Butterfield, William H. Irvine and others were recently in Lansing on legislative matters.

Charles H. Muehlman Goes to Illinois.

Detroit, Mich.—Charles H. Muehlman, manager of the State Film Co., Detroit, resigned March 18 and returned to the Harper Film Co., where he will represent that company in the state of Illinois on "Civilization."

Fitzpatrick & McElroy Buy Part of Orpheum at Benton Harbor.

Benton Harbor, Mich.—Fitzpatrick & McElroy, who control several Michigan theaters, have augmented their holdings by the purchase of a half interest in the Orpheum theater, Benton Harbor, Mich. This gives them, besides the Orpheum, the Princess and Bijou theaters in that city, as well as the Caldwell in St. Joe—just across the river. All of the Benton Harbor houses are to be improved at once at an expense of $3,500. The Orpheum will be completely remodeled, and the seating capacity enlarged, as well as the front changed. Nat Charnas, who still retains a half interest in the Orpheum, will be house manager as heretofore. Fitzpatrick & McElroy make their headquarters in Chicago, where they also control theaters.

Lew Foster With Local Paramount.

Detroit, Mich.—Lew W. Foster has returned to Detroit as special representative for Paramount, and will work out of the Detroit office. He was formerly with the Triangle in Detroit and Cincinnati.

A Contest That Brings Patrons.

Detroit, Mich.—The Majestic theater, Detroit, is conducting another guessing contest in connection with its actual attendance for the week of March 25, during which time it is showing George Cohan in "Broadway Jones." Once before the Majestic conducted such a contest and it was so successful that Manager M. W. McGee decided to repeat it. The paid attendance for the week of The Americano was 26,948 and a larger record is being anticipated during the Cohan engagament.

New Film Building Under Way.

Ground has already been broken for the new film building at John R and Elizabeth streets, which will be seven stories high and exclusively for film exchanges and allied trades. Negotiations have already been closed with about 16 film companies, among them the Mutual, General, K-E-S-E, Standard Fox, Vitagraph, Pathe, World, Harry I. Garson Productions, Broadway Feature Film, Tri-State, Barnett Film Attractions, Bell and Artcraft.

The building will be 80 by 100 feet, and if there is the proper demand, the adjoining seven story structure will be turned over to the film industry. The contracting firm has given a bond to have the building ready for occupancy by Sept. 1 of this year. The Mutual will move in before that time if it is ready. Provision is made in the building for a projection room where tenants of the building may exhibit their product to customers. The amount involved in leases is said to exceed a half million dollars. Frank M. O'Hearn, of the Merchants Realty Co., 91 Griswold street, Detroit, is negotiating the leases.

Paul Mooney Visits Detroit.

Dertoit, Mich.—"Always glad to spend a few days in Detroit," said Paul Mooney, district representaive for the Fox corporation, when in Detroit March 21. "We are doing a big business in Michigan and not goes by that our sales and collections fail to show a big increase. Our two-day policy of Theda Bara and William Farnum productions is also working great in this state."

Local Universal's New Grand Rapids Office.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The Universal has opened larger offices at 48 South Division street, Grand Rapids, in charge of A. F. Coleman. The official opening took place Thursday, March 15. The morning was spent in receiving visitors, in the afternoon exhibitors were given complimentary tickets for the local theaters, and in the evening there was a banquet at the Hotel Morton. George W. Weeks acted as toastmaster, and among those who talked were W. H. Irvine, of the K-E-S-E office in Detroit; King Baggot, Universal star; Dave Klein, controlling "Absinthe" for Michigan; Ray Branch, of the Enterprise theater equipment company; May Clark, publicity manager for the Gillingham & Smith theaters; Mr. Brown, a local exhibitor; and Mr. Harris, a Hart Michigan exhibitor.

The Universal offices occupy ground floor space at this address, and are about 30 by 100 feet in size.

The Enterprise motion picture theater equipment company has also opened a Grand Rapids office at the same location.

With Detroit State Rights Companies.

Detroit, Mich.—Col. W. S. Butterfield, of the State Film company, Detroit, states authoritatively that his company controls the following big features for Michigan: "Civilization," "A Mormon Maid," "Libertine," "The Masque of Life," and The Conquest of Canaan."

J. Russell Brett and G. A. Ranshaw, roadmen, are now calling upon Michigan exhibitors and arranging for bookings.

Detroit, Mich.—John H. Kunsky announces that Ramona will be an early attraction at the Madison theater, Detroit. Mr. Kunsky states further that open booking will be the permanent policy of the Madison.

Detroit, Mich.—"Enlighten Thy Daughter" has been purchased for Michigan by John H. Kunsky, same to be released through the Madison film exchange. "Idle Wives," also controlled by Mr. Kunsky, will soon be released in Michigan.

"No city in the United States has as many fine, large, beautiful houses as Detroit," said B. Barnett, head of the Barnett Film Attractions, with offices in Detroit and Cleveland, controlling "Joan the Woman" and "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." "I have seen many splendid houses in other cities, but not in numbers as in Detroit. There is no city that can really compare with Detroit in this regard. Why, your outskirt houses are as beautiful as the downtown edifices in other cities."

Detroit, Mich.—Earl H. Rathbone has been appointed booking manager of the State film company.

Detroit, Mich.—Jesse Fishman, manager in Detroit for the Standard film company, celebrated his first anniversary in Detroit on March 20. During that time the Detroit exchange has developed into a real, live-wire office. Harry Charnas, of Cleveland, president of the company, was a recent Detroit visitor.

Detroit, Mich.—Weddige & Butzler, of 97 Woodward avenue, Detroit, have purchased "Uncle Sam Awake" for the state of Michigan. Another timely picture, "America Is Ready," has been purchased by the United Film company, Campau building.

Notes of Interest to the Trade.

Detroit, Mich.—Recent incorporations: The Bell Film Co., has capitalized for $15,000 and the Castle Theater Co., for $2,000.

Saginaw, Mich.—The Palace theater, in Saginaw, is scheduled to reopen March 25, under the management of Bert Graham, formerly with the Tri-State and Universal.

West Branch, Mich.—During the past week articles of partnership were drawn up for a new theater to be erected at West Branch, Mich. Ange Lorenzo will be the manager. The stockholders are Eugene Tolfree, W. E. Hunck, W. J. Hooper and Mr. Lorenzo.

Detroit, Mich.—A. J. Gillingham, of the Empire theater, Detroit, who has been spending the past six weeks in the South, is expected home about the first of April.

Detroit, Mich.—John H. Kunsky is running the following serials in his Detroit theaters: "The Great Secret," "A Lass of the Lumberlands," "Patria," "The Shielding Shadow."

Detroit, Mich.—The Automatic ticket selling and cash register company has opened Detroit offices at 309 Buhl block.

Detroit, Mich.—The Fox film corporation now has two Michigan road men—Mornay Helm and Herbert C. Murray. The latter comes from the Cleveland distributing company for Selznick pictures.

Detroit, Mich.—A feature attraction at the Majestic theater, Detroit, for the week of March 18 was a one-part minstrel act with 40 persons, comprising mostly local talent. It proved very popular, especially in view of the local color attrached to the attraction.

Three Rivers, Mich.—Fred Castle has purchased the Rex theater in Three Rivers, Mich., from D. Deardorff.

Bay City, Mich.—A new theater is being erected in Bay City that will cost about $300,000. The Bay City theater company are the builders, and Fred B. Williams is the promoter and will also be the house manager.

Detroit, Mich.—The Majestic theater, Detroit, will be the first theater in Michigan to show "Broadway Jones," with George M. Cohan, released through the Artcraft. Manager Bauer reports that the past thirty days have shown a tremendous increase in bookings, and that there is hardly a live exhibitor in the state who will not play Artcraft features from one to three days, with some of the houses running them an entire week.

J. C. Ritter, general manager of the Rialto theater, Detroit, says that hereafter all big features will play at least two days at the Rialto. The new policy will be to make four changes weekly. Both Mr. Ritter and House Manager Hoganson agree that if a feature has any drawing power it loses its opportunity on only one day showing, while on a two-day booking the second day will invariably be better than the first day, owing to the advantage of the mouth-to-mouth advertising of those who came the first day.

MICHIGAN JOTTINGS.

Michigan Notes on Sunday Shows.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Kalamazoo has had shows on Sundays for two years, but, as an issue has been raised, the citizens will decide the question at the election April 2.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—Sunday moving picture shows are being fought by the local ministerial association, which has asked the prosecuting attorney to prohibit such performances.

Theater Changes Across Michigan.

Houghton, Mich.—John Paananen, who is interested in moving picture theaters in Calumet and South Range, will devote his time to these theaters, and has sold his interest in the Grand theater here.

Owosso, Mich.—The Lincoln theater, erected at a cost of $12,000, was opened March 15 with "Civilization." The house, which is managed by F. L. Patterson, seats about 500.

Three Rivers, Mich.—Fred Castle has taken over the lease on the Rex theater, which will be under the management of George Huylar.

Holly, Mich.—Joseph P. Allen will open a moving picture show in the building which he formerly occupied with a saloon. He will also resume the operation of the Allendorf hotel.

Ludington, Mich.—"The Spoilers" was the opening attraction of the Lyric theater under the new management of L. F. Peterson and William Curott.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The Majestic Gardens found the Mary Pickford picture, "A Poor Little Rich Girl," such an attraction that it gave two extra performances on Saturday, one in the morning for school children.

Flint, Mich.—King Baggot appeared in person and in the film, "Absinthe," at the Garden theater.

Interesting Snap Shots in Michigan.

Olivet, Mich.—Community moving picture shows are being planned by the social service committee, headed by Dr. Henry S. Curtis. Plans are being made to raise a fund for a projector.

Battle Creek, Mich.—The Bijou theater and the Battle Creek News are putting on a home talent film, "A Romance of Battle Creek."

Grand Rapids, Mich.—"The Crisis" returned to the Powers theater for two days, March 11 and 12.

St. Joseph, Mich.—The Caldwell theater has a new box office and remodeled lobby and a new pipe organ is to be installed about April 1.

Bay City, Mich.—"A Romance of Bay City" is being made by the Hudris Film company of New York city for the Bay City Tribune and the Bijou theater.

Standards for Judging Films in Illinois

State Federation of Women's Clubs Formulates Methods of Appraising Value of Any Motion Picture—Makes a General Survey.

By Frank H. Madison, 928 South Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—The Illinois State Federation of Woman's Clubs has outlined its standards in judging moving pictures shown by the regular exhibitors in Illinois. A survey was made of each theater in the state which could be reached by these clubs for seven successive days. The standards are as follows:

"The picture should present clean, wholesome entertainment or amusement, and all points which tend to debase morals, establish false standards of conduct or inflame the mind to improper adventures should be eliminated."

"The feeling of reverence for certain things or forces should be respected, and death, depressing scenes or gruesome subjects should not be unduly emphasized."

"Plays which tend to ridicule any religion or sect, or which tend to create a contempt for the law, should not be approved."

"The picture should be judged as a whole and not be condemned because of some trivial incident. The moral should be considered, but if the effect of scenes that are improper outweighs the morals, the play as a whole should be disapproved."

"Care should be taken that objectionable close-up filming is eliminated and that the pictures contain nothing tending to contribute to the delinquency of the younger element."

"Posters and other advertising matter should contain nothing that is objectionable or immoral, and titles of plays should not be suggestive or misleading."

The survey will also take account of local theater conditions, such as ventilation, sanitation, dark or light auditorium, proper exits, number in attendance at the picture, proportion of children and adults, willingness of managers to cooperate with the survey.

Peter Pinkelman Buys Another Theater.

Quincy, Ill.—Peter E. Pinkelman has become a real moving picture magnate by acquiring his fourth theater in this city. He has purchased the Princess theater from Rudolph W. Riggs. With the Gem, Savoy and Family theaters, he has quite a string of houses, using about 130 reels a week. A return date of "The Birth of a Nation" has been booked for the Princess theater.

Want Definite Referendum on Sunday Night Shows.

Rockford, Ill.—Mayor W. W. Bennett has again vetoed the ordinance which would permit the operation of moving picture theaters on Sunday nights. Alderman Fuller has introduced a resolution before the city council to have the subject of Sunday moving picture shows placed on the ballot at the election April 17. The purpose of this referendum is to leave no doubt in the minds of the new mayor and city council as to what people want. It is suggested that the exact hours of operation be placed on the ballot.

Making an Attack on "Blue Monday."

Lincoln, Ill.—Manager L. R. Burnstine of the Star theater hopes to overcome Monday dullness by conducting what is termed a "Blue Monday" contest. He has prepared books of twelve tickets good for Monday shows which are sold for $1. Three cash prizes of $15, $10 and $5 are offered to the girls who sell the most books in four weeks.

New Film Companies in Illinois.

Springfield, Ill.—Secretary of State Louis Emmerson has issued certificate of incorporation to Benld Amusement company, Benld; capital, $5,000; incorporators, F. A. Renner, J. J. Edwards, J. J. Shutt, Harm Harms.

The Howard Theater company, Chicago; capital, $25,000; incorporators, Sidney Oppenheim, Walter J. Bloch.

Imperial Film Service, Chicago; capital, $1,000; incorporators, Hugh A. Fargo, J. Glen Jacobs, A. M. Keasey.

Theater Changes in Illinois—New Shows.

Arenzville, Ill.—Mrs. Hal Kendall, of Beardstown, has opened a moving picture theater in the Nieman hall.

Cairo, Ill.—Both the Gem and Kimmel theaters are now under the management of Botto & Myers, who have been operating the Gem.

Peoria, Ill.—Joseph Broenneke, of 217 Merriman street, contemplates the establishment of a moving picture theater to be called the Alpine. It will be located on the South Side, but a definite site has not been selected.

Chandlerville, Ill.—W. H. Pilcher has sold his moving picture theater to R. M. Johnson.

Byron, Ill.—Harold King has discontinued his moving picture show.

Elgin, Ill.—Barney Davis, of Grand Rapids, Mich., has been in the city negotiating for a site for a new moving picture theater.

East St. Louis, Ill.—Frank Tate and Louis Cella, operating the Columbia and American theaters in St. Louis, have closed negotiations for a site at 209-213 Collinsville avenue, here, it is reported, and will erect a new moving picture theater, construction to start April 1. The theater will be 76 by 156 feet, and will have a seating capacity of 2,500.

Canton, Ill.—Manager Charles Kuchan has taken another five-year lease on the building occupied by the Idlhour theater.

Virginia, Ill.—Moving picture shows at the Tureman opera house and the City theater have been consolidated, and, except on Saturday nights, the City theater will be used exclusively.

Showmanship Snap Shots and Jottings.

Quincy, Ill.—William A. Schwindeler, of the Star theater, appeared before the United Parent Teachers' Association and presented the managers' side of the special shows for children. He has agreed to run appropriate films on Saturday, from 10 to 5 o'clock. He started with the Mary Pickford pictures, "Cinderella" and "Hulda from Holland."

Carmi, Ill.—Manager Roscoe Cochran of the Maine theater gives one benefit show each week to help the M. E. Church Guild in its pipe organ fund.

Beardstown, Ill.—The Princess theater has installed a new $3,000 photoplayer. Leo Boylan will have charge of the musical program.

Decatur, Ill.—The Avon theater had a home talent film, "A Romance of Decatur," for two days. This house has been using a Jazz band. Eddie Carrier, a professional singer and a brother to Manager Carrier of the Avon, recently appeared at a Sunday performance.

Taylorville, Ill.—Manager J. R. McCarty of the Empress theater flanked his entrance with the two new projectors which he has purchased. The interest created was good for the house.

Virginia, Ill.—"Quo Vadis" was shown at the Tureman opera house under the auspices of the senior class of the Virginia high school.

Monmouth, Ill.—The Pattee opera house booked "The Birth of a Nation" for a return date March 21.

Kewanee, Ill.—The Majestic theater has installed a new orchestra organ.

Dundee, Ill.—"Cabiria" was a successful attraction at the Crystal theater.

Charleston, Ill.—The Majestic theater was closed for several days following a fire.

Orpheum Theater at Evansville, Ind., Burns

Early Morning Blaze Completely Destroys Motion Picture and Vaudeville House —Loss Estimated at $42,000—Origin of Fire Not Known.

From Indiana Trade News Service, 861 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—The Orpheum theater, a motion picture and vaudeville house, built on the site of Evansville's first theater, was destroyed by fire last week, causing a loss of approximately $42,000, about one-half of which is covered by insurance. Tentative plans for rebuilding the structure were set on foot immediately.

The fire was discovered at 5:35 in the morning by Frank Hicks, night watchman, who slept in the front of the building. Hicks made one round of the house at 4 o'clock and another at 5 o'clock. He said he saw no indication of fire at either of those hours. When he smelled smoke, he said, he rushed to the balcony of the building and saw the entire stage a mass of flames.

The fire had made such rapid progress that by the time the fire companies reached the scene the flames had reached the front of the theater and were leaping out the front windows. The flames then traveled upward to the roof. Only a part of the walls was left standing when the fire was extinguished.

The Orpheum was one of the city's most popular places of amusement. It was patronized principally by a class of people who could not afford to go to the higher priced resorts of entertainment, but at this house they saw a number of reels of the best motion pictures in addition to several acts of vaudeville. For years the theater had run continuously, not even stopping for a day during the summer.

The Orpheum was formerly the People's theater and before that the Evansville opera house. In fact, it was Evansville's first theater of the present type. The building was owned by the Evansville Public Hall Company, a corporation, and was constructed at a cost of $40,000. It was managed by Charles Sweeton.

Mr. Sweeton said no films were burned, but that some property belonging to the vaudeville performers was destroyed. He said the films had all been taken away at the closing hour and that the new films had not arrived. The origin of the fire was not determined.

Indiana Exhibitors Will Aid Recruiting.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Members of the Exhibitors' Protective Association of Indiana, through their secretary, A. C. Zaring, of Indianapolis, have notified United States recruiting officers throughout the state that they will display slides in their theaters, free of charge, and assist in any other way in obtaining recruits. Mr. Zaring, in the letter to the officers, said the motion picture men of Indiana consider it an honor as well as a patriotic duty to co-operate with the government in the event of approaching hostilities. Captain Edward R. Coppock, in charge of the United States army recruiting station in Indianapolis, was gratified at the action of the exhibitors and expressed the belief that Indiana is the first state in which slides have been offered free for recruiting purposes.

Three-Pound Potato Wins Season Ticket.

Lafayette, Ind.—More than 1,000 children, ranging in age from two to fifteen years, attended the potato matinee at the Family theater here last week, at which more than eight bushels of potatoes were taken in as admission. The admission was two potatoes, and Leroy Wiggins, who brought the largest potato, was given a season ticket to the theater. The potato weighed three pounds. David W. Maurice, manager of the theater, donated the potatoes to the secretary of the Lafayette charity organization, to be distributed to the worthy poor.

New Theater in Columbia City.

Columbia City, Ind.—B. J. Vought, manager of the Columbia City Amusement Company, announces that a handsome new motion picture theater, which will have a seating capacity of 400 persons, will be erected some time in the near future. Fuller details will be given out later, he said.

Palace Theater Closed.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Manager Vought has closed down the Palace theater, on West Van Buren street, and is removing the fixtures. He says that because of the high cost of maintaining two show houses in a city the size of Columbia city he will operate only the Lyceum theater until the new theater, with larger seating capacity, is completed.

Minneapolis News Letter

By John L. Johnson, 704 Film Exchange Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

Changes on Film Row Continues.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—And still the changes in the Minneapolis film row continue. Up to noon of March 19 no new managers were recorded, but one big shift was announced at the Artcraft exchange, where R. C. Fox reigns. Mr. Fox announced that an entire new office force had begun its work. The members of Mr. Fox's new force are: O. S. MacConnelly, bookkeeper; Ruth Cohen and Margaret Scranton, stenographers; Henry Chapman, shipping clerk.

Motion Picture Salesmen Organize.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Traveling film salesmen for Minneapolis exchanes met here Sunday, March 11 and organized the Motion Picture Salesmen of the Northwest, a body formed to represent the interests of the roadmen in future business in which they are concerned. George W. Malone of the Bluebird exchange heads the new body and C. F. Rose, Artcraft, and William Cutter, K-E-S-E, are vice-president and secretary-treasurer respectively. Messrs. Malone, Cutter and T. J. Hamlin, an honorary member, were selected as a committee to draw up a constitution and by-laws.

Dues until May 3 this year will be $1.00 according to vote at the initial meeting of the organization and after that date in all probability they will be raised a trifle. Only bona fide roadmen are eligibile for membership in the organization. A second meeting of the organization has been called for the West hotel on Sunday, March 25, at ten A. M. Efforts are being made to make the organization strong enough to carry some weight in future legislation at the exchanges and exhibitors' meetings.

Pictures Seen in Minneapolis Last Week

Minneapolis, Minn.—Offerings at Minneapolis theaters the first part of the week of March 18 were:

The New Garrick, Pauline Frederick in "Sapho."

The Strand, Bessie Love in "A Sister of the Poor.

The Lyric, Clara Kimball Young in "The Rise of Susan."

The Bijou, Norma Talmage in "Panthea."

The New Garden, Lillian Walker in "Dimple's Baby."

The New Aster, Charles Chaplin in "Essanay-Chaplin Revue of 1916."

At the Releasing Exchanges.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Manager Ralph Bradford, of the Universal exchange, has returned to his desk after a week spent at home nursing a badly sprained ankle, wrenched when Mr. Bradford's feet failed to prove non-skid on the icy sidewalk.

George W. Malone, of the Bluebird exchange, has gone out to cover the Southern Minnesota territory following his return from a two weeks' business visit to the Dakotas.

Hugh C. Andress, Vitagraph roadman, is touring the Southern Minnesota territory talking up "The Secret Kingdom" serial and other late Vitagraph releases.

Manager Joseph Schwartzbein, of the Pathe exchange, has booked "The Mystery of the Double Cross" serial in the Pantages theater, Minneapolis, and has received several offers for first run in St. Paul and Duluth, Minn.

Manager Julius Bernheim, of the Bluebird exchange, has returned from Chicago, where he spent a week with President Carl Laemmle of the Universal Film company. Mr. Bernheim announced upon his return that he will have to work every night for a week to answer all his requests for bookings on Bluebird features.

Mrs. Benjamin Drum has joined the Selznick exchange in an office capacity following her resignation from the Artcraft exchange last week.

Lee A. Horn, manager of the Selznick exchange, succeeded Manager W. K. Howard of the Vitagraph exchange on the sick list last week. Mr. Horn is within the grip of the grippe.

J. H. Margoles, of the Universal exchange, has announced that 5,000 free tickets to see various episodes of "A Voice on the Wire" will be given employees of telephone companies throughout the Northwest within a few weeks.

C. J. Rose, formerly of the Buffalo Pathe exchange, has been added to the Minneapolis Pathe offices as a Twin City salesman and right hand man to Manager Schwartzbein.

Manager W. K. Howard, of the Vitagraph exchange, paid Duluth, Minn., a short visit last week and incidentally returned to his office with several new contracts. Mr. Howard received a visit from Harry D. Naugle, western division manager for the Greater Vitagraph, who was en route from the Pacific West to New York.

Manager Sherrick, of the McClure exchange, has contracted with Ruben & Finkelstein for first run on "Seven Deadly Sins" in the Twin Cities, the exact houses in which the series will be exhibited to be announced within a week or ten days. Mr. Sherrick visited Fargo, N. D., the early part of last week.

Minneapolis, Minn.—C. R. Seelye, business manager of the Pathe exchange, spent several days in Minneapolis and St. Paul last week arranging for newspaper advertising and support on the new Pathe serial "The Mystery of the Double Cross." Mr. Seelye stated that he found film conditions better than he expected in Minnesota, where a record snowfall has been believed to have crippled the industry to a great extent.

State Rights Exchanges.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Manager Manie Gottlieb, of the Favorite feature film exchange, has booked "The Libertine" in the Blue Mouse theater, St. Paul, for a week's run.

G. A. Booth, a well known Minneapolis exhibitor, has been added to the road staff of the Zenith Feature film exchange. Manager P. H. Carey, of the Zenith exchange, has returned from a three day trip to Northern Minnesota.

Walter S. Baldwin has left the Supreme Feature exchange, where he was in charge of "Civilization," and has joined the James V. Bryson forces in the interests of "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." E. A. Brehaney has left the Bryson exchange and returned to Elliott-Sherman. Dan Wright has left the Elliott-Sherman exchange and joined the Bryson exchange.

President William A. Lochren, of the Lochren film corporation, spent the week of March 19 in Chicago negotiating for future productions for his state rights department.

M. R. Dick, 814 Produce exchange, has secured territorial rights on the original Carnegie Alaska-Siberian expedition films and has begun the exploitation of the same.

Manager Willander, of the Progressive exchange at Duluth, Minn., has arranged for a private showing of "Are Passions Inherited?" for the benefit of Northern Minnesota exhibitors, in the Zenith City, in the near future.

A. J. Bishell has opened the Feature film booking company at Glasgow, Montana, and has announced that he has a select list of short reelers and five reel features ready for immediate booking.

Banquet to General Film Employees.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Fred S. Meyer, recently appointed district representative of the General film company, was host at a banquet to employees of the local General exchange at the Canton cafe last week. T. J. Hamlin acted as toastmaster and L. D. Larson, new manager of the general office here, was the chief speaker. Assistant Manager Harry Muir and Mr. Meyer also were called on for a few remarks and responded with effect.

C. G. Branham Promoted.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Charles G. Branham publicity manager, has been promoted to asistant manager of the Strand theater here. Mr. Brennan will continue in his publicity work and as editor of The Strand Weekly, a newspaper rapidly winning favor among moving picture followers.

Mayville, Wis.—A year's lease has been taken on the Modjeska theater by the Pathe Film Corporation of New York City. C. W. Docter, who has been manager, will continue in charge.

Beaver Dam, Wis.—The Grand theater, which was formerly operated by G. J. Doerr, has been reopened under his management.

Films and Shows in Wisconsin.

Milwaukee, Wis.—So much attention was attracted by "Skinner's Dress Suit" that Manager Bostwick of the Merrill theater returned it for half a week.

Marinette, Wis.—The Bijou theater had a special matinee on Saint Patrick's Day to raise a fund which would be used by the local visiting nurse to help the needy of the city.

LaCrosse, Wis.—Manager Harry H. Burford has booked a number of extra successful Paramount pictures for return dates. Among them are "The Alien," "The Ne'er-Do-Well," "Molly Make-Believe," "The Cheat," and "Tess of the Storm Country."

Oshkosh, Wis.—Harry Chappell, the new manager of the Palace (formerly the Rex), will change pictures daily.

Kansas City's New Fire Rules

Fire Warden J. E. Marion Is Preparing New Regulations to Govern Exchanges and the Storage of Film—Will Also Watch Picture Theaters More Closely for Infractions of the Present Standing Room Rules, etc.

By Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Belt Building, Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—J. E. Marvin, fire warden of Kansas City, is instituting a new era in fire prevention, and is promulgating new rules for the conduct of exchanges. Incidentally, he is going to insist that the present general rules be lived up to in theaters, including the moving picture theaters, and specially that ordinance which says that no owner shall sell more tickets than he has seats in the house. The innovation in Mr. Marvin's plans, however, have to do with the exchanges. Mr. Marvin's deputies are now starting on an inspection of the exchanges, with a view to making suggestions for greater safety against fire, and in case of such features as protecting radiators will include each light separately, keeping floors clean, using wire waste baskets, and perhaps the elimination of smoking in all parts of the exchanges.

The most important feature of the new recommendations, however, will be the appointment of monitors at each exchange, who shall not only see that regulations are observed, but who shall be particularly instructed to assist the employees to get out if a fire should occur.

A. E. Elliott Expects to Build New Theater.

Kansas City, Mo.—A. E. Elliott, owner of the Sapphire theater and lessee of the Grand opera house, is planning to erect a $65,000 moving picture theater adjoining his present house on Twelfth street, not later than a year from May. If he can secure the lease of the adjoining building sooner he may build this summer.

The Grand opera house, leased by A. E. Elliott, is now under three-months sublease and is playing musical comedy and drama. Mr. Elliott said he had no plans matured for the house after that, but that it might return to pictures, or run a few reels whatever other attraction was booked.

Theater Changes in Kansas City.

Kansas City, Mo.—C. L. Hinshale, recently sold the Linwood theater to Carl F. Weiss. Mr. Weiss has never been in the moving picture business before. Roy I. Davis, the present manager, will continue in that capacity.

Charles M. Stebbins Dead.

Kansas City, Mo.—Charles M. Stebbins, 41 years old, proprietor of the Stereopticon and Moving Picture film company, Kansas City, Mo., died March 11, at his home in Kansas City, Kan. He is survived by his wife and six children, all girls. Mr. Stebbins was widely known among exhibitors and exchangemen, and his business relations with and frequent trips to New York provided him with many friends there. Mrs. Stebbins is this week handling the office affairs, though no definite announcement is made as to the future of the business.

Film Man Joins the Navy.

Kansas City, Mo.—W. R. Elliott, who despite his youth is a pioneer in the moving picture business, has felt the call of the country, and joined the navy. He left Kansas City the night of March 19 for Chicago, where he will go into training for six months, and then be assigned to a ship. While he doesn't admit it, there is no doubt that the pictures he has selected and seen at the Sapphire theater, which his father owns, have contributed largely to his decision.

Kansas City, Mo.—Dr. C. W. Wyme has bought the Mozart theater from B. W. Blewett.

United Film Co. Changes Owners.

Kansas City, Mo.—Al Kahn, Chicago, and B. S. Davis, Grand Rapids, Michigan, recently bought the United film company, Kansas City, Mo., and have taken charge personally. Mr. Kahn was with the Universal for ten years. Mr. Kahn says that it will be the firm's effort to give prompt and careful attention to the small exhibitor as well as the large. Also the films will be thoroughly renovated before being given to the next exhibitor. From time to time, statewide features will be added to their regular subjects.

Fox Local Office Notes.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Kansas City office of the Fox company is being redecorated.

Charles Stevens has been added to the shipping force of the Fox.

R. C. Cropper, Manager of the Standard Film Corporation of Kansas City, Mo.

New Roadmen-Exchange Jottings.

Kansas City, Mo.—W. E. Brennan is a new road man with the Mutual, Kansas City.

The Universal has two new roadmen, viz., F. S. Cass, formerly manager of an Excelsior Springs theater, and Paul A. Heideke, Springfield, Ill. Mr. Heideke is Bluebird representative for Kansas.

L. B. Douglass, a well known man in this territory, is now in charge of the serials of the Universal. Mr. Douglass was recently with the Mutual and more recently with the Triangle.

F. H. Cassel, formerly with the Vitagraph, has formed a states right corporation which will work in Arkansas and Oklahoma.

Business Notes and Announcements.

Solon Toothaker, Paramount, recently entertained Jack Nash, owner of the Strand, Trinidad, Col. Mr. Nash also visited in Excelsior Springs, Mo.

Visitors at the Kansas City exchanges recently were: Joyn & Johnson, Burlington Junction, Mo.; R. B. Christianson, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; Tom Rudder, Cherryville, Kan.; J. E. Tindale, Iola, Kan.

C. N. Sutton, Essanay, Chicago, was recently in Kansas City on business

Frank A. Salisbury Manager at Supreme.

Kansas City, Mo.—M. B. Crandell, Supreme film company, has been succeeded as manager in the Kansas City office by Frank A. Salisbury.

Week-Long Runs Favored in New Orleans

Globe, Dreamworld and Alamo Theaters, All Fichtenberg Houses, Will Book Big Films for Week or More—Manager Gueringer Sees Move Necessary.

From Geo. M. Cheney, 1302 Peters Ave., New Orleans, La.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The Fichtenberg interests, according to Manager Gueringer, have decided upon a permanent policy of long runs. The Globe, Canal street's newest house, the Dreamworld and the Alamo are making no bookings for less than a week's run. In most cases the big features, on which Fichtenberg is concentrating, are run a week at the Globe and then a week at the Dreamworld or Alamo.

Long runs have been more or less a New Orleans policy for some time, as regards the Canal street houses. Mr. Gueringer said: "The time is past when anybody pays his money just to see a 'picture show.' Huge sums are being paid out by producers and they are giving us huge productions, which, both from a business and an artistic point of view, deserve to be and must be handled in a big way, legitimately.

"Now when the discriminating moving picture public comes to Canal street it is not looking just for a picture show, but for the big plays and the big stars that it knows. Our policy is simple: we get big pictures and then we advertise so that people will know where to find them, and then we keep them running long enough to get a fair benefit from the advertising which we do and which the pictures do for themselves."

Among the pictures which Fichtenberg is showing are Artcraft, Selznick, Fox and George M. Cohan, and Douglas Fairbanks.

Lenten Season Shows Drop in Admissions.

New Orleans, La.—Lent is effecting the exhibitors to an appreciable extent, according to reports from exhibitors throughout the city. The falling off in receipts is heaviest in strong Catholic neighborhoods, especially in the vicinity of the churches, where sermons several nights a week divert the public from several picture houses. Several suburban houses have given notice of their intention to close altogether on Holy Thursday and Good Friday immediately before Easter.

On the other hand the falling off in receipts has not been so heavy this year as previously; one reason assigned is that the suggestive or unmoral picture is become a rarity.

Another factor somewhat affecting the exhibitor is the enforcement of the Sunday closing law. The picture shows are not included in this law, but nearly everything else is, not only saloons, but grocery stores as well. Even bread can not be purchased on Sunday under the present regimen resulting from recent reform attacks on the city administration.

This tight Sunday lid sends many picture fans shopping Saturday night, with a resulting falling off in receipts.

Preparing for Richardson's Lecture.

New Orleans, La.—Extensive preparations are being made for the reception of F. H. Richardson, editor of the projection department of the World, who is to lecture on projection at the Triangle theater, March 29. The lecture will begin at 11:30 p. m., to allow all New Orleans exhibitors and operators to hear him.

Mr. Richardson will be given a dinner at Fabacher's Rathskeller at 11:00 p. m., March 30. The committee to welcome Mr. Richardson "and make him glad he came" is headed by Touro Glucksmann, projection man for the Orpheum. The committee includes the following:

Exhibitors: E. Boehringer, F. Heiderich, F. Davis, E. Garnier, D. L. Cornelius and Joe Miller.

Exchangemen: S. T. Stephens, R. Junet, T. Tuttle, Al Shear and Maurice Barr.

Supply men: George Vivirito and D. Williams.

Operators: A. S. Hadden, T. Glucksmann, I. Johnston, A. Miranne, E. M. Snyder, J. Davidson, W. Shepherd.

Stage employees: E. J. Mather and A. G. Troyer.

Press: N. Thatcher, E. Steir, E. Pritchard, O. M. Samuels and W. R. Kattman.

Musicians: Frank Sporer, E. E. Tosso and J. Pepitone.

Warm Discussion Caused by "Twilight Sleep" Film.

New Orleans, La.—Josiah Pearce & Sons are showing "Twilight Sleep" as an educational at the Tudor theater to large audiences in the face of official protest. Mayor Martin Behrman, declaring himself without power to stop the picture, has requested that it be withdrawn. He was, he stated, acting on representations from the Orleans Parish Medical Society and Archbishop Blenk.

In the past the police department has ordered the withdrawal of objectionable pictures offered in New Orleans, but the objections to this picture are not that it is immoral or indecent, but, on the part of the Church, that it shows things which should not be made into a spectacle, and, on the part of the medical society, that it teaches a medical fallacy.

The Pearce interests in advertising the picture cite some medical authorities to the effect that the treatment is a scientific success. The picure is not being shown to mixed audiences, but from 12:40 p. m. to 6 o'clock to women only, and to men only from 6 o'clock to the closing hour.

New Orleans F. I. L. M. Club Organized.

New Orleans, La.—Organization of New Orleans' F. I. L. M. club was completed Thursday, with H. A. Owen, of Triangle, as president, R. Junet, of the Pathe exchange, as vice-president, and Karl A. Bugbee, of Southern Metro, as secretary-treasurer. T. O. Tuttle, of the General, was the first president of the new club, and is understood to have withdrawn because of his resignation, recently announced, from the managership of the General's New Orleans office. New Orleans picture men expect great things from the new organization, which is supported by every exchange in the city.

Geo. Vivirito Buys General Film Supply Business.

New Orleans, La.—George Vivirito, the supply man, has purchased the New Orleans supply business of the General Film, according to a joint announcement by the General and Mr. Vivirito. Mr. Vivirito took over both the stock and good will of the General's supply department. He reports business good throughout Louisiana and Mississippi.

New Orleans General Film Manager Resigns.

New Orleans, La.—T. Tuttle, New Orleans manager for the General Film, and recently elected head of New Orleans' new F. I. L. M. club, has resigned as manager of the New Orleans exchange, the resignation to be effective April 3. Whether he will remain in New Orleans or not Mr. Tuttle would not say Monday. His resignation and possible departure from New Orleans has been the subject of regrets both on the part of friends in New Orleans and of officials of the company.

Local World Film in New Office.

New Orleans, La.—The World Film exchange moved March 15 from its old offices in Common street to larger quarters at 819 Union street. The World Film office has been at the Common street address for several years, and for the last year has been in charge of Mrs. Anne Sessions. Mrs. Sessions is the only woman exchange manager in New Orleans, but she gets the business—and larger quarters.

Herbert Brenon in New Orleans.

New Orleans, La.—Herbert Brenon is in New Orleans with his company filming scenes for "The Lone Wolf." The scenes for which Mr. Brenon came to New Orleans are being made in the Latin Quarter, which often before now has brought moving picture companies to New Orleans. The town's possibilities in this direction are not new to Mr. Brenon; he is a New Orleans product, lived here for years, and for a time played in stock before the pictures gave him the opportunity for his great success.

Dallas Exchange Men Discuss Credit

No Organization Formed at First Meeting, But Local Distributors Arrive at a Mutual Understanding in Regard to Credits.

N. E. Flanagan, 516 North Ervay Street, Dallas, Texas.

DALLAS, TEXAS.—All the managers of Dallas exchanges met March 16 to discuss a credit association. Mr. Lynch, president of the local Paramount, Dallas, presided. The managers did not organize, but arrived at a mutual understanding for the protection of exhibitors and film managers.

A change in the management of the local General Film became effective Monday. C. C. Ezell, former branch manager, became supervisor of all the Southern branches. Two men will fill his place; A. L. Teagarden, as office manager, and William P. Haslett, sales manager.

Notes of the Local Film Trade.

Dallas, Texas.—A. C. Langan, special representative of Ince, is booking "Civilization" in Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas. He has headquarters in Busch building, Dallas.

"Civilization" will open in Dallas at the Opera House, Mar. 20, for a 9 days run.

Triangle Local Manager Weds.

Dallas, Texas.—Cupid hit the mark in the Triangle office, Dallas. L. W. Remy, manager, married Miss Cressy Paris in Fort Worth, Mar. 13.

Claude Fulgham, former shipping clerk of K-E-S-E, becomes shipping clerk of Vitagraph Co., Dallas.

Ed Foy, Sr., has bought the Ideal theater, Dallas. He will open it Monday with a Vitagraph production.

C. C. Bubencer will open a new theater, The Palace, at Victoria, Tex., April 29, with K-E-S-E service.

World Film Managers in New York.

Dallas, Texas.—E. C. Jensen, Southern division manager of the World Film, left for New York, Mar. 14, to attend the conference of sales officials. G. F. Weaver, assistant southern division manager, who has been traveling in South Texas in interest of the World Films, accompanied Mr. Jensen. He will be given an important assignment. The sales force of the World Film exchange, Dallas, will be augmented by Mr. Flaherty, who has had a long experience in the World service with the Washington branch.

The Dreamland theater at Harlingen has closed down because the soldiers left the border.

"Burning the Candle," with Henry Walhall and Mary Charleson, was a drawing card at the Washington, Dallas.

Spending $15,000 in Liberty Theater.

Houston, Texas.—More than $15,000 is being spent in renovations and additions to the equipment of the Liberty theater, which has just been placed under the management of Jesse Jacobs, manager of the Key. In the future Mr. Jacobs will be joint manager of the two photoplay houses.

A photoplayer valued at $15,000 is being installed, as well as a typhoon cooling system at a cost of $5,000, which will render it one of the coolest houses in the city.

Mr. Jacobs is very sanguine of the motion picture business in Houston and speaks in loudest praise of his opening bill at the Liberty under the new management Sunday. He says that he will exert every effort to make the Key and the Liberty the leading theaters of Houston.

Mr. Jacobs has also managed the Star Family, the Paradise, the Photodrama and the Bronx Comedy, all in New York City.

MIDWEST ITEMS.

Theater Jottings from Prairie States.

TO EXHIBITORS

If you are doing something new and interesting at your theatre let our correspondent know about it. It may help others and help you as well.

Helpfully yours,

Business Notes About Films.

Des Moines, Ia.—With the co-operation of the Iowa Drug company, a big wholesale concern, L. A. Sheridan, of the Pathe exchange in this city, is making a wide advertising campaign for the Pathe one-reel film, "How Patent Medicines Are Made." The Palace theater here will show the picture the 27th and 28th of March, and every leading druggist in the city of Des Moines is showing a window display advertising the film.

Des Moines, Ia.—Albert Schreg, owner of the Ideal theater, on the east side, has been working out a kind of program new to Des Moines exhibitors. Mr. Shrag rents two two-reel Keystone comedies for one day and then advertises a "Keystone Comedy Day" for his patrons, showing only the comedies. The two times that he has tried it his house has been jammed.

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—Beginning March 29, the Majestic theater, in Cedar Rapids, will show the British government war pictures, released by the General Film. These pictures are in seven episodes of two reels each, and each two reels will be shown for three days. Manager Stombaugh, of the General exchange, in Des Moines, arranged a private showing of the war pictures to Verne Marshall, the editor of the Cedar Rapids Gazette, and it was through Mr. Marshall that big booking was secured. Mr. Marshall had personal experience in the war zone and he affirms that the pictures are in truth genuine.

Des Moines Film Club and the Exhibitor

Three Recent Cases Cited as Evidence of the Fair Intentions of the New Local Exchange Managers' Club—Dinner to Road Men.

By Dorouth Day, Register Tribune, Des Moines.

DES MOINES, IA.—The F. I. L. M. Club of Des Moines, gave a dinner at the Chamber of Commerce, Saturday, the 17th, to the salesmen of the different exchanges. The club wanted to explain to their salesmen the purpose of the F. I. L. M. Club in order that they might be able in turn to explain its workings to the exhibitors. They impressed on the salesmen that the F. I. L. M. is for the protection of the exhibitor as well as for the protection of the exchangeman, and to prove this, brought forward three cases that have come up since the formation of the little body.

Three exhibitors have laid their claims of ill treatment before the club at its weekly meeting and in all three cases the decision of the F. I. L. M. was in favor of the exhibitor. One of the cases was to the effect that a local exchangeman had demanded an advance payment on a transaction that was never carried out as agreed by the exchangeman. The members of the F. I. L. M. weighed the matter carefully, hearing both sides of the case, and decided that the exchangeman was in the wrong and that the exhibitor should have his money back—needless to say it was paid him. The other cases were similar and in each case the exhibitor expressed his satisfaction and his belief in the benefits that the F. I. L. M. Club can give the exhibitor.

The F. I. L. M. Club is urging the exhibitor who does not believe that he received a square deal to bring his troubles to the club and it will be generously and fairly taken up.

A. H. Blank of the manifold Blank Enterprises, and Marty Williams, manager of the newly formed Standard Film Office, in this city, are two new members of the F. I. L. M. Club.

Marty Williams Moves to Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia.—Marty Williams has brought his wife and child from Kansas City and the little family are comfortably installed in their new home in this city. Mr. Williams is in his offices at 702 Mulberry street, and has succeeded in booking his pictures at the Palace, one of the largest and most popular houses in the city. The first one is to be shown the 20th and 21st. Mr. Williams gives a cordial invitation to exhibitors to visit him.

Des Moines Exhibitors Still Talking Price Rise.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Des Moines exhibitors have not succeeded in getting together on the admission price proposition yet. They met at the General Film office Saturday, the 17th, and discussed the question. Some of the small houses and suburban theaters are advertising "Six and Seven Big Reels for a Nickle," which is anything but good business. It is to be hoped that something definite will have been agreed upon soon.

Alamo Theater to Reopen.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Alamo theater, a suburban house on Sixth and College avenue, will be opened March 26, by Frank Greene, formerly the owner of the Broadway theater, in Brooklyn, Ia. The Alamo has been closed except for a brief trial opening for some three months.

Theater Changes and Happenings Across Iowa.

Roland, Ia.—O. B. Ferkin has sold his Lyric theater, in Roland, to N. H. Millang.

Gowrie, Ia.—Walter John has sold the Star theater, in Gowrie, to A. R. Lauver.

Radcliffe, Ia.—Dan Ertel, formerly connected with one of the big theaters in Kansas City, has purchased the Opera House in Radcliffe, formerly owned by J. C. Buckham.

Story City, Ia.—The long standing partnership between the Peterson Bros. and Madsen, owners of the Grand theater, in Story City; the Isis theater, in Jewel, Ia., and the Lyric theater, in Belmont, has been dissolved. The Peterson Bros. have assumed control of the houses in Story City and Jewel, while Madsen has taken over the Lyric, in Belmont.

E. J. Tilton Now Mutual Roadman.

Des Moines, Ia.—E. J. Tilton, head of the booking department at the Mutual exchange, succeeded Harry Heirsteiner as roadman in the southern part of the state. Mack Comeaux, formerly of the shipping room, succeeded Tilton in the booking, and Voight Trent, of the poster department, took Comeaux's place.

Majestic Theater Safe Blown.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Majestic theater was robbed of between six and seven hundred dollars after midnight Sunday night, the 11th. Early morning yeggmen blew the safe containing the receipts of Saturday and Sunday, estimated at $650. The thieves were not apprehended.

Des Moines Exhibitor Visitors and Film Happenings.

Des Moines, Ia.—Henry J. Lego, of the Majestic theater, in Ft. Dodge, was in Des Moines last week making the rounds of the exchanges.

William Rosenfield, of the Temple Grand, in Creston, was a visitor at the Paramount and Mid West offices in this city last week.

J. L. Murray, of the Grand theater, in Ida Grove, was in Des Moines this week visiting all the exchanges.

C. T. Smith, of the moving picture show in Van Wert, was a visitor at the General Film office last week.

R. C. Carson, of the Lyric theater, in Osceola, was a Pathe caller last week, and J. J. Murray, of the Opera House, in Ida Grove, and the Opera House, in Schaller, was another caller at the Pathe exchange.

M. D. Le Fevre, of the Mystic theater, in Ottumwa, was a Des Moines visitor last week, calling at the Pathe exchange.

Exchange Jottings in Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia.—M. J. Frisch, branch booker at the local Pathe Exchange, made a flying trip over the Southern part of the state a few days last week.

A. H. Blank was in Omaha on business three days of last week. Harry Weinberg, nephew of A. H. Blank, who was formerly connected with the Laemmle exchange in Omaha, has been assigned to the Kansas City office of the Triangle as roadman. He has been given the Nebraska territory.

Mrs. W. E. Arthur, the only woman film representative in this territory and well known to the exhibitors in this part of the country, has been assigned manager of the Paramount office in Oklahoma City.

W. L. Mendenhall, road man for the Greater Vitagraph, with territory in the eastern part of Iowa, has been ill in Des Moines for the past two weeks and just the other day became able to take up his work again.

T. A. Burke, formerly Iowa roadman for the Fox company, is now connected with the Westcott feature film company of Minneapolis.

T. I. Acklin of the Opera House in Swan, Ia., was in the city last Wednesday.

Strike Would Not Have Stopped Films

San Francisco Film Exchange Board of Trade Was Fully Prepared to Handle Deliveries Even If Railroads Stopped Running.

From T. A. Church, 1507 North Street., Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The specter, now laid to rest, of a nation-wide railroad strike, which last week again loomed up to haunt shippers, found the film exchanges of this city well prepared to serve their customers without the use of the steam roads. Definite plans along this line have been under way for some time on the part of the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco. In fact, these have been given attention from time to time since last spring, when similar trouble was threatened.

A combination electric car and automobile service has been mapped out, with distributing stations at such central points as Sacramento, Fresno, Salinas and San Jose. The service of automobile trucks has been arranged for, and it was planned to take films to the various distributing stations to which exhibitors in nearby towns will come for their service. The magnitude of this undertaking may be judged from the fact that the exchanges in this city serve a territory reaching from Bakersfield, on the south, to the state line, on the north, a distance of considerable more than five hundred miles. There are probably a few places that could not be reached, owing to the condition of the roads in the mountains, but it is believed that in the event of a railroad strike it will be possible to reach 95 per cent. of the houses now served. Good service could be rendered throughout the Sacramento valley, and with a minimum of effort, as electric trains run as far as Chico, by way of Sacramento, but the rest of the territory would have to be served by automobiles.

Universities Install Projection Machines

San Francisco, Cal.—A complete moving picture outfit has been installed by the Atlas Educational Film Company at Stanford University, near this city, the projector being a 1917 model Atlas, of the motor-driven type. The machine will be used for a wide variety of educational work. The University of California, located at Berkeley, has also purchased an Atlas machine, and has it installed in one of the large lecture rooms on the campus.

M. & R. Exchange Ready for Business.

San Francisco, Cal.—The M. & R. feature film exchange, which recently took over quarters at 107 Golden Gate avenue, will shortly receive the first of its film releases, and will be ready for business by the first of April. Initial bookings are now being made on Ivan films and Flora Finch comedies, which will be the two leading lines handled. It is not intended, however, to confine the business of the exchange to these, as arrangements have been made for the release of four large productions, of nine reels or more, each year, together with scenic and educational subjects. A buying office has been established at New York, and it is planned to open a distributing branch at Los Angeles at any early date, a representative of the firm being there now looking over the field. It is intended to cater to small and large exhibitors alike, and some interesting innovations in film distribution are planned.

Triangle Exchange Notes.

San Francisco, Cal.—Ralph Smith, formerly with the Mutual, is now in the booking department of the Triangle Film Corporation. The large increase in business of late has made it necessary to add to the office force and to enlarge the facilities of the exchange.

C. B. Price, Western division manager for McClure pictures, was here recently, and has since returned to Chicago. He is well known in this territory, having at one time been manager of the local branch of the World Film Corporation and of the old V-L-S-E.

Frederick L. Collins, of New York, president of the McClure company, and also head of the company producing McClure pictures, is in this city investigating conditions and gauging the public appetite for things to read and things to see. The initial presentation of "Envy," the first of the McClure productions, was made at the Portola theater during his stay here.

Producers Visit Mutual Exchange.

San Francisco, Cal.—S. S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Manufacturing Company, and J. R. Crone, manager of the studio at Santa Barbara, were visitors here this week. Mr. Crone formerly had charge of the local branch of the Mutual, and has wide experiences as an exhibitor, an exchange manager and producer.

Union Conducts Exhibiting Room.

San Francisco, Cal.—The exhibiting room in the quarters occupied by the American Photoplayer Company, on Golden Gate avenue, is conducted by the local operators' union, and is one of the largest and best equipped of the demonstrating rooms to be found here. A number of new seats have been installed of late, bringing the seating capacity up to more than one hundred, a new Hill screen has been put in, and improvements have been made in the operating room, where two Power's machines are installed. The room is in charge of Operator Fred Dittmar, who states that an average is being made of twenty reviews a week.

Ad Club Views Advertising Film.

San Francisco, Cal.—The San Francisco Advertising Club recently observed "A Motion Picture Advertising Day," and viewed a number of animated advertising cartoons at its weekly luncheon at the Palace hotel. Allen B. Cleveland, general superintendent of the Animated Cartoon Film Corporation, was the chairman of the day, and Byington Ford, general manager of the concern, gave a talk on "The Evolution of Advertising in Motion Pictures." Seth T. Hency, sales manager, also made a brief talk, and Pinto, the tramp cartoonist, exhibited some of his work.

Casino Prepares for Opening.

San Francisco, Cal.—The fine new Casino theater, Ellis and Mason streets, will be opened to the public on April 8, by Charles H. Brown, formerly with the Hippodrome and Orpheum circuits. The bill will consist of vaudeville, a five-reel photoplay, a weekly and a comedy. Robert G. Brady, for many years with the Pantages circuit, will be manager. This house has a seating capacity of more than 3,000, on two floors, and embodies the latest ideas in theater construction. A large nursery and playroom for children has been provided, and retiring rooms for women have been installed on both the ground and mezzanine floors. A smoking room for men has been fited up, and smoking will be permitted in the balcony and in the boxes.

Strand Theater Succeeds the Empress.

San Francisco, Cal.—When the Empress theater is reopened on March 25 as an exclusive motion picture theater, it will be known as the Strand, this change having been decided upon by Manager Sid Grauman on account of the long association of the Empress with vaudeville. The initial attraction will be "The Poor Little Rich Girl," featuring Mary Pickford, and this will be followed at an early date by "The Price She Paid," with Clara Kimball Young.

Producers Working Near San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal.—The advantages of this city and vicinity, in both a climatic and scenic way, for the making of moving pictures is being reflected in the number of companies that have come here to work of late. A Selig company was here a short time ago to secure settings not to be equaled elsewhere, and this week Mary Pickford and company and Jack Pickford have arrived to commence work at Santa Cruz. Wonderful seashore and mountain scenery are to be found near here, and San Francisco is distant but two hours' ride.

Exchange Manager Personification of Luck.

San Francisco, Cal.—R. B. Quive, manager of the local branch of the Greater Vitagraph Company, is becoming known as the luckiest man in the film business, and the suspicion is rife that if he fell into the bay he would come out with his pockets filled with fish. His streak of luck began a couple of weeks ago, when he surprised his friends in the trade by claiming a charming bride. Last week he made a purchase of smokes at a cigar stand, and was given a ticket on an automobile drawing held at Pantages theater. With but one ticket in his possession, he won the Overland automobile, and was also given $50 in cash by a music house for being present at the time of the drawing.

Theaters Accept Potatoes as Legal Tender.

San Francisco, Cal.—Several theaters in the San Francisco bay district have taken advantage of the publicity given to the high prices of potatoes and onions to grant admission to their shows on certain evenings upon the presentation of Ocean View theater of this city recently specimens of these rare vegetables. The held a "Spud and Onion Night," one potato or two onions being accepted at the door in lieu of a ticket. A prize was offered for the largest potato brought, to keep up a good size average, the net result being eighty pounds of potatoes and three pounds of onions, besides cash receipts above the normal. The doorkeeper of the Imperial theater, one of the finest downtown houses, was recently offered two onions in place of the usual admission ticket, but was compelled to regretfully explain that, inasmuch as only $200 had been taken in at the box office that afternoon, he could not make the proper change. The high cost of living, while real, does not seem to be affecting the attendance at moving picture houses.

San Francisco Briefs.

R. E. Stebbins, formerly of this city, but more recently assistant manager at the American studio at Santa Barbara, is making a visit here to form new connections.

Harry Oviatt, formerly local manager of the Pathe exchange, is expected back within a few days from a five months' visit to Eastern centers.

W. O. Edmonds, manager of the Pacific Coast interests of the K-E-S-E, has returned from a short trip to Los Angeles. While he was there Max Linder arrived to commence work on some comedies.

California Notes.

Turlock, Cal.—George Bailey, Jr., of the Turlock theater, has taken over the Royal theater, and will close the latter, except for one night a week.

Oakland, Cal.—Harry Cornell, manager of the local Pantages theater until about six months ago, when he was transferred to Minneapolis, has returned to his former position here.

Oakland, Cal.—Beach & Krahn, who conduct two large theaters at Berkeley, are preparing to build an 1800-seat house on Broadway, near Fifty-sixth street.

San Francisco, Cal.—L. V. De Lorme, former manager of T. & D.'s Alameda and Richmond theaters, is now with the Rialto theater.

SPOKANE WOMAN HONORED.

Mrs. J. T. Burcham Elected Librarian of National Juvenile M. P. Board.

Spokane, Wash.—Mrs. J. T. Burcham, of Spokane, has been elected film librarian of the National Juvenile Motion Picture Board of New York. This office has been given Mrs. Burcham in recognition of her pioneer efforts in the interest of special motion pictures for children, a movement in which she has been interested for three years.

This board is interested in securing the production of pictures especially for juveniles, and the results of their efforts are just beginning to bear fruit, according to Mrs. Burcham, who, with Dr. H. S. Clemmer, has represented Spokane in this movement. Spokane was the third city in the United States to give regular programs for children only, and Manager Clemmer was the first manager to make weekly children's matinees a part of his policy.

"A number of producing companies are now making films with children in mind," states Mrs. Burcham.

"The Edison company is working out plans for children's films, and have an expert distributor who is trying to reach exhibitors all over the country to provide them with children's programs.

"The purpose is to give the little folks their own picture shows that will draw them away from the regular adult programs with their vampire, crime and sex elements. The movement is spreading all over the country, and it is to be hoped that children will soon have their exclusive programs just as thrilling and exciting as the others, but without their objectionable elements.

Mrs. Burcham is a member of the advisory council of the Edison company's children's department.

Spokane, Wash.—The Pathe special news feature covering the inaugural parade at Washington, D. C., March 5, was presented at the Liberty theater the week of March 11. This film, 500 feet long, is a review of the inauguration, and runs seven or eight minutes.

The picture shows President Wilson taking the oath administered by Supreme Justice White, and later delivering his inaugural address in front of the White House. The inaugural parade is shown.

Take Over Big Portland Theater

Jensen and Von Herberg Take the James Broadway, Seating 2,100 Persons—House Went Into the Hands of a Receiver on March 15—Largest Creditors Are Local Department Stores—Exchanges Not Hard Hit.

By Abraham Nelson, 601 Journal Bldg., Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Portland's biggest moving picture theater, seating 2,100 people, has been leased to Jensen and Von Herberg.

James' Broadway went into the hands of a receiver on March 15. Carl R. Jones, of the Portland Credit Men's association, took over the affairs of the house then. The financial crash seemed certain when a creditor's meeting was called the day before to discuss the theater corporation's affairs, brought to a head by a failure to liquidate indebtedness and the return of checks "n. s. f."

The largest creditors are said to be the Meier & Frank company and Olds, Wortman & King, two of Portland's biggest department stores. Film exchanges are comparatively small creditors. Deposits on picture contracts and the lease are listed as assets. Law suits by employees and on checks issued have been commenced in the courts against the corporation. Edwin F. James stated to the men on Film Row that he thought the Broadway would pay out dollar for dollar.

James' Broadway was the theater which, under the name of the T & D, was reported to have lost a fabulous sum of money for the California theatrical magnates during the few months they conducted the house. It is said that Jensen and Von Herberg will rename the house, the Liberty. It is hoped that the jinx has been satisfied and that the big theater will begin a period of great prosperity.

F. A. Lacey Manages the Sunset.

Portland, Ore.—Frank A. Lacey, well known up and down the Pacific Coast as a theater manager, has been selected by John A. Jennings, of the Sunset theater, to manage that cozy theater. Mr. Lacey came recently from Santa Ana where he managed the Clune theater. He has been in the game since its beginning on the Pacific Coast and at one time was employed by the People's amusement company.

"Patria" Booked for the Hip.

Portland, Ore.—The Pathe serial "Patria" has been booked to run at the Ackerman & Harris Hippodrome. This picture was originally scheduled to show at James' Broadway. When the big house became involved financially the picture was canceled there and secured by the Hippodrome.

E. Shainwald Comes Home.

Portland, Ore.—E. Shainwald, of the the People's Amusement company, who has been wintering in California, returned to his post at the People's theater recently. While in California he got first hand information about the making of pictures and inspected the moving picture theaters in the other coast cities.

New House for Tillamook.

Portland, Ore.—Messrs. Partridge and Morrison, owners of the Gem theater at Tillamook, Oregon, and who control the theatrical situation in the town, were recent visitors in Portland making arrangements to build a new theater in the coast town. A Portland architect has completed the plans and the house is to be finished in three months. The seating capacity will be 400 and modern equipment is being arranged for. The new house will be called the Gem, and upon completion the old theater of that name will be closed.

Three Theater Sales.

Portland, Ore.—The Nob Hill theater, in Portland's best West Side residential district, has been sold by C. B. Cannon to a Mr. Scott. Mr. Cannon will devote his attention to timber interests he has in Southern Oregon.

The Brooklyn theater, formerly conducted by Edwin L. McIntyre, has been sold.

The moving picture theater at Glendale, Oregon, has been bought by J. S. Savley.

Mutual's New Business Plans.

Portland, Ore.—Mutual exchanges, at least those on the Pacific Coast recently inspected by T. C. Malcolm, supervisor of exchanges, have been put on a strictly commercial basis, according to Mr. Malcolm, who is spending a few weeks in the Pacific Northwest. "Commercialized exchanges" is what he terms the offices under his supervision.

Mr. Malcolm says that the pictures are being rated according to their money-getting power to the exhibitor and that branch managers will be required to adhere strictly to that rating.

A. S. Kirkpatrick, formerly Mutual traveler, who temporarily took hold of the managerial reins of the Portland office upon the resignation of G. A. Reed, has been made permanent manager, says Mr. Malcolm.

W. D. Burford, Old Timer, Back.

Portland, Ore.—W. D. Burford, who owns the building housing the Theatorium at Lewiston, Idaho, and who formerly operated the house, was a recent visitor on Film Row. He had just completed a tour of California, where he visited the studios and acquired a feeling that he wants to get back in the game.

"Patria" Ball Is Held.

Portland, Ore.—The ladies' auxiliary of the Spanish American War Veterans gave a "Patria" ball, March 15, which was attended by 400 persons, including many army officers. Patriotism was the keynote of the affair. Two tabloids of Mrs. Vernon Castle in costumes characteristic of the picture were presented. Through the courtesy of W. W. Kofeldt, manager of the local Pathe office, "Patria" posters were furnished for decorations.

Spokane Women to Boost All Good Shows

Local Federation of Women's Organizations Appoints a Committee to Watch for and Recommend Worth-while Shows—Will Ignore All Others.

By S. Clark Pathin, East 1811 Eleventh Avenue, Spokane, Wash.

SPOKANE, WASH.—All theatrical entertainment, including the moving picture theaters of Spokane, henceforth, will be subjected to the official scrutiny of the club women of the city.

The amusement censorship committee of the Spokane Federation of Woman's organizations has just appointed a committee which began work Sunday, March 11. The work of the committee is to view and report on all picture shows, vaudeville theaters and dramatic performances.

The committee, organized by Mrs. H. M. Prager, chairman of the censorship committee of women's organizations, contains women representing the various clubs of the federation. Its purpose is to publicly recommend all performances that are worthy of the patronage of women and children. No effort will be made to criticise or condemn any show.

Those theaters in which are found features judged by the club women to be vulgar and indecent will be ignored in the regular report of the committee, which is to be published twice each week. This report will merely mention the theaters in which the entrtainment is adjudged worthy.

The members of the committee and the clubs they represent are as follows: Mrs. H. M. Prager, chairman; Mrs. Samuel Ofner, Sorosis, press reporter; Dr. Harriet Lacy, Sorosis; Mrs. S. K. Lipscomb, Floral Association; Mrs. F. K. Girand, Father's Day Association; Miss Smith, Graduate Nurses; Miss Lillian Hogan, Spokane Woman's Club; Mrs. E. Hupe, Good Government League; Mrs. J. Townsend, East End Book Club; Mrs. Stedman, Hillyard Literary Club, and Mrs. Fred Kendall, Michigan Apple Blossom Club. Other clubs of the federation will name their representatives on this committee at once.

The first report by the committee is as follows: Casino, Good; Clemmer, Good; Liberty, No serious criticism of interesting problem play.

THE GREATER PUNISHMENT (Two parts). The cast: Robert Grover (Charles Wheelock); Olive Grover (Edith Johnson); Adele (Georgetta Campbell); Alvin Cheyney (Lafayette McKee). Written by E. Lynn Summers. Produced by F. J. Grandon.

Robert Grover, in financial straits, goes to his wealthy and erratic old uncle, Alvin Cheyney, for aid. In the meantime his uncle has received negotiable bonds and decides to drive with them to the city bank. Old Cheyney's horse is frightened by a passing train and throws the old man to the ground. Grover sees the accident, hurries to the scene, finds his uncle unconscious and believes him dead. He finds the bonds and decides to turn them into cash. A letter drops from Grover's pocket, unnoticed by him, and Cheyney's old servant finds it.

Grover cashes the bonds, buys a doll for his child and tells his wife his uncle gave him the money with which to pay his debts. When Cheyney recovers, he finds that his bonds are missing from his coat pocket, but his nephew's letter is there instead. A detective agency engaged by Cheyney, discovers that the bonds have been cashed by Grover. Cheyney resolves to have his nephew arrested, but when he sees the happy wife, and the child who shows him the doll her father bought for her, old Cheyney relents. Grover realizes the enormity of his action, and decides to lead a better and straighter life.

THE BOOB.—The cast: Don Whipple (Casson Ferguson); Sue Planter (Byrdine Zuber); Eben Planter (Frank Owen); Harriman Sneed (Fred Eckhart). Written by Roland Ashford Phillips. Directed by Otis B. Thayer.

To no one, save Sue Planter, does Don Whipple of Pleasant Valley confide his secret ambition to become a great detective. Mr. Harriman Sneed drops into Pleasant Valley, and upon his coat lapel there glistens a detective's shield. Don is especially interested in the great sleuth, and Mr. Sneed very kindly accepts Don's savings of a hundred dollars in order to secure an appointment as Mr. Sneed's detective agent in Pleasant Valley.

Don works overtime at the detective business, and his industry is rewarded when he encounters a masked man robbing the post office. To Don's infinite amazement, he finds the burglar to be Mr. Sneed. Sneed escapes after knocking Don senseless.

A posse corners the robber on Raspberry Hill, but no one dares attempt his capture. Don, recovering from the blow, decides to go after the robber. Facing almost certain death, he fearlessly affects the capture of the desperado single handed and recovers the stolen bag of mail.

Don learns that in Sneed, he has captured the most daring and notorious safe breaker in the country. The New York authorities also inform Don that for his future there is coming to him a reward of a thousand dollars. As pretty Sue Planter happens to be closest to Don's side at the moment the information arrives, Don has two reasons for the broad smiles that illumines his countenance.

ESSANAY.

THE HAM WHAT WAS (A Black Cat Feature—Two parts).—The cast: Tom McNulty (Harry Dunkinson); Maizie McNulty (Mabel Bardine).

Abigail, a trained pig, is the principal attraction of the McNulty's vaudeville act. The jinx seems to follow Tom and his wife, however. They finally get a week's work, but Tom, in celebration, spends his salary in getting "pickled." More than that, he trades off Abigail for more liquor. Maizie, his wife, recovers the pig, but the jinx is still on the job. The McNulty's are on the verge of starvation when a telegram comes offering them another week's work. To celebrate the occasion they make a "square meal" off Abigail. When they arrive for the work, however, they discover that all the manager wanted was the trained pig. They had literally eaten their act.

THE SHOOTING STAR.—The Beau Brummel of the beach sees something attractive and promptly engages in a flirtation. The lady's husband and father-in-law precipitate the gay young man into the ocean, but meanwhile, his wife and mother-in-law handle the girl in the same manner. In the end all of the party have enough of salt water and the flirting pair have enough of flirting. Harvesting the wheat crop in Alberta, Canada, makes up the other half of the reel.

MEDDLING WITH MARRIAGE ("Is Marriage Sacred?"—Two parts).—The cast: Marion Heath (Marguerite Clayton); Fred Ransom (Edward Arnold); Mrs. Heath (Lillian Drew); Andrew Tavish (Ulrich Houpt); Darius Heath (Thomas Commerford).

The question of whether Marion Heath shall wed Fred Ransom or Andrew Tavish has divided the Heath home against itself. Marion loves Ransom, who though in moderate circumstances, has good prospects. Socially ambitious, Mrs. Heath prefers Tavish, who has convinced her that he is wealthy. Her father wants the girl to marry the man she loves. The dominating mother finally triumphs, and Tavish leads Marion to the altar. Meantime, however, Ransom has been investigating Tavish's claims to wealth and found he is an embezzler. As the minister prepares to perform the marriage ceremony, Ransom enters the church with an officer. Tavish is arrested and Ransom weds Marion.

VIM.

NELLIE'S NIFTY NECKLACE.—Nellie has many suitors, but she yearns for a necklace. While strolling in the park a policeman becomes enraptured with her charms and gives her the desired necklace, but as Nellie will not satisfy the policeman by kissing him he wants his necklace back. Nellie returns the precious jewelry and Mr. Policeman finds a willing customer in the person of one Billie, a love-sick four-flusher, who is also enraptured with Nellie.

Along comes "Long Arm Jim" and soon relieves Billie of his love token. Jim knows woman's weakness and succeeds in selling and reselling the necklace many times—each time extracting it from the purchaser. Billie is the first to discover the loss and is soon joined by the other victims. "Long Arm Jim" is finally captured and the necklace is returned to its original owner—the policeman. Billie, however, succeeds in getting it from the policeman and when he presents it to Nellie he wins her for life.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURE.

FRIENDS IN SAN ROSARIO (Second of O. Henry Series—Two parts).—The cast: Major Kingman (Mr. Norcrouse); Mr. Buckley (Mr. Ellis); Bank Examiner (Mr. Frank Glendon); Mrs. Kingman (Miss Mildred Manning). Scenario by Helmar Walton Bergman. Directed by Thomas R. Mills.

A man carrying a black leather bag dropped off the train, hurried up the street and entered the First National Bank. He was told it was fifteen minutes to opening time, but when he presented his card with the notation "Bank Examiner," he was quickly admitted. The man's imperturbable manner struck a chill in everyone he came in contact with, and although the teller knew his cash was O. K., still he was nervous. The money was counted, the gold dumped on the counter and spun 'neath the man's quick fingers. He made quick questions that were answered readily but brought pink cheeks and a stammering tongue.

An incident the alert bank examiner had not seen was the office boy, who slid over to the Stockmen's Bank with the news that a new bank examiner was on the job. A note was handed to the boy and he returned to the bank.

The examiner is introduced to the president, Major Kingman, with whom he is to go over the loans. There are six notes that total $70,000 and the examiner wants to see the securities, but the Major states he is personally responsible as they were taken to help an old friend in trouble. "Ah!" breathes the examiner, "you know what I will have to do?" "I know," says the Major, "but first let me tell you about my friend. Twenty years ago I was sheriff, and Bob deputy. I had a wife and a couple of children, a nice house and was happy. One winter the money for the taxes came in so quick that I did not have time to go to bank, so I locked it in the safe in my office. Next morning the money was gone. Bob was writing at the desk beside it. The safe had been opened by the combination. Bob appeared very quiet. Before the grand jury I was handed a warrant to arrest the man that was like a brother to me. I did, but I let Bob hang around the office.

"One day Bob came and said, 'If you'd just tip me the smallest sign or say Bob, I understand, it would make it a lot easier.' I didn't know what he meant. But that night I found out. I dropped off to sleep about midnight and woke up standing half-dressed in the courthouse corridor. Bob was holding one arm and the doctor the other, and Alice was shaking me and half crying. Sleep walking, said the doctor. The doctor told us about the strange things people do while in this condition. Back in my room I pulled open the wardrobe and jerked out a quilt to put around my shoulders and out fell the money. How did it get there? No one knew until Bob explains: 'Why, I saw you open the safe and put it there, but I didn't say anything because I didn't know that you were sleep-walking.'"

The Major stopped, looked toward the bank across the street and saw a yellow shade drawn the length of the window and raised again. The examiner, tired of the story, asked him if he had anything further to say. "What do you mean?" exclaimed the Major, and threw a batch of papers into his hands. The surprised examiner totaled them and found that they were correct and in answer to his question received the reply: "Us Texans love to spin yarns to the stranger within our gates." The huffed and wondering examiner left and crossed over to continue his work at the Stockton National Bank.

When he left, the Major re-read the note the boy had brought:

"Dear Tom:—I heard that the examiner is over to your place: if he comes over here he will find me with $2,200 instead of the $20,000 I am supposed to have. I loaned $18,000 to Ross

& Fisher, but only took their note of hand. They will realize $40,000 on their deal; but it won't make my cash on hand look any better. Now hold this greyhound of the government over at your place until the 11:25 train comes in. I wired Sam Bradshaw for $20,000 and it will be due on that train. Rope him and sit on his head until you see the signal of the shade pulled down across our window. I'm counting on you, Tom.

"Your old pard,
"BOB BUCKLEY."

The Major tore the letter into pieces and let them sift into the waste basket. "That pays him some on account for what he tried to do for me twenty years ago."

PAST ONE AT ROONEY'S (Second of O. Henry Series—Two Parts).—The cast: Cork McManus (Gordon Gray); The Girl (Mildred Manning); Rooney (Mr. Martin); Brick Cleary (Mr. Stanley); Dutch Mike (Wally Clarke). Scenario written by E. J. Montague. Directed by Thomas R. Mills.

Cork McManus is a gangster. In a gang fight he sticks up another gangster. He goes into hiding. Unable to bear his seclusion, he crawls from his hiding place one night and makes his way to a strange dance hall, Rooney's. Here he meets a girl—a street-walker. It is love at first sight. The girl pretends she is a good girl—a working girl—and Cork pretends to be respectable, too. All goes well until the police come. Then, when Cork is about to be arrested, the girl is forced to reveal her identity to save him. On the street he bids her good-bye, crushed and broken. She tells him she only his love—she really meant to go straight. Then lied to him because she did not want to lose Cork tells the truth about himself, but it makes no difference to her. The ending finds them heading for a minister's.

KALEM.

A MISFIT MILLIONAIRE (Ham & Bud Comedy).—Ham and Bud part with avowals of eternal friendship. Many years pass and Ham, in charge of the Swell Dishwasher Company, wears a top hat and rides in a limousine attended by liveried lackeys. Bud descends from his seat on the brake-rods of a freight in time to see his old friend exit from his palatial offices preparatory to paying a visit to his fiancee, the daughter of the district attorney. Spurned, Bud swings on behind and conceals himself behind a convenient curbstone when Ham enters the district attorney's home.

Later Ham promises Bud a job as his office boy if he will keep his past a closed book. Bud, in his capacity of order clerk, sends Ham's fiancee one of the marvelous dishwashers. It proves to be a sponge that takes on the aspects of a wild creature the moment it absorbs moisture. Ham arrives just in time to slay the ferocious sponge before it annihilates the entire household.

The following day Bud tips off the police that Ham is a crook and is about to make his getaway. Ham's prospective father-in-law leads a band of blue-coats in a raid that fizzles when the president of the Swell Dishwasher Company escapes through a secret panel. Bud has substituted a brick for the swag, so it's back to the old life once more for our noble heroes.

THE MISSING FINANCIER (An adventure of "Grant, Police Reporter").—The cast: Tom Grant (George Larkin); Thaddeus Barrington (Cyril Courtney); Martha Barrington (Ollie Kirkby); "The Spider" (Robert Ellis). Written by Robert Welles Ritchie. Directed by Robert Ellis.

Thaddeus Barrington, owner of the Goddard Steamship Company, disappears while on his yacht off the coast of Florida. He often had guests aboard and the story as telegraphed to the newspapers hints that perhaps his enemies have engineered the affair to prevent his being prsent at a meeting of the board of directors.

When Tom Grant, reporter of the Chronicle, arrives in Florida, Barrington's daughter Martha is almost ready to collapse. She is able to throw very little light upon the case.

Grant's arrival has been reported to the "Spider," who had directed many similar affairs but always eluded the police. Barrington, a prisoner on his own yacht, writes on a slip of paper, places it in a bottle and drops it through a port hole. The message is fished out by a negro who is able to decipher the address. Refused admittance to the hotel, he appeals to Grant, who hurries to the wireless station and calls one of the submarines lying off the coast. He also ascertains that a wireless outfit has been sold to a certain address.

Meantime, the "Spider" has instructed his henchmen to "get the girl, too," and when Grant tries to see her she is already a prisoner. Reasoning that Martha has been taken to the house of which he has the address, Grant hurries there, but finds all the doors locked. Bracing his hands on one wall of a narrow alleyway, and his feet on the other, he mounts to the roof with his body in a horizontal position. He is not a moment too soon, for the gangsters have left Martha a prisoner in a sealed room into which fumes of a deadly gas are pouring.

Making a bridge of his body, Grant gets Martha across the areaway. When they return to the hotel they are just in time to greet Martha's father, who has been rescued by the submarine commander. Barrington arrives in New York in time to cast his vote in the annual meeting, and foil the "Spider."

GOLD SEAL.

THE MAGPIE (Three Parts—April 3).—The cast: Dorothy Gerard (Tina Marshal); "Bill" Slade, a burglar (Claude Cooper); Robert Gray (Monty Brace); Senator Gerard (Deam Raymond). Produced by Edwin Stevens.

Dorothy Gerard, visiting in Grantwood, a suburb of Washington, receives a letter from her father informing her that he is about to return from California. He mentions robberies that have taken place in Washington and instructs Dorothy to remove certain papers from the library safe. Suddenly Dorothy remembers she has forgotten the family silver. She is further disturbed when she reads of robberies and is dumbfounded to see in the picture of "The Magpie," the robber, almost a replica of herself.

She accepts an invitation from Bob Grey to attend a play that evening, and explains that she will be compelled to miss the first act but will be ready at nine.

Dorothy arrives about eight. As she enters the house she hears a noise. Creeping toward the portieres, she sees the family silver being carefully packed in a suit-case by a burglar. Dorothy is at a loss how to proceed when the picture of "The Magpie" flashes across her mind and she decides to play the role and capture the burglar. She assumes a carefree air and confronts the burglar. His hand falls on the gun by his side, but he drops it at once to remove his cap.

Dorothy explains that she was working on the safe and heard him at work. Knowing the safe contained nothing that would interest the burglar, Dorothy opens it. The crook is amazed and offers to work with her fifty-fifty. Dorothy accepts and "Bill" invites her to visit his den at 49 Water street and "split the swag." Dorothy suggests that they have a bottle of wine, and the burglar starts for the ice-box.

Just before nine he seizes the suit-case and tells her he is going. She realizes she must accompany him if she wishes to regain the silver, and, dropping a note, leaves with the burglar.

A few minutes later Bob finds the note. He sees the library in disorder and finds another note reading, "Danger, Dorothy, 49 Water street." He is about to leave when Kelly, the patrolman, orders him to throw up his hands. Bob pleads to be allowed to go. Kelly laughs. Bob slams him an uppercut which floors the patrolman and he dashes out.

At 49 Water street the burglar and Dorothy quarrel. Dorothy, pretending anger, swaggers to the door, steals the burglar's gun from his pocket, covers the burglar and holds him until Bob arrives. While Bob and Dorothy are rejoicing Bill makes his getaway, but he is captured by Kelly. He tips Kelly off to the Magpie and Bob and Dorothy are captured and locked up.

The following morning Senator Gerard arrives and hears of the robbery. He is driven to the police station, is shown the silver and identifies it. Dorothy, Bob and the burglar are being led out to the court room when Bob spies the senator and makes a break for him. Dorothy follows and the station is thrown into an uproar. All is explained and forgiven, and only the burglar suffers.

RED FEATHER.

THE BRONZE BRIDE (Five Parts—April 2).—The cast: Harvey Ogden (Frank Mayo); William Ogden (Ed. Clark); Joe Dubois (Charles Hill Mailes); Black Lynx (Harry Archer); A-Che-Chee, his daughter (Claire McDowell); Her Brother (Eddie Polo); Mr. Carter (Winter Hall); His Daughter (Betty Schade); A-Che-Chee's Child (Frankie Lee). Scenario by Maude Grange. Produced by Henry McRae.

Disgusted with his son's conduct since his return from college, William Ogden turns him out to make his own way in the world. Harvey finally lands in Elk Head, in the Canadian North Woods. Here he meets Joe Dubois, a hunter and trapper, who is broke. Harvey and Joe go into business together. Black Lynx, the head of the tribe of Hurons who trade in furs with the town, comes to Joe to bargain for wares. With him is his daughter, A-Che-Chee, and her brother. The girl falls in love with Harvey. She falls from her horse and Harvey goes to her assistance. His action is misinterpreted by her brother, who warns Harvey to keep away from his sister.

Harvey is trapping, when his leg is caught in a steel trap, and it is A-Che-Chee who finds and releases him. She takes him to his cabin and nurses him. Her father and her brother come to the cabin in search of her In spite of her protests, they insist upon an immediate marriage. Harvey consents, as he thinks the wedding won't be legal. Joe has been away on a trip, and he returns the day of the marriage. He is there when the Indians arrive with a priest. The chief informs Harvey that they have been Christians for a long time, and that the ceremony will be a binding one. Harvey protests, but they are finally married.

Three years pass. A-Che-Chee has been very happy with her baby boy, and Harvey has been lulled into content. A letter from civilization reaches him, and he cannot resist returning to his father. He fears to take his bronze wife with him and determines to steal away with the baby while she is absent. When she discovers their flight, she is overcome with grief. Joe persuades her to follow her husband and try to win him back. She goes. Harvey has told his father that his wife is dead. The little boy entrenches himself in his grandfather's affections and seems to have forgotten his mother. But one day a picture of an Indian on a magazine cover recalls her to him and he begins to cry for her. Harvey's heart is touched. He confesses to his father and sets out to fetch his wife. At Elk Head he learns that she has left and there is no trace of her movements. He returns to town.

A-Che-Chee, in the meantime, has arrived with Joe at the home of his rich uncle. Joe tells her story, and his aunt and cousin undertake to fit the Indian girl for her entry into society. She is very docile but still dazed with grief, and lack of understanding. She is to make her first appearance on the night of a reception given by Harvey's father.

The Cartiers, with Joe and A-Che-Chee appear at the reception, and the Indian is nearly faint with anticipation of seeing her boy. She has carried the stuffed rabbit, the baby's pet toy, with her in her muff. The little boy is the success of the occasion. He glances at his mother, and turns away to another. Almost overcome with her disappointment, the poor woman takes the rabbit out of her muff and holds it out to him. He stares at it, then with a cry he grabs it and is lead to look more closely at the woman. Recognition comes to him, and he embraces her. At this moment, Harvey, remorseful, arrives and there is a happy reunion in which A-Che-Chee forgives him his cruelty.

NESTOR.

MIXED MATRIMONY (April 2).—The cast: Eddie (Eddie Lyons); His Valet (Lee Moran); Edith (Edith Roberts); the maid (Jane Bernoudy); the father (Fred Gamble); the chef (Harry Nolan). Written by Fred Palmer. Produced by Louis Chaudet.

Eddie receives a letter from Frederick Gamble, the uncle and guardian of Edith Roberts, whom his late father desired him to marry, asking him to their house on Saturday to discuss the marriage, so he arranges for his valet, Lee, to impersonate him, while he goes as the valet. Edith persuades her uncle to allow her to play the part of the maid. They are mutally attracted, but each thinks the other a servant.

The butler has left and Lee tells Eddie to assist Edith with the dinner. Lee has a terrible time with his oysters on the half shell. Jane is uncomfortable in the presence of her master and mistress. Eddie and Edith are getting along famously. Lee and Jane decide to elope and, slipping out a side door, are married at a church nearby and return and announce the event. Edith tells him she is the heiress and Lee and Jane fall in a faint. The aunt and uncle are delighted.

JOKER.

A BOOB FOR LUCK (April 7).—The cast: The Little Flirt (Lillian Peacock); a Neighborly Fellow (Wm. Franey); His Wife (Gale Henry); The Peanut Man (Bobbie Mack); The Ole Clothes Man (Milburn Morante); Juvenile (Billy Human). Written by Jack Cunningham. Produced by William Beaudine.

Bill flirts with the girl next door, but Gale, his wife, sends him to work. Bill has been in the habit of buying lottery tickets from a peanut man. At night he hides one in the pocket of an old pair of pants and writes the number on his cuff. The next day he learns that his ticket won fifty thousand dollars, but when he rushes home Gale informs him that she sold the pants to an old clothes man.

Bill rushes from the house, meets Lillian and the two dash down the street to find the old clothes man, who has sold the pants to a juvenile. Bill loses Lillian. She flirts with the juvenile and they sit in the park. Bill examines every one who comes along, in autos, on the street and even a hod-carrier to see if they have the old pants. Finally they discover the juvenile and pulling him behind some bushes, tear the trousers from him.

HAGENBECK'S WILD ANIMALS (April 5).—A visit to Carl Hagenbeck's animal park is the subject of this reel. We see the large bird lake, with many species of wild fowl living in harmony. Then we visit some members of the deer family, and go on to the enclosure with the zebra, the "dandy" of the horse family. We pass the ostrich, the ibex, and the chamois, coming to the pool which contains the sea lions and seals. Then comes the cage of the polar bear, and after that the comical penguins. Reindeer come next, and then we visit the elephant.

The favorites of the zoo, the monkeys, are seen at their tricks. There are also pictures of the camel, the giraffe, the kangaroo, and finally the finest of all—the lions and tigers, kings of the jungle.

MAGIC INDIA, AS SEEN BY DOCTOR DORSEY (April 8).—Views of India taken from the expedition of Doctor Dorsey. Street life and buildings of historical interest make up the reel.

THE UPS AND DOWNS OF MR. PHOOL PHAN (Cartoon Comedy on Same Reel).—Mr. Phool Phan wakes after a rough night. He snatches the bowl of gold fish for a drink, and swallows a fish. His wife comes in, and sends for a doctor. To avoid the doctor he jumps into the dumbwaiter and goes to the cellar. Then he goes into the street where the cop is flirting with the maid. The officer resents the interruption, and starts to beat Mr. Phan. The fish flies out of his mouth and into the mouth of the cop. Mr. Phan hurries back into the cellar. A delivery boy comes with a case of beer. Mr. Phan sticks him into the dumbwaiter and keeps the beer.

BISON.

THE BURNING SILENCE (Two Parts—April 7).—The cast: Jim Kennedy (James Farley); John Martin (George Pearce); Rose (Jane Bernoudy); the girl (Miss Hollenbeck). Written and produced by A. W. Rice.

Jim Kennedy is living in the big timber district of the West and is fond of gambling, but does not play straight. One of the rangers becomes suspicious of him. A new settler arrives and stakes out a claim, but he does not seem to be sociable. All that they know is that his name is John Martin.

A forest fire breaks out and all the men are called out; Kennedy is injured and Martin takes him to his cabin to care for him. At last Kennedy feels that he is able to move on, but so much has Martin become dependent upon his society that he dislikes to have him leave, and decides to tell him of his past history and its sorrow.

Martin was married to Rose. They had lived happily; but a certain Kenneth James, in spite of the fact that he himself had a wife, made love to Rose and so succeeded in implanting the seeds of jealousy in her mind against her husband that she finally left him. Martin was heartbroken.

The next morning the two men have breakfast, but both have spent an unhappy night. Kennedy tells Martin he thinks he will shave before he leaves, and when he does so, Martin recognizes him as the purloiner of his happiness. The two men struggle until Kennedy convinces Martin that he intends taking him to Rose, telling her that he had lied, and so repair as much as possible the harm he had done by his silence.

LAEMMLE.

THE STAR WITNESS (Two Parts—April 4).—The cast: John Watts (Lee Hill); Mary (Mina Cunard); Annie (Elizabeth Janes); Lolo (Lena Baskette); Tucker (Ernest Shields). Scenario by W. Gibson. Produced by John McDermott.

John Watts has a hard time making ends meet with his modest salary, for his wife, Mary, has been an invalid for many months and his child, Annie, needs clothes badly. In the department store where John works there is a long list of missing articles, and finally a detective is called. Things continue to disappear. The detective begins to suspect John and watches him closely.

Annie has become a friend of Lolo, the little daughter of a wealthy judge. Lolo presents her with a doll and wraps it in the paper which has just arrived from the department store. Tucker, the driver of the delivery wagon, placed a parcel on the seat of the wagon and in turning a corner it rolls off into the gutter. He reports it as a missing article. Annie is talking to her friend, the policeman, and both notice the package. He tells her to keep the shoes that are in the parcel, as the address has been washed away.

John has to be at work unusually early one morning and tells Mary to send Annie with his lunch. The child is delighted, and wraps it in the paper in which the doll was wrapped. The detective is at the desk and offers to take care of Annie's package for her father. He notices the new shoes which the child wears and recognizes them. Then, seeing the paper, with the address of Judge Andrews plainly written on the outside, in which the lunch is rolled, he concludes that he has found the thief.

John is arrested and put in a cell. The evidence seems to be absolutely against him, but finally Annie is called as a witness and tells about the doll and the shoes. Judge Andrews has charge of the case and the court is adjourned until Lolo and the policeman can be brought as witnesses. After their testimony, which corroborates Annie's, the case is dismissed and the manager and superintendent of the department store hasten to congratulate John and to show their pleasure in his release. They tell him the firm has not appreciated him but they will try to make amends. The driver turns out to be the thief.

THE BLUE PRINT MYSTERY (April 7).—Walter Johnson, a young mechanic, has invented an automobile attachment that will revolutionize the trade. Williams, for whom he works, is desirous of purchasing it. His superintendent prevails upon him to allow the idea to be stolen, then discharges Johnson. Slawry has so enmeshed himself in Williams' affairs that he can hardly call his soul his own.

Williams' daughter is in love with Johnson and overhears the plot to steal the invention. She upbraids her father for listening to such a scheme. She then goes to Johnson and tells him of the plot. Johnson, the next day, is discharged and Slawry induces a sailor to steal the blue prints of the invention. Adamson, the sailor, then starts to blackmail Slawry, telling him that he will reveal all if he is not well paid. Slawry defies him, so Adamson tries to regain the blue prints from Williams' house.

Williams hears some one breaking in his library, and confronts Adamson. In the subsequent struggle Williams is killed. Johnson has been meeting Grace clandestinely, and is accused by Slawry of the crime. A strong circumstantial case is made against him, as he was seen leaving the house at the time of the murder. An uncle of Grace, who is a physician, secures a piece of the glass that Adamson broke from the window. In doing this Adamson cut his hand. A microscopical examination shows that the blood on the pane is from a man suffering from Kala Azur, an incurable Oriental disease. The doctor, believing in Johnson's innocence, advertises that he has a sure cure for the dread malady. Adamson answers the ad, and the doctor charges him with the crime and he confesses all. Johnson is released.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURES.

THE VOICE ON THE WIRE (Episode 4—"The Next Victim"—March 30).—The cast: John Shirley (Ben Wilson); "Red" Warren (Francis McDonald); Polly Marion (Neva Gerber); Capt. Cronin (Howard Crampton); Shirley's valet (Frank Tokanoga); Dr. Reynolds (Jos. Girard).

Detective Cronin has arrested Shirley's Japanese valet Sato and is surprised to receive a message from Shirley to release Sato, but he does so. He follows Sato to a garage where he is overcome by two crooks. One is induced to change places with him. Cronin escapes and Sato discovers the deception and kills the crook. Cronin soon learns the phone message was false.

"Red" Warren has kidnapped Polly Marion and is determined that she shall pay the price that night.

Shirley finds in Polly's apartments the list of those condemned by the "Voice," and noting the name of John Vance, warns Vance to phone him of any unusual happening.

Shirley, Cronin and Short drive to Warren's home, and force an entrance. Shirley climbs up to the bedroom in which Polly is held prisoner. Warren at last opens the door, only to foil the detectives by jumping into the room and locking the door. His assassin is in the act of choking Polly. But a shot is fired and the man falls as Cronin and Short break in and cover Warren with a revolver.

The phone rings and Shirley is lifting the receiver, Warren breaks away, and swings a blow at Shirley's jaw. A mysterious hand is seen at the phone, and they hear a voice say, "Fix everything for Vance tonight."

They dash to Vance's home and find he has received a note warning him of trouble. Later, Shirley lies in Vance's bed, Cronin sits beside Vance, revolver in hand, and Polly guards the library. At midnight a hand appears near the bed. Shirley fires and the hand disappears. Cronin and Polly run into the room, where they discover blood stains, and then realize their folly in leaving Vance unprotected. They rush back only to find him dead. The window curtains are moving, but no one is to be seen.

The phone rings again. Shirley lifts the receiver but dashes it to the floor. His disappointment is so intense that he breaks down, and Polly goes toward him to offer sympathy.

THE PURPLE MASK (Episode Fifteen, "The Rescue"—April 2).—The cast: Patricia Montez (Grace Cunard); Detective Phil Kelly (Francis Ford); his assistants (Peter Gerald, Jerry Ash); Pat's aunt (Jean Hathaway).

Secret Service officials take Pat prisoner to the Federal jail. She is allowed the freedom of the corridor, one side of which is marked by the outer wall of the jail. There is but one other prisoner, whom Pat discovers to be one of the anarchists captured following the air-raid.

Pat learns from him that the Secret Service men are preparing to attack the anarchists in an old shack known as "the Frenchman's cabin." Later on the guard is withdrawn by the warden, who believes Pat is safe in the corridor.

Pat's gangsters have trailed the officers to jail and learn that Pat is imprisoned in one of the wings abutting an unfrequented street, and by using a ladder mounted on a truck reach the window, saw the bars and free the girl.

When she is descending a patrol appears and engages the thugs in a fight. Pat escapes, having first secured a revolver from one of her men. She hails a taxi and forces the chauffeur to drive to West Farms, the anarchists' rendezvous.

Meanwhile the Secret Service men have made their attack on the hut. The anarchists, having dug a tunnel for the purpose of insuring their escape, plant a bomb in readiness to be fired by electricity. On entering the cabin one of the officers cut the wire.

When the men realize that their bomb has failed to explode they hurry through the underground passage, taking with them a container of nitro-glycerine. Pat arrives just as the anarchists emerge from the tunnel.

The shouts of Secret Service operatives who have remained outside call the men from the hut, and they emerge just as the anarchists attempt to hurl the nitro-glycerine. Pat shoots the man who is about to throw the explosive. The nitro-glycerine falls, the shock wrecks the hut and a stove fires the debris.

Pat sees a man in the ruins, and jumping to her feet she rushes into the ruins and drags out the chief of the Secret Service.

BIG U.

THE DAWN OF DECENCY (April 5).—Big Joe, a gambler, injured in a mine explosion, has been nursed back to health by the sweetheart of John Slade, paymaster at the mine. Later Joe, apparently asleep in a mining camp saloon, hears two ruffians conspire to drug Slade and rob him of the payroll.

Joe is unable to prevent the men from carrying out their design, but he does manage to inveigle them into a card game and win the money back from them. Just as Slade, disheartened, is about to end his life, Joe appears with the miners' money intact. Slade rushes to the mine in time to pay off the men, and later, thanks to the gambler's kindness, is able to wed his sweetheart.

THE TERRORS OF WAR (April 8).—Alone in her home since her father and brothers departed to fight for the Confederacy, Betty Dale, a daughter of the Southland, is alarmed to see a squad of Union cavalrymen. Frightened, she watches them leading out the horses from the stable, but fright disappears when she sees her own mare being taken. Rushing out she faces the commander. "Don't you dare take my horse!" she commands. The officer smiles, salutes her and bids his men lead the mare back.

A week later Betty's oldest brother, a Confederate officer, comes home. Betty sees the officer who saved her horse and is seeking shelter in the barn as he has been wounded.

She slips out and presents her horse to the wounded man. He mounts and escapes from a detachment of Confederates. Betty's brother accuses his sister of treason. He orders her to atone by enlisting in the Confederate service as a spy.

It is near the end of the war before Betty encounters her hero again. She has enlisted in the Union service as a nurse to further her work as a spy. One day her Union officer is brought into the hospital and placed in Betty's ward. Betty is detected in an attempt to send information to the Confederate commander, and accused as a spy. Her Union hero, who has heard the accusation, demands to see the commandant. Remembering Betty's kindness in giving him her horse, the officer tells the commandant he knows her well as a devoted servant of the Union. Betty is freed and rewards her cavalier by lending a willing ear to his declaration of love.

PERILS OF THE SECRET SERVICE (Episode No. 5—"The Man in the Trunk"—Two parts—April 6).—The cast: Yorke Norroy (Kingsley Benedict); Carson Huntley (Jay Belasco); Cecilia Reinald (Roberta Wilson); Valdez (Harry Mann); Diego Rey (Arthur Hoyt); Pedro Gonzales (Bertram Grassby). Written and produced by George Bronson Howard.

Cissy Reginald comes to Yorke Norroy, chief of the American Secret Service Agent, to find out what has become of her sweetheart, Carson Huntley. Norroy is anxious himself, for he has not heard from Huntley for three weeks. The valet brings a note to Norroy from Huntley which reads, "Give the bearer of the message one thousand dollars and he will explain how you can save me." The money is paid.

The Mexican bearer explains that Huntley is held a prisoner by Diego Rey, the governor, who intends to keep him captive until he tells how the new noiseless machine gun is made. Diego is torturing Huntley, who carries the plans in his head, to force the secret from him.

Cissy is willing to do anything for Huntley. They arrange for a troupe of girls who, with Cissy, are to dance at the Mexican theater. There Diego Rey becomes infatuated with her. She leads him on and finally invites him to her apartment for supper. Norry gives her a pellet to put in the man's wine and a tube of Ethyl chloride. She is to saturate her handkerchief with it and hold it over Diego's nose when he is unconscious from the effects of the pellet.

Diego Rey arrives. Norroy is hidden behind the curtains. The Mexican is so ardent that he refuses to drink any more wine although the girl tries to force that containing the pellet upon him. He attacks her and Norroy rushes in. The two men fight. Diego Rey is soon overpowering Norroy, but the girl overcomes the Mexican by waving her handkerchief saturated with Ethyl chloride before his nose Unconscious he is tied and gagged. Yorke, disguising himself as Diego, leaves Cissy to guard the unconscious governor with a revolver and hastens to the prison in which Huntley is held.

He has no trouble in gaining entrance to Huntley's cell. He finds his friend hung to the wall by handcuffs. Norroy orders the guards to release the prisoner, and as soon as they are left alone, exchanges clothes with Huntley, who hastens from the prison to Cissy's apartment. Diego Rey is put into a trunk, in which Norroy bored many air holes, and Huntley Cissy and the other girls of the troupe, with the trunk, hasten across the Mexican border.

At the right time, Norroy discloses his face to the guard and demands that Pedro Gonzales, Diego's lieutenant, come to his cell. The Mexican is astounded to see Norroy, who informs him that if he wishes to see Diego Rey again he will have to rush with him across the border. Huntley and the girls stand on the American side of the border with Diego, who is guarded by an American soldier, while Gonzales, with Norroy, stand on the Mexican side. Diego and Norroy step across the line at the same time.

CROOKS AND CROCODILES (April 8).—Bill has had a rough night, and awakes with an awful head. He goes to fish in the park lake. While he is away Fat sees his wife hide a stocking full of money and steals it. Bill catches an alligator and is terrified. Fat on his way to the park sees that the cops are after him. He throws the sock into the water. Bill's hook catches it, and he determines to fish for the mate. A big alligator comes hunting for his little one and chases Bill. Fat tries to rescue him. The alligator leads them to the tank where there are many more of these creatures, and there is a furious mix-up of Fat, Bill, the cops and the alligators, during which Bill's wife adds to the confusion by discovering her money in Bill's pail.

VICTOR.

PLEASE BE MY WIFE (April 3).—The cast: The man (Robert Leonard); the first sweetheart (Betty Schade); the second sweetheart (Miss Drew); the third sweetheart (Ruth Van); the old acquaintance (Victoria Forde). Written and produced by Robert Leonard.

Robert is offered the superintendency of a mine in the West on two conditions: first, that he report at once, and, second, that he bring a wife with him. He proposes to his old sweetheart, but she rejects him. He next proposes to another, who accepts until she sees that he is wearing the picture of his sweetheart. He proposes to a third, but is rejected. Then he goes into the telegraph office to wire that he cannot accept the offer. In the office he meets Victoria, an old acquaintance, he proposes and is accepted.

In the meantime sweetheart No. 1 finds a telegram which Robert dropped, telling of the offer of $10,000 if he will report with a wife. She goes in search of Robert.

Sweethearts No. 2 and 3 also go in search of the victim. He finds the three waiting for him, but beats them to the church and is married to his old acquaintance.

SOMEBODY LIED (Two parts—April 5).—The cast: Willie (Harry Carter); Dolly (Priscilla Dean); Evelyn (Virginia Lee); Pierrot (Earl Page). Scenario by Maie Havey. Produced by Ben Wilson.

Dolly is proud of her husband Willie and believes he never has done anything wrong, for he says, "I never smoke; I never drink; I never dance; I never attend masked balls." She at last persuades him to let her go to a masked ball with her friend Evelyn and her mother. Willie says he will stay home.

Dolly dances and enjoys herself with Pierrot, with whom she coquets. But when he attempts to make love to her she rebels. Early in the morning she returns home with Evelyn, still haunted by the image of Pierrot.

Meanwhile Willie has gone to a gambling den. The room is dense with smoke; the drinks are being passed around constantly; Willie is the most reckless bidder and the greatest drinker. Finally Pierrot joins the crowd, still disguised in the outfit he wore at the masked ball.

Suddenly the police raid the gambling rooms. Willie hits two of the officers and with Pierrot hides in the butler's pantry. The policemen batter down the doors. Pierrot exchanges clothes with Willie, who climbs through the skylight; the police soon find that Pierrot is not the one who knocked out two of their men and rush after Willie, who eludes his pursuers.

As he enters his bedroom Dolly is awakened. Seeing the costume of Pierrot she screams and pulls the covers over her head. When Willie approaches she begs him to go away and promises she will never flirt again. This makes Willie suspicious, and he demands to know what she means. But she asks him what he means by being in that outfit and when she finds poker chips in his pocket is horrified. They come to the conclusion that they are both human and have their own faults.

FREED BY FIDO (Two parts—March 31).—The cast: Waiter (Owen Evans); proprietor (Larry Bowes); society girl (Lillian Hamilton); two crooks (John Oaker and Geo. Monberg). Directed by James D. Davis.

Miss Lillian Hamilton, a pampered child of fortune, longs for excitement. She prevails on her father to escort her and a party of her friends through Chinatown. They visit a Chinatown cabaret and partake of the oddities thereof in the way of food and refreshment, watch the entertainment, and as they depart the proprietor of the establishment steals Miss Lillian's dog. He does this to get the girl to return to the place in search of Fido, when he purposes to capture her. The place is the headquarters for all sorts of rogues. One set is preparing a big dynamite job, and hide their infernal machine in the kitchen, in a valise under a table.

Owen Evans, the waiter, sees his employer steal the dog and, sympathizing with Miss Lillian, he intends to rescue the animal, which the proprietor has hidden in a valise and placed alongside the dynamite under the kitchen table. Evans slips his hand under the table and takes a grip (the one which he thinks contains the dog) and starts for her home.

Meanwhile Miss Lillian returns to the restaurant, is captured and dropped into the cellar. The dynamiters return to get their valise and are surprised to see the dog jump out. It scents its mistress, chews the cords that bind her, thereby releasing her. She writes a note and gives it to the dog, which starts homeward.

Evans arrives at Lillian's home with the grip supposedly containing the dog. He is greatly astonished when upon opening it he finds it contains an infernal machine. The butler grabs Evans while the old man phones the police. The dog enters with the note, which Evans sees first. Evans reads the note, makes his escape and follows the dog.

The police arrive and follow Evans. Evans wrecks the Chinatown establishment, rescues Lillian, and instead of being considered a miscreant he is heralded as a hero. The criminals are taken into custody.

GAUMONT.

AROUND THE WORLD NO. 22 (April 3).—Two of the three islands in the West Indies recently purchased from Denmark—St. Thomas and St. Croix—are pictured in this issue of "Tours Around the World." First in importance is St. Thomas because at the town of Charlotte Amalia is an impregnable harbor, giving the United States the finest naval base in the West Indies. The small islands in the harbor and the mountain ridge back of the town form a natural protection against storms or hostile fleets.

One spot always pointed out to visitors is "Bluebeard's Castle," two centuries ago the stronghold of Captain Teach, the notorious pirate. Having fourteen wives, his home could not have been dubbed anything other than "Bluebeard's Castle." At Charlotte Amalia is also a Danish fort 260 years old.

St. Croix is the largest and wealthiest of the three islands. The pictures of Frederickstead show it to be a town on an open roadstead on the west coast. The only other town, Christiansted, is on the north coast. Typical street scenes in both are shown in the pictures. A mail boat running between the islands has been successively (since 1800) a pirate, a slaver, and a man-of-war vessel.

Sugar is the principal product of St. Croix, although some Sea Island cotton is grown. A view of the pictures brings one to the conclusion that there is no failure in the pickaninny crop.

Artistic Projection

Large sums of money, the best artists available, and the most particular care may produce a truly artistic film.

But its success or failure depends largely on the way it is projected.

Maybe you're trying to get perfect results from an alternating current light. It can't be done.

Any operator who has used both will tell you that the best results can be obtained only by using direct current. It alone produces that steady, restful light so much desired. A REEL LIFE NO. 49 (April 5).—The popular interest in the little understood phenomenon of magnetism will arouse interest from the first picture in Gaumont's "Reel Life" No. 49. The property of attraction is illustrated by a series of simple experiments. How magnets are made, what substances have the property of attracting, and how the compass is based upon magnetism are features of this section.

"A One-Man Submarine" is a series of animated pictures which gives an excellent idea of how these small but deadly subsea boats will be operated. As several thousand can be made in a day, their value can readily be understood—provided they prove to be individually all that has been claimed for them. The submarine is seen as it leaves the mother ship. Then the various operations required are pictured, and the section concludes with the blowing up of an enemy's battleship.

"Making Bread the Modern Way" takes spectators on a trip through a modern bakery. The accuracy with which the work is done, the care to insure cleanliness, and the speed with which loaves of bread are turned out, make this an illuminating subject. There is so much talk of the high cost of living that every one is interested in seeing how the "staff of life" is prepared for the table in lots of ten thousand loaves.

"A Traveling Dairy" shows an unusual method of bringing the product to the consumer. The cow is driven to the front door of the patron and there milked.

Those who hold tobacco in horror will wonder how an aged woman, shown in a short section of the reel, is able to endure it to such an extent that she finds comfort in smoking cigars. Yet not only has she been a cigar maker all her life, but she has been her own best customer. Other subjects include a home-made sled known as an ice scooter.

MONMOTH.

JIMMY DALE, ALIAS "THE GREY SEAL"—(Episode No. 3, "The Counterfeit Five"—Two Parts—April 6).—The love affair between Jimmy Dale and Marie La Salle ripened into their engagement, and Jimmy is about to abandon his wild adventures when another summons comes from the mysterious "Tocsin"; this time the message informs him that "The Grey Seal's" help is eagerly wanted by a man who is the sole support of an aged mother, and who is being victimized by a band of crooks. Jimmy decides to go to the rescue. He discovers that Sammy Mathews, a sickly employee of the United States Currency Engraving Bureau, has been charged with stealing a damaged five-dollar engraving plate, and that the supposed secret service man has extorted $5,000 from Mrs. Mathews, Sammy's mother, under the threat of sending Sammy to prison.

Jimmy learns that the alleged government detective is a member of a gang of crooks, who disguised himself as a secret service man for blackmailing purposes. Single-handed Jimmy invades the underground den in which the gang makes its headquarters, and a fight ensues.

In the meantime some mysterious information has reached the police headquarters to the effect that "The Grey Seal" can be captured at the headquarters of the gang. The police break in while the fight is at its height, but by a clever trick Jimmy succeeds in escaping both the police and the crooks. He leaves behind him, however, the now famous mark of "The Grey Seal," and the police officials are more baffled than ever in their efforts to capture the elusive "Grey Seal."

CUB.

THE LADY DETECTIVE (April 5).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Hank (George George); Tiny (Claire Alexander); Her Father (E. A. Brown).

Tiny's father objects to Jerry's suit for his daughter's hand, and orders the butler to throw Jerry from the premises. In the melee the butler strikes the father, and is discharged. Thereupon father 'phones a detective agency intending to ask them to send him a detective to watch Jerry, a maid to watch Tiny, and a butler to serve his household. But the detective agency's manager is too busy making love to his stenographer to answer the 'phone, so father writes the agency a note. Jerry sees him putting the note in the post office, extracts it therefrom, and after gleaning father's message decides to put a new scheme into being.

Jerry visits his friends, Tom and Dick, and prevails upon Tom to dress as a detective and Dick to dress as a butler, while Jerry himself dresses as a maid. Thus dressed the three repair to Tiny's home. When they arrive father is commanding Tiny to be "nice" to Hank, his favorite suitor for his daughter's hand. Jerry seeing this contrives to separate Tiny from him. He succeeds and follows Tiny to her room, accompanied by Tom and Dick.

Jerry tells Tiny that he and his friends are movie actors, and that they will be glad to stage a scene for her delectation. Their acting, however, causes a lot of racket in the house, and father and Hank hurry to Tiny's room to learn the trouble. Seeing they are about to be caught in a trap, for Jerry has lost his wig in the acting scene, they scatter just as father and Hank break in.

Seeing the deception that has been practiced upon him father gets his shot-gun. A lively time follows, but Jerry and his friends are fortunate beings and escape, the picture closing with a scene of Jerry rushing down the road, his footfalls beating an accompaniment to a rainfall of bullets.

MUTUAL STAR PRODUCTION.

MOTHERHOOD (Powell—Five Parts—March 26).—The husband and wife of a typical American family read the story of Albert and Louise, European peasants Albert, called to war, is able to come home but once during the conflict. The captain of the enemy takes up his headquarters in Albert's house and forces his attention upon Louise. War over, Albert returns home rejoicing in the news of the birth of a son. He is told Louise has never looked at or touched the baby. Demanding an explanation Louise tells of the visit of the captain. Albert would kill the child, but Louise's motherhood asserts itself and she saves its life. The American family rejoice on completing the story that America is at peace.

SUNNY JANE (Horkheimer—Five Parts—March 26).—The cast: Jane Dwight (Jackie Saunders); James Thornton (Frank Mayo); Thomas Wilson (Cullen Naudis); Philip Dwight (Edward Joleson).

Jane, an imaginative country girl, is admired by James Thornton, a millionaire bachelor, who comes trying to buy her father's farm. Thornton offers to send the girl to school and pay all her expenses if the father will consent. Meanwhile Mrs. Vanderhoff pursues Thornton for her daughter Elizabeth. Elizabeth, however, would rather have Ronald Jones, and Thornton eventually helps them to elope. But the suspense continues.

When Jane returns from school she apes the manners of a grand dame believing that it will please Thornton, but he is very much disappointed. When she dons her calico gown, however, and hides in his machine he changes his mind and orders the chauffeur to drive to the nearest justice of the peace.

AMERICAN.

THE BEARDED FISHERMAN (March 28).—John Robertson and his brother fisherman, loved Jennie Blair, but John, more bold, won her. They lived in the home of the brothers. When hard luck came upon them, Fred, who loved in silence, tried to cheer them with hopes of the future, but John, morose and sad, left suddenly to seek his fortune elsewhere. Though Fred still loved Jennie, he spoke no word of himself, but did his best to keep her in food and shelter.

The years rolled by and no word came from John, so he spoke his love and they were wed. A child came to bless them, and then one night a bearded figure—John—came to the cabin and looked in through the window, and what he saw shot a sudden pain into his heart, for Fred and Jennie, serenely happy, were amusing themselves with the baby. Clutching a bag of money, John entered. They did not recognize him. Handing them the bag of money, saying, "I was John's friend, and before he died he bade me bring you this," he turned to the door, went out into the night and was seen no more.

HER GREATEST LOVE (Five Parts—April 2).—The story tells of the maneuvering, the machinations and the subtle intrigue of Lady Dolly, Vere Herbert's mother, who is anxious to make an advantageous marriage for her daughter. In doing so she eventually schemes away her child's happiness by marrying her to Prince Zuroff. Some time before she was introduced to the Prince, Vere met and fell in love with Lucien Correze, an opera singer, who became attracted to her. Told by her mother that she must sever her friendship with the singer and marry the Russian Prince, Vere heartbroken, leaves Correze, and her wedding to the Prince is a social event.

Soon after her marriage Vere discovers that the Prince is harboring his mistress, Duchess De Sonnaz, under the same roof. A scene follows, after which the Prince banishes his wife, together with her faithful German nurse, to a Russian monastery. Shortly after her incarceration she is followed to the retreat by Correze and Lord Jura, the latter a friend of her mother's. Correze entreats Vere to leave the place and go with him. She is about to succumb to his impassioned plea when the Prince enters the room. Words are followed by a duel in which the Prince and Lord Jura are both killed. The Princess, free, marries Correze.

SELZNICK PICTURES.

THE ETERNAL SIN (Seven Parts—March).—The cast: Lucretia Borgia (Florence Reed); The Duke of Ferrara, her husband (William E. Shay); Her Brother (Stephen Grattan); Gennaro, a young officer (Richard Barthelme); Rustighello, the Duke's Guard (Alexander Shannon). Directed by Herbert Brenon.

Lucretia Borgia, wife of the Duke of Ferrara, is generally regarded by historians as a woman of unmixed evil influences. In "The Eternal Sin" another side of her character is shown. A powerful clique is determined to overcome her power and to this end five conspirators arrange the assassination of her brother. The brother succeeds in reaching his sister's palace before he dies and gives the names of his murderers. Lucretia takes vengeance after the manner of the period and they are tortured to death.

Five relatives of these men take oath of vengeance upon Lucretia. Lucretia asks her secretary to locate a youth named Gennaro. Through his help Lucretia finds the young man one day asleep on a bench in the park. When he awakes she addresses him affectionately but keeps a mask over her face and refuses to tell him who she is. Just then Lucretia's five enemies arrive, tear off her mask and tell Gennaro that she is Lucretia Borgia. She has a deep interest in the young man and swears to avenge herself upon the young men for thus humiliating her.

Meanwhile the Duke of Ferrara has witnessed the scene and believes Gennaro to be her lover. Following Gennaro he sees the young man, enraged by his companions' deception of the murdering of their relatives by Lucretia, deface the name "Borgia" on the Palace. The Duke tells Lucretia that he has discovered the man who has insulted her and she, still in a rage, demands his death. The Duke has Gennaro brought in and orders Lucretia to pour a goblet of poisoned wine for him. When unable to extricate herself from the predicament she submits, and the Duke leaves them, satisfied that he is revenged. Lucretia forces an antidote upon Gennaro, who is bewildered by the circumstances and mystery and tells him to fly from Ferrara.

Still bent upon her revenge on the five friends of Gennaro, Lucretia arranges a banquet through the aid of a friend of the Princess Negroni, to which the youths are invited. They induce Gennaro to accompany them. At the banquet poisoned wine is served to the unsuspecting guests and as they feel the effects coming over them they hear the sound of an old man's voice chanting a litany for the dead. Curtains are drawn back and they see five coffins, each bearing the name of one of them. When Lucerita enters Gennaro steps forward and demands of her why no coffin has been provided for him. She screams and asks him if he still has the antidote; he produces the phial and asks if there is enough for his friends. She tells him there is barely enough for one and he dashes it to the floor. He stabs her with his dagger, whereupon she gasps out her life secret, that she is his mother, and he sinks beside her body as the poison takes effect.

TROOPER 44 (Five Parts—March).—The cast: Trooper 44 (Corporal Jack) (George Soule Spencer); Ruth Moreland (A daughter of the hills) (June Daye); Cora (Betty Dodsworth); Captain Lynn G. Adams (Troop "A"—S. P. F.) (By Himself); Ian Sanford (Leader of the outlaws) (W. W. Black); John Moreland (Ruth's Father (Walter P. Lewis); Arnold Davis (Proprietor "The Coal Pit") (Roy Sheldon); Sandy McLane (A tool of Sanford's) (Roy Gahris). Scenaric by Garfield Thompston. Directed by Roy Gahris.

Jack—stalwart trooper 44— is in love with Ruth Moreland, the daughter of a member of a band of outlaws headed by Ian Sanford, a desperado, who has long terrorized the hills. A farmer is held up, robbed and left for dead by the gang. Jack is assigned to the case by Captain Adams, of Troop A, and is told in the curt language of the famous mounted state troopers of Pennsylvania, "Go and get your man." To Jack's consternation the clew he obtains appears to lead to the Moreland home. At almost the same time a bank watchman is murdered, and Jack is also assigned to this mystery. The first thing he discovers is a lock of blonde hair clutched in the dead man's hand.

Jack, steeled by his sense of duty, is compelled to arrest the girl he loves on a charge of complicity, if not of actual participation in the murder. Ruth is allowed out of prison on bail furnished by Arnold Davis, the proprietor of a roadhouse of unsavory reputation, which is the headquarters of Sanford's gang. Davis attacks Ruth and is in return assailed by Sandy, a member of Sanford's gang. Following a fight, Sandy rides for aid. Sixty state troopers ride to round up the entire band—fight enormous odds, and finally arrest every man and woman in "The Coal Pit" tavern. Later, before her burning cabin, Ruth is vindicated by—but see the photoplay to realize just what a startling climax of dramatic power this situation leads up to.

HER FATHER'S KEEPER (Fine Arts—Five Parts—April 2).—The cast: William Masters (Frank Currier); Claire Masters (Irene Howley); Ralph Burnham (Jack Devereux); Business Manager (Jack Raymond); Detective (John Hanneford); Butler (Walter Bussell).

Claire Masters, motherless daughter of a powerful financier, is kept in the rut of society by her strong-willed father, who believes that women are out of place in the business world or any of the real activities of life. But Claire has inherited much of her father's initiative and strength of will, and, finding the life of the society butterfly utterly empty, revolts. Her revolt is increased by the contents of a letter left for her by her mother in which Mrs Masters warns her daughter that the financier needs guarding against himself, that in the heat of business battle there was always danger of his overstepping the bounds and doing something that would compromise the family's good name.

Claire breaks with her obdurate father and goes out into the world to learn the business game. In this she is helped by Ralph Burnham, son of a rival house, and the one man who counts in Claire's life. At a crucial time in the affairs of Masters, Claire prepared by a thorough schooling, secures a position in the office of her own father, and during his absence manages under an assumed name to get herself appointed his private secretary. On his return he finds himself assisted by the daughter he had sworn never to speak to if she left the parental roof.

The old man has a grim sense of humor, and he lets the situation stand. Meanwhile Claire gets wind of just such a shady deal as her mother feared he would enter. He tries to break the house of Burnham, and is determined that no scruples shall stand in his way. Claire secures evidence that will convict her father in a court of law, and confronts him with it. He is forced to call off the deal, and gives his consent to the marriage that he had so strenuously forbidden.

MAN'S WOMAN (Five Parts—April 2).—The cast: Violet Galloway (Ethel Clayton); Roger Kendall (Rockcliffe Fellowes); George W. Graham (Frank Goldsmith); Lucretia Kendall (Justine Cutting); Harriet Kendall (Eugenie Woodward); Dopey Louis (John Hines); Steve Barnett (Ned Burton); Grandfather Galloway (Edward Kimball). Directed by Travers Vale.

Violet Galloway, in charge of her grandfather's home, was accustomed to bossing things. But when she married Roger Kendall she was petted and pampered and had hardly anything to do outside of looking pretty and being well dressed. So she became discontented. At this time George W. Graham, a former lover, made violent love to her. Graham was district attorney and Kendall was Graham's assistant. Kendall was prosecuting the gamblers, but Graham tried to call him off when political pressure was brought to bear. The gamblers decided to "get" Kendall. Graham knew of the secret and a man who had been befriended by Violet found this out. The man sent a note to Violet. She risked everything by getting Graham to come to her home and was learning the secret from him when the murderer hired by the gamblers shot and killed Graham, thinking he was Kendall. Kendall, being told what his wife had done for him, turns out his maiden aunts, who created much of the trouble, and he and his wife are happy once more.

MOTHERS OF FRANCE (March).—It is summer. In the fertile fields of Meurcy, France, the tillers are gathering the harvest. The castle occupied by the commandant and his wife, Monsieur and Madame D'Urbex, is filled with happy excitement, for Robert D'Urbex, the only son, has been made a lieutenant.

Conducting the farm, which is a part of the D'Urbex estate, is the Lebron family, father, mother, Marie, their daughter, and Nonet, an orphaned youth of nineteen. The village schoolmaster, Guinot, loves Marie and a wedding has been arranged, although there is an unspoken tenderness between the girl and Nonet.

The tranquillity of Meurcy is soon disturbed by news of diplomatic complications. War is imminent. The call to mobilize comes suddenly. Nonet seizes the drum and strides through the village followed by an ever increasing crowd. There is a passionate meeting in the square and after it come scenes of soldiers parting from their loved ones. Nonet insists on going with the rest, although rejected as being under age.

Months pass. General D'Urbex is in command of the Champagne front. The regiment of Lieutenant D'Urbex has Victor Lebron as one of its corporals. The schoolmaster, Guinot, is a sergeant attached to the commissary department. Nonet is a soldier in the ranks. Mme. D'Urbex is matron of the military hospital at Rheims. Lieutenant D'Urbex is mortally wounded and Corporal Lebron, who has been slightly injured, is sent to the hospital at Rheims to inform Mme. D'Urbex of the approaching death of her son. Guinot, in Rheims at the moment, is returning to the front, and the distracted mother beseeches him to take her in one of his supply trucks to the place where she supposes the young lieutenant has been removed. It is a violation of military rules, but he consents. They find that the young officer has not been brought in as expected, but is still at the "first aid" station. She finds him in a shell-riddled building, stretched out upon a cot and at the final moment of life.

After the young lieutenant has expired his mother removes from his hand a letter he has scrawled, imploring her to overcome her grief and show herself a worthy example to the mothers of France. Madame D'Urbex devotes

EXHIBITOR'S FILM REVIEW SERVICE

In the department headed Reviews of Current Productions in each issue of the Moving Picture World thousands of the successful and wide-awake managers of the country find the most helpful and most necessary service of the many rendered by our paper.

Each week from fifteen to twenty or more of the leading film releases are reviewed at length by seven or eight expert and experienced members of our own staff.

These reviews are written primarily from the Exhibitor's viewpoint and are absolutely independent and impartial in every respect. No such valuable service is offered elsewhere at any price.

Hundreds of programs are arranged weekly by managers only after careful study of this Department and our condensed or shorter reviews of all films, entitled Comments on the Films.

Mr. Theater Manager, if you are not making use of these will you not test them for the next few weeks? You will find no more dependable criticisms and trustworthy film information week in and week out than these two Departments in the herself again to her duties as matron of the Ribeaux hospital, to which one day Guinot is brought, blinded for life. Beneath his pillow the sightless patient secretes the pocketbook of General D'Urbex, who has entrusted it to him when fatally wounded. Guinot cannot bring himself to deliver this new blow to the heroic woman, and the pocketbook remains under his pillow until Madame D'Urbex herself finds it there and learns the truth.

The doubly bereaved woman resolves to devote herself hereafter to assuaging the grief of others, and she goes back to her little village, to console the other stricken women. Madame Lebron curses war, but the commander's widow stills her, saying, "We have not the right to curse. Those for whom we weep are dead in order that our mother shall possess all things, France never dies."

The schoolmaster Guinot meanwhile has shown the manner of man he is by writing to the girl he loves that he cannot ask her to share the life of a sightless man, and releasing her from her promise. But little Marie refuses to accept her liberty. Nonet comes home on leave, a medal on his breast, but he is unhappy there through the hopelessness of his love, and after a scene with Marie he determines to return to the trenches. But the schoolmaster overhears a part of the leave taking, and himself unites the young lovers.

Solitude weighs heavily on the blind man, who has sacrificed not alone his eyesight but his heart upon the altar of duty, so that the future to him is empty indeed. Here again Madame D'Urbex fills the breach.

"Reflect," she says, "that there remains to you a family for the members of which you have a noble task to perform. Your pupils are waiting for you. To them you are no longer merely the schoolmaster, but a living example of the sacrifices we willingly make for our country."

So these two proceed to the little schoolhouse, where Madame D'Urbex inscribes upon the blackboard this message:

"So that the mothers shall no longer suffer, it is necessary that France carry on the war—war upon war—and that the glow of the future paradise shall illuminate itself from the bayonets of France."

THE LAW OF THE NORTH (Edison—Five Parts—April 2).—The cast: Lieutenant Robert Graham (Charles Sutton); Corporal John Emerson (Pat O'Malley); Reginald Annesley (Richard Tucker); Marie Beaubin (Sally Crute); Pierre Beaubin (Fred Jones); Edith Graham (Shirley Mason); Ba'tiste (Robert Keggerris).

Lieutenant Robert Graham, commanding the Northwest Mounted Police at an obscure post, announces to his young friend, Corporal Emerson, of the Mounted, that his daughter, Edith, is coming from London to join him.

Marie Beaubin and her brother, Pierre, a trapper, live on the outskirts of the post. Marie repulses the advances of Ba'tiste, a whiskey runner, but falls easy prey to Reginald Annesley, the prepossessing factor of the trading post. Edith comes, and Emerson and Annesley become rivals for her favor.

Marie determines to end the repulsive advances of Ba'tiste, and proposes to lead Emerson to the scene of his illegal liquor traffic. Emerson captures the half-breed and locks him in a cell. Marie visits Annesley and confesses her predicament. "I die if you do not marry me." Annesley laughs. Emerson learns of the truth and warns the factor. "Look out for the Law of the North. A broken promise means death up here." Annesley scornfully bids him mind his business.

Ba'tiste escapes from prison, and Emerson again searches for him, aided by Marie. Annesley sees his chance, and persuades Edith that the frequent meetings between the corporal and the girl can have but one meaning. Ba'tiste also seeing the two together, and realizing that Marie is aiding in the search for him, hastens to Pierre and tells him that Emerson is trifling with his sister's love. Pierre swears vengeance.

Marie informs Annesley that she will tell Edith of his perfidy, and, fearing that she will keep her threat he kills her placing a handkerchief with Emerson's initials near the body. Pierre finds his sister's frozen corpse and goes to the post to demand justice, presenting the handkerchief as evidence that Emerson is guilty. Emerson once more captures Ba'tiste and brings him to the post, where he himself is placed under arrest.

Visiting the scene of the crime some days later, Edith finds a photograph of Annesley and a baby shoe. With her father's permission, she invites Annesley to her cabin and there proceeds to entertain him. She plies him with wine, and under its influence, Annesley flings caution to the winds. He makes love to her, and in a burst of passion, confesses the murder of Marie as proof of his devotion.

A shot rings out. Pierre, thirsting for vengeance, has been watching the cabin, hoping for a sight of Emerson, and has overheard Annesley's confession. Edith and the corporal are later married, while over Annesley's grave, an inscription tells that Marie's death has been avenged by "The Law of the North."

BROADWAY JONES (Six parts—March 26).—The cast: Broadway Jones (George M. Cohan); Josie Richards (Marguerite Snow); Andrew Jones (Russell Bassett); Robert Wallace (Crawford Kent); Mrs. Gerard (Ida Darling).

"Broadway" Jones, so called because of his love for the glitter of the famous street which he has never seen, is disgusted with the old-fashioned business methods of his uncle, Andrew Jones of the Jones Chu-Chu Chewing Gum Co., at Jonesville, Ohio, a small country town.

Wallace, an advertising man, calls and when Uncle Andrew shows him the door "Broadway" decides to take his share of the capitalization and hit the trail for the Great White Way of his dreams. He tells Josie, his uncle's secretary, his plans and she is horrified to think that he will "desert the plant his grandfather worked for and handed down to his father, that his father worked for and handed down to him." "This business," Jones declares, "is his to work for and hand down to his children." "Broadway," not convinced, leaves and at last reaches New York's rialto.

Through Wallace, "Broadway" becomes popular around the lobster palaces. Before long he is the talk of the town, but the unhappy day of awakening comes abruptly. "Broadway" finds his resources are at an end.

Rankin, "Broadway's" valet, suggests "credit," but the former starts out to cut down expenses by dining at Childs. Alas, for good resolutions! He soon finds himself at Delmonico's, where he meets Mrs. Gerard, a wealthy old widow, who was always included in his famous parties. Mrs. Gerard, who is in love with "Broadway," proposes marriage, and in desperation the youth accepts her.

Meanwhile, all is not going well at Jonesville. Uncle Andrew has had a slight stroke. Josie decides to go to New York to bring "Broadway" back home, and arrives the day after his engagement is announced. She finds several ladies of the chorus at his rooms offering congratulations. "Broadway" tries to explain, but Josie leaves after Mrs. Gerard embraces him. A telegram arrives which "Broadway," in his excitement, neglects to read.

Escaping from Mrs. Gerard, he joins the Salvation Army. The story of the Prodigal Son arouses him to his duty. Announcing: "I'm only a prodigal nephew, but I'm going home to Jonesville—and Josie," he leaves. At his hotel he finds his friend, Wallace, and Pembroke, a representative of the chewing gum trust, waiting to buy him out for a million dollars. He reads the forgotten telegram and learns that his uncle is dead. He announces that if the business is worth a million to Pembroke it's worth more to himself, and, in his endeavor to escape Mrs. Gerard, who is in pursuit, he and Wallace leave by the fire escape and start for Jonesville.

At the factory the workers are waiting to see if "Broadway" will sell to the trust. "Broadway," however, is equal to the occasion, and Josie is astonished to hear him refuse the offer. Turning to the crowd of workmen, he announces: "We've the oldest gum and the oldest plant in the world. With the help of Friend Wallace here, all the world shall know it—and chew it!" He is cheered by the employees, who had expected that their bread and butter would be taken away from them, inasmuch as the Jones plant gave work to the entire town.

Josie, pleased beyond measure that she was mistaken in him, kisses his hand. Embarrassed, "Broadway" asks her for a fighting chance and

GREATER VITAGRAPH.

THE MORE EXCELLENT WAY (Five Parts—March 26).—The cast: Chrissey Desselden (Anita Stewart); John Warburton (Charles Richman); Robert Neyland (Rudolph Cameron); Colonel Tayloe (Chas. A. Stevenson); Billy Alton (Gordon Gray); Becky Alton (Josephine Earle); Rose (Katherine Lewis). Directed by Perry M. Vekroff.

Chrissey Desselden, the ward of John Warburton, promises to marry him. Opposed to him is Robert Neyland, but he is not worthy of Chrissey's love. The girl, however, is fascinated by him, and not until his misconduct dismays her does she turn from him to John.

After the wedding she recoils from her situation and pleads with her husband to treat her still as a child until she knows her own heart. This he consents to do. Meantime Neyland goes quickly to the bottom of the social ladder, but despite this Chrissey decides she loves him. With Warburton's consent she outrages her marriage vow by going to Reno to secure a divorce, Neyland remaining to plot against Warburton to ruin him financially.

To effect this he needs money from Chrissey, which she wires him permission to use. However, she learns at the last moment what a treacherous purpose he plans with it. She throws over Neyland, who, through a culmination of other troubles, does the one graceful deed of his life by ending it. She returns to Warburton to be his wife in fact.

BABETTE (Five parts—April 2).—The cast: Raveau (Marc MacDermott); Babette (Peggy Hyland); Pivot (Templar Saxe); Guinard (William Dunn). Directed by Charles Brabin.

Babette, living with her father the jailer and hangman in the castle-jail at La Fourche; Raveau, a criminal, comes to the castle and meets her. Her sweetness and purity cause him to realize his form of life is an enemy smell. He even restores a necklace purloined from a tourist. Later he and Babette realize their love for each other.

Their wedding is celebrated with much pomp. Guinard, a detective, turns up. Realizing his danger, Raveau convinces his wife that their friends are planning to separate them, and gets her to escape with him. They elude Guinard.

In Montmartre, Raveau and Babette are like two doves. He again takes up art. But his work is not up to date and he finds the purse growing slimmer.

When Babette shyly confesses that there will be another mouth to feed, and that she has given much of their store to Fifine, a "Quarter" girl, whose husband is just coming from prison, Raveau realizes how desperate is his need. He tries once more to sell his wares, without success. An appeal to an old partner brings a turn-down. Raveau then steals banknotes from a man in the postoffice.

Guinard turns up after the baby is born. Without letting Babette know of his crime, Raveau parts from her, saying he has a commission which may take him away for a long time; but in the Commissionaire's office he learns his prosecutor is the husband of a woman to whom he had restored the money won at a gaming salon just before his marriage. The man refuses to recognize Raveau as the thief and he returns to Babette to say he has passed up the commission and will stay with her always; and Babette is happy in her husband's love, ignorant of his sacrifice for her.

THE SECRET KINGDOM (Episode No. 5—"The Tocsin"—Two parts—April 9).—Ramon enraged, sends a file of soldiers to search Madame Savatz's room, but she, anticipating this move, has escaped with the papers proving Phillip's claim. Simond has been trying to force his will upon Princess Julia, but she tells the priest whom he sends to plead that she would kill herself rather than marry Ramon.

Ramon gets a note from Savatz which draws him away from the palace—she consenting to give him the papers. But it is only a decoy and the moment he leaves the palace grounds Savatz, vengeful, gains entrance to the rooms of Princess Julia and delivers the sealed packet with the proofs to her. Julia tells Savatz that she has been commanded to marry Ramon. Madame Savatz, in a frenzy, begs Julia to be allowed to take her place. Julia agrees, seeing in this scheme a way out of the mess, and hoping that Phillip will arrive to rescue her.

The wedding dress is donned by Madame Savatz, who veils heavily, and is led to the palace chapel by Simond—there, in the dim light, she is married to Ramon.

Meanwhile in the city, things are in a turmoil. Juan, going ahead of Phillip, has warned Paul Barreto, the leader of the revolutionists, that Phillip is near, and with the resounding cries of "Prince Phillip has returned! Alania's rightful king is here!" the mob charges for the palace, while the tocsin, or alarm bell, sounds an ominous warning over the city that rioting is taking place.

In the midst of the excitement, Prince Phillip secretly gains entrance to the palace. An old servant brings out the uniform of his father, King Phillip II, and Phillips dons it. Ramon, finding he has been tricked by Savatz, rushes into the palace and is killed in a fight with Phillip. Simond sets the palace guards racing in pursuit of Phillip, who eludes them and corners Simond. "You are too foul a thing for me to kill," Phillip screams at the cringing usurper, but the tables are soon turned. Phillip is overpowered by palace guards and Simond, gleeful now, insanely so, orders them to "stand that dog up in the window there—let the mob that howls at my gate see this dog die!" But Simond is seized with a fit and falls unconscious. Princess Julie rushes in and orders the execution squad to lower their arms. Juan races out upon the balcony and yells to the populace, "Long live King Phillip III." And while Simond, the usurper, dies, Phillip presents himself to his people. He embraces Princess Julia. "You have come into your kingdom, O my king," she says. "All my kingdom is within my arms," he tenderly answers.

THE BOTTLE IMP (Lasky—Five Parts—March 26).—The cast: Sessue Hayakawa, Lehua Waipahu, H. Komshi, Geo. Kuwa, Guy Oliver, James Neill.

Lopaka, a poor Hawaiian fisherman, falls in love with Kokua, a young girl of royal blood. Her irascible father refuses her hand until Lopaka can bring him two feather cloaks—an impossible stipulation, as no one not of royal blood can touch a cloak under penalty of death.

Rollis, a drunken sailor, tries to steal the girl, but is driven away by Lopaka. He then concludes to go to Devil's Mountain and snare the bird from which the feathers for the cloaks are obtained. He goes to the volcano but finds no bird. He encounters an old dying priest of Pele, who agrees to give him a wishing bottle in which Kono, a brother of Pele, is confined. Kono will grant any wish to the bottle's owner, but anyone dying with the bottle in his possession will go to hell and the bottle must be sold for less than paid for it, otherwise it will come back with its menace.

Lopaka wishes for wealth and servants and his humble hut turns into a beautiful palace. Kokua and her father join the crowd in front of the palace and the father madly drives her in marriage to Lopaka. Lopaka sells the bottle to his friend, Makale, but angers the Bottle Imp and is stricken with leprosy so that he cannot marry. He finds Makale has sold the bottle and it passes through many hands, but he is unable to secure it again. Each time the bottle is sold for less, being sold for the smallest coin. Rollins gains possession of the bottle and is about to steal Kokua when Lopaka rushes to her aid and the two men fight and fall from a high cliff into the sea, where Lopaka strangles the sailor. With the death of Rollins, the last owner of the bottle, the Imp is freed and goes back to his mountain and the dead volcano gushes forth lava and flames.

The gorgeous raiment of Lopaka and Kokua fade into their old rags; the wonderful palace vanishes—but the two are happy together in the fisherman's little hut.

IN VANCOUVER AND VICTORIA WITH BURTON HOLMES (March 26).—Vancouver is a veritable metropolis, a beautiful cosmopolitan city; perhaps the most English in all the entire Dominion of Canada. It is famous for its wonderful forests, lovely drives, beautiful gardens and the finest private estates in all Canada. There is shown a water-wheel turned by the water from a spring from which the table water for Queen Victoria's own use was furnished and sent all the way to England because of its purity. There are many Scottish societies in Vancouver. Mr. Holmes takes you to witness an unusually fine series of athletic events and the awarding of prizes to the winners of the Highland dances. Such Scottish games as tossing the caber, tug of war and the like are also shown. Charming young ladies do the Highland Fling and the Sword Dance.

AS MEN LOVE (Pallas—Five Parts—March 29).—The cast: House Peters, Myrtle Stedman, J. W. Johnston, Helen Jerome Eddy.

Keith Gordon, a wealthy architect, and Paul Russell, a noted physician, have been the finest friends from boyhood. Diana, Keith's wife, is a society butterfly and thinks herself in love with Paul. Keith's little sister, Marjorie, comes to spend the winter with them, and Paul, who has known her from childhood, falls in love with her. The two are mutually attracted.

Diana overhears Paul's proposal to Marjorie—her jealousy is still more aroused, and she throws herself into Paul's arms declaring her love and is discovered by Keith. To save Keith's faith in his wife, Paul takes the blame upon himself and is ordered from the house. Diana becoming reckless, leads Marjorie into fast society and the two are going a merry pace with the social parasites until Paul, in answer to an emergency call from a gambling palace, discovers them and threatens to disclose the truth about the scene Keith discovered if Diana does not take Marjorie away and behave herself.

There is a wave of infantile paralysis over the city and Paul, by his methods, is able to save a number of cases. Diana's little girl is stricken and she is advised to send for Paul. Keith sees Paul as he is leaving the house and upbraids him, refusing to have him attempt to save the child's life. Diana then shows the note Paul had previously written and which has been seen by Marjorie and the past is obliterated.

GETTING THE EVIDENCE (Black Diamond—April 2).—With the blowing of the one o'clock whistle Waldo is awakened from his snooze on a park bench and dashes home. There he demands his dinner, but Sue, his wife, shows him the empty larder and tells him: "If you don't provide for me, I'll get a job for myself," and she starts out. She lands a job with the Dubb Detective Agency and is assigned to the case of a woman who wants to get evidence for a divorce.

With a photograph of the faithless husband, Sue goes at once to his business address and stations herself by the door, where she watches every passer-by, comparing each with the photograph. Her patience is at last rewarded. She finds a man who resembles the photo and trails him. He turns into a restaurant and begins an earnest conversation with the cashier. Sue stands outside watching them and taking notes.

When the cashier turns around and Sue gets a look at her ugly face she tears up her notes in disgust. There was surely no evidence in that. Her quarry tells the cashier: "Have your daughter communicate with me at once," and leaves. Waldo sees Sue waiting outside the restaurant. When she trails her man down the street, Waldo is overcome with jealousy and follows after. Her quarry goes to his office and Sue, finding the door locked, resolves to get in some other way. Closely watched by Waldo, she gets to the top of an adjoining building and walks out on some wires which lead to the office window opposite. Half way across she loses her balance and falls, catching her toes on two stories below. There she hangs until the wire breaks and she falls head-first toward the pavement.

She goes through the brick pavement. Waldo pulls her out and a huge bump swells on the top of her head. It burst with a loud report which causes a passing chauffeur to think he has blown a tire. Waldo accuses Sue of trying to kill him by falling on him. She resents this with her fist, knocking Waldo across the walk. He then collides with a horse, which he carries over with him. She goes into the office building again and a passing officer arrests Waldo for cruelty to animals.

A messenger boy leaves her victim's door open and Sue slips inside and hides behind a screen just in time to hear him tell a girl over the phone, "Meet me at the parsonage and we'll be married at once." He hurries out, and Sue calls her client and tells her that her husband is a bigamist and to hurry to the parsonage. She starts there on the run herself, picking up a cop on the way.

The suspected bigamist arrives at the parsonage with his intended bride and the marriage ceremony is almost completed when Sue and the cop burst in and place him under arrest. He objects but Sue scoffs at him. Her client rushes in and confronts the captive. With one look she dismisses him saying "That is not my husband—I never saw him before!" and Sue realizes that she has trailed the wrong man.

HIS MILITARY FIGURE (Klever Komedy—April 9).—Col. Pepper desires that his daughter, Pansy, marry a military man. Tom Kerrigan is courting Pansy, and while he seems military enough, he is not to Pansy's liking. Pansy's weakness is Vic.

It is noon and Vic is just getting up. In taking his exercise on the floor, raising himself up by his hands, he becomes so fatigued he falls asleep. His valet returns, awakens him, and gives him a letter from his Uncle Tom in Brazil, who writes that his daughter will arrive on the S. S. Brazilian that day and for him to hire an interpreter and meet her. Vic is in a quandry, as he is also expecting the Colonel. Tom Kerrigan happens in; Vic shows him the letter and asks if he won't go and meet his "Chile con carne cousin." Immediately Vic starts to prepare for his intended father-in-law. Kerrigan begins to hunt up the S. S. Brazilian; but is informed the steamer is held in quarantine for twenty-four hours so he decides to put a dent in Vic's and Pansy's wedding plans.

Pansy phoned Vic that her father is particular that she marry a military man, and cautions him to look like one. He tells her not to worry. He prepares to be military, and with the aid of a few shoulder braces, corset, and a small ironing board, is made to look like a wooden soldier. His valet gives him some military commands. He slips trying to do them, falls to the floor, and after much difficulty the servants manage to get him on his feet.

In the meantime, Kerrigan dressed as the cousin, makes his appearance, makes one leap to embrace Vic, who pushes him away, ordering the servants to carry the cousin upstairs and lock her up. Pansy and her friend call to look Vic's "Military Figure" over, and the girls greatly approve of him.

That evening Vic is ready for the colonel's inspection, when the valet, very much excited, tells Vic his cousin has broken out of the closet and has a knife a yard long. Vic grabs a golf stick and rushes upstairs. Kerrigan is about to come out of the door, when Vic makes a swing at him with the golf stick, loses his balance and falls down stairs.

He lands just as the butler announces Col. Pepper and the girls. Vic manages to pull himself together. The colonel looks him over, and slapping him on the back, nearly breaks his hand. He is convinced that he is a man of "iron." Kerrigan dashes into the drawing room and starts a Spanish dance. The colonel is astounded. Vic tries to explain.

Kerrigan trying to attract Vic's attention feels the ironing board in his back, and pulling out his stiletto sticks it in Vic's back where the board is without Vic knowing it. Vic turns around and the knife still sticking in Vic's back looms up in front of Pansy. She realizes the situation, and taking the knife out throws it to the floor before her father sees it. The colonel demands to know who the woman is. Kerrigan produces the letter from Vic's uncle. After reading it the colonel calls the engagement off.

A cablegram arrives saying that Vic's cousin missed the boat. He is non-plussed and he shows the cable to the colonel who demands to know who the woman is. Vic, grabbing Kerrigan, pulls his wig off. They discover it is Kerrigan and he is immediately kicked out. The colonel, shaking hands with Vic calls him son-in-law, and he and the girls depart. Vic starts to unharness to get immediate relief.

CLOTHES AND THE MAN (March 26).—The cast: The girl (Billie Rhodes); the boy (Neal Burns); Mrs. Brown (Ethel Lynne); Mr. Brown (William Waller).

Mr. Brown is jealous, even of the butler, whom he discharges. He has reason, for Mrs. Brown is given to harmless flirtations. Neal is the latest victim and he comes to tell her that he is soon to be married. Mr. Brown phones he will not be home to dinner, so Mrs. Brown says, "Come over—we'll have a little farewell party." Neal agrees. On the street Mrs. Brown meets Billie, who tells her of her engagement, without mentioning Neal's name, as she does not know that Mrs. Brown knows Neal.

Meanwhile Brown has heard of a woman who ran off with her butler, and it so works upon his feelings that he decides to go home after all. His wife sees him coming and makes Neal put on the butler's outfit and pass as the new servant. While Neal is having his troubles in the kitchen, Billie, passing by, decides to drop in. Brown invites her to dinner. Neal comes stumbling in with the first course and is recognized by Billie. Neal and Mrs. Brown are in hot water, but after a lot of explaining they are forgiven on Mrs. Brown's promise to flirt no more.

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, INC.

SUSAN'S GENTLEMAN (Five parts—April 2).—The cast: Nancy Croyden and Susan Flynn (Violet Mersereau); Ora Tourette (Maud Cooling); Sir Jeffrey Croyden (James O'Neill); Sir Bevis Neville (William O'Neill); Terence Flynn (Bradley Barker); Tom Neville (Sidney Mason). Scenario by John C. Brownell. Directed by Edwin Stevens.

Nancy Croyden, daughter of Sir Jeffrey Croyden, of Croyden Hall, has been visiting friends in Paris. There she meets Ora Tourette, a widow, and invites her to Croyden Hall. Shortly afterward Sir Bevis Neville, who is in love with Nancy, calls at Croyden Hall and is surprised to find Ora there.

Sir Bevis has had an "affair" with the widow, but has thrown her over. Ora's purpose in visiting Croyden Hall was to work out some plan of vengeance that might cause Sir Bevis to regret his action. In Terence Flynn, Nancy's groom, Ora finds a medium through whom she can operate her scheme for vengeance.

Nancy is in love with Terence, but the difference in their station is a barrier that seems insurmountable. When Nancy confesses to Ora the widow takes advantage of the secret to rid herself of Nancy and thus be free of a rival in Sir Bevis' affections. At a ball given at the Hall the dancers are masked and costumed. Ora writes a note to Terence, telling him of Nancy's love for him, advising him to take advantage of the costume ball to be in Nancy's society.

Ora's further plans for Nancy's embarrassment succeeds so well that Sir Bevis comes upon the groom at the instant he was holding Nancy in his arms. Sir Bevis draws his sword; Terence defends himself, and wounds Sir Bevis. Terence proposes to Nancy that they forthwith elope, and Ora gives them money for their passage to America.

Terence takes to heavy indulgence in drink, and when his wife dies, leaving him a daughter. He keeps the same mean lodgings in which he lived, and little Susan grows up to share his poverty. Continuing her vengeance against the Neville family, Ora succeeds in a plot to entangle Tom Neville, nephew of Sir Bevis, in the meshes of a card sharp, who continues to cheat Neville until finally Tom catches his antagonist at his crooked work. In a fight that ensues, pistols are drawn. One of the guns falls, during the scuffle, at Ora's feet. While holding it in her hand, pointed at the struggling men, Ora unintentionally discharges the revolver. The bullet strikes and kills the card sharp and Ora lays the crime upon Neville.

Tom runs away to America, and finally, by mere chance, becomes a roomer in Susan Flynn's humble flat. When Susan's father attempts, in his drunken rage, to strike his daughter Tom interferes and thus gains Flynn's enmity. Subsequently Flynn sees Tom's picture in a newspaper, advertising him as a fugitive, and in a spirit of revenge Flynn betrays Tom to the police. Neville is arrested and sent to England, where he is tried for the murder of the gambler and sentenced to a long prison term.

Subsequently Flynn dies, and when he realizes that the end is at hand, he writes a letter to Sir Jeffrey Croyden, inclosing Susan's picture and telling who she is. Sir Jeffrey sends at once for his granddaughter and installs her at Croyden Hall as his heir. While driving to Croyden Hall, Susan sees Tom Neville, in prison garb, working on the highway.

Susan undertakes to solve the plot against Neville, and learns that Ora, by perjured testimony, has caused his conviction for a crime of which he was innocent. Sir Jeffrey sends for Ora to call at Croyden Hall. Susan dresses in her mother's masquerade costume, and in the belief that she is seeing Nancy's ghost, Ora breaks down and confesses her part in the crime for which Tom is serving sentence. Then comes the happy ending for Tom and Susan.

METRO PICTURES CORP.

THE WAITING SOUL (Popular Plays and Players—Five parts—April 2).—The cast: Grace Vaughan (Madame Petrova); Stuart Brinsley (Mahlon Hamilton); Mrs. Brinsley, his mother (Mrs. Mathilde Brundage); Dudley Kent, broker (Wyndham Standing); John Hargrove, lecturer (Wilfred De Shields); Mrs. Hargrove (Mrs. Lottie Ford); Marie d'Arcy (Anna Laughney); Willard Ashbrook (Roy Pilcher). Scenario by Wallace C. Clifton. Directed by Aaron Hoffman.

Grace Vaughan falls in love with Dudley Kent, a married man, and a divorce follows, after which he and Grace leave for England. On the boat they meet John Hargrove, a lecturer, and his wife. Mrs. Hargrove, recognizing Grace, tries to befriend her, realizing that the girl is certain to meet with sorrow, but Grace does not accept her kindness in the spirit in which it is offered.

For a year Grace and Kent are happy. But Kent never forgets his little son, to whom he has been passionately devoted, and he becomes frantic at receiving a cablegram announcing the death of the boy. He denounces Grace for having lured him away from family and respectability, and she leaves him at once.

In the days that follow Grace tries in vain to find employment. Exhausted, she is resting on a park bench, when a motherly looking woman comes to her assistance and takes her home with her. Grace then discovers that she has been taken to a questionable house. She pleads in vain with Marie d'Arcy, the keeper of the place, to release her. She implores Willard Ashbrook, who visits the house, to take her away; he does so. He gives her a card to Dr. Blackwell, head of a hospital where he has influence, and she obtains a post as nurse.

After three years of ministering to humanity she is declared by Dr. Blackwell to be his most efficient nurse. To her is assigned the case of Stuart Brinsley, a young American millionaire who is ill with typhoid fever. So pleased is his mother with Grace that she prevails upon her to accompany them back to America to care for her son on the voyage. Stuart and Grace fall in love, and Stuart proposes marriage. Mrs. Brinsley is conservative, and believes that no woman, having erred can rise again, and Grace, after a discussion with her, is afraid to tell Stuart the truth about her past life. Just before the marriage, Willard Ashbrook calls on Stuart, and being shown a picture of Grace is in a quandary as to whether he should tell her history.

The marriage ceremony is performed. After three years of wedded life there is not a cloud upon their happiness except the fact that they have no children. Grace and Mrs. Brinsley are members of a civic improvement society. At one of its meetings the speaker announced is unable to be present, and his place on the program is taken by the well known lecturer, John Hargrove. When he is making a dramatic pause in his speech, his eyes happen to meet Grace's.

From this moment Grace is in an agony of suspense for fear he will recognize her at the reception following the lecture, or at the dinner to which Mrs. Brinsley invites him after that. She denies that she has ever seen him before. Finally, unable to bear the suspense, she confesses and asks him to keep her secret, which he promises to do. Her conscience assails her, however, when she finds that the hope of herself and her husband is about to be realized, and that they are to have a child. Hargrove tells her she can no longer consider herself alone, but must think of the little waiting soul to come.

She can bring it into the world free, strong, courageous, by telling the truth, or she can bring it into the world predisposed to deceit, crippled by her sin. Mother love is now awakened, and she confesses to her husband her past relations with Dudley Kent, and the strange circumstances by which she came under Marie d'Arcy's roof. Stuart tells her that he has known it all along but that he had believed it would make her happier if he seemed not to know. Then she tells him of her other secret and the two are at last truly happy in anticipation of the little waiting soul.

THE GREAT SECRET (Chapter 13)—The Struggle—Two parts—April 2).—Just as Strong is about to yield to the demand of the robber who has covered him with the gun, a policeman attached to the charity bazar and who has been trailing the crooks, enters, knocks the gun away and overpowers the robber. Strong rejoins Beverly and recounts his experience as they again make the rounds of the booths.

Dr. Zulph summons Jane Warren to his home. She alone possesses the secret of his past, but he has long held her in his power through a knowledge of her past. She remains him of their days in the Klondike, says when he felt no compunctions at crime and compelled her to assist him in his acts of villainy. By threats and cajolery he extracts from her a promise not to betray them.

Zulph telephones to one of his hirelings who is acting as butler in Beverly's home, and learns that Strong and Beverly are expected in at any moment. He instructs the butler to have the coast clear for an abduction of Strong. By a subterfuge the butler blindfolds Beverly's maid as she comes from putting Beverly's mother to bed, and locks her in a clothes closet.

Strong and Beverly arrive. The butler tells Beverly that her mother has been asking for her. She rushes upstairs. The butler follows, leaving Strong alone. Upstairs the butler overtakes Beverly, covers her head with a cloth and locks her in a room off the hall. He then goes downstairs and tells Strong that Beverly will be down in a moment. As Strong turns, the butler knocks him unconscious. He then rushes to the telephone and reports to Zulph that he has searched Strong but found no papers on him. But while he is in the act of telling Zulph what he has done, Strong recovers and stealing up behind him, grips him by the throat.

Another struggle ensues, but this time Strong conquers and the butler is knocked to the floor. Strong at once notifies Rodman Sears of the new treachery, asks him to come right over, and starts upstairs for Beverly. He hears her cries and releases her from the room in which she is locked. But just then the thugs whom Zulph has hired gain entrance to the house. Strong hears them and starts downstairs. The thugs meet him half way and there is a hand to hand fight. Strong hopes to hold them at bay until help arrives. After knocking his assailants down several times he again rushes upstairs, fearing for Beverly's safety. He realizes the odds are against him, and pushing Beverly into the room, where her now frightened mother is, he follows to protect them. The thugs have recovered from their injuries and so has the butler. They run upstairs in a body and try to break in the door, behind which are Strong, Beverly and her mother. The thugs begin shooting at Strong through the thin panels of the door. The episode ends with the outcome of the situation in favor of the desperadoes.

The Adventures of Mr. Common People. (Magazine Section.) An animated cartoon by T. E. Powers.

MARY LAWSON'S SECRET (Thanhauser-Gold Rooster—Five parts—April 1).—The cast: Mary Lawson (Charlotte Walker); Dr. Brundage (William Davidson); Dr. Kirk (J. H. Gilmour); Joe, the village cobbler (N. S. Wood); Mrs. Lawson, Mary's mother (Inda Palmer); John Harlow (Robert Vaughn). Directed by John B. O'Brien.

Mary Lawson was on trial for the killing of Dr. Brundage. He had come to the little village and with his up-to-date methods had made great inroads into the practice of Dr. Kirk. Mary's mother, a confirmed invalid, was one of those who had turned to the new doctor. Mary in repulsing the advances of Dr. Brundage, had said, "You have destroyed my faith in mankind—I feel as though I could kill you." Mary's mother took a turn for the worse, so she went to summon Dr. Brundage, but on arrival at his office found him dead in a chair. Other arrivals found Mary alone with a knife in her hand and this coupled with her previous statement, which had been overheard, was the means of her conviction. Through the help of a cripple she managed to escape.

Securing work in a faraway city she soon became the wife of a fellow workman, John Harlow, who turned out to be a wealthy clubman, working only on a wager. Her happiness was complete till the day when she ran across Dr. Kirk, now penniless and ragged. He forced her to take him in as her "uncle." One day, led to the vicinity by her picture, detectives came to the house. Mary, on seeing them, told her whole story to her husband. He, instead of turning her over, assisted her to escape in a sailboat. A storm arose and the boat was driven on the rocks. In the morning Mary came to, to find herself on the rocks but her husband was no where in sight. Overhearing voices speak of the other body, she made her way to the house for one last look at her husband. While there the detective approached only to tell her of the confession of Dr. Kirk.

MYSTERY OF THE DOUBLE CROSS (Episode No. 3 "An Hour to Live"—Two parts—April 1).—The cast: Philippa Brewster (Mollie King); Peter Hale (Leon Bary); Bridgey Bentley (Ralph Stuart); Dick Annessley (Gladden James); the masked stranger (???).

Peter Hale, whose inheritance of the Hale millions depends on his marriage to the girl branded with the mark of the Double Cross, has reason to believe that Philippa Brewster is the girl he seeks. Fired by jealousy, he hides in the tire rims strapped to the back of an automobile when he sees Bridgey Bentley, his rival, start out for a ride with Philippa. When Bentley, who is also aware of the contingency clause in the Hale will, and is trying to marry Philippa himself, tries to kiss her, Peter comes to the rescue, but with the help of the chauffeur Bentley overpowers him. Taken to Bentley's home, Peter is bound, gagged and trussed up in front of a clock, to which is attached a gun which will be shot off when the hands of the clock reach eleven.

After making sure that his scheme is working, Bentley departs, leaving two assistants to watch. During a temporary absence of these attendants, the Masked Stranger appears from behind the clock at one minute of eleven and Bentley's plan is frustrated. Peter, arriving, after the rescue, finds Philippa asleep with her head resting on the library table. He tiptoes over to her, determined to learn once for all whether or not she is the girl of the Double Cross. He leans over her and unfastens the shoulder strap of her dress, but to his surprise———See next episode—"Kidnapped."

GOLD FIBRE SCREEN

In the best theatres throughout the country RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS have been in use for years—and these theatres have established their reputations as "the best theatres" largely because the projection of the pictures shown in them has been the best. There are no screen ghosts in theatres where RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS are used. There is no eye-strain or fatigue for the patrons of these theatres, and every patron, whether sitting in the centre or on the sides of the auditorium sees the identical photographic image which the director wished that they should see.

There is no reason in the world why your theatre should not become "the best theatre" in your community through the installation and use of a RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN. The cost is far from prohibitive—indeed, counting the money you will save in lessened bills for electrical current, you will be surprised to find that it is even less expensive to use the best screen on the market than to use any of the poorly devised imitations.

Why not write us today for price and detailed information?

Bigger--Better Business

SURELY this is worthy of your attention NOW when the whole world must look to this country for its supply of films.

Opportunity in the form of erecting and maintaining EXPORT TRADE is strongly knocking at your door.

IN BUENOS AIRES alone the increase in moving picture theatres has been approximately 75% within the last three years.

CINE MUNDIAL reaches all of these people each month and is the only Spanish Moving Picture paper devoted to the interest of American Film Productions.

CINE MUNDIAL can be of service to YOU if you are willing to take your own part in selling this market.

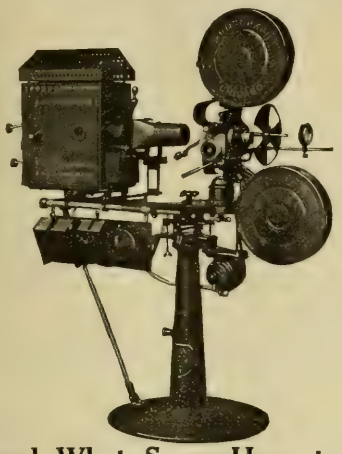
MOTIOGRAPH SUPERIORITY

EASILY PRONOUNCED BY THE MANY USERS



Read What Some Have to Say

Watertown, Wis., E. W. Cassell, says:
You could give us nothing but Motiographs, as they are what we call the best on the market.

San Francisco, Cal., E. H. Roth, says:
Much credit is due the Motiograph, as the projection is perfect and the picture is absolutely flickerless at any speed, as well as delightfully steady.

Greer, S. C., C. W. Grace, says:
I am entirely satisfied with the Motiograph's work.

Charlotte, N. C., H. L. Morrow, says:
I do not believe that Motiograph Service, Reliability and Perfection in Projection can be equaled by any machine (regardless of price).

Canton, Ohio, H. S. Klink, says:
I am using two Motiographs and have a world of praise for them. They do just what the makers say they will do—produce a rock-steady and flickerless picture.

Chicago, Ill., The Famous Theatre, says:
Fifteen months of use and just as good as new; the projection cannot be excelled.

St. Joseph, Mo., W. W. Wertenberger, says:
The material used in the Motiographs is certainly of the highest quality to stand the grind we give them.

Chicago, Ill., Rothacker Film Mfg. Co., says:
We are using Motiographs exclusively in all of our screen inspection work and we have had innumerable compliments from our customers upon the clear, steady pictures we present.

Cleveland, Ohio, Bronx Amusement Co., says:
Altho our theatre opens at eight o'clock in the morning and runs continuously till eleven o'clock at night, being reputed to be the hardest grind in the city, yet we have not had a particle of trouble of any nature with your machines and they have never failed to produce perfect results in a most satisfactory manner.

Lincoln, Neb., Hill-Sun Amusement Co., says:
We have the reputation of having the best projection in Lincoln and believe that the credit for it belongs to the Motiograph machines that we have in our operating room.

Elysian, Minn., L. E. Beynon, says:
The Motiograph we purchased over a year ago is giving very good service—in fact, I might say perfect results.

IF YOU WANT MORE PROOF OF THE MOTIOGRAPH'S PERFORMING ABILITY—We have it in thousands of other testimonials.

IT'S THE BIGGEST BUY TODAY, REGARDLESS OF PRICE.

BLAZING FILM STARTS SCARE IN A THEATRE
Women Faint and Men Fight to Get Out of [redacted]
None Is Injured—
There was considerable excitement last night at the [redacted] Theatre, when a movie film caught fire and was thrown out on a stairway leading to the theatre. There were about 1,000 persons in the place at the time and the attendants had difficulty in checking a panic.

JOHNS-MANVILLE SERVICE COVERS THE CONTINENT

Are Your Patrons Adequately Protected?

These accidents happen, despite all precautions. But a cool head and a J-M Fire Extinguisher will keep all the excitement inside the booth. Just about ten seconds with the J-M and you're ready for business again.

Johns-Manville Fire Extinguisher

Always ready for every emergency. Discharged either by pumping or by air pressure previously pumped up and stored, an exclusive J-M feature invaluable in tight corners. Efficient on all incipient fires, whether from gasoline, grease or electrical arcs. And the price, bracket included, is but $8.00, in either brass or nickel finish—positive protection at negligible cost.

The J-M Fire Extinguisher is tested, approved and labeled by the Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., under the direction of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

J-M Extinguisher Fluid for recharging is the only liquid recommended and guaranteed for use in the J-M Fire Extinguisher. Supplied in sealed cans, carried in stock by all our dealers.

"NEWMAN" BRASS FRAMES AND RAILS

Read what C. A. Morrison of The Princess Theatre, Hartford, Conn., says about Newman Quality:

Gentlemen:
We have purchased quite a number of Brass Frames and Easels, together with Brass Ticket Rail and Three-Sheet Brass Poster Frames of your Company.
All of these goods reached us in perfect condition and the quality was the best. I have told several other managers in the city of your goods and in several instances orders have been sent you—all of which goes to show that your best advertiser is a satisfied customer.

"MARTIN" ROTARY CONVERTER

FOR REAL SUN-LIT PICTURES

PERFECT REEL DISSOLVING

The voltage of the "MARTIN" polyphase converter is maintained constant, so that the starting of the second arc does not disturb the light given by the first, making the dissolving of the reels as simple as if the arcs were operated in a Direct Current district. Our emergency panel does away with expensive compensators and cuts the wiring and installation cost in half.

CARBON ECONOMY

Repeated tests have shown that Silvertip projector carbons produce a more intense white light at a less current consumption than any other carbon. This is only one reason why a negative Silvertip lower used with a National cored upper with Direct Current insures highest economy without the sacrifice of operating efficiency.

Remember,—That intense white light on the screen, which means clear and well defined pictures, is the real point of contact between exhibitor and public. Be sure you are getting the best light for your money.

Universal Screen Magazine a Sensation

EXHIBITORS PRAISE IT

THE U Screen Magazine comes to bat this week with another "punch" for Exhibitors. "WHAT WE EAT" is the subject of a highly fascinating series of scenes on dry food products that every person in the country is anxious to see and know about. "X-RAY" mysterious, shown this week also in Screen Magazine, a subject never before shown to the public at large. "YOUNG MEN WHO DIDN'T GO WEST," showing successful men who did not heed Horace Greeley's advice and yet who made good. Other subjects make this one of the fascinating issues of the already popular U Screen Magazine. Already, Exhibitors are building their hopes for brightening the dull days with the U Screen Magazine and the U Screen Magazine is making good like wildfire. A single issue shown in one theatre out West brought forth a shower of congratulations from enthusiastic fans who asked the Management if the U Screen Magazine was going to be a regular thing each week. For a real high class novelty to interest, instruct and amuse EVERYBODY who sees it, the U Screen Magazine is a winner from the very start. It equals (with moving pictures) the tremendous popularity of the best magazines in the land. All the subjects of widest interest, that you read about in all the popular magazines, is the type and character of subjects that are shown by the U Screen Magazine. If you haven't as yet booked the U Screen Magazine, and if you can get it before someone else gets it in your territory, take our advice and "grab it now." Enuf said. Any Universal Exchange will take your order.

Tabloid Food from Vegetables (From U Screen Magazine)

MARCUS LOEW BOOKS "VOICE ON THE WIRE" SERIAL FOR HIS ENTIRE CIRCUIT OF THEATRES

Universal's Thrilling Series, "The Perils of the Secret Service," Big Winner

Ben Wilson

THE mere mention of the fact that Marcus Loew, largest theatre circuit theatre owner in America, chooses the Universal's thrilling serial, "THE VOICE ON THE WIRE," means more to Exhibitors than all the advertising in the trade papers means in ten years. Here's concrete evidence of the shrewdest judgment of a theatrical man who has achieved, single-handed, a greater success than any moving picture man in the business. When Marcus Loew books a serial, it's a thousand to one cinch that the serial in plain talk "has got to be there," and "THE VOICE ON THE WIRE" is there in larger measure and in greater power than any serial the Universal has put out to date. Written by Eustace Hale Ball, author of such successes as "Traffic in Souls," and directed by Stuart Paton, producer of "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea"—headed by BEN WILSON as the leading player, supported by Beautiful Neva Gerber, Joseph Girard and a huge cast of Universal Players, this serial is destined to do more for Exhibitors in the way of profits and capacity houses than even such successful Universal Serials as "Liberty" and the many other winners the Universal has produced. Get back to the fact that Marcus Loew has booked it for his ENTIRE CIRCUIT, and that the biggest and best houses all over this country have booked it, and there your answer of the profits and possibilities of this greatest of all Universal Serials.

Neva Gerber

Then the great new series "THE PERILS OF THE SECRET SERVICE" written and personally directed by George Bronson Howard, author of God's Man and other successes—with KINGSLEY BENEDICT in the lead and with each episode of two reels A COMPLETE STORY BY ITSELF, you have an opportunity to give your patrons something brand new, something they all have been wanting to see—and know (how the secret service men work). Book either the 15 week serial or the 8 week series for the biggest business you've ever had. Book thru any of the 73 Universal Exchanges.

THE BARRIER

The Famous Photo-Play from the Great Novel

By REX BEACH

"This is the motion picture we have been waiting for," said a woman member of the National Board of Review after seeing "The Barrier" in New York City.

"This is the greatest photo-drama ever produced," say all the motion picture experts and critics.

"The Barrier" is by far the most powerful Rex Beach photo-drama yet filmed. The remarkable and unanimous praise bestowed upon "The Barrier" by the press, the critics and the public has brought an avalanche of applications for advance bookings from America's most prominent exhibitors from New York to San Francisco.

They realize from the wonderful success of this picture in the big theatres of New York, Philadelphia and other cities that "The Barrier" is bound to be the season's greatest drawing card in motion picture theatres.

George M. Cohan Makes His Film Debut at Strand in "Broadway Jones"

The much heralded screen debut of George M. Cohan occurred at the Strand yesterday. Of course, no one who knows George would ever doubt but that he would get across, and he may now add film artist to the list of his accomplishments.

Until one became used to him on the

NEW YORK JOURNAL

GEO. M. COHAN ON THE SCREEN IS GREAT

Yesterday morning at 11 o'clock was "Moving Picture Exhibitors' " morning to witness the first presentation of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation's latest film, George M. Cohan in "Broadway Jones."

When the barrier went up there appeared an American flag with the Yankee Doodle comedian poking his head through the stripes which was the start for the big applause. Then on went the story of George Cohan's great play which made a sensation in almost every state of the union.

"Broadway Jones" in pictures is George Cohan from beginning to end, and you know what that means: Jump, fire, bing, bang, biff, shoot, rush, off and on, action, action, action.

The camera man who turned the crank to take the picture certainly did some turning, for, although Joseph Kaufman directed the picture for George Cohan, believe me, Kaufman knew Cohan and knew how Cohan acts, and how fast direction ship has got to be to satisfy this marvel of the theatrical age.

George Cohan in "Broadway Jones" is the greatest comedy five reel feature that has ever been produced in front of any audience, be it in Scotland, England, Ireland, Wales or in any city of the great big United States. George Cohan is George Cohan, whether he is on the stage, on the street or on the screen, and this moving picture has stamped him the greatest artist in the world.

It has waited until March 20, 1917, for us to witness a comedy film where no acrobatic actions or low degrading comedy of directorship is introduced. Here is a full fledged comedy played by our own American George Cohan in the most fascinating manner, without stooping to antics which the average human being could never do. Here's a man who comes out and gives us unadulterated, honest-to-goodness fun 1917 fashion as we are today.

walking the wire, jumping out of dows or going crazy ("Broadway Jones" in pictures ny), but "Broadway Jones" in pictures passed everything before it. You can all your comedians, as great as they the public eye, but George M. Cohan in "Broadway Jones" will take the ke in the pictures as it was

At the Strand Theatre George Cohan appeared in the filmed presentation of his stage success, "Broadway Jones" and made a decided hit in the title role. Mr. Cohan was ably assisted by Marguerite Snow, Russell Bassett, Crawford Kent and Ida Darling. A special feature was the introduction of Cohan to the

'BROADWAY JONES' MAKES SCREEN BOW

George M. Cohan's Play Contains New Scenes Well Fitted to Film.

George M. Cohan is an honest to goodness movie actor now. He made his first appearance on the screen yesterday at the Strand in his play "Broadway Jones." Cohan made his first screen bow with the "grand old flag" flapping about him and proceeded to show that he can make the eagle scream on the screen as well as on the stage.

"Broadway Jones" as presented by Movie Manager Cohan is the old stage version illuminated and expanded by the addition of many touches of realism and striking scenes which are beyond the limits of the stage to portray. The old story of the boy who was called "Broadway" because he wore a white collar and patent leather shoes and raved about the street he had never seen is

Mr. Walter E. Greene, Pres.,
Artcraft Pictures Corporation.
729 Seventh Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Greene:-

The opening of your production here at the Strand Theatre, of George M. Cohan in "Broadway Jones", was accorded a reception the like of which I believe has never been witnessed in the history of motion picture presentation.

The tremendous crowds who witnessed the performances here yesterday were most demonstrative in their appreciation of same. Sunday, March 25th, with George M. Cohan in his photo dramatic debut "Broadway Jones", at the Strand Theatre, New York, will go down in the annals of theatrical history.

Everyone who witnessed this production left the theatre acclaiming it the best of its kind ever produced. Without question or doubt this ought to prove to be a big bonanza for all the exhibitors who play same.

I personally want to congratulate you and your associates as well as Mr. Cohan upon this wonderful achievement.

Hoping within the near future we will have another such picture with George M. Cohan in the title role, I beg to remain,

Yours most sincerely,

H. Edel.

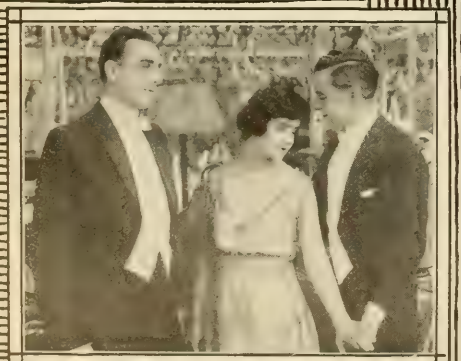
A Production that has no Program Competition. A Feature designed to fulfill the functions of a Feature Attraction. It is a big Subject for Big men to handle in a Big way for Big returns. It is a Quality picture done in a Quality way for Quality people. It is neither too high-brow, however, for ten-cent audiences nor too low-brow for fifty-cent audiences. It is the type and style of picture that exhibitors will book at $100 a day. A sample line of Billing matter, lobby display, publicity and advertising will be mailed on request. All Publicity and advertising copy prepared from the Box-office angle.

EDWARD WARREN



Of The Flesh

THE Story, the Cast and Staging—all reflect the high character of the production. It is Not a sex play—It is a story that asks the question "Are the forces of good stronger than the forces of evil?" The Cast includes: Sheldon Lewis, who starred in the Iron Claw; Walter Hampden, who starred in the Servant in the House; Charlotte Ives, now starring in the Morosco Broadway hit, The Brat; Marie Shotwell, appearing in Enlighten Thy Daughter; Harry Benham of the Million Dollar Mystery, and Theodore Friebus, for years the idol at the Castle Square Theatre, Boston.

The feature was produced by EDWARD WARREN, maker of many successful state right attractions. The scenario is by Lawrence Marston.

Dear Mr. Collins:

I had the pleasure last night, of witnessing three of the series of McClure Pictures, SEVEN DEADLY SINS, the subjects being "Envy," "Pride" and "Greed."

I believe that all of these will be acceptable to, and make money for, the exibitor showing them, particularly in view of the wide publicity they are receiving.

I was much impressed with the acting of Miss O'Neill and the dramatic situations in "Greed," having enjoyed it more than any picture I have seen in a long time.

Was very glad to get your report that the theaters showing SEVEN DEADLY SINS are doing such an exceptional business.

Your exploitation of this series through the magazines and newspapers has been remarkably good. May I also compliment you upon the character of the stories used in these pictures as they show great thought and in my opinion are considerably in advance of the majority of motion pictures made to-day.

I wish you continued success.

"MRS. BALFAME" WITH NANCE O'NEIL STARTS NEW MUTUAL SERIES

THE first production of the Nance O'Neil series of Mutual Pictures is now ready. It is "Mrs. Balfame." It is based on the celebrated novel by Gertrude Atherton. It is in six acts. It was made at the studios of the Frank Powell Producing Corporation. Frank Powell directed it.

Based on Atherton Novel.

"Mrs. Balfame" is the first Gertrude Atherton novel ever filmed. This famous novelist is admired the world over. Her stories are read by millions. A vast number of those who have enjoyed Gertrude Atherton's novel in type will be instantly attracted by a chance to see the same story in film form. It is a highly dramatic story. It was naturally adapted to presentation on the screen. It deals with a problem of the home. Its heroine is a married woman who detests her husband. Yet she does not believe in divorce. How shall she solve her dilemma? Aside from this sociological phase of the story there is a mystery of the most fascinating sort. Its working out holds interest to the very last foot of the subject. "Mrs. Balfame" is an unusual offering.

Released Week of April 9.

Mutual Exchanges everywhere will release "Mrs. Balfame" the week of April 9. Bookings can be arranged now. Nance O'Neil is one of America's most popular stars. Her name alone will pack theatres anywhere. See your nearest Mutual Exchange without delay.

Serial Bettered by Threatened Strike on Railroad Lines

"The Railroad Raiders," the newest Helen Holmes photo-novel, released on April 9, is peculiarly timely. Within the last few weeks the attention of the whole country has been settled on the railroads. The threatened strike of the railroad men interested everyone. While railroads and railroading are still on the tongues of people everywhere along comes 'The Railroad Raiders." It will have an instant appeal. It offers theatres an exceptional opportunity for profits. It is booking now at all Mutual Exchanges. If you haven't already arranged to show it, a wire or call at the nearest Mutual Exchange will enable you to do so.

"A DAUGHTER OF WAR"

Featuring May Ward and Brimming Over With Patriotism

IS TIMELY RELEASE

On Thursday, April 12, the Mutual Film Corporation will release through its exchanges everywhere a special feature entitled "A Daughter of War." This picture is in five acts and stars May Ward, a popular and pretty star. It is a production that is peculiarly timely. It is a picture that fairly bubbles over with patriotism. Every audience that sees it is sure to be inspired by lofty sentiments and love of country. It pictures stirring scenes of the Revolutionary War. Among the incidents depicted in it are the signing of the Declaration of Independence—the visit of Benjamin Franklin to the French Court—the voluntary offer of Marquis de Lafayette to assist the struggling patriots—the treason of Benedict Arnold—the battle of Saratoga —the surrender of Lord Cornwallis. George Washington is one of the characters portrayed. It is a picture that will stir audiences as George Cohan musical comedies with their rapid fire action and waving flags always do. In its making thousands of soldiers, hundreds of horses and millions of rounds of ammunition were used. It shows big battle scenes, thrilling cavalry charges, war in all its grim reality. Be patriotic. Show this picture now, while it will aid the country in recruiting men. It means big box office receipts. It means inspired audiences. It means an opportunity really to be of service while America is on the brink of war. You can book it now at any Mutual Exchange at a price within the reach of any exhibitor.

Edna Goodrich's cast in the first of her Mutual Pictures—"Reputation"—includes William Hinckley, Nellie Parker Spaulding and Carey Lee.

SECOND RELEASE OF NEW RUSSELL SERIES TITLED "HIGH PLAY"

"HIGH PLAY" is the title chosen for the second of the new series of William Russell pictures. It is from the pen of Julius Grinnell Furthmann. It was directed by Edward Sloman. It was produced by American Film Company, Inc. It is released the week of April 9.

A Story of High Finance.

Mr. Russell appears in an altogether different role than that in which he was cast in "My Fighting Gentleman." "High Play" is a story of high finance. Its scenes are laid in a big eastern city, and Russell enacts the role of the vice president of a big trust company. Following a call of the state bank examiner the doors of the trust company are closed. A panic ensues. Russell however offers to pay back every depositor and is made president of the reorganized institution. A love story of powerful appeal runs throughout the tale. Russell is engaged to a voluptuous beauty, but later learns to care for a girl of a far different type. Dropping his first love leads to an exciting scene and the banker is threatened with disgrace by a revengeful clubman. Braving disgrace, Russell avows his love for the girl of his heart's desire and the story ends with the clubman's death and Russell's discovery that he has made the highest play and won.

Russell a Big Favorite.

Everywhere William Russell is adjudged a popular favorite. He has a following today that is second to no other male star of the screen. Each new release seems to increase his popularity. Theatres everywhere report "My Fighting Gentleman" satisfied audiences. Everyone who saw him in that will be eager to see "High Play." Mutual Exchanges all over the country are prepared to accept bookings now on this newest Russell production.

Work On Gail Kane Features Proceeding

Work is proceeding rapidly on the new Gail Kane productions. These Mutual Pictures are being made at the Santa Barbara studios of the American Film Company, Inc., at Santa Barbara, California. "Whose Wife?" is already done. "With Edged Tools," the second, is in the making. "The Indiscretion of Molly" has been chosen as the third.

It's the wise guys that lead off in the batting order these days. They don't come up with a fishing pole and slam out at any old thing. Not much. They bring the old hickory to the box, dust off the plate, spit on their hands and wait for one that's just right. There's no calling strikes on 'em; you've got to p-r-o-d-u-c-e.

One balloons by, and Mr. Exhibitor just stands there and smiles. No need asking him what's the matter. He knows a "filler" when he sees it.

But when there's a GAUMONT single-reel being delivered, it's placed where it's wanted. It comes over the box-office plate with a hop that makes Mr. Exhibitor step up to meet it. It's his meat, and he doesn't make a "home run" until he's seen the last foot of it.

That's why Gaumont pictures are so popular.

"Pin-Money!"

Did you ever apply for a position just to earn "a little pin-money?"

Did you ever think that when you obtained the position you did not need, that some one who did need the position lost it because you would work for less money?

There are a lot of girls in this day and age who force men and women out of jobs just for "pin-money." These girls already have allowances but they want more money to buy things they do not need. As a consequence others lose positions they do need.

"The Power of Pin-Money" is a Selig drama, latest to be announced in General Film service. It is a drama enacted by a capable cast—it is a drama that will make you think! A thrilling plot and beautiful photography.

The latest of the Selig comedies to be released in General Film Service is entitled, "Mr. Bingo, The Bachelor." There is a real-for-sure plot and a lot of giggles.

The Selig-Tribune, the world's greatest news film, is released twice every week in General Film service.

O. Henry's Fantastic "Bagdad on the Subway" in Vivid Photoplays

New York was "Bagdad on the Subway" to O. Henry. Around this whimsical conception he wove the marvelous stories of human life—droll, tender, humorous, pathetic, romantic—which made him the most widely read and best loved writer in the world.

The O. Henry stories in picture form show you the scenes and the people he loved so well and described with such amazing genius—such wisdom, understanding and sympathy.

Over 2,000,000 sets of one edition of O. Henry's books have been sold—10,000,000 people have read them. In addition, these wonderful stories have been published in magazines and newspapers having a total circulation of at least 10,000,000—50,000,000 readers.

Practically the entire population has read O. Henry's stories. This vast audience is waiting to see them in motion pictures. Be the first to book the O. Henry pictures in your locality.

Facts and Comments

ONE of the lessons that should be learned by the film interests from the recent hearing in Albany on the question of Sunday pictures is in regard to the antagonism of the liquor interests. Surely this phase of the matter should rather make for the cause of Sunday opening than against it and the Church people can hardly be proud of their allies. That the lobby of the drink interests against the moving picture was mostly under cover was to be expected for the very reason that their open antagonism would have been more beneficial than otherwise. It was there and made its influence felt none the less. At least this shows what we may expect, not only in this State but wherever any legislative question in regard to picture interests may arise.

Still another lesson from the Albany hearing was the fact that moving picture men cannot afford to fold their hands when their opponents are working tooth and nail. Almost every New York State legislator in Albany was flooded with petitions bearing anywhere from a few to hundreds of names against Sunday opening. The picture theater men could have secured just as many signatures in favor of the measure and sent to these same representatives, but they did nothing of the kind. The result was that the representatives of the people received hundreds of signatures against the measure but none in favor, and were forced to the conclusion that the great majority of their constituents were against the opening of picture houses on Sunday, when such was not really the case. Moving picture men, will you make careful note of this for future guidance?

REPORTS from Albany indicate that the plan to tax the motion picture industry of New York State is not creating as much enthusiasm in official circles as it did when first proposed. As time passes our legislators are beginning to realize that much of the fabulous fortunes made in the picture business exist only in the brain of the ambitious press agent who sought by means of such fanciful tales to bring his boss to realize how important a man he had become or to coax some much needed "angel" to rescue a difficult financial situation. From the same source comes the information that any effort to bring the motion picture under state control will not include the National Board of Review and its plan of censorship.

GOOD taste has a lot to do with making good pictures. There may be a wonderful story and perfect technique; the acting may be blameless; but if the subject does not uphold the proper standard of ethics all else that is praiseworthy falls down. It is as if a magnificent structure were built upon sand—the foundation is insecure. That a popular motion picture star, whose marital infelicities have been the subject of much newspaper comment, should appear in a picture entitled "Why I Left My Husband" is an instance of bad taste that is rather startling. While the idea may excite curiosity it is not calculated to strengthen the popularity of this particular player.

"MANY a true word is spoken in jest" is a well known and oft repeated saying. This will be apparent to picturemen if they chance to read Lewis J. Selznick's view of the uses of the program company printed elsewhere in this issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD. Mr. Selznick, who has furnished the trade with many good laughs, undertakes to put over a bit of humor at the expense of the program men when he says that they are most useful in developing stars for the feature producer, to which class he belongs. It is true that producers of program pictures have developed most all of the notable motion picture stars; the mistake they made in the past was in letting those stars get away from them just as they became valuable. In the light of experience it would seem that program producers could well have afforded to have paid their stars better salaries for their own pictures than to have let their feature competitors get them. It is not too late to make amends.

RICHARDSON, THE WORLD'S projection sharp, continues his triumphal tour of the country preaching the doctrine of Better Projection to interested managers and operators in each city at which he is scheduled to stop. Enthusiastic gatherings of picturemen who meet Mr. Richmardson prove the interest that is felt in his subject and the esteem in which his advice is held. He is doing a good work and doing it well.

Express Something

By Louis Reeves Harrison

THE impression is what you are after, the effect on a mixed audience. Have something of value in mind to start with and say it entertainingly, clearly, convincingly, in visualized-story form. Examine the thousands of stories handed down from ancient times and find one, if you can, that produced any lasting effect without a meaning. Combativeness is aroused by the preachment—the story is a better medium—its approach is more subtle, more tactful, than the assault of a sermon, and many a sermon is little more than a mouthing of words beyond the quick intuitive grasp of the average human mind.

It is perfectly well known that an audience will often applaud a splendid sentiment, whether uttered or "screened," when the play itself meets with no special approbation. This is because it has a telling significance. There should be some significance in the play itself if it is to succeed in a large way. That significance need not be thrust into prominence. Very often it is the more impressive when submerged. It should be so constructed that it can dive out of sight in the flow of action and reappear at will, a submarine that gets there, especially in the flood of dramatic events at the crisis.

In illustration of the meaningless, let us consider a play as it is reviewed in one of the best New York dailies, a play shown at one of the largest houses in the world. Joe is an Italian. He tells Lina, who lives next door, that he expects his sweetheart from Italy, but it is only his mother after all. Mother is sent to jail on a false charge. "Joe's one idea," says the critic, "is revenge, and he readily consents to substitute a golf ball filled with powerful explosives for the one which the District Attorney is playing at the Country Club."

"Just as the prosecutor is about to strike the ball and every one in the audience is holding his ears and his breath, Joe hurls himself on the ball and is struck by the club as it descends. This is the best scene in a picture which abounds with tense situations. Explanations follow and all ends happily." Such is the important drama as reviewed by an important New York paper. The picture may have been better than the criticism—only the viewpoint of the critic is given by way of illustration.

To reach the "tense situation," "the best scene" in this feature, all the other scenes, if they amounted to anything at all, must have led up to the crisis. The audience is led to expect something. Assuming that the appetizers were fine, how about the feast of reason and the flow of soul? How bright, original and interesting the dessert, "Explanations follow and all ends happily." There are audiences today who thoroughly enjoy a variety.

To say no more of the oft-repeated and wornout story of bomb revenge fed us to the verge of nausea in one-reel products of other days, and coming back to the question of whether a story should have anything actually expressed in its general design, it has been the story, not the thesis, which has stimulated the best aims of any people by dramatic and absorbing illustration of those aims. Mark Twain ridiculed preachment because of its form, not because of the matter contained—he presented the same ideas more effectively in story form. It was as if he had said to himself, "Here is a lot of material for a feast of reason so badly prepared that no one will even attempt to taste it."

Copyright, 1917, Louis Reeves Harrison.

There are magnificent and interesting discoveries presented in scientific works of today, but comparatively few people have the time and patience to boil down the verbiage in order to get at the thought. There are some beautiful ideas offered in the best critical and philosophical modern works, but the authors of them do not seem to realize the necessity of common sense in their diction. They address the super-culture of the few and ignore the sympathetic intelligence of the common herd. They sing in Wagnerian cadence that only the elect can understand.

Modern novelists are leaving clarity of style for cleverness, simplicity for artifice, and people turn from their delicate complexities of language to the picture show for relief. Plenty of fiction is being published, but there is visible an almost constant straining for effect. Instead of telling a good story, novelists seem to be in a painful struggle to reconcile native nouns with exotic adjectives.

An enthusiastic producer paid a thousand dollars for the right to visualize a novel which had held his interest from the opening page to the end. The hero was crossing the Atlantic and he was deeply impressed by his experience. What strange noises in the rigging when running into the wind! What a death-like calm when running with the wind! The waves and the sky come in for their share of lurid prose, for subtleties of perception and for delicacies of expression, and each chapter ended with a prophecy of something about to happen which never happened to be of any particular importance. It was all word painting.

Such is the case with a large number of modern novels. They pretend much and perform little. We are led to expect a feast and get a story sliced as thin as delicatessen ham. About one in a thousand contemporaneous works of fiction furnishes enough material for a five-reel feature. The best of the remainder average about three reels. Some of them can be easily told in one reel. What a fictionist may dwell on for pages can be told in a few feet of film. One result constantly noticed by the critic is a painful attenuation when the three-reel novel is structurally transformed for five-reel motion-picture presentation.

The whole charm of a story is the whole impression it makes upon the mind of those it entertains in the process of telling. Into the process of telling goes an enormous amount of craftsmanship, its appeal to sense and the senses, its varied minor delights, but, if it amounts to nothing worth while in the end, if we have followed it with quickened sympathies and alert intelligence only to discover that it has a heart-breaking lack of soul, we feel a disappointment almost akin to resentment. We have been lured on and on, only to be cheated in the end.

We have willed things in our own lives that fail in spite of our utmost efforts. We hope for results that never materialize. We dream of happiness that we never attain. We turn from the bitterness and disappointment of real life to that portrayed in the story with an expectation that here, at least, will be some aim that goes to the mark, some purpose fulfilled, some struggle that is not in vain, or, if in vain, brings us sympathetic compensation, something that enables us to fight on or gives us the inspiration of ultimate justice. To give a story power, make it express something that bears on the life we are living.

Methods of President Ochs

OUR correspondent in Portland, Oregon, sends us a report of the meetings addressed in his city by the President of the Exhibitors' League on his recent tour that makes interesting reading. It is safe to assume that his statements in Portland are typical of his deliverances elsewhere. After a few commonplace remarks on petty jealousy and co-operation among exhibitors, placing the blame on the distributors for most of the troubles of the industry, etc., the President soon got down to the real business and "started in on a vituperative denunciation of every trade journal but his own." He is reported as saying "Exhibitors, you are the under dog. The way to do away with that condition is to have a trade organ devoted to your interests. If you have a grievance, come out in the Exhibitors' Trade Review and say it. Don't think you can say it in any other trade journal."

We want to say to Mr. Ochs that none know better than himself and some of his associates that this statement is wholly false. He knows that the columns of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD have always been open to exhibitors and that they have been urged to write us at all times. He knows, if he knows anything about the League, that this paper has consistently boosted the cause of exhibitors' organization and that but for the MOVING PICTURE WORLD there might be much less of a League today than there is.

Continuing, Mr. Ochs said: "If the WORLD is for the exhibitor, you've got to show it to me." Conditions are the same today, Mr. Ochs, as when you, along with about twenty-five other prominent exhibitors throughout the country, voluntarily signed at the convention last summer a testimonial expressing "our sincere appreciation of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD for its loyal and intelligent service to the motion picture industry and to the exhibitors in particular."

Our correspondent says Mr. Ochs then went on to tell of his doings in connection with the two Exhibitions last summer and how the MOVING PICTURE WORLD had edited the copy for his advertisements.

Yes, Mr. Ochs, we did insist on editing your copy, if it was yours, just as we have insisted time and again on editing copy when any advertiser attempted to use our advertising pages for purely personal statements or innuendos directed at other advertisers. We still have that original copy on file and if any fair-minded exhibitor in the whole United States will not justify our act after seeing the copy, we will gladly admit that we made a mistake. Frankly tell your audiences while you are at it, that we did not object to running the advertisement, but only to the personalities that it contained; and while you are telling them about this particular advertising why not tell whether it was ever paid for or not. Why try to make capital out of this if it did not cost you or the organization a cent?

Again quoting Mr. Ochs: "Previous to starting the Trade Review I was a great fellow; after that they all came out and pounded me." As far as the WORLD is concerned, this statement is doubly false. In the first place, we never lauded you as either great or good, except in as far as the member of our staff who later went over to your paper wrote of you, and he knows that at least one of his articles was trimmed quite considerably because it was so full of fulsome praise of yourself and of your fancied achievements. If you and your cause got any benefit from an employee of this paper to the extent of using him through his articles and in promoting the interests of your proposed publication while still in our employ, you are welcome to it and to his services.

Your statement is again false, because we have not pounded you, as exhibitors well know, although they do not know all the facts in our possession on which we might have pounded you justly. Again, why not tell the exhibitors about the one advertisement of yours that we did refuse absolutely, viz, that one in which you endeavored to use our advertising columns to make an attack on the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, through raking up an incident hoary with age? Are there any exhibitors who have any doubt as to the real object of that attack?

Apropos the dollar subscription, Mr. Ochs said he was after all the circulation and when he got that the advertising would come to him. It is hardly necessary to point out that if he does not get the advertising he cannot long supply his paper to its subscribers at any such ridiculous rate. Our own rate of three times that amount would not enable us to mail our paper to subscribers for fifty-two weeks.

Mr. Ochs also says: "I am here to get before the exhibitors the Exhibitors' Trade Review. The Exhibitors' Trade Review is standing the expenses of my trip and it isn't costing the National League a cent."

Why should it cost the League a cent, Mr. Ochs? Your present trip through the country is primarily in the interest of your paper, and another year of prestige that comes with the office of president of the Exhibitors' League might put it over. This is all that is in your mind at present and your interest in exhibitor organization goes no further and it went no further when you sought the election last year. We have understood that Mr. Fred Herrington is National Organizer for the League and he is the one who should be meeting exhibitors in all parts of the country on bona fide organization matters.

As president of the League would it not be better to build up your private enterprise on its own foundation rather than under the guise of working for the interests of the exhibitor? Again, why use your office as president of the League in an attempt to throw discredit on other publications. Is your proposition such that it can only succeed by such methods, or is this simply your usual way of doing business?

As far as the MOVIING PICTURE WORLD is concerned, it has openly espoused the cause of organization among exhibitors at all times and under all conditions, because it firmly believes in it. It has not only advocated the cases of the Exhibitors' League in its columns at all times, but it has paid the expenses time and again of members of its staff to help whenever and wherever possible, and yet when it suits your ends, you, as president, not only ignore these facts, but try to discredit them.

What chance would straightforward business interests in any branch of the trade stand with your methods?

"SONG boosters are appearing in local motion picture theaters again," says our Louisville correspondent. They ask no pay for song, but they choose their songs not by what they think the people want, but by some other idea. This wabbling advertisement and its near relative, the advertising slide or film, are perennial like iron weed in a farmer's garden. They systematically rob good soil and give no good return. An exhibitor who has paid for this mistake in the past will not be likely to repeat his experience. The exhibitor who has not paid and tries it will pay in his turn.

Why Do Stars Start Their Own Companies?

By Sam Spedon

THIS letter from Alabama is so ingenuous and contains so many prevailing questions we are constrained to answer it, not only for the satisfaction of the writer but for the satisfaction it gives us and may give others.

Moving Picture World:—

Please allow me a small space in your valuable magazine. I don't see why so many of the leading moving picture stars are doing like Clara Kimball Young and Douglas Fairbanks. They have made a record. The moving picture patrons will not stand for 25 or 50 cent pictures. To my mind the greatest mistake these popular stars can make is to go with some company of their own and charge the public about twice as much to see them as before. Nobody minds paying 10 cents or 15 cents to see a moving picture with these good stars, but they will not pay more. If a director made me famous and a company did all it could for me I certainly would not leave it just as I was becoming popular. I think these stars do wrong by leaving the company that has made them popular, and I know that their drawing power is not great enough to stand these high prices. It will only be a matter of time until the producers will have to do something, because the way things are going now, there will be no demand for moving pictures. Theater managers cannot pay all that they make on a picture for the exhibition of it, and that is the outcome of these high price pictures.

The film corporations are to blame. They are each trying to outdo the other, and we will soon have to quit and start over again. "E."

There are many reasons why prominent stars break away from producing companies through whom they first became known upon the screen and by whom they were publicized and became popular. First of all is the offer of a larger salary, more money by other producers. Actors and actresses are only human and we cannot blame them for taking advantage of an opportunity to advance themselves, for the only human estimate of success is based on monetary gain. Undoubtedly the producers themselves are accountable for high-salaried stars, which add to the high cost of pictures. Competition is the life of trade, and bids for stars are a considerable part of that self-same competition in motion pictures. The stars have a side in it, they are not slow to recognize their worth to the producers for whom they are working and they place their value according to the profits their employers are making from the productions in which they appear. Other producers recognize the value of these stars and calculate if they have so much earning power they are worth just as much or more to them and they are not slow to make a bid for their services. While the producers are making money the stars become rich and are enabled to demand more and if they cannot get it they go into producing themselves with the presumptions that if others can make money on their names and services they might as well make it themselves. They are willing to take a chance anyway. In most instances they readily find a partner or financier who is willing to take a chance with them and they have no trouble in finding a distributing company to release their pictures. This is the best reason we can give the gentleman in Alabama why the stars are going in business for themselves. Not all of these stars as producers make money, many of them realize ere long that they were better off, or more successful, as employers or business people. We quite agree that many stars find out that they are not as great drawing cards as they thought themselves and at the same time learn that it is not as easy to exploit themselves as it is to be exploited and sustained by a well-known and equipped organization.

We are inclined to think the gentleman in Alabama is a bit old-fashioned and chivalrous. We used to think as he did, but we have found out there is not much sentiment in business. His argument in the abstract, for loyalty to the director and producer who make a star, is good. We all preach loyalty, but very few practice it, and we conclude that we are not retained for services rendered but for service we render and it behooves most of us to look out for number one. We ourselves wish it were otherwise, but unfortunately we are dealing with facts, not theories.

We think you are right, Mr. Exhibitor of Alabama; twenty-five and fifty cents is too much to pay for an ordinary feature picture. We touched upon this question in last week's edition of this publication in our article "Long Runs Not Generally Practicable." We also agree with you that something will have to be done in rectifying the many problems your letter mentions. It will take time and a great deal of thoughtful study to adjust things to the betterment of the whole industry and the benefit of all concerned. Let us hope that all our troubles will cease with the dawn of peace.

Shootly to Shoestrings!

By George Blaisdell.

WE LIVE to learn. Never again when we see a society group on the screen will we be sure it is not an affair of Society (please note the big S), the Simon Pure article, that among those present are not the lineal descendants of that pluperfect coterie of Four Hundred, one time invented by Ward McAlister, the prime minister of all publicity agents, by and with the advice and consent of Mrs. Astor. Really, now, this is serious. Heretofore we have been inclined, nay forced, to believe when looking on a screen bonton gathering that it must have been composed of human beings, common, ordinary, everyday persons, only too glad to shine for a day that the landlord might be kept quiet or quieter, that the groceryman might get something on account. No more are those happy days.

The person responsible for this new condition is Adolph Klauber, "who engages artists for Goldwyn." To Mr. Klauber fell the duty of gathering a number of "smart" women to participate in the portrayal of a restaurant scene, a Fifth Avenue restaurant scene, we hasten to amend. He despaired of finding "among the hordes of job-seeking extras that haunt the studios in Fort Lee and the employment offices in New York" the types called for by a certain script. Now be it known Mr. Klauber is a newspaper man. We say this advisedly—we know that he is; we know that he is not in the near class; that he is not one of those who on a rare and historic occasion for two consecutive and palpitating hours thought he held a job on a country weekly and thereafter on many a manufactured occasion talked boisterously about "us journalists." Nothing like that at all. Mr. Klauber put in many years on one of the world's great newspapers, for a long time as dramatic editor and critic.

We repeat, Mr. Klauber is a newspaper man. Therefore he has imagination, he has ideas that pulse with life. To "sixteen charming women living on Upper Fifth Avenue and the West Side" he sent invitations to be the guests of Mary Marsh at a luncheon at Sherry's. It is duly chronicled that, whether out of curiosity or not, fourteen accepted. For Mary, of course, the sophisticated MOVING PICTURE WORLD subscriber already has read Mae. But the sight of the wonderfully animated face of the brilliant little player rung no bells in the back of the heads of her "smart" guests, however, until the moment she chose to reveal her identity, what time the luncheon party of four tables was well under way. Then the star threw herself on the mercies of the fourteen—and introduced Mr. Klauber. That gentleman's eloquent description of the troubles of finding girls who could successfully imitate Fifth Avenue's own daughters on the screen, his relation of the harrowing difficulties attendant upon bringing clearly and unerringly to the "great heart of the simple multitude" a representative group of "smart" Fifth Avenue New Yorkers, so appealed to these four-tabled guests that, to use an idiom we understand if they do not, they fell for it—fell hard.

Here enters the Press Agent. He started this tale; let him finish it:

> As a result, Miss Marsh will be supported in her newest Goldwyn Picture by an even dozen New York society girls, one of whom will inherit one of America's greatest fortunes, and still another of whom is a member of a family connected with the ownership and management of one of America's greatest railroads.
> Mr. Klauber, who paid the check, would not advise executives of average motion picture companies to engage players wholesale through the medium of luncheons at Sherry's, even though his first effort of this kind proved eminently successful—though costly.

While the majority of the story contained much of genuine promise, even the unobservant will not fail to detect in the last paragraph a distinct threat. In words crystalline yet admantine the Press Agent warns all pretenders or base imitators: "Shoofly to Shoestrings!" In other words, if you have less than a million dolllars don't trespass.

Let us not all despair, however. We yet have with us Childs', the Automat, the one-armed places, the Owl wagons, the standy-uppo oyster counters and Beefsteak John's. And the free lunch. So it follows naturally, easily, that for those who cannot issue invitations "Will you lunch with me at Sherry's?" all is not lost. The elevated still reaches Chatham Square.

Blessed be he who maketh to grow two blades of grass where thrived but one before—and may beneficences descend upon the engager of artists and the Press Agent who contribute something new to a jaded industry.

We have said Mr. Klauber was a newspaper man. Come to think of it, he was something of a Press Agent before he broke into newspaper work. Thus are all things in the end made clear.

Screen Club Holds a Beefsteak

Sixscore Members Enjoy Excellent Entertainment—Roscoe Arbuckle Guest of Honor.

SCREEN CLUBBERS hit their high line in an entertainment way on the night of Saturday, March 31. The immediate occasion was a beefsteak dinner, with Roscoe Arbuckle as the guest of honor. It was necessary to stop reservations after sixscore had been recorded, and as a result many were disappointed. The dinner was served in the grillroom. On the first floor, the parlor, a three-foot stage had been constructed at the rear. This new property, together with equipment of footlights, curtain and other accessories, was the gift of the Rolfe Photoplay Company. At the front, through the courtesy of Will C. Smith of the Nicholas Power Company, a 6B cameragraph had been installed. It was the first time a picture had been put on in the new home of the club, and it was finely projected.

Mr. Smith, who is the treasurer of the club, acted as master of ceremonies. After the dinner was "stowed" the members moved upstairs, where many favorable comments were passed upon the effective transformation of the parlors into a theater. The first number on the program was the singing by all of "The Star Spangled Banner." The next was a trombone solo from a skilled member of the Instrumental Three from the Cocoanut Grove. Then came "The Waiters' Ball," a Keystone two-reel comedy, featuring the guest of the evening. It was thoroughly enjoyed by the Screeners. Mr. Arbuckle told of his experiences in his recent trip across the country and also related a few stories.

Alan Hale told stories, Bob Miller sang, and Lou Anger gave in dialect a monologue which touched on the international situation. Then came two songs by the Screen Club Octette. Justly proud are the Screeners of this new combination, one worthy to be featured in any public entertainment the club may elect to put on. It is composed of: First tenors, "Doc" Johnson and Johnnie Walker; second tenors, Jackson Harvey and Harry Benham; baritones, John Lampe and C. Jay Williams; basses, Lee Walker and Arthur Morrison. Messrs. Benham and Harvey were most effective as soloists.

The final number was "The Editor," the sketch written by Epes W. Sargent, originally presented at the dinner in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the Moving Picture World. It was finely staged by Sheldon Lewis. Mr. Lewis was the Editor; Louis Haynes was Abie, the Office Boy; Jim Cunningham was the Scenario Writer, and Willie Harvey was the Lady. The snappy dialogue kept the party in high good humor all the way.

Vice-President Edwin Carewe, in the absence of President Quirk, presided. After the conclusion of the entertainment Mr. Carewe announced that the entertainments would be held once each month.

Brandt Heads Brooklyn League

Election of Officers Held March 31 Raises Him to Presidency

On Saturday night, March 31, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Brooklyn, N. Y., held its regular meeting for the election of officers for the ensuing year and the transaction of general business. The following elections were made: President, William Brandt; first vice-president, Rudolph Sanders; second vice-president, H. Clark Mooney; treasurer, Robert Israel; financial secretary, William Bland; recording secretary, Samuel Lesselbaum; sergeant-at-arms, Adolph Stockheimer; Board of Directors, John Manheimer, Otto Lederer, J. Schaeffer, M. W. Lane, William Hollender, Henry Haring, Charles Craniders.

The reading of the treasurer's report showed the League to be in a very flourishing condition, after the payment of all indebtedness there being a balance of $1,500 still on deposit to the credit of the league. A resolution was passed by the league condemning the use of the screen in motion picture theatres for the display of pictures which court notoriety for any person or persons, on birth control or any other subject that is sensational or objectionable. A copy of the resolution will be published in next week's issue of the Moving Picture World.

HAMPTON TO REPRESENT BEACH COMPANY.

The Rex Beach Pictures Company has been incorporated under the laws of the state of Maine for $500,000 and has been authorized to transact business in New York state. Ben B. Hampton, of 440 Fourth avenue, New York City, is named as the company's representative. Mr. Hampton is at present at the head of the General Film Company, but it is rumored that he will shortly resign that position to take a more active part in the Rex Beach Pictures Company.

BACKER HAS A SECRET.

Franklyn E. Backer, president of the Mammoth Film Corporation, is in Washington, D. C., for a limited period in connection with his various State right activities. In this instance he is supervising the launching of an exceptional venture in filmdom, more concerning which will be given the public at a later date.

JASPER LEAVES HORSLEY.

John Jasper, for the past year manager of the David Horsley Studios, has resigned, according to an announcement coming from Mr. Horsley. The resignation will take effect March 31st. His successor has not yet been appointed.

The Sunday Picture Question

By Rev. Wm. H. Jackson

A Review of the Hearing Before the Codes Committee of the New York Legislature

A REPORT of the proceedings in Albany having appeared in the last issue of the Moving Picture World, it remains for the writer to review the whole situation as it stands as a problem for the consideration of those interested in the Sunday question on general principles. That the "hearing" was not a satisfactory one must be generally conceded. While circumstances rather than individuals were to blame, it did seem that where a legislative body appointed a set time for a definite matter, and knowing that men of affairs to whom time is of importance had given a whole day for the purpose of making a reasonable appeal, to so delay the opening of the hearing until it was only possible to allow one hour to each side, was not justice either to the importance of the cause, or to the parties interested.

A Proper Presentation Impossible.

Although the opponents of the use of Sunday pictures had the right of opening, they were crippled by the announcement of the limited time and so were unable to present many of their arguments which they depended upon, and which we of the other side were anxious to hear for the purpose of dealing with them in reply. The public in general, and those most interested in particular, are entitled to the fullest possible debate upon matters of such vital interest to so large a class of people; without proper presentation of the views it seems impossible to come to a sufficient knowledge of all those issues upon which so great and valuable decision depends. The friends of the moving pictures were further hindered because when their turn came, the time had to be still further shortened and remarks had to be limited to seven, three, and at last to one minute each.

The Moral Issues Involved.

Interrupting one of the clerical opponents of the bill a Senator demanded to know "what distinction he made between Sunday pictures for the poor man and Sunday golf for the rich man, as a moral issue." To this the clergyman would only answer "irrelevant"; thus, while associating the moving picture with possible Sunday evils of all kinds, the opponents sheltered themselves behind the plea of irrelevancy when failure of argument seemed evident. The old plea of indecent pictures was advanced with the charge that in seeking Sunday opening, the picture interests were sacrificing "Decency for Dollars." This accusation was very ably met by William A. Brady, the well known producer, who contended that the moving picture people themselves would be the first to send any man to Sing Sing who in producing pictures gave preference to that which was essentially indecent.

It was very noticeable that none of the opponents of the Sunday measure gave the pictures credit for any moral or educational values, the whole burden of their arguments rested upon a criticism of moving pictures in general; neither did they in any way consider the thousands of people to whom the pictures might be a source of intelligent and moral uplift if properly used; being absorbed by the interests of the church, they forgot the interests of the people at large. It may properly be mentioned that Canon Chase based his opposition upon the payment of an admission rather than the exhibition of the pictures, he himself being a user of the pictures on Sunday. Had time permitted, this argument would have been met by our article, "Commercialized or Subsidized," as given in a recent issue of the Moving Picture World; copies of this article were, however, distributed among the members of the Codes Committee.

The Spirit of the Opposition.

It is to be regretted that the spirit of the opposition was so very violent. A crowded gallery of church people primed with applause for their own side and with hisses for their opponents, evidenced a predetermined course of procedure far from commendable from the class of people they represented. On the contrary, the conduct of the moving picture people and their supporters was above reproach and conspicuously to their credit. The flagrant breach of good taste occurred when Peter Brady, speaking in behalf of the State Federation of Labor, criticised the subsidizing of religious movements by capitalists, was given the "lie" by a clergyman. Mr. Brady, however, made good his contention and spoke most creditably of the desire of the workingman to have the full use of the pictures for the good of himself and his family. His contention that "the movies had done more to keep the families of the working men united than any other form of amusement," was both timely and potent; his tribute to the educational value of the pictures was an admirable one. The Rev. George R. Lunn who, besides being a clergyman, is a Congressman and Mayor of Schenectady, was booed when it was found that he was in favor of the Sunday pictures. His rebuke of the occupants of the gallery for their discourteous treatment was very effective, and did much to put an end to such conduct. Mayor Lunn gave his experience as to the right effect of Sunday pictures, adding that he had won the ministers of his city to his way of thinking. He also said that when the picture houses were closed crimes of the smaller yet irritating character increased.

In Favor of the Pictures.

That the picture interests were not more fully presented was only because of the lack of time, and it must be admitted that, in this respect, the cause suffered considerably almost to the extent of making the hearing an unfavorable one. Should the bill fail in passing there can be little doubt that this will count as one of the strong causes. The speech of William A. Brady was a most commendable one and entirely convincing; he spoke as a man interested in the making of good pictures and whose whole family were interested in church work. It remained for the speakers in favor of the bill to draw attention to the educational features of moving pictures, also their anti-evil powers in that they are the enemy of the saloon and that they provide places of recreation for the vast army of people to whom the churches as such have no place in their lives, and for whom the coming of the moving pictures has been a great blessing. The writer was enabled in the few minutes allotted to him to contend favorably on behalf of the working classes as unwilling Sabbath-breakers, arguing that the privileges of the rich should not enable them to enjoy opportunities denied by these proposed Sunday laws to the working classes. He further showed that a properly regulated Sunday program could be made exceedingly uplifting in character, further contending that he had invariably found that when ministers had looked thoroughly into the standing of the picture question they lost much of their previous antagonism. He further showed that prejudice stultified their knowledge, thereby unwittingly causing them to appear as enemies of the working classes.

Unexpected Support from Indiana.

The last speaker was Senator McCray, who introduced the Sunday picture bill in the Indiana legislature, where it had passed both houses. He gave the reasons for the stand he had taken as found in his own experiences, and spoke of the support he received from certain ministers of the State, three of whom are members of either the Senate or Assembly. In conclusion the writer was enabled to read into the record of the proceedings a letter from the Governor of Indiana, giving his reasons for signing the Sunday opening bill. It may be added that Governor Goodrich is the leader of one of the largest Bible classes in the State. The Governor's letter, answering a request that he veto the Indiana Sunday picture bill, follows:

Dear Sir: I have your letter of March 4th and note what you say about the Sunday moving picture bill, and yet my inclination is to sign the bill.

To be perfectly frank with you, I think there is considerable force in the argument in favor of the moving picture shows operating in the large cities on Sunday afternoons under proper regulation. There are a number of pictures with a distinctly educational, moral and religious value. Tens of thousands of working men in this State put in ten hours a day with no time whatever for recreation; it is the one opportunity they have to spend a little time with their families, and under the right sort of censorship I am sure that moving pictures might be made not only not harmful but really helpful.

I confess that I have a prejudice that is born and bred in me against anything of that sort on the Sabbath, but I cannot close my eyes to the fact that under existing circumstances not 1 per cent. of the people in our cities go to church; you can not drive them there. To close down places of this kind Sunday afternoons only creates a bitterness toward church organizations, and in the end makes it difficult for the church to reach them.

We are to have prohibition in Indiana. We hope to close down all places of evil and make our cities decent places in which to live. I believe our churches could have more influence over the people if they could realize that the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath, and anything that contributes to his moral, intellectual, social and religious development is lawful on the Sabbath.

I have been keeping in touch with the Church Federation here, and any bill that meets my approval will be agreed upon by them.

Very truly yours,
J. P. GOODRICH, Governor.

The Speech of William A. Brady

Address Made at the Hearing Before the Codes Committee of the New York Legislature on the Sunday Picture Bill.

SPEAKING in favor of the passage of a measure before the New York Legislature to legalize the exhibition of pictures on Sunday, William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, delivered a most pointed address on the subject. A stenographic record of his remarks was not obtainable for publication in the report of those proceedings printed in last week's issue of the Moving Picture World. Though belated, Mr. Brady's words are none the less interesting and forceful:

Mr. Chairman, Gentlemen of the Committee, Ladies and Gentlemen: I stand here representing the motion picture industry of the United States in all of its parts. Representing every portion of the motion picture industry, and standing here in that position, I resent the statements made by certain gentlemen here today that the motion picture industry as a whole is what it was described to be by many speakers on the other side. I claim as much right and as much respect to the name of God and to the observation of Sunday as any gentleman wearing clerical garb in this chamber; and I resent that any man should be permitted in the legislative halls in Albany to stand up and abuse an industry, a profession, its artists, and declare in one sentence that they are baneful, harmful and destructive to the youth of the United States.

I claim, as an expert who has catered to the theatrical and entertainment loving people of the United States for a longer period than any one other man in my profession, that during that time I have had the honor to produce plays like Way Down East, Little Women, the works of the immortal Shakespeare, every one of them more than any other manager in this country living now, or any other manager dead now. I have produced more respectable, more decent, more honest plays, more plays that created churchgoers, than any other American in my time. And I declare here, as an expert in entertainment, as a man who has followed and studied the movement and history of moving pictures, that no class of entertainment has ever been invented in the mind of man, has done more good for the people and for the youth than the so-called "movies." I must dispute the most honored and revered Canon Chase. I go to church on Sunday, my wife goes, my son, my daughter; yet, my wife is of the theater and my daughter is of the theater. There are no better churchgoers in the United States than my family. And I dispute the right of any minister of God to stand in this chamber and say to a workingman that after he finished with his church in the morning or Sunday school in the afternoon that he should have control of his rights for the rest of the day. The motion picture is doing more to make Sunday decent in the United States than all of the churches in the United States.

A previous speaker, Peter Brady, spoke to you as the representative of the laboring men. I claim he knows more about what is being done for his laborers' families than any churchman in the room. When he stated that more happy families, more men and women and their children have been brought together through the prominence and popularity of the motion pictures in this country than any other entertainment that has ever been invented, he knew whereof he spoke.

I claim that certain documents which were read here, one issued by the Alaska Players Company, is the sentiment of a respectable portion of the motion picture industry. I claim that if these gentlemen of the Sabbath day, these gentlemen that represent the best in the country, would only not oppose the motion picture industry, but would come to us and sit down with us like men and say, we believe you are doing these things that are vile, indecent and immoral, we would prove that the smallest percentage of our industry is doing it; and that we are against them harder than you are. I would vote to send to Sing Sing the man who would put an indecent thought or scene on the screen. You come to us constantly in a spirit of opposition. You try to characterize us all as "smut producers." We are not. We are the youngest and greatest industry in the world. The day will come when the doctrine of Christ will be taught in every school and college in the world by the aid of the motion picture. The day will come when the operations of great surgeons, when everything that can be taught, the animal, the flower, surgery, dentistry, shall be taught by the motion picture. Why try to strangle it? Why declare it is baneful by standing here and making use of these remarks?

I agree with Canon Chase that Sunday is the people's day. We are a democratic nation. In closing, I want to call attention to one remarkable thing about all the arguments made today. Our land is the land of the free. New York is the greatest melting pot in the world. Some of the most respected and honored citizens we have in the state of New York are not celebrators of Sunday. Why don't you close the pictures on Saturday and respect their day? I am a Christian, but I am also an American; and when you welcome those people to these shores you had no right to set a day that they should celebrate. They should be allowed to celebrate their day as they choose.

Will Not Consider Board of Reviews

Proposition to Make Voluntary Censors a State Board Not Favored at Albany.

STATE censorship through a Board of Reviews will be given no consideration by the Legislature this year. This has become a settled fact during the past week, when both Senator Elon R. Brown and Speaker Thaddeus Sweet of the Assembly informed Assemblyman Heber E. Wheeler that they preferred to accept his views on the subject as a result of the investigation which the latter made in the motion picture indusry during January and February. It is a well known fact that both Senator Brown and Speaker Sweet have been favorable to the idea of censorship.

As the outcome of investigations on the part of the Wheeler Committee, Assemblyman Wheeler has informed both leaders that he does not believe that censorship through a Board of Review is practical. Assemblyman Wheeler takes the stand that regulatory measures, such as are embodied in the bill that will be introduced in the Legislature during the next few days, will serve fully as a State board of censors. The main object of censorship, as Assemblyman Wheeler takes it, is to eliminate obscene and objectionable films before they are furnished to the public. The Wheeler bill will do identically the same thing if it is drafted and passed along the lines that are now intended.

Assemblyman Wheeler is himself against the passage of any bill legalizing Sunday movies. His attitude is well known in the Assembly and will probably make itself a decisive factor when the question of legalizing motion pictures on the Sabbath is put to vote. Several weeks ago, Assemblman Wheeler informed certain persons in New York City, who believed that the time was opportune for the passage of such a measure, that it was sure to go down in defeat in view of the opposition that had already manifested itself throughout the rural sections of the State.

Action on Sunday Bill Delayed.

There was no meeting of the Legislative Codes Committee last week for the purpose of acting on the Sunday motion picture proposition, owing to the Wagner-Mitchel affair, which demanded a large portion of the attention of both the Senate and members of the Codes committee. The meeting was originally scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, March 28th, but on that occasion the Senate remained in executive session until seven o'clock, preparing the order which will be followed on the appearance of Mayor Mitchel in this city next Tuesday.

Senator Charles Newton, chairman of the Codes committee, issued a call for a meeting Thursday afternoon, but it was then found that a majority of the senators and assemblymen had already departed for their homes for the week-end, making it necessary to further adjourn the meeting until some day next week. Senator Newton is chairman of the committee which is busy preparing the Mitchel procedure. C. L. GRANT.

Connecticut May Have Sunday Pictures

Local Option Bill Passed Both Houses of Legislature—Now in the Governor's Hands.

REPORT has been received that the Martin local option bill, permitting Sunday sports and motion pictures on Sunday, by referendum, in towns over 10,000, had been passed by the Connecticut Senate, 19 to 16. This bill went through the House by a vote of 137 to 89 on March 20, and will permit the motion picture theaters to be opened between 2 and 10 o'clock on Sunday afternoons and evenings. The amendment added to the bill in the House allowing the town of Milford to be included within the act, was passed by the Senate yesterday.

The bill now goes to Governor Marcus H. Holcomb for his signature, and it is understood the Governor will sign the measure promptly. This bill was introduced by Representative Charles J. Martin of Orange, and has been advocated by the Connecticut Liberal Sunday Committee of which M. J. Quinn, former State Senator, is chairman.

PORTER EMERSON BROWNE WITH GOLDWYN.

Porter Emerson Browne, author, playwright and famous novelist as well as the creator of the now famous vampire type of picture, has signed a three-year contract giving his exclusive screen services to Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. This contract is effective at once and he will, on April 1, deliver his first manuscript to Goldwyn for production.

Wheeler Bill Delayed

Prospects of Revenue Are Fading Away and Tax Feature May be Abandoned

OWING to the fact that both Senator Harvey D. Hinman and his law partner, Roger P. Clark, were unable to reach Albany before Wednesday, March 28th, the Wheeler bill, which is intended to bring about certain regulatory measures in the motion picture industry, will not be introduced in the Legislature before April 3d or 4th. It was the original intention of the Wheeler committee to have the bill in such shape that it could be introduced this week. A copy of the report of the committee and likewise certain data were left with Robert Cummings of the State Bill Drafting Commission several days ago. According to Mr. Cummings these data were not in such shape that a bill could be formulated. Senator Hinman was requested to meet with the Bill Drafting Commission last Monday.

At that time Mr. Hinman was in the Middle West and his partner was in Philadelphia. The first move toward shaping the bill was made Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Clark reached Albany Wednesday morning and immediately conferred with Mr. Cummings. Senator Hinman came to Albany directly from Cincinnati and that afternoon a lengthy conference was held at which members of the Wheeler committee and the State Bill Drafting Commission were present. From indications late that afternoon it appeared probable that the bill will be whipped into shape within the next few days.

There may be a new provision embodied in the bill. Assemblyman Wheeler stated on Wednesday that certain of the motion picture representatives had suggested to him that a section similar to one contained in the Federal Trade Commission be worked into his bill in order that unfair competition might be legally handled in a way that would improve the general status of the industry.

Whether or not Mr. Wheeler approved of his measure he did not state, saying that he first desired to talk it over with members of his committee and with the counsel, Mr. Hinman. It was rumored, however, that the suggestion may become one of the features of the bill.

The outcome of the investigation on the part of the Wheeler committee has been rather disappointing to certain factions at the State Capitol who had been figuring all along that a tax might be imposed on the industry that would net the State a handsome revenue. There was talk heard around the corridors during the forepart of January that this revenue might run up as high as $500,000. This amount decreased in the passing of weeks until it dropped to $100,000 and then ceased altogether when Assemblyman Wheeler in his report asserted that he did not believe the motion picture industry should be subjected to any additional burdens just at the present time. With that single statement all hope vanished, at least for this year, of enriching the sadly depleted coffers of New York State.

From expressions heard in both the Senate and Assembly, there is little or no question as to the outcome of the Wheeler bill, even though its provisions have as yet not been clearly outlined. The bill containing but a comparatively few regulating measures will find no opposition such as would have been encountered had there been provisions calling for the taxation of the industry.

Carl Laemmle Back in New York

Universal President Returns from Two Months' Visit to His Company's Studios in Los Angeles.

AFTER an absence on the Pacific Coast of nearly two months, Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has taken up his work at his home desk at 1600 Broadway. When a World man dropped in on him last week, Mr. Laemmle declared he had enjoyed the eight weeks in Los Angeles, where, together with P. A. Powers and R. H. Cochrane, he had made a thorough study of manufacturing conditions on the west coast. Both of his associates are also back in New York. It was the first time since Universal City was opened, March 15, 1915, that the three had been there together.

"We are working hard to make better pictures than ever," said the Universal president. "We have given much attention to improvements in our Universal City plant. In the last year $100,000 has gone into increase in studio facilities. We have been saving our pennies for a 'rainy day,' as you might say. Putting it in another way, we have been building inclosed stages so that rainy weather will not seriously interfere with our operations. At the present time fifteen companies can work simultaneously under cover.

"Just now we are producing about twenty-five reels a week in California. That by no means represents our maximum. We laid off some companies when the rainy season came on, but prior to that we had at some periods sufficient companies at work to turn out thirty-six reels a week. You see, we are believers in preparedness."

Mr. Laemmle made but one stop on his return—at Chicago. Here the Universal president was much interested in the new Universal Film Exchange, situated on State street, which will be opened to the trade about April 15. Mr. Laemmle expressed the belief that it will be the finest exchange in the United States.

"While in Chicago I visited the Metropolitan Theater," said the Universal chief, "which to my mind is the best house in that city, if not in any other place. It is owned by Ascher Brothers, who control about ten theaters in that city. The week I was there the theater was showing a Bluebird, the Universal Screen Magazine and an L-Ko comedy."

ANTHONY P. KELLY NOT WITH EMPIRE.

Anthony P. Kelly wishes to emphatically deny a statement published recently in all of the trade papers to the effect that he had accepted the position of Scenario Editor for the newly-formed Empire All-Star Corporation, who are to produce the Charles Frohman successes in pictures.

Mr. Kelly states that he simply agreed to make several adaptations for the Empire All-Star Corporation, two of which have already been completed—the first entitled "Outcast," and the second "The Impostor."

PICTURE FOLK IN AUTO CRASH.

In a head-on automobile accident which took place on the Hudson Terrace Road between Fort Lee and Englewood, N. J., on a recent midnight, Joseph Kaufman and his wife, Ethel Clayton, very narrowly escaped fatal injuries, while driving to their apartment in the Englewood Inn, when they were struck by a limousine. Both cars were traveling at a comparatively slow rate of speed on account of the heavy fog, which is the only reason why the accident did not result more seriously. Mr. Kaufman was thrown forward and crashed through the glass front, receiving such severe cuts about the right eye and ear, chin and chest that he was immediately rushed to the Englewood hospital in another automobile, where many stitches were taken. Miss Clayton, sitting alongside her husband, was resting her knees against a box she was carrying, and escaped with only a slight bruise on her arms and shoulders. Joseph Kaufman and Miss Clayton are well known in motion picture circles. Mr. Kaufman has just directed George M. Cohan in his first motion picture production, now being shown in a Broadway theater, while Miss Clayton is a star working at the Peerless studio for the World Film Corporation.

HORSLEY RENEWS CONTRACT WITH FAHRNEY.

David Horsley has renewed his contract with Milton H. Fahrney, and the latter will continue to direct Cub Comedies for another long period of time. The new contract was signed March 15 and carries with it an increase in salary for the director, who has made a remarkable success of the Cub Comedy brand.

Mr. Fahrney has been associated with David Horsley productions for a greater length of time than any other attache of the plant. He was with Mr. Horsley when the latter first started to produce pictures in Bayonne, N. J., over ten years ago, and their paths have never parted, for Mr. Fahrney has either been with companies owned by Mr. Horsley or with enterprises in which Mr. Horsley was interested.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

WRITE US EARLY AND OFTEN

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD carries the most complete record of Exhibitors' News. This department aims at being the fullest and fairest chronicle of all the important doings in the ranks of organized exhibitors. To keep the department as complete and as useful as it is now we request the secretaries of all organizations to favor us with reports of all the news. Coming events in the ranks of the organized exhibitors are best advertised in this department of the Moving Picture World.

EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE ORGANIZER.

In answer to recent inquiries in regard to the Exhibitors' League Organizations and for the information of exhibitors in any of the States, readers will kindly note that Fred J. Herrington is National Organizer for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. All correspondence on the subject may be addressed to him at 310 McCance Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Oregon Exhibitors Organize

Theater Men Meet at Portland and Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Oregon Is Formed—Is Composed of Exhibitors Only.

FOLLOWING upon the announcement that the Oregon Motion Picture Men's Association was dead comes the news of the founding of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Oregon. While the old organization was composed of exchange men, exhibitors and all of the state's film fraternity, the membership in the new league is confined solely to exhibitors.

The league was formally launched at an exhibitors' meeting at the Broadway Theater, Portland, on Thursday, March 22. More enthusiasm was displayed at this meeting than at any former meeting of film men, the exhibitors say, and the organization promises to be successful. Meetings will be held every two weeks at the rooms of the organization in the Majestic Theater building and a permanent business manager will be employed. All the city's first houses and most of the second run are in the league.

The officers of the organization are: C. W. Meighan, of the People's Theater, president; W. A. Graeper, Union Avenue Theater, first vice-president; T. G. Bligh, Salem, Oregon, second vice-president; A. H. McDonald, Eugene, Ore., third vice-president; C. G. Matlock, Pendleton, Oregon, fourth vice-president; Guy Robinson, Yeager Theater, Portland, secretary; J. J. Parker, Majestic Theater, treasurer; E. J. Myrick, Columbia Theater, chairman executive committee. The out-of-town men represent the different sections of the state.

A resolution was also adopted standing by the pay-in-advance system, also condemning the indecent and obscene picture.

A real moving picture ball with film stars in attendance is in contemplation.

In the words of President Meighan, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Oregon has not been organized to fight exchanges. Co-operation will be the keynote of the league's work and Mr. Meighan hopes that by co-operation the "bad" exhibitor will be made "good" or eliminated from the industry entirely. The matter of enforcement of contracts made by exhibitors will come up soon and steps will be taken to provide a system to compel exhibitors to live up to the service contracts made by exhibitors will come up soon and steps will be taken to provide a system to compel exhibitors to live up to the service contracts they make.

Lee A. Ochs, president of the National Exhibitors' League, was present and gave material assistance in the work of organization.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors who came to Portland to attend the meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League were J. B. Sparks, Star Theater, Heppner, Oregon; A. H. McDonald, Rex Theater, Eugene, Oregon, and George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon. A number of salesmen from Seattle were also on hand to dispense hospitality in the line of punch and smokes at the meetings.

St. Louis Exhibitors Hold Smoker

Picture Men Addressed by Mayor Kiel and Rabbi Harrison, Who Commend Pictures.

ACTIVE and associate members of the Theater Managers and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of St. Louis to the number of 125 met in a friendly all around get-together smoker and luncheon on March 22 in the big dining room of the Mercantile Club.

A good lunch was served and speeches were made by Mayor Henry Kiel, Rabbi Leon Harrison and Richard Spamer, dramatic critic of the Globe Democrat. After lunch was served and disposed of in the only manner that a bunch of hungry exhibitors can dispose of lunch, and cigars were going good, Joseph Mogler, president of the Association, started the speechmaking.

Mayor Kiel reviewed the moving picture business and spoke of how it had grown from nothing—twenty years ago—to be the fourth largest industry today. Mayor Kiel also said that two years ago his office was cluttered up with people every few days who came to make complaints against the character of films being run in the city, while last year not a single complaint was filed.

Rabbi Leon Harrison, widely known as a speaker and orator, made a talk that showed deep knowledge of the subject. He said that the picture business was much like any other business, that the exhibitor was in busines to make money, and to do that he must give the people the kind of films they want to see. He said he did not think people wanted to see salacious films any more than they wanted to read that kind of books, and that the wise film man would not take a chance on ruining his business by showing bad films any quicker than the book dealer would risk injuring his business by exposing questionable books for sale.

He said further that he was a consistent theater visitor, and that the films he had seen in St. Louis would grade ninety-nine per cent. fine in point of moral character; he added, however, that the other one per cent. was present in many instances, and advised a careful weeding out of all objectionable pictures.

Rabbi Harrison told the exhibitors that the remedy and preventative for the censorship which threatened the industry was in their own hands; that they could mold public opinion one way or the other by the class of the pictures used and the way their houses were managed.

The luncheon was a huge success from every standpoint and the Association officials say it will be repeated in the near future.

BRONX EXHIBITORS MEET.

The Cinema Exhibitors' Association of Bronx County, Bronx Local No. 2, M. P. E. L. of A., held a special business meeting at its headquarters, 1243 Southern Boulevard, Bronx, on Tuesday, March 27, at 11 a. m.

The legislative committee who went to Albany on March 21 for the hearing on the "Sunday Opening Bill" made their report to the association. The committee was composed of President J. J. Wittman, Secretary Henry Cole and A. B. Samuelson.

Harry Robitzek, counsel of the association, was re-elected counsel for the third consecutive term of one year, which speaks well for the service he has rendered this organization. A regular meeting of the association was held on Thursday, March 29, at 11 p. m.

Washington Exhibitors Meet

Hold Big Convention at Seattle With Many Theater Men Present—President Ochs Attends and Talks.

LEE A. OCHS, National M. P. E. L. president, reached Seattle in the course of his transcontinental tour on March 17th, and was present at the third annual convention of the Washington Theater Managers' Association on March 19th and 20th. Representative exhibitors from every important city and town in the state attended the convention, and the exchange men of Seattle also accepted the invitation extended to them by the state organization. The place of meeting was the banquet room of the Butler Hotel, and John von Herberg, manager of the Liberty theater, Seattle, presided. As soon as the meeting was called to order on the first day of the convention Mr. von Herberg introduce the M. P. E. L. president.

Mr. Ochs' Speech.

Mr. Ochs spoke at some length on the benefits to be derived by exhibitors from joining the National League, suggesting three main issues in which they would profit by organization. These were, in the order in which he touched upon them, first, the question of deposits; second, the reduction of film rental; third, the question of the passage of laws harmful to the picture industry.

The Deposit System Hurts the Little Fellow as Well as the Big One.

The question of deposits Mr. Ochs declared to be a serious affair. He cited the instance of one firm which had $40,000 tied up in deposits, and of others with a correspondingly large amount thus rendered useless to them. But the little exhibitor he declared to be the object of the greatest concern, since this was the class of showman who most needed the use of his cash in making necessary improvements on his theater. Mr. Ochs concluded his argument against deposits by urging that a resolution against them be passed at the convention. He also urged the passage of another resolution against questionable and obscene pictures.

In the Power of Exhibitors to Reduce Film Cost.

The high cost of film is due, according to Mr. Ochs, to the expensive system, or rather lack of system of distribution.

"I don't know of any firm making over $10,000 on a regular program picture," he said. "The average production cost amounts to about $30,000, but the manufacturer's inefficient distributing system almost doubles this cost. If we, as organized exhibitors, could give the producer 20 to 30 days we could say to him, 'We'll pay you 50 per cent. on your expenses,' that would be $45,000 on the average program picture. We'd be giving him more profit than he ever made before, and we'd be saving ourselves enough to enable us to make decent profits once in awhile."

He called attention to the fact that Stanley Mastbaum, of Philadelphia, because he buys in quantities and can give the producer 75 to 100 days, gets film at 50 cents on the dollar. Lowe, of New York, does the same thing. The little exhibitors, by getting together, can make even better terms, because they can give more time, declared the speaker.

Combined Exhibitors Can Block Passage of Harmful Laws.

As an example of the power of combined exhibitors in fighting laws that would hurt the industry Mr. Ochs cited the state organization of North Carolina, which, by its own efforts, blocked the passage in Congress of the bill levying a tax of one-half of one per cent. on the gross receipts of the box office.

"If an organization from one state can accomplish so much benefit to the trade, think what a league embracing all the states could do!"

Talks About His Trade Paper.

The National League president explained that in his fight against the Board of Trade, an organization of producers and distributors who were planning a fair and convention in opposition to the exhibitors' annual convention, the other trade papers refused to support him.

"I realized then," he said, "the need of a paper to represent the exhibitors, and I conceived the idea of the Exhibitors' Trade Review. I went out to get the best men I could find to help me make it a success. I took W. Stephen Bush from the World, Merritt Crawford and Leslie Mason from the News, and several others just as efficient for their individual work. I put up $30,000 of my own money to back the publication, and divided the stock into three parts. The National League was to have one-third of the stock, the workers one-third, and the other third was to be sold. The number of workers between whom one-third was divided was five. I was one of them. Thus you will see that I got one fifteenth of the common stock, which was 300 shares. This tour through the Northern and Western states I am making at my own expense, while the Exhibitors' Trade Review is also paying the expenses of Mr. Bush in his trip through the Southern states.

"We want the Trade Review to be the national spokesman of the league. Anything from a branch in this state or any other will be published in it. If you want to advertise a convention from this state we would publish it as quickly as we would the national convention.

"Don't stay on the outside and knock the league. Come in and help. If you don't like the officers don't stay out on that account. Come in and vote them out. It's only through organization that the exhibitors will win. If we only eliminate the deposit system, that's something. You can't do it locally."

C. R. Seelye, business manager of Pathe exchanges, was next presented to the audience.

Mr. Seelye's Speech.

Mr. Seelye began by congratulating Seattle exhibitors on their progressive methods and telling them of several coming young exhibitors in other parts of the U. S. who had been inspired by them.

He admitted that Mr. Ochs was right in saying that there was a great deal of waste in the producing and distributing end of the business, but stated that they were trying to eliminate it as much as possible, and that he, for one, hoped to reduce it to a minimum by taking in other concerns so as to enlarge the weekly output of his organization. That other producing companies were on the road to a similar solution of the problem Mr. Seelye declared he had good reason to believe.

"It is my opinion that the motion picture industry will soon be divided into three big branches," said the Pathe manager. "First, there will be just a few exchanges each releasing 30 to 50 reels a week. Then there will be a string of theaters operated by Wall street. The third branch will be the exhibitors already in the business, that is, if they organize. If they don't the big fellows are going to swallow them up."

Mr. Seelye emphasized the importance of big things that do good by their power. He deplored the fact that some exhibitors, because they had big interests behind them and so could buy film cheap, would sell to their less fortunate fellows at an exorbitant profit. He pointed out how in other businesses big organizations had been able to reduce waste by eliminating the long string of middlemen, and advised exhibitors to profit by their examples and by organization help to eliminate the waste in film distribution.

"I want to see every exhibitor join the National League," he concluded. "Ochs may have made mistakes, but he has done a 'whale' of a lot of good. And even if he wasn't good, I'd say join; because it's like telling the immigrant in this country that he ought to become a citizen of the United States."

At the end of Mr. Seelye's speech a motion was immediately made by W. S. Quinby, of Bellingham, that the Washington organization join the National League. The motion was carried unanimously.

Mr. Ochs expressed his pleasure and his desire to do anything he could to help the exhibitors of Washington. He announced the National Convention for July 14 to 22, at which five delegates were to be allowed from each state, and an additional delegate for each 25 members in the state branch.

Just before the meeting was adjourned Mr. von Herberg announced an executive meeting of the state association to follow immediately, and invited Mr. Ochs to be present.

Resolutions Adopted by Washington Exhibitors.

A copy of the resolutions adopted at this meeting follows:

WHEREAS, It has been the policy of the manufacturers, through the motion picture film distributors, to exact an advance deposit on film service, which deposit has been paid and is now in the hands of the several companies; and

WHEREAS, This deposit system works an injury on the exhibitors generally, by reducing their working capital, and casts a reflection on their commercial credit, and in other ways is entirely undesirable; and

WHEREAS, It is well known that the credit of exhibitors is in the main entirely stable and they pay, or are prepared to pay in advance for all film service; therefore, it is

RESOLVED, That after April 1, 1917, the Washington Theatre Managers' Association and the membership thereof individually demand a discontinuance of the deposit system, and also that upon that date such deposits as are now held, whether in money, notes, bonds, or other collateral, shall be returned to the depositor, either in kind as deposited, or if cash is on deposit, same may apply on current service. It is further

RESOLVED, That unless action is taken by the several companies affected, in conformity with this resolution, that after the above date the said Washington Theater Managers' Association and the membership thereof shall proceed as rapidly as possible to bring to a conclusion all existing contracts by cancellation of service.

(Signed) Washington Theater Managers' Association.

The Second Day of the Convention.

At one o'clock on March 20 the exhibitors and exchange men of Washington again met in the banquet room of the Butler Hotel. After an excellent luncheon, which promoted the feeling of good fellowship between everybody, Mr. Ochs was again asked to address them. Following Mr. Ochs, Mr. Seelye also spoke again. He finished his talk with the announcement that F. C. Quimby, Seattle Pathe manager, had been promoted to the position of Northwestern Division Manager, with headquarters in Seattle, and jurisdiction over all of Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho.

This brought great applause from the audience, since Mr. Quimby is probably the best liked exchange man in Seattle.

H. G. Rosebaum, of Artcraft, and C. F. Hill, of Triangle, were each asked to say a few words to the exhibitors. They both expressed a sincere desire to co-operate with the exhibitors in any way and at any time that they could be of assistance to them. The meeting was then adjourned.

Mr. Ochs left at midnight for Portland, where he will meet the exhibitors of Oregon.

A list of those attending the convention follows:

A. Anderson, Apollo theater, Tacoma; J. Lewis Arnold, Star theater, Bellingham; W. P. Brown, Nifty theater, Waterville; R. W. Cram, Arcade theater, Walla Walla; J. Q. Clemmer, Clemmer theater, Seattle; John Danz, High Class theater, Seattle; L. A. Drinkwine, Palace theater, Tacoma; F. V. Fisher, Greater Theaters Co., Seattle; D. Herman, representative of the Wurlitzer organ, Cincinnatti; Edward J. Fisher, Fisher Booking Agency, Seattle; A. Kennedy, publisher of the Amusement Record, Seattle; G. F. Vradenburg, publisher of the Spectator, Seattle.

Organizing in Pennsylvania

Exhibitors of Fayette County Get Together at Uniontown—Officers Elected.

AN ORGANIZATION of the moving picture exhibitors and other amusement interests of Fayette County was formed on March 25, at Uniontown, Pa., where a meeting was held for the purpose of protesting against the bill now pending before the State legislature prohibiting children under 16 years of age from attending moving picture theaters or other places of amusement unless accompanied by an adult. Resolutions were also passed opposing other such legislation and the Federal and State taxes imposed. Sessions were held in the West End theater building Saturday evening and Sunday.

Fred J. Herrington, national organizer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, G. A. Sahner, president of the Pennsylvavnia State Exhibitors' League, and Henry Poke, owner of a chain of theaters in the Pittsburgh district, were present in behalf of the Exhibitors' League. Other exhibitors in attendance were C. M. McCloskey, of the Pastime, Harry Ansell, of the Imp, Jesse W. Robe, of the Dixie, Harry Beeson, of the West End, all of Uniontown; Thomas Wright, of the Bison and Strand, E. Hommel, of the Arcade, Brownsville Earl S. Porter, Dawson; C. H. Balsley, C. A. Wagner, Mrs. Fred Robbins, of Connelsville; Theodore Mikalowsky, Masontown.

Fred J. Herrington made the principal address, pointing out the evils of "class" legislation and its detriment to the moving picture industry in particular. He showed how the proposed law barring children from places of amusement would have just the opposite effect from what its framers intended, since among other things it will encourage vice by making possible the requests of children upon strangers to take them into picture shows and will lead to a tendency on the part of children to lie and falsify their age.

The organization affected is as follows: Harry B. Cochran, chairman; Harry Beeson, secretary; Earl S. Porter, C. W. Johnson and Harry Beeson, committee on by-laws. Plans were made for another meeting to be held within the next two weeks.

Choose Headquarters for 1917 Exposition

Manager Schindler Opens Offices in Masonic Temple—N. A. M. P. I. Selects Chicago for Annual Meeting.

HEADQUARTERS for the 1917 National Exposition of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America have been established by Ludwig Schindler, manager, on the fourteenth floor of the Masonic Temple, Chicago, and within a week preparations for the annual event will be in full swing.

Mr. Schindler has tackled the task of managing the exposition in the characteristic Schindler way, and the Schindler way is action, lots of it. Many of the minor preliminaries are already out of the way. He is now selecting his aids, although he is going at that task slowly, for he wants to have the most efficient available staff to help him. His next move is going to be a direct appeal to the producers and accessory manufacturers to make an early reservation of space in order that the exposition may be more thoughtfully planned than most affairs of its kind are.

Mr. Schindler will make an aggressive campaign to line up every possible exhibit at the earliest possible hour, on the theory that by having his big exhibits arranged so soon in advance he will be able to make the exposition more complete and produce better results for the exhibitors.

The 1917 exposition manager is not going to be content with merely a large list of exhibits. He is going to make a drive, in co-operation with the exhibitors at the show, to invite every theater owner in America to the 1917 exposition and convention and urge upon them to attend. To carry out this idea he has in mind, in conjunction with the National Executive Committee of the League, a plan to offer a prize to the local organization having the largest representation in Chicago July 14 to 22.

He is elated over the fact that the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has selected Chicago for its annual meeting and that the sessions will be held at the same time that the National Convention of Exhibitors meets. The two conventions will bring together in Chicago during the exposition week the big men in all the branches of the Motion Picture Industry.

The following committees have been appointed:

Finance—Peter J. Schaefer, Jones, Linick & Schaefer; Nathan Ascher, Ascher Brothers Theatrical Enterprises; Joseph Trinz, Lubliner & Trinz Enterprises.

Honorary—George H. Spoor, William N. Selig, George Kleine, John R. Freuler, Watterson Rothacker.

GEORGIA EXHIBITORS ORGANIZE.

The Georgia branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America was organized Friday, March 23, with every Atlanta exhibitor and many representatives from the state as members, at a meeting held at Atlanta.

The formation of the Georgia branch is a part of a campaign by the national body to bring the southern exhibitor into the fold. North Carolina already has a remarkably strong state association, but at the national meeting last year in Chicago only two southern states were represented—Mississippi and Florida.

The election of officers for the newly formed Georgia branch was announced as follows: President, Ralph DeBruler, manager of the Capitol theater, Macon; vice-president, John Evans, manager of the Strand and Vaudette theaters, Atlanta; secretary, Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Criterion theater, Atlanta.

MINNEAPOLIS EXHIBITORS SETTLE GRIEVANCES.

Most of the meeting of the Northwest exhibitor body at the West Hotel, Minneapolis, Minn, on March 20, was devoted to the settlement of several cases placed before the grievance committee of the organization. The case of Beyerstadt Brothers and William Pierce versus McClure Exchange was satisfactorily settled when Manager Sherrick of the McClure Exchange and William Pierce, who joined the organziation for the purpose, appeared before the body and the grievance committee was able to get to the bottom of the difficulties in a hurry. "Seven Deadly Sins" had been booked to both the Beyerstadt Brothers and William Pierce at Rochester, Minn., because letters and telegrams, delayed because of climatic conditions, arrived at two different booking exchanges at the same time. A settlement was reached when Mr. Sherrick returned the exhibitors' checks and cancelled both bookings. The coming convention and the special midnight benefit matinee bill were also discussed at the meeting. About twenty-five members of the organization were present.

ASSOCIATION HUSTLING FOR MEMBERS.

The membership committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has inaugurated a new campaign for securing members with good results, as shown by the following report issued last week from the National Association Headquarters in the Times building. Among the companies which have filed applications for membership during the past week are: Benjamin Chapin, Ridgefield Park, N. J., as producer, Class B, to be represented by Miss Lucille Chapin; E. I. S. Motion Picture corporation, producer, Class C, to be represented by Dixon Boardman, president; Sanger Picture Plays corporation, producer, Class A, to be represented by Eugene Sanger.

Scores of individuals have been quick to respond to the appeal of the membership committee, with a result that nearly 100 applications were received during the past week.

Hashimura Togo on the Screen

Wallace Irwin's Celebrated "Japanese Schoolboy" to Be Presented by Lasky with Sessue Hayakawa in the Stellar Role.

ONE of the most important announcements which has emanated from the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company for some time is that which brings the news that Sessue Hayakawa, the celebrated Japanese star, is to be presented by Mr. Lasky in an adaptation of Wallace Irwin's famous character, Hashimura Togo, the Japanese School Boy. The adaptation is to be produced under the direction of William C. De Mille.

Sessue Hayakawa.

The production will be staged under the title of "Hashimura Togo" and surely there could be nothing more appropriate than the fact that he should be played by a real Japanese. The scenario of the production, which was written by Mr. Irwin himself, presents a wonderfully complete picture of the popular Hashimura and combines several of the most interesting episodes of the published stories with brilliant, new material. "Hashimura Togo" is scheduled for release by Paramount shortly after a production in which Fannie Ward is starred with Hayahawa supporting her, and which might be described as a sequel to "The Cheat."

Should this production meet with the success which Mr. Lasky anticipates, there is no question that other Hashimura Togo pictures will follow. An idea which has lived in the magazines and newspapers for several years should certainly be strong enough to carry several five-reel picture productions.

Hayakawa's wonderful interpretation of the stellar role in the Lasky adaptation of Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Bottle Imp" has gone far toward increasing the popularity of this already popular star.

EDDIE CORBETT GETS A SUPPER.

Eddie Corbett, film publicity expert, was tendered a supper party at Sherry's last Wednesday evening by a group of the picture producers whose trade advertisements and general newspaper publicity he has been and is directing. Besides its honor guest, the party included B. S. Moss, who has just signd Mrs. Margaret Sanger for a personal tour with a five reel "Birth Control" picture; L. L. Hiller, Jacob Wilk, N. H. Spitzer and Benjamin Friedman, for whom Mr. Corbett is ballyhooing "A Mormon Maid" and the new King Bee Billy West series; George Backer and George W. Lederer, who have entrusted the noising of attractiveness of the new Backer-Lederer film, "The Sin Woman," to the Corbett agency, and Edward Saunders, representing a special corporation and others.

GRIFFITH FILM NOT STOPPED IN OHIO.

The following is self-explanatory:

Editor Moving Picture World:

Presuming that you would like to know the truth about the film, "The Birth of a Nation," I wish to correct your statement in the World for March 31, in which you state the Legislature of Ohio had unanimously voted to prevent its being shown in this State, and that it is now up to the Governor to sign or veto the bill.

That is not the truth. A. Lee Beatty, the negro member of the lower House of the Legislature, made a plea for the suppression of all films showing any race prejudice, but "The Birth of a Nation" was not mentioned. A straw vote was taken of the Senate, and when it was found that the Beatty Bill would not be allowed to come out of committee the lower House voted on it favorably as a joke. The bill was not reported out of the Senate, which, of course, kills the measure.

"The Birth of a Nation" is now being shown in Dayton and Cincinnati to overcrowded houses, and all seats are sold out for weeks in advance. It is to be shown in Cleveland and Columbus soon.

This demonstrates that the Ohio Legislature has not favorably voted on the bill, and that it has not come to the Governor for his signature. It seems only fair to the picture and the State that you make this correction. It is also an injustice to all film corporations, for if the dangerous Beatty bill had been passed few motion pictures or stage plays could be shown in Ohio, as it excludes all plays and films portraying any characters of any race to which one might take objection. But fortunately for the amusement business the Ohio Senate did not allow the bill out of committee. T. E. GRAY.

Columbus, Ohio, March 23, 1917.

ASSOCIATION CONSIDERS FILM CASES.

Important changes are being considered in the type of film cases by the Bureau of Explosives of New York. The transportation committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has discussed the subject with Walter S. Topping, assistant chief inspector of the bureau. It is proposed to eliminate the web and leather straps now in general use on film cases and to substitute therefor an improved mechanical metal fastener or lock. The members of the transportation committee do not believe this proposed change is practical and are endeavoring to work out a better solution of the problem with the bureau. Such erratic change, if put into effect, would incur an expense upon the distributers and exchanges of many thousands of dollars, as the cases now in use would be practically worthless. At the meeting yesterday plans were discussed in regard to using a combination label tag which is recommended by the Bureau of Explosives.

Capital City's Proposed Fire Rules Under Fire

By Clarence L. Linz

Hearing is Granted to Film Men on the District of Columbia Proposition Governing Handling of Film in Washington—Exchanges Point Out Objections in Several Paragraphs.

J. H. BUTNER, manager of the Triangle office in Washington, D. C., was the spokesman of the Washington Exchange Managers' Association at the hearing granted by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia on the proposed fire regulations governing motion picture films.

Pleas for Buildings with Walls Only 9 Inches Thick.

Alexander Wolf, a well-known local attorney, appeared on behalf of the Bank of Commerce and Savings, in whose building at Seventh and E streets, Northwest, the upper floors have been occupied as film exchanges, and of a Ninth street theater above which is located an exchange. Mr. Wolf asked that the regulations be so amended as to allow the bank building having walls nine inches thick to come within the provisions sought, on a par with walls thirteen inches thick, as is to be required, and he offered an amendment to that section of the proposed regulations having to do with this question, as follows:

"Provided, That any building now constructed having walls nine inches thick may be permitted to have vaults supported on such walls."

Mr. Wolf stated that he heartily approved of the regulations. He made a number of suggestions, stating that there should be a distinction between the storage, the handling and the manufacture of films, and asked that the regulations be changed to conform to this condition.

He declared that such buildings as are already in existence should be allowed to continue leasing space to film exchanges, even though they do not come up entirely to the requirements of the business.

Aaron Brylawski, head of a string of motion picture houses in this city, spoke on behalf of his son, Fulton Brylawski, a lawyer, who looks out for the copy writing of films. These films are brought to Fulton Brylawski and must be examined before it goes to the Copyright Office. Aaron Brylawski also pointed out that his son's office is not equipped with a vault within which the films can be stored while being copyrighted, and that, being a Federal office, it could not be made to comply with any such regulations as those proposed. The speaker was granted permission for Fulton Brylawski to file a brief at a later date explaining why the regulations should not be adopted.

J. H. Butner Fears Exchanges Might Move Away.

J. H. Butner, chairman of the committee of which L. M. Day, Carl F. Senning and Earle E. Reese are members, said:

"We come before you as a committee of the Exchange Managers' Association of Washington in an effort, first of all, to induce you to hold in abeyance your proposed regulations governing the storing, handling and manufacture of motion picture films.

"We appreciate that you have deferred action for a considerable time, but feel that the circumstances are such as to entitle us to still further consideration.

"For several months we have been negotiating with various parties for the erection of a fireproof building to be devoted exclusively to the film industry. These negotiations have finally reached the stage where John F. Costello has taken the initial steps toward the erection of a building at Sixth and G streets, Northwest, which will be fireproof and designed solely for film purposes.

"Several months will be necessary to complete this structure and in the meantime the film exchanges will have to remain in their present quarters or seek other quarters in some other city. Having once established in another city it would be questionable whether removal back to Washington would ensue. Washington has advantages as a distribution center, but these advantages are not commensurate with disadvantages that too rigid regulations would mean.

"Compliance with the proposed regulations in so far as they would affect the buildings now occupied by exchanges in Washington would be impossible. We use the word 'impossible' because of the undoubted objection that would be raised by our various landlords to putting in the improvements that would be required. The only way that the landlords could be induced to make such improvements would be through the signing of new leases. This in itself would defeat the new fireproof building planned, which is one that we as well as the District authorities no doubt would like to see worked out. It is questionable, too, whether many of the exchanges could be adapted to the proposed requirements. Certainly they could not be, save at heavy expense. This would be an expense that could only mean increased rents and the film industry at this time is in no condition to meet increased expenses.

Objections to Proposed Regulation.

"Vaults of the proposed 1,500 cubic feet capacity would not contain a sufficient number of reels to meet the needs of our largest exchanges. We would suggest 2,500 cubic feet capacity.

"Metal shelves would be very expensive for posters. We understand in this connection, however, that the Fire Marshal has conceded that wooden shelving will answer.

"We do not believe that the number of reels under repair at any time should be restricted to ten. Our business is one demanding rapidity in the handling of films in order that they be available for reshipment. This rapidity would be impossible if only ten reels could be under repair at one time. Some of the exchanges have six or eight examiners busy at once. Each examiner works on one show, each show being made up of from five to ten reels. The restrictions should not prevent each examiner having a complete show under repair. It is practically impossible to keep such shows encased in metal while under repair. In studios where large films are wound on large drums it may be necessary for several thousand feet of film to be exposed at once

"We cannot but resent the imputation that the exchange managers are incompetent to determine the question of fitness of their employes. We do not, therefore, want authority given the Chief Engineer or the Fire Marshal to say whom we shall or shall not employ.

"The proposed regulations covering the transportation of films are even more drastic than those regulating interstate traffic. The proposed regulations do not permit transportation for films in wooden boxes. This may be odne and is done under the regulations of interstate commerce provided the films are enclosed in metal cases. Not an express wagon or parcel post automobile collecting or delivering films but carries perhaps three or four hundred reels, whereas your regulations propose to limit the number that may be carried through the streets of Washington to twelve reels. Moreover, the regulations propose that each reel of film shall be separately enclosed in a tight metal box. This is not required by the interstate commerce regulations, and is a provision that would entail a vast amount of extra work and increased expense. It would, in fact, defeat the desire of the Post Office to carry films by parcel post as the metal boxes would so increase the weight of the package as to exceed the limits of the postal regulations."

Asks for Delay in Adopting Measure.

In summarizing, Mr. Butner said: "First, we pray the Commissioners to pass no regulations at this time that would change our present methods of storing, handling and transporting films. Second, if regulations are to be adopted later, we pray that the proposed regulations be so amended as to remove the objections that we have outlined."

Joseph Sanders, who is also interested in the Bank of Commerce and Savings building, voiced the rumors that have been repeated from time to time that the proposed regulations were inspired by real estate dealers. He did not, however, make this as an accusation, merely relating that which, he said, he had heard.

Mr. Brylawski had a number of suggestions to make. He seemed opposed to the regulations from start to finish, as well as some of the suggestions made by the film managers. He took exception to their action in recommending the erection of a fireproof film exchange building and at one point seemed quite angry to think that the managers preferred a new building, laid out to fit the needs of the business, in preference to the quarters they individually now occupy, which quarters would be remodeled.

The managers seem to be in accord in favoring the regulations insofar as they relate to the erection of the building now under construction—their opposition comes from the individual paragraphs that will work a hardship upon them, and it is generally expected that these will be remedied by the commissioners, who have no desire to see the activities of the business curtailed in the least. It is further understood that if the regulations are not so changed several of the managers will make recommendations of another nature to their home offices which will probably result in the removal of headquarters of this territory from Washington to Baltimore.

Selznick Likes Programs—Admits It

Says, However, He Can't Afford to Be Without This "Soft Competition"—Fears Some Other Kind Would Be Harder.

By Lewis J. Selznick.

HERE'S the latest foolish question: "I see you're always knocking the programs," an exhibitor writes. "When do you think the programs will go out of business?" My answer is NEVER, and I hope I am right. If I thought there was any danger of programs going out of business I might put a little money into them to prevent it.

I can't afford to be without this soft competition. If I didn't have program competition it would be some other kind, and it might be harder to buck. It couldn't be any easier.

And there's another side to the question just as important. The program will live because it is the kindergarten of the picture business.

Just because we have high schools and universities we don't talk about abolishing the kindergarten. If we didn't have the lowest grades in the schools, how would anybody ever learn to be a lawyer, or a doctor, or a civil engineer?

If we didn't have the program producers in the picture business, where would our actors, actresses, directors, cameramen, technical directors and scenario writers and editors learn the business?

When you put your bank roll into a big production, you don't want your director spending half his time teaching his staff the A, B, C of the business. But you must have people who know the difference between a close-up and a panorama. They learn these things while they are working in the steady grind of the program studio. A man working there gets a chance at everything, from handling props to playing leads.

But what you need in your big productions are specialists. After the man has put in a year or two on the program job he has learned what he can do best. He is a specialist, and he demands a real salary. So he finds his way to the companies where they make high-class pictures for open booking.

Don't believe this just because I say it. Look at what the program-mongers are doing, and you get the proof.

All the big stars have been on the programs at one time or another. Clara Kimball Young, Robert Warwick, Norma Talmadge, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks—they made pictures for programs until they had made their reputations. Herbert Brenon produced pictures for a program until he became bigger than the program. David Griffith worked for a program company until recently.

Then, as these people became too valuable, they either quit the programs and organized their own companies, or their employers saw a chance to get prominent money for their output and formed companies for them themselves.

So there you have it. We can't get along without the program, because it is the training school of the motion picture business. And I don't want to see the program go under altogether, because I would rather compete with it than any other system.

Goldwyn Leases Studio

Takes Over Big Universal Plant at Fort Lee, N. J.—Will Complete Twelve Subjects by September 1.

GOLDWYN Pictures Corporation, enlarging its scale of operations so rapidly that its present studios at the Solax plant are inadequate, announces that it has leased the great Universal Film Corporation studio and related plant in Fort Lee.

The big "U" Fort Lee studio is one of the finest and most complete structures on the Eastern seaboard, and its occupancy by Goldwyn will give that company one of the finest producing plants utilized by any of the larger film companies.

Goldwyn at the present time is working two companies side by side in its first Fort Lee studio, the Solax, and by dint of close crowding might operate a third company there. But the Goldwyn scheme calls for the operation of more producing units simultaneously; hence, the taking over of the Universal equipment as a result of negotiations with Carl Laemmle and his associates.

Samuel Goldfish, Edgar and Archibald Selwyn and Arthur Hopkins are determined to make good the Goldywn promise of twelve completed pictures by September 1—which forms the basic condition of a sales policy unique in the history of film production. This accounts for a more than doubling of the Goldwyn production capacities in the East.

The underlying thought in the making of so many pictures in advance of releasing any of them is the basic idea employed by the automobile manufacturers, who hold annual exhibitions of new models for dealers and the public long in advance of retail sales.

These annual shows have vastly stimulated auto sales. This policy adopted by Goldwyn now places exhibitors in the fortunate position of knowing in advance exactly what they are buying.

It is believed that Universal will make productions in its Champion studio at Coytesville, which was the first glass studio built in the East and also the first studio of any kind built in New Jersey.

Goldwyn comes into possession, through its lease, of a plant having the second largest stage in the world. The stage proper is 150 feet long by 85 feet in width. Six companies can be worked conveniently at the same time. The studio administration building, which is 130x160 feet in size, of irregular shape and two stories high, was designed by Ernest Flagg, who also designed the Singer building in New York and the modern group of buildings at the Naval Academy in Annapolis. In the rear of the administration building and studio are the laboratories and film vaults. The laboratories structure is 150x104 feet. Facilities are at hand for all of the allied departments of motion picture production, and this plant has the largest carpenter shop equipment and property department east of the Mississippi River. In the main building are sixty-four dressing rooms for principals, in addition to huge dressing rooms for supers and extras.

Would Aid Government in Recruiting

Association of Motion Picture Advertisers to Initiate a Nationwide Publicity Propaganda.

A MOVEMENT has been launched under the auspices of the Association of Motion Picture Advertisers for the purpose of raising funds among the producers, distributers, exhibitors and players with the intention of aiding the United States in recruiting in the present crisis. Believing it is the duty and privilege of every member of the industry to do his "bit" at this time the Moving Picture Advertisers have evolved an advertising and publicity propaganda for the purpose of kindling patriotic fervor.

Some of the most celebrated artists in the country have contributed their services in the designing and preparation of recruiting posters and placards. The committee is seriously handicapped in the prosecution of this patriotic movement, however, by a lack of funds. Several trade journals have given space to an advertisement appealing to every corporation and individual, however remotely connected with the industry, to contribute something directly to this great cause.

Whatever you can give will be appreciated. Make checks payable to B. P. Schulberg, chairman of the finance committee, 485 Fifth avenue, New York.

Kleine Offices Move to Windy City

Personal Quarters of Film Man as Well as Executive Departments of K-E-S-E Now Situated in 63 Adams Street, Chicago.

THE general offices of George Kleine and the executive headquarters of the twenty-four exchanges comprising the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay were removed from 80 Fifth avenue, New York, on Saturday, March 31, and opened in 63 Adams street, Chicago, on Monday morning, April 2. The shift was made without a hitch, literally over night. The offices just closed had been the headquarters of Mr. Kleine since August last, although much of his time had been spent in Chicago. Charles J. Meegan, of the publicity department, will remain in New York to take care of matters in connection with his office, and will be located at the New York distributing office of the K-E-S-E, which will continue without change at 729 Seventh avenue.

The new Chicago offices will adjoin the building in which are situated the local distributing quarters of K-E-S-E.

ARROW OFFICIAL IN MIDDLE WEST.

W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, left for Pittsburgh, Detroit and Chicago to complete a deal on the Hall Caine production, "The Deemster," for a group of Middle Western states.

The Illinois Censorship Bill

A Sub-Committee Appointed from the Members of the House Committee on License and Miscellany to Meet in Chicago at an Early Date to Hear Both Sides.

THE committee of Chicago exhibitors appointed to proceed to Springfield to represent the Chicago Local at the hearing of the proposed State Censorship Bill on March 28 was somewhat changed from the list at first given out. The following members attended: Joseph Hopp, president of Chicago Local; Alfred Hamburger, Wm. E. Heaney, Wm. J. Sweeney and Fred H. Hartman, all of Chicago, and Dr. Samuel Atkinson of Los Angeles.

The committee was joined at Springfield by G. M. Luttrell, president of the Illinois League of the M. P. E. L. of America, and Mrs. Johnson, both from Jacksonville; Dee Robinson, of Peoria, and W. W. Watts, Major Loper and Fred Kunz, of Springfield. Arthur J. Peglar, of the Mutual Film Corporation's publicity department, was also present.

The entire delegation went over to the House Wednesday afternoon, where the committee on license and miscellany held a meeting in one of the committee rooms. Joseph Hopp was the first to arrive, and found there Guy Guernsey, the proponent of the bill, and several women, among these being Mrs. Blanchard, of the Women's Political Equality League, who had influenced Mr. Guernsey to introduce the bill.

When the other members of the State delegation of exhibitors arrived, Mr. Guernsey began to explain the bill to the House committee; but he was interrupted by Representative Marcy, a member of the committee, who moved that the bill be reported out for passage.

The chairman of the House Committee called the attention of all present to the fact that there were people present who had come a long distance to speak for and against the bill, and that they should be given a hearing. He also reminded them that this would take up considerable time, more than could be given to the discussion Wednesday afternoon, on account of the evening session of the Legislature.

Representative Marcy then moved that a sub-committee of five be appointed from the House Committee on License and Miscellany to hear both sides of the question, and to meet in Chicago some time during the week beginning Monday, April 2, at the Hotel La Salle, the date to be announced later.

On the sub-committee are Representatives Curran, Devereaux, Marcy, O'Brien and Mulcahy, all of Chicago.

National Convention of F. I. L. M. Clubs to Be Held in Chicago, May 8 and 9.

The members of the Chicago F. I. L. M. Club at a meeting held Tuesday, March 27, decided on May 8 and 9 for the holding of a national convention of the F. I. L. M. Clubs of the United States. Chicago was chosen as the most centrally located city for the meeting.

The object of this convention will be to form a national organization for the purpose of bringing into closer touch and mutual understanding the members of all of the F. I. L. M. Clubs in the country, and to make possible intelligent co-operation.

Wm. H. Jenner, manager of George Kleine's Chicago branch office, has been appointed chairman of the publicity committee, and he will be ably assisted by Harry Weiss, Chicago manager of Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., and Henry Drucker, secretary of the club.

Every producer will be invited to have a representative present at the convention to co-operate with the members of the various F. I. L. M. Clubs in their deliberations.

The building where the meeting will be held will be announced later.

Chicago Premiere of "Joan the Woman" a Great Success.

The Chicago premiere of "Joan the Woman" at the Colonial theater, Wednesday evening, March 28, under the management of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, was a great success. The auditorium was packed by a throng of first-nighters—intelligent, critical and appreciative—and they were evidently not ashamed to applaud the actors on the screen, nor to bestow on the director ringing plaudits for his masterly skill and art.

Of course Geraldine Farrar was chief in the eye of the fine gathering of intensely absorbed spectators, so far as the people in the cast figured; but there could be no doubting the fact that Director Cecil B. DeMille was the great spirit that dominated the occasion. The superb pageantry, the thrilling clashes at arms and the many massive scenes that crowded on the startled vision showed that. A review of the picture will be found in the issue of January 13 of this paper.

The musical score, arranged by Mr. Furst, was well rendered by the Colonial Theater Double Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of H. A. Erlinger.

The Chicago daily press bestowed much praise on the production, as will be shown by the following excerpts from extended reviews:

The dark came, stilling the chatter—and then the light, the light of poignant, vibrant story. For such is Cecil DeMille's celluloid transmission of the Joan of Arc theme. Calling the genii of the camera to him he has created a glowing fabric of great faith, transcending achievement, and utter sacrifice. He has done it, he and his aids, with such artistry, such consummate technique, that this creation will live.

Geraldine Farrar will be forever the living embodiment of Joan of Arc. She seems so rightly the maid, pleasant, strong and spirit simple. Her sincerity and vigor, her freedom and energy, spirit fired, put her believably in the foreground of leaders.

"Joan the Woman" is a production that impresses. Its force is deeper than the tinsel thrill; it has the power to linger in the memory. It has created out of the nothingness a vivid transcription of a past age and a past patriotism that will live with the present and perhaps fire it into a new glow of loyalty.—Kitty Kelly in the Examiner.

"Joan the Woman," like "The Birth of a Nation" before it, has the great asset of timeliness, coming, as it does, when the world is full of war and rumors of war, and across the seas another girl is declaring raptly that she, like the Joan of old, "hears voices" and is the destined savior of the French people.

With patriotism and feeling at high tide, a first night audience last evening paid enthusiastic tribute to the production. I venture to say, however, that the enthusiasm would have been there, backed perhaps by not quite so much fervor, had the picture appeared in times of peace, for it is a work of art and as such worthy.

While there is practically everything good to be said of the action, staging and the hundred and one matters of detail that go toward making perfect a picture as complete as this one, Geraldine Farrar is the big white light about which all the other lights revolve.—Mae Tinee in the Tribune.

It is a glorified Geraldine Farrar who establishes this historical character of the peasant maid of Domremy and impresses it upon our memory until unconsciously Geraldine and Joan become one of us.

Every episode in the whole drama is perfectly rounded out, and is expressed with a beautiful continuity such as only a student of technique and art could create. The titles cast first in bronze and then photographed, are, like the entire picture, something fine and exceptionally beautiful—Louella O. Parsons in the Herald.

Chicago's Film Brevities.

Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Co., returned recently from Hot Springs, Ark., in fine fettle to resume his arduous labors. Shortly after his return Mr. Rothacker visited Cleveland and Toledo, where he gave an interesting illustrated lecture on the educational and advertising value of moving pictures at the Advertising Club in each city. Mr. Rothacker will leave for New York City early during the week of April 1.

A special exhibition showing the operation of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company's laboratory-studio was the feature of an evening entertainment at the University Club, Moline, Ill., on March 27.

My old friends, Fred J. Beecroft, of New York, and Stanley Twist, the globe-trotter, called at the Chicago office one day last week. Mr. Twist was obliged to abandon his trip around the world in the interests of Williamson Bros. pictures, owing to the difficulty encountered in securing transportation, due to the increased activity of the German submarines. Mr. Twist has succeeded C. W. Brown as the Chicago representative of the Exhibitors' Trade Review, and Mr. Beecroft is the New York advertising manager of that publication.

On March 5 the Essanay Film Service, Limited, of London, England, transferred its booking department to the Film Booking Offices, Limited, of that city. All existing contracts with the Essanay Film Service, Limited, and all bookings for future Essanay productions will be handled by the company named.

Fred S. Meyer, the hustling Minneapolis manager of the General Film Company's office in that city, gave a feast and social get-together party Saturday evening, March 10, to all the employes and co-workers of that branch. Representatives from the Minneapolis News and Journal, and T. J. Hamlin, of Amusements, were present; also Mr. Meyers and 17 of his associates accompanied by their wives or lady friends. Mr. Meyers makes known on the original menu bill that the event was made possible by the courtesy of Benjamin B. Hampton, the popular president of the General Film Co., in appreciation of valuable team work.

Alfred Hamburger was one of the first exhibitors to contract for the K-E-S-E yearly service for his circuit of houses when that program put into effect the one-feature-a-week policy. Manager Jenner, of the K-E-S-E Chicago office, secured the contract, which includes all features and the "Musty Suffer" comedies.

"The More Excellent Way" (Vitagraph), adapted from Cyrus Townsend Brady's story of that name, will be the main attraction at the Ziegfeld during the week of Sunday, April 1. Anita Stewart and Charles Richman are featured.

Harry Weiss, Chicago manager of the Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., is making a tour of the States of Indiana and Kentucky by auto, to awaken the interest of exhibitors in these States to a higher appreciation of the Selznick product. Mr. Weiss is accompanied by Ben Weisenbach, sales manager of the American Photoplayer Co., this city. Mr. Weisenbach is looking after the interests of his company in the different theaters where photoplayers and organs of that make have been placed.

Aaron J. Jones, president of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, has engaged Ned Holmes for the position of general manager in the exploitation of Geraldine Farrar in "Joan the Woman," in the States of Illinois and Indiana. Mr. Holmes is well known for his management of the successful campaign for "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" and "Treasure Island" in Chicago. He was also the successful exploiter of the pictures entitled: "Captain Scott's South Pole Expedition." Mr. Holmes will work in conjunction with Ralph Ketterling in the booking and general supervision of "Joan the Woman" in cities outside of Chicago.

"The Law of Compensation" (Selznick), with Norma Talmadge in the leading role, has been booked at the Studebaker theater for one week, beginning Sunday, April 1.

Gypsy Abbott, the star comedienne in Vogue comedies, accompanied by her five-year-old daughter, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Young, 7625 Emerald avenue, this city. In private life Mrs. Abbott is known as the wife of Henry King, the Balboa director and actor. After her stay in Chicago the Vogue favorite will return to Los Angeles.

Mary Pickford spent a few hours in Chicago Tuesday, March 27, on her way from Los Angeles to New York. She was accompanied by Mrs. Pickford, Elliott Dexter, her leading man, and Edward Hemmer, personal representative. Mary tried to go through the city unnoticed by passing as Mrs. Owen Moore, but she was discovered by several wide-awake photoplay representatives of the Chicago press. While in New York the great Artcraft star will make a few scenes in a forthcoming production, after which she will return to Los Angeles.

It is not widely known, perhaps, that Ernest Maupain, Essanay's famous character player and master of make-up, was leading man for Mme. Sarah Bernhardt for many years. Mr. Maupain was born in Paris about 50 years ago, so that he has still many years before him to delight his world-wide circle of admirers.

"Master of Make-Up" is a fitting title for Mr. Maupain. I have seen him in pictures in all the principal characters played by him while with Essanay, and, without exception, his acting and make-up were perfect. One has only to recall his impersonation of Prof. Moriarty in "Sherlock Holmes," produced by Essanay some time ago. That king of crooks had a glass eye, and anyone who watched closely Mr. Maupain's make-up for that part will remember that one of his eyes really appeared to have the constant stare of an artificial eye. It took considerable ingenuity to create this effect, and this was how it was done: Mr. Maupain pasted a piece of gold beaters' skin over his natural eye. Then he had an artist paint a human eye on the surface, which even in close-ups had all the semblance of a staring glass eye.

"Heroic France, or the Allies in Action," will end a successful two weeks' run at the Strand theater, this city, Sunday, April 1. It is the intention, I understand, to handle these pictures on the State rights plan.

Miss Maibelle Heikes Justice, author of the photoplay, "Who Shall Take My Life?" written specially for the Selig Polyscope Co., received inspiration for the work by visiting Sing Sing prison, New York State. She found considerable difficulty in securing permission to visit that great abode of criminals, but finally, through the courtesy of Judge Peter Hendricks, of the New York Supreme Court, who gave her a special order, she was admitted. Miss Justice is said to be the only woman visitor ever admitted to the death house of that prison. In the Selig photoplay she is said to have included in a masterful way the investigations made in Sing Sing. This photoplay makes a powerful plea against capital punishment, and William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Co., considers the production very timely for State rights purposes. It was only Monday, March 19, that Governor Gardner, of Missouri, announced that he would sign a bill abolishing capital punishment, and at the present writing it would appear that the Illinois Legislature may also pass a measure abolishing the death penalty for capital crimes. Twelve States have already placed themselves on record to that effect.

On Sunday, April 1, Alfred Hamburger will again take charge of the Playhouse, formerly the Fine Arts theater, for the coming spring and summer seasons, during which moving pictures instead of dramas will be the attractions at this house.

The General Film Co. will release two reels of British war pictures for some time to come. The preliminary showing to exhibitors in Chicago was given in the Selig projection room on Thursday afternoon, March 29. These pictures are not only entertaining, but educational at the present time. They show just exactly what the rigor and horror of modern war is.

Territorial rights for thirty States have been sold for "Beware of Strangers," Selig's record-breaking special feature. State rights buyers pronounce it a drama of wonderful drawing power.

The sale of territorial rights to "The Garden of Allah" is progressing satisfactorily, Wm. N. Selig announces. A complete line of advertising, including five-color poster in one, three, eight and twenty sheet size, is in readiness. The twenties are in block and in pictorial design.

"The Birth of a Nation" has been booked for two weeks by the National theater, Sixty-third and Halsted streets, this city, and will be shown at prices ranging from 25 cents to $1. It will open Sunday, April 8. The big Griffith feature will then open at the Imperial, 2329 W. Madison street, for a run of two weeks, and the print will then be taken to Grand Rapids, where it will be used at the Crown and Victoria for a run.

Balshofer Returns from New York

Plans Large Productions for His Company—Will Star Harold Lockwood in Series of Big Features.

FRED J. BALSHOFER, president and general manager of the Yorke-Metro studios, returned to the city this week after an extended visit to New York, when he attended the annual stockholders' meeting of the Metro Pictures Corporation. Mr. Balshofer has returned to Los Angeles, we are informed, with large plans for the forthcoming Yorke-Metro Company, which include the production of the popular novels, "The Haunted Pajamas" and "The Yellow Dove," the latter of which will develop into the first of a series of large features, starring Harold Lockwood. This production will probably be a seven-reel picture, costing in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Harold Lockwood.

We had a little chat with the Yorke-Metro producer the other night at Vernon. Said Mr. Balshofer, "My trip through the East showed me that to be a real feature production, the pictures of the future must be something more than merely big in size. They must be better productions, produced with greater care and at greater expense. The public is coming to realize that it is not the length of a picture which makes it a great feature. A feature in five reels may be greater than one in ten. It is the way a picture is made, and the story out of which it is developed, rather than the size of the picture, which makes it great."

According to Mr. Balshofer, the meeting of the stockholders of the Metro corporation developed great things for the West Coast producing company, which will make pictures for Metro release on a scale bigger than before. Mr. Balshofer is acquiring the photoplay rights to quite a number of the best selling novels of the day, which will be produced as master-pictures, featuring Harold Lockwood, and be personally directed by Mr. Balshofer.

May Allison has left the Yorke-Metro and gone to New York to join an Eastern company.

Nevada Motion Picture Studios Burned

Company Flee for Their Lives from Fire Which Destroys Valuable Costumes.

WITH A BLAZE which destroyed, it is estimated, $25,000 worth of property, valuable costumes, especially secured from Guatemala, and the private wardrobes of many of the actors, the entire studios of the Nevada Motion Picture Company, located at 40 West Mountain Street, Pasadena, burned to the ground late in the afternoon of March 24.

H. C. Drum, general manager of the company, says that the most important loss, and one which may result in serious complications for their production, is that of the costumes which Tyrone Power, Helen Bateman and Lamar Johnston had secured, at great trouble and expense, in Guatemala.

The film under production is a dramatization of Herman Whitaker's "The Planter," for which many scenes were made in South America, and for which duplicate sets and furnishings had been made here. The total destruction of all these, of everything, in short, but the film itself, means much delay for the company and a serious handicap.

Mabel King, an actress, was cut off from escape in a dressing room and was rescued by firemen. By heroic efforts the firemen kept the flames from spreading to the developing rooms and other nearby buildings filled with valuable equipment. Three double sets, a ballroom scene and two Guatemala interiors and much electrical apparatus were destroyed.

The officers of the company are wealthy men of Reno, Nevada. The president, F. W. Manson, is a retired millionaire mining man.

The fire is supposed to have originated from crossed electric wires. It caught behind some scenery and was unnoticed until it had attained such headway that the company, busy with an elaborate New England ballroom set, had to flee for their lives.

Horsley Studios Active

Wilbur Begins New Feature—Ovey Working in Seventy-Eighth Cub Comedy.

THE David Horsley studios are at present humming with activity. Three producing organizations are now engaged in making pictures on the Horsley lot—the Crane Wilbur Company, the George Ovey Company and a feature company, producing for Pathe under supervision of W. S. A. Douglas, who has leased studio space in the plant.

Crane Wilbur and his company, under the direction of Crane Wilbur and Harris Ingraham, are staging this week a five-reel picture, to be called "The Eye of Envy." The picture is being made from a story written by Wilbur and when finished will be distributed as one of the series of six Crane Wilbur features now being released by Mr. Horsley through the Mutual Film Corporation.

Crane Wilbur.

At this time Director Milton Fahrney is staging his seventy-eighth Cub Comedy with George Ovey. It is called "Somewhere in the Mountains," and will soon be released through the Mutual.

Both of these productions require an extraordinarily large number of people, particularly in the case of the Crane Wilbur production.

While Mr. Horsley is operating only two of his own companies at this time the near future will doubtless see additional ones being started, as Mr. Horsley has laid out some ambitious plans, we are informed, which he hopes soon to put into effect.

Dorothy Gish Engaged by Selznick.

We are informed that Dorothy Gish, the Fine Arts star, has been engaged by the Selznick Picture Corporation at a large salary. She went to New York Sunday, this week, having closed the deal just before she left. It is rumored that her sister, Lillian Gish, as well as Bobby Harron, will remain with Mr. Griffith in his new film company.

Constance Talmadge, another Fine Arts star, is reported to have signed with Adolph Zukor to appear in Famous Players-Lasky productions.

Alma Reubens, well known Fine Arts star, who played opposite Douglas Fairbanks in a number of his productions, was transferred to Culver City this week to appear in a picture opposite William S. Hart.

"The Barrier" at Auditorium.

"The Barrier," the nine reel photodrama, from the popular story by Rex Beach, opened at the Clune's Auditorium Monday, March 25. "The Daughter of the Gods," Wm. Fox's elaborate cinema spectacle, finished this week its successful engagement at Mr. Clune's large theater. W. H. Clune was the first Western exhibitor of Beach's earlier successes, "The Spoilers" and "The Ne'er Do Well," and much interest will attend the presentation of the popular author's latest photoplay.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

The Helen Holmes company this week completed the sixth episode of their latest serial, "The Railroad Raiders," which is to be released under the chapter title, "The Overland Disaster."

This episode contains some of the most spectacular incidents thus far photographed in the production of the serial. It is in this episode also that director J. P. McGowan makes his debut on the screen in the serial.

More than two thousand people gathered in Highland Park, near Pasadena, last Sunday to watch Producer McGowan stage a wreck for the episode.

The Pullman car, which he purchased several weeks ago for the purpose, was hooked on behind a local passenger train and hauled down the Salt Lake line at more than forty miles an hour. As it reached a sharp curve it was cut loose from the train and shunted off the right of way and down a forty-foot embankment. It rolled over a couple of times and collapsed in a heap at the foot of the fill.

So realistic was the scene of the wreck and the later scenes of the wrecking crew at work drawing back the debris to the track that many of the passersby stopped their machines to see how many were hurt and a number of offers of autos were made to take any injured passengers to local hospitals.

For picture purposes there were two men killed, but in reality no one received a scratch.

Wrecking Car for Helen Holmes Serial.

In addition to completing the sixth episode, the company has completed a reel of the seventh installment which will be entitled "Mistaken Identity." This latter chapter will be completed within a few days and sent East for release.

Lloyd V. Brown, for several years manager of the Clune Auditorium theater and lately supervising the Clune Film Productions, has resigned from the Clune Film and Theater Enterprises.

John Jasper, for the past year manager of the David Horsley studios, resigned March 31. His successor has not yet been appointed.

Herbert Standing lately with the Morosco Company, has been engaged by Fred J. Balshofer for the Yorke-Metro company to support Harold Lockwood in "The Secret Spring," which is now under production, directed by E. Mason Hopper. Mr. Standing was for twenty-three years the leading man at the Criterion theater in London, and has been on the stage in this country for many years. He entered motion pictures three years ago with Thomas H. Ince.

Kenneth O'Hara, for three years director of publicity of the Thomas H. Ince studios, has resigned and expects to leave for New York within a short time. H. B. Keeler, for sometime connected with the publicity department of the Culver City studios, has been appointed Mr. O'Hara's successor.

The accompanying illustration proves that Hank Mann and the members of his Fox comedy company can handle pie and other edibles without damage to the innocent bystanders. However, this picture was taken when the company, including Hank Mann (the star), Edith Hoskins (his leading woman), Dan Albert, A. Vallett, Gordon Mullen, Kenneth Armstrong, Vincent McDermatt and the other members of the company were engaged in the peaceful occupation of eating lunch upon the Fox stage. Mann is now directing his own company with considerable success, but we understand he yearns for the day when life was easy and another assumed the directorial labor.

Mary Pickford, accompanied by her mother, left Los Angeles on Saturday, the twenty-fourth of March, for the New York studio of the Artcraft Corporation. Miss Pickford has just finished a big feature, directed by Cecil B. De Mille at the Lasky studio.

Olive Thomas, well-known stage and screen star, was engaged, this week, by Thomas H. Ince to play leading parts in Triangle-Kay Bee productions.

Miss Thomas, who is said to possess undisputed talent as an actress, combined with distinctive beauty, will prove a welcome addition to the galaxy of favorites playing under the Ince banner.

Wm. S. Hart has started rehearsing for the production of a new Triangle-Kay Bee play by J. G. Hawks, in which he will portray the part of a picturesque forty-niner of the Bret Harte school. Alma Reubens, the former Griffith star, who will also be remembered for her fine portrayal of the heroine in "Truthful Tulliver," has been selected by Thomas H. Ince to play opposite Hart in his new vehicle.

We had a quick action camera the other day while out at Camp Stanton, so our readers will be delighted by this picture of Dusty Farnum acting as a milk fountain dispenser, with Dick Stanton on the receiving line. Dick did not receive the lactal fluid despite Dusty's careful aim, as the cow would not stand and register meditation.

The American Association of General Baggage Agents, who were holding their thirty-sixth annual convention in Los Angeles, abandoned their deliberations on the afternoon of March 22 and with their wives visited Universal City. The party numbered about one hundred and fifty persons, and guides provided by H. O. Davis escorted the visitors through the big plant. Among the officers of the association who were the guests of the Universal Company were W. D. Carrick, of Milwaukee, acting president; J. E. Quick, of Toronto, vice-president, and J. C. McNamara, of Cleveland, chairman of the Executive Committee.

Director Henry McRae has nearly completed at Universal City a two-reel comedy, entitled "Dropped from the Clouds," featuring Eileen Sedgwick. The scenes of this photoplay are laid in the western country until the cowboys, who figure largely in the story, drop from an aeroplane into a Turkish harem.

Baby Marie Osborne, the miniature star who has been featured by Balboa in the Little Mary Sunshine photoplays, has left that concern and is now being directed at the Horsely studio by Eugene Moore in features, under the supervision of W. S. A. Douglass, which will be released on the Pathe program.

A most elaborate electric sign has been erected at the Ince studios and was lighted for the first time this week. The sign is visible night and day from all highways leading to and from the beach resorts. At night, it is illumined by two thousand two hundred and fifty Mazda bulbs, which flicker on and off at regular intervals. The name, "Thomas H. Ince" is enclosed in a mammoth ball of fire. Immediately underneath is a triangle surrounding the letters "K. B." The words "Triangle Studios" complete the sign.

George Walsh has started work on a new William Fox production under the direction of Otis Turner.

In Walsh's supporting cast will be seen Doris Pawn, who has the leading feminine role; William Burress, noted character actor; Josef Swickard, who played Dr. Manette in "A Tale of Two Cities"; Velma Whitman, who acted with the Fox company in the East; Reginald Everett, Phillip Gastrock and Florence Mayon.

Dustin and William Farnum, the noted Fox stars, are beginning active preparations to do their "bit" in the service of their country, in the event of war. The two players have ordered a fifty-one-foot boat from a shipbuilding concern in San Pedro, California, and they expect to mount a gun on it and enlist it as part of the mosquito fleet guarding Los Angeles harbor.

The craft will have a V bottom, and will be capable of a speed of twenty-eight miles an hour, thereby enabling it to run down any submarine the enemy may try to propel into the bay. If war occurs William and Dustin Farnum will take charge of the boat themselves, and will command its maneuvers about southern California waters.

Margery Wilson and Charles Gunn, accompanied by several of the Ince players, took part this week in one of those merry outings, which seems to be a specialty with the Ince players. The party left at daybreak, and before returning had covered a distance of nearly two hundred miles, lunching in Tehachepi Pass, which is situated at the junction of the Coast and Sierra Navada mountain ranges, 8,000 feet above sea level. The inevitable cameraman followed hot on their trail, it is said, and the outing was made memorable by several unique snapshots.

Lou-Tellegan, the former Lasky star, will shortly return to that studio as a director. It has not as yet been decided which one of the stars he will first direct. Mr. Tellegen is probably one of the first motion picture directors. He began work in the early days of the cinematograph in France, directing a number of productions, including Sarah Bernhardt's first photodrama. He not only directed this production, but played the leading role opposite the star.

Harry Erwin, formerly in charge of the property department of the New York Motion Picture Corporation and before that the head property man for David Belasco, has been engaged by the Lasky Company to take charge of the property department. H. C. Higgin, former head of the department, has been promoted to the art department, where he will work under the guidance of Wilfred Buckland, art director.

According to bulletins received from Jack Pickford, Louise Huff and Director Marshall Neilan, that party is having a perfectly grand time in Santa Cruz filming scenes for the forthcoming Pickford-Huff starring vehicle.

Cecil B. De Mille and his company expect soon to journey north and join the Neilan party at Santa Cruz. Wallace Reid, who was given a few weeks' vacation, suddenly disappeared from the studio and he has also been located at Santa Cruz. It is safe to say that that quiet little town is, as the Santa Cruz papers might chronicle it, "a regular film city."

Lasalida Film, Inc., Formed

To Produce Features With Baby Marie Osborne—Other Features Will Also Be Made.

LASALIDA Films, Inc., is the name of a new motion picture producing organization which has been formed to make feature photoplays with Baby Marie Osborne, the youngest star of the screen. Releasing contracts have been obtained and the company has already begun the picturization of its first subject. The name of the company is derived from the Spanish, the word Lasalida meaning "light of the sun." W. A. S. Douglas is vice-president and general manager.

Mr. Douglas is well known in film circles through his long association with motion picture companies. His first post was with Pathe as editor of Pathe weekly. Afterward he became assistant to vice-president Charles Dupuis of Pathe, and later he was made personal assistant to Charles Pathe, both in France and the United States. At the outbreak of the war Mr. Douglas was in charge of the French Pathe program in Paris.

Some time after his return to the United States he was Western representative of Pathe, but resigned this position to go with the Universal as inspector of exchanges. This last position he left to take over Lasalida Films, Inc.

Lasalida Films, Inc., intends to produce eight pictures a year featuring Baby Marie Osborne and will also engage in the production of other features. Contracts have been entered into with Pathe to release the Baby Osborne subjects. The company has leased studio space from David Horsley and is now engaged in making the first picture, the working title of which is "When Baby Forgot." Eugene Moore, recently with Thanhouser and Pathe as director of Gladys Hulette, is making the pictures with the assistance of Leo Worth.

The contract entered into between Pathe and Lasalida for the Baby Marie Osborne productions is of two years duration, while th child is under contract to the producing company for three years.

Sherman Film Releasing Company

New Corporation Formed to Handle State Right Pictures —Selig's "The Crisis" First Venture.

A NEW corporation, the Sherman Film Releasing Company, chartered under laws of Massachusetts and composed of some of the leading business and professional men of New England, has entered the moving picture field to purchase features on a state rights basis.

A. B. Fox, of Newton, Massachusetts, a successful merchant, is president, and Alexander Rose, one of the leading attorneys of Boston, is treasurer. The latter is no novice as regards the film industry, having acted in an advisory capacity in New England for some of the largest film companies in the United States.

The first feature acquired by the company is Wm. N. Selig's "The Crisis," now playing to crowded houses in St. Louis, Louisville, and Pittsburgh. It is the intention of these men to open up shortly in Boston at one of the leading theaters for an indefinite run exploiting the picture in the elaborate manner that has made Sherman-Elliott so successful.

Harry Cohen, of the New York office of Sherman-Elliott, leaves to take up work in New England regarding "The Crisis" for the newly formed corporation.

Southwestern Art Dramas

Sanford & McHenry, Prominent Exchange Men, to Handle Program in Southwest.

AFTER making a thorough investigation of Art Dramas program and the men behind it, F. M. Sanford and L. C. McHenry, two of the best known exchange men in the Southwest, have decided to devote all their time to handling this program for their territory, and have incorporated under the name of "Southwestern Art Dramas, Inc."

The company has taken over the entire second floor of the "Fotoplayer Building," in the heart of the film district of Dallas.

The men in the organization had hitherto handled the pictures of a company with stars as its drawing cards, but were forced to abandon this service, as it was found impossible for exhibitors to make any money on account of the high rentals.

The officers of the new concern are Mr. Sanford, who is president and general manager; L. C. McHenry, vice-president and assistant general manager, and A. Feickert, secretary and treasurer.

Edna Whistler

EDNA WHISTLER, long to be remembered for her remarkable performance in "The Nigger," has joined the Norma Talmadge forces in the support of that star for her production of "Poppy," now well under way.

Miss Whistler, born in Louisville, Kentucky, and up to the time she left her home for her career one of the most popular society belles of that vicinity, has had what may be considered a most interesting advent on the stage and screen.

Edna Whistler.

At a dinner tendered to Frank Stone, then touring the South with "The Red Mill," Miss Whistler first met that satellite and during the course of the evening, being requested to sing, she quite overcame Mr. Stone with the quality of her voice. He secured a trial engagement for her and Miss Whistler left for Chicago.

In New York, after a long illness, Miss Whistler met Julian Eltinge, whom she resembles so closely that he created a role for her in his production of the "Crinoline Girl." Then followed her screen career, during which Miss Whistler appeared with Theda Bara in "A Fool There Was," "The Nigger," and other prominent productions.

Miss Whistler is under the management of William A. Sheer, Inc., and bids fair promise of shortly being numbered one of the most prominent of screen stars.

GEORGE BEBAN REVERTS TO THE ITALIAN.

George Beban's multifarious Italian admirers will be delighted to learn that the celebrated Morosco-Paramount character actor, after scoring a success as a Frenchman in "The Bond Between," will revert to the Italian characterization in his next picture, "The Marcellini Millions." Though all of Mr. Beban's admirers are glad to see him in any characterizations which he chooses to perform, his great coterie of Latin enthusiasts always prefer to see him in the Italian roles in which he has won an international reputation.

In this case he is an Italian truck gardener, a role which gives him many opportunities for comic and dramatic action which have not hitherto been afforded him. Though Mr. Baban's last two productions emanated from his own brain, this picture is an adaptation of the story by Edith Kennedy which was prepared for the screen by Miss Kennedy and Mr. Beban in collaboration. Like all of Mr. Beban's more recent photoplays, it was directed by Donald Crisp.

Helen Jerome Eddy, who has done such wonderful character work opposite Mr. Beban and in other Pallas and Morosco productions, plays the role of Mrs. Bartelli—one of the best parts that she has ever had upon the screen. Others in the cast are Pietro Sosso, Henry Woodward, Eugene Pallette and Adele Farrington.

ARTHUR HOPKINS TO DIRECT MAXINE ELLIOTT.

Arthur Hopkins, discoverer and producer of several of the most successful dramatic attractions of the last decade in the American theater, will direct Maxine Elliott in her second picture for Goldwyn.

Mr. Hopkins, who is one of the partners in the Goldwyn Corporation, has lived in that company's studios since the formation of the Samuel Goldfish, Edgar and Archibald Selwyn and Hopkins alliance, and is now ready to undertake his first cinema production.

Miss Elliott in her second picture will be supported by a cast of able and popular players which includes Marguerite Marsh, R. Leigh Denny, Donald Galleher, George Odell, Florence Ashbrooke and Helen Salinger. Mr. Hopkins has chosen as his assistant director George Berthelon. Rene Guissart will be his cameraman.

Fox Extends World Service

Four New Links Added to Chain Encircling the Globe—Others Being Forged.

WILLIAM FOX has just added four new links to the chain of countries with which he is encircling the globe. As president of Fox Film Corporation, he has concluded negotiations whereby Fox films will be shown shortly in Norway, Sweden, Spain and Portugal. Arrangements for entering still other foreign countries are well under way, and the Fox Film Corporation offices at 130 West 46th street are crowded daily with foreign buyers.

Lloyd D. Willis, who has recently returned from a business trip to Australia for the firm, has been appointed foreign manager for Fox Film Corporation, and is handling all arrangements for the disposition of the firm's product in other countries of the world.

The headquarters of Fox features in Norway are at 4 Startingsgade, Christiana, and in Sweden at Metropolitan, Hollandaregat, Stockholm. The purchaser of Fox films for Scandinavia is Elmer H. Carlson, who is now in Petrograd, but will go soon to Scandinavia to receive the first shipment of Fox films for release in that country. Mr. Carlson's Scandinavian organization is represented in America by his brother, John Carlson, of 96 St. James avenue, Boston.

In Spain the home of Fox features will be Ronda Universidad 14, Barcelona. The purchaser of the Spanish and Portugese rights for the production of the William Fox Laboratories is Julian Ajuria, who is also a large film importer in the South American field.

Arrangements are now pending whereby Fox stars will shortly be seen in Italy, South Africa, France, Russia, India, Japan, Dutch East Indies, Philippines, Panama, Central America, and other countries where the motion picture theatres are beginning to supply the long-felt want of the amusement public.

The Fox organization has conducted its own exchanges for more than a year in Australasia, Brazil, Argentine Republic and Great Britain, where the success of Fox features has been unprecedented. In Great Britain alone nine large exchanges are being operated by Mr. Fox's British Company. Three complete exchanges are being operated by his Australasian company. In those countries where the Fox organization has been in the saddle for the last year, Theda Bara, William Farnum, Valeska Suratt, George Walsh, Virginia Pearson, Stuart Holmes and the various other Fox stars are as familiar to the motion picture going public as they are in the United States.

In discussing the foreign situation, Mr. Willis had this to say:

"Within the next six months, there will be scarcely a country in the civilized world where William Fox stars will not be shown in the best picture theaters. The demand for Fox features in those countries where the corporation has been operating during the last year or more has proven that the time is ripe to invade the entire world. In the foreign speaking countries, American made films are more popular today than the product of any other nation.

As a matter of fact, ninety per cent. of the film being released throughout the world today is made in the United States."

"In Australasia the success of William Fox features was assured from the very start, and our films are now playing in more than fifty per cent. of the theaters throughout Australasia and New Zealand. The same is true in Brazil and the Argentine Republic."

"We have just opened exchanges in Uruguay and Paraguay, and are negotiating with foreign buyers for Chili, Peru, Bolivia and other South American countries. Mr. Fox has taken his time about entering the foreign field, preferring rather to accumulate a large selection of strong film subjects which would appeal particularly to foreign motion picture theater goers. He feels that this time has now arrived."

"During the last two weeks we have had offers for Fox features from eighty-two distributing centers in various parts of the world, and more are coming daily. It is the opportunity of a life time for many foreign buyers to get on the band-wagon before we have disposed of the rights for countries which are as yet verdant soil for the William Fox productions."

RICHARDSON DRAWS CROWD AT CINCINNATI.

The way all branches of the moving picture business in Cincinnati can get together when there is a real occasion is indicated by the attendance at the Richardson lecture on projection, which may be gathered from the following list of those present, including all of the leading exhibitors and exchange men in Cincinnati, as well as a substantial Dayton delegation headed by President D. H. Thompson; A. G. Hettesheimer, I. Libson, F. L. Emmert, J. J. Huebner, Jr., R. H. Haines, L. W. Greenstein, Otto Luedeking, Isaac Pichel, W. C. Bachmeyer, H. Serkowich, L. Beutel, C. B. Adams, P. Ackerman and E. A. McAuliffe, of Cincinnati; and D. H. Thompson, George Oxrider, Ollie Clemmer, Ralph Witmer, Edward Eickhoff, Robert Hirsch, Bert Fiala and A. F. Kinzler, of Dayton.

Argus Laboratories Incorporated

Concern Formed by H. D. Ashton, Reorganizes and Prepares to Make Pictures.

THE Argus Laboratories, opened six months ago by Horace D. Ashton, who started the Paramount Pictographs, has been reorganized and was incorporated in Albany last week. Mr. Ashton now has associated with him two of the representative young men of New York finance. One of these, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., of Philadelphia, is in the real estate business in New York, and is also associated with his father-in-law, B. N. Duke. The other, W. Whitewright Watson, is vice-president of the Robert M. McMullen Advertising Company, and is associated with his father, Walter Watson, in other business interests.

The company has organized its forces and has commenced the production of short subjects, as well as a screen magazine, under the editorial direction of Wallace Thompson, formerly of Paramount Pictographs and lately of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. The stockholders and directors of the company are: Horace D. Ashton, president and general manager; W. Whitewright Watson, vice-president; A. J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., treasurer; Professor Edgar J. Wright, secretary; Martin Justice, assistant treasurer.

Mr. Ashton is well known to the motion picture industry, having entered it over six years ago. Previous to this he was a war correspondent, aviator and world traveler, and is an expert photographer and an artist.

Professor Wright is a member of the New York Academy of Sciences and the New York Microscopical Society. After years of experimentation, he has simplified the production of microscopic and other scientific motion pictures, which he is making under the protection of basic patents.

Martin Justice is a well known artist and is also art director of the Vitagraph Studios. Frank T. Elliott, formerly of the National Association, is in charge of sales and distribution.

VIC JOHNSON WITH WILLIAMSON BROTHERS.

Victor B. Johnson, familiarly known to the trade as Vic, has moved the tools of his profession to the Longacre Building and will hereafter be responsible for the advertising and publicity of the Williamson Brothers productions, controlled exclusively by the Submarine Film Corporation.

Vic has been actively engaged in publicity work for the past four years. He broke into Picturedom with Warner's Feature Film Company, after an extensive newspaper career. Then came the exploitation of Ditmar's Wild Animal Life Pictures; two years in the national copy department of Street Railways Advertising Company, six months in charge of Vitagraph's News Service Department, and now he has concluded four months with the Kalem Company to take up his new duties with the originators of submarine motion pictures.

PENN. OFFICIALS SEE "JOAN THE WOMAN."

On Wednesday evening, March 28, a special invitation exhibition of Cecil B. De Mille's production, Geraldine Farrar in "Joan the Woman," was given at the Hall of the House of Representatives in Harrisburg, Pa., for members of the House and Senate of Pennsylvania as well as the State officials. Louis Maurice, director at the Forty-fourth Street Theater, New York, and an orchestra played the music score as arranged by William L. Furst. "Joan the Woman" was chosen from a number of productions as best representing one of the latest achievements in the art of the cinema.

Diverse Themes for Triangle Releases

Week of April 15 Will Be Marked by Presentation of Variety of Subjects.

DIVERSE themes and widely differing localities are featured in the Triangle program releases for April 15 and April 22. Robert Harron and William Desmond are the stars of the pictures to be shown in first-run theaters during the week of April 15. Harron will appear in the Fine Arts "transcontinental" drama of politics and love, entitled "An Old-Fashioned Young Man," written by Frank E. Woods and directed by Lloyd Ingraham. William Desmond will be starred in a stirring Kay Bee war play of the Balkans, entitled "Paddy O'Hara," written by J. G. Hawks and directed by Walter Edwards, under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

The plot of "An Old-Fashioned Young Man" centers about the activities of a chivalrous youth who takes it upon himself to vindicate the honor of a woman running for the office of mayor of a large western city, who is the victim of trumped-up charges circulated by her unscrupulous opponents in the political arena. In searching out the evidence that will unmask the instigators of this conspiracy, Harron is called upon to travel across the country from coast to coast, and visit eight or ten of the principal cities between Los Angeles and New York.

As "Paddy O'Hara," William Desmond is shown in the role of a brilliant young Hibernian war correspondent for a London newspaper. Upon the outbreak of hostilities between two imaginary Balkan principalities, O'Hara is chosen by his editorial chiefs to secure authentic news from the front, his quick wit and undaunted courage being the qualifications that entitle him to the chance to risk life and limb. He not only secures one of the biggest "scoops" in modern journalism, but rescues the beautiful Princess Maryska, daughter of a mountain chieftain, and brings her home in triumph to share his Irish hearthstone.

Bessie Love and William S. Hart share honors as the stars of the Triangle feature releases for April 22. Miss Love will be seen in a Fine Arts comedy-drama, supported by by George Stone and the Kiddies, entitled "Cheerful Givers," written by Mary H. O'Connor and directed by Paul Powell. William S. Hart will enact the star role in a forceful Kay Bee "thriller," entitled "The Desert Man," written by Martin Brown and Lambert Hillyer, and directed by Hart himself, under the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

In "The Desert Man," William S. Hart takes the part of a prospector who is frustrated in his search for gold, and finally takes refuge in the partially deserted town of "Broken Hope." But he soon finds himself plunged into an exciting series of adventures when he meets Jennie, the pretty daughter of a dying miner, and tries to shield her from the blandishments of a rascally doctor whom he has brought to the settlement to care for the girl's father. The doctor persuades Jennie to elope with him, and for a time it seems impossible for her to escape the depths that yawn for her. But in the end the Desert Man wins out by virtue of his mental resourcefulness and ability to handle a six-shooter with judicious dexterity.

"A REGULAR GUY" NEXT FAIRBANKS SUBJECT.

Starting a picture in the East and completing it in the West is somewhat of a novelty in screenland, and this is what Douglas Fairbanks will do in connection with the production of his next Artcraft picture, "A Regular Guy." The scenario of "A Regular Guy" deals with a New Yorker who goes West, and presents a satirical subject including a number of thrills which, however, is secondary to a vein of melodramatic humor, the basis of the story. In this picture "Doug" hopes to bulldog a steer, ride a bucking broncho and perform a series of other stunts which he has been practicing for some time past.

The Western scenes for "A Regular Guy" will be taken in Wyoming, in order to obtain the proper background for the picture, and a special car on the New York Central has already been chartered to carry the players and the working staff. Among those who will make the trip are John Emerson, who will direct the picture; Anita Loos, her mother, Bennie Ziedman, "Doug's" personal publicity representative; Cameraman Victor Fleming, his assistant, Glen MacWilliams; Billy Shay, assembling editor; John Fairbanks, business manager; his assistant, Florence E. Gribbon; Jack Scott, Eric von Stroheim, Robert Nichols, James Hogan, his wife, "Doug's" secretary, Mathilde Kanes, and "Buddy," the Fairbanks valet.

MARJORIE RAMBEAU IN "THE MIRROR."

Marjorie Rambeau, having completed "The Debt," has started work, under the direction of Frank Powell, on "The Mirror," the fourth of the series of feature pictures now being made by Frank Powell Producing Corporation for distribution through Mutual. "The Mirror" is being filmed at the Powell-Mutual studio at College Point, L. I. "The Mirror" is an original story by Clara S. Beranger, and has for its characters for the most part those who live and work in the world of the theater. Mr. Powell has selected a strong cast to support Miss Rambeau in "The Mirror." This includes Robert Elliott, Paul Everton, T. Jerome Lawlor, Aubrey Beattle, all of whom have appeared with Miss Rambeau in other Powell-Mutual productions.

Fox Home Exchange

New Quarters Will Be Opened at 130 West 40th Street with Much Ceremony.

ELABORATE plans have been made, and are still going forward, at the home offices of Fox Film Corporation, 130 West Forty-sixth street, to signalize the formal opening of the new quarters on the tenth floor, to be occupied henceforth by the New York exchange. Hundreds of exhibitors from all parts of the territory covered by this biggest of the twenty-two Fox exchanges in the United States are expected to be present when Jack Levy and his force of seventy-five take possession on Thursday, April 12.

Mr. Levy has been in charge of the local branch since June, 1916. He and Winfield Sheehan, general manager of Fox Film Corporation, are attending to the preparations for the festivities. Prior to his appointment to his present duties, Mr. Levy was the manager of the Philadelphia office.

Invitations to be present at the coming event have been issued to every exhibitor served by the New York exchange, but motion picture exhibitors, whether users of Fox program or not, will be cordially welcomed. The William Fox stars working in the Fort Lee, N. J., studios, who are not out on "locations," will make every effort to greet personally the men who show their pictures.

Just three years ago, in the days of William Fox's Box Office Attraction Company, the New York exchange was established on the fifth floor of the Leavitt Building, in Forty-sixth street. As the Fox photoplays have forged their way to the front, more room and more employes have been needed.

The immediate results following the announcement by Mr. Fox of his super de luxe productions for 1917 were so gratifying in point of volume of new business that it became imperative to give the New York exchange even larger floor space. Flags and bunting contribute to the gala decorations already in evidence about the new home.

In addition to the regular releases, Mr. Levy's office handles the Foxfilm comedies, which are released weekly, independent of the Fox program. Since January 1, 1917, it has also taken over the work of the branches in Newark, N. J., and New Haven, Conn. These changes have proved most effective, because of the advantages to exhibitors through concentration.

The territory included in the activities of the New York exchange is New York, up to Albany; Connecticut, to the Connecticut River, and New Jersey, as far as Trenton.

"THE SINGLE CODE" SECOND WILBUR FEATURE.

As the second picture of the series of six feature productions starring Crane Wilbur, David Horsley will release through the Mutual Film Corporation on April 16 a morality drama entitled "The Single Code."

"The Single Code" is made from an original story by Mr. Wilbur, and treats with the problem of the present day double standard of morality. The opening title explains the trend of the story. It is as follows: "Morality is a word with two meanings—one for the man, one for the woman. Why?" The story then proceeds into a discussion to show why the double standard is in opposition to every sense of justice, reaching intense dramatic heights in its telling.

In "The Single Code" Mr. Wilbur has furnished what is perhaps the best story that has yet come from him. It has been staged under the direction of Thomas Ricketts, in thorough keeping with all requirements, and is interpreted by an especially fine cast, which includes, besides Mr. Wilbur, such well-known players as Florence Printy, Harrish Ingraham, John Oaker, Ernesto Garcia, F. A. Johnston, Marie Corteaux and Ida Lewis.

Red Feather Heads Universal

"Mr. Dolan of New York," a Five-Reel Comedy Starring Jack Mulhall—Many Other Features and Fillers.

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company presents a varied and entertaining program of releases for the week of April 9. Heading the program is the Red Feather five-act comedy drama, "Mr. Dolan of New York," starring Jack Mulhall. This feature is brimful of action and replete with many laughable situations. It depicts the adventures of a lightweight pugilist in a foreign principality, where he impersonates a nobleman and gets himself mixed up in the politics of the country. The story was written by Fred Myton and produced by Raymond Wells. It is one of the most amusing feature photoplays ever released on the Universal program. In the cast supporting the star are such well-known screen actors as Noble Johnson, Julia Ray, Al McQuarrie, Harry Mann, Ernest Shields, Grace MacLean and Francis MacDonald.

"Mr. Dolan of New York" will appear Monday, April 9, on which date will also be released the Nestor one-act comedy, "Under the Bed," with that inimitable trio of funmakers, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts.

The feature for Tuesday, April 10, is the Gold Seal three-part western drama, "Hair Trigger Burk," in which Harry Carey is the star, supported by Claire Du Brey and a big cast. The story was written by Eugene B. Lewis, and the production was made under the direction of F. A. Kelsey. "Hair Trigger Burk" is an exceptionally powerful photodrama. The other Tuesday release is the Victor one-act comedy, "His Family Tree," featuring Eileen Sedgwick.

"Ring Rivals," a two-part L-KO comedy with Dan Russell in the role of a great go get 'em prize fighter, will be released Wednesday, April 11. This is the funniest burlesque on the boxing game ever filmed at the L-KO studios. The Big U drama, "The Bugler," and the regular issue of the Universal Animated Weekly are the other Wednesday releases.

On Thursday, April 12, the Rex two-act human interest drama, "Uncle Johnny's Money," with Malcolm Blevins and Marjorie Ellison, will be released. This is an exceptionally strong program offering. The story was written by Henri Canard, put in scenario form by Fred Myton, and produced by George Cochrane. The Big U one-act drama, "The Desert Ghost," with Neal Hart, and the Laemmle drama of the sea, "The Silent Prisoner," with Ethel Grandin, are other releases of this date.

"The Signet Ring," the sixth adventure of the Yorke Norroy series, "The Perils of the Secret Service," written and produced by George Bronson Howard, will be released Friday, April 13. The Universal Screen Magazine No. 14 and the Victor comedy, "Stop Your Skidding," will also appear Friday.

The Bison two-part drama, "The Kidnapped Bride," featuring Marie Walcamp, and the Joker comedy, "The Careless Cop," with William Franey and Gale Henry, will appear Saturday, April 14.

On Sunday, April 15, will be released "Her Primitive Man," a one-act drama under the Rex brand, with Jack Mulhall in the leading role. The Imp two-part drama, "The Eyes in the Dark," with Leah Baird, and the Powers split reel, "Boomer Bill Goes to Sea," a comedy cartoon, and "On the Streets of India," a Dorsey education, complete the program.

During the week the fifth episode of the remarkable Universal serial, "The Voice on the Wire," entitled "The Spectral Hand," will be released. This absorbing mystery story, written by Eustace Hale Ball, and produced by Stuart Paton, carries the stars, Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber, through further harrowing adventures.

"The Prisoner of Love," the final episode of the Grace Cunard-Francis Ford serial, "The Purple Mask," will also appear this week.

ROTHACKER ISSUES A BOOKLET.

"The best advertisement in the world will never be written," declares Watterson R. Rothacker in a booklet descriptive of the business bearing his name, "because moving pictures are the superlative advertising medium, and exceeding the limitations of any pen." The first booklet about moving pictures and advertising to be issued by the head of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company came from the press in 1910, with subsequent editions in 1912 and 1914. The present publication is of twenty-four pages, with double covers. It is attractively printed. On the outside edge of each page is a strip of film actual size. On the first text page is a foreword telling us what the company does and what it stands for. There is a long list of the firms that have popularized their goods through the facilities provided by this concern.

Some of the subjects treated in the book are "Moving Picture Advertising Achievement," "Reel Advertising," "Moving Pictures and Advertising," "Infusing Human Interest Into Moving Ad Pictures," "Trademarks, Slogans, Catch Phrases and Names," "Perpetuating Personalities and Childhood's Fleeting Hours," "Recording Historical Events," "Proper Photoplay Production," "Camera Department," "Making Moving Pictures," "Perfect Development and Printing," "Animated Cartoons and Superior Titles" and "The Studio." The book is profusely illustrated, and will make interesting reading for any business man.

GERMANIC FILMS GAIN.

With the activities in Europe during the past week one state right proposition has gone soaring skyward in the public interest. The Allied offensive eastward has now reached the points so graphically treated in the remarkable series of pictures released by the Germanic Official War Films, Inc., under the general title of "Germany and Its Armies Today." Lille, Quentin, and many of the other French towns which are rapidly being won back from the Teuton forces figures strikingly in the Germanic films. That many of these cities are now being laid waste by the receding Germans has already been charged by the Entente governments, but the films were taken during the first occupation by the invaders.

Current events attach additional interest to the pictures now because of the relations between the United States and Germany. In the territory already sold, the series is creating patriotic demonstrations, and in every point near a fort or military center government officials of the United States are not missing the opportunity of seeing the German army in action. The great preparations of the commissary are an enlightening feature of modern warfare, and, while the Germanic company's films do not show the fighting, they more than make up in interest by the way the economic conditions and industrial activities of war are depicted.

"THE GREAT SECRET" EXTENDED THREE CHAPTERS.

In response to insistent demands from hundreds of exhibitors, Metro's serial, "The Great Secret," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are stars, has been extended from fifteen to eighteen chapters.

This announcement has just been made by William Christy Cabanne, who adapted and directed the powerful screen novel. "The Great Secret" has proved a tremendous drawing card throughout the country, not only because of the popularity of the stars, but because its plot is filled with thrills, mystery and romance. The suspense is carried through each chapter until the final one, when the great secret—the mystery on which the serial is based—is revealed.

After the first nine chapters had been shown, exhibitors began asking that the serial be extended beyond the limit at first fixed. All of those who asked for extensions of the productions stated that their patrons were displaying keen interest in the story, and that the work of the stars showed to excellent advantage.

VICTOR MOORE IN "HIS MILITARY FIGURE."

Victor Moore's next release (April 9), "His Military Figure," is rather a timely picture owing to the fact that it shows Vic trying his hardest to be a military man. In order to do this he gets shoulder braces, corsets and the like to give him a West Point figure. He even gets a small ironing board which he puts in the center of his back to make him stand erect, and then he starts out. It seems his sweetheart, Pansy Pepper, must marry a military man, according to her father, Col.

Scene from "His Military Figure" (Paramount).

Pepper's, wishes, and much to the discomfort of Vic he has got to look like one, and he does, but what a tight fit.

In the meantime a cousin from Brazil shows up in the form of a rival, just as Col. Pepper has put his O. K. on Vic. The trouble then starts for fair and before Vic gets through with this cousin he manages to realize just what a military man is, much to the joy of every one.

Mr. Moore is ably supported by D. L. Don, Emma Littlefield, Harry Foy, Wm. Slade and Frances Brown.

Richardson Takes a Turn Northward

Leaves Florida with Pleasant Memories of Good Receptions—Sees Things in Georgia and Lands in Tennessee—Big Meetings at all Points

Tampa, Fla.

AS PREVIOUSLY set forth, I had a most pleasant, but very strenuous time in Miami, finally climbing on the roost at 4 a. m., only to flop down again at six to take the 7 a. m. train for Tampa. Now to reach Tampa it is necessary to travel north about 200 miles on the east coast; change cars; travel half way across the State on a jerk-water branch line, then change again to the Atlantic Coast Line Ry., and wander southward a hundred or so of miles. Except for the aforementioned J. W. line (day coach only), the trains were solid parlor car coaches, and a parlor car is about as devoid of comfort, when a 350-mile run is involved, as an egg is of celluloid. To add to the joy, the train was almost two hours late in Tampa. At the depot I found a whole flock of men patiently waiting, notwithstanding the fact that a most exciting "bread riot" was in progress at or around the city hall. Manuel Nosti, secretary-business agent, Local Union No. 321, A. H. La Belle, manager Grand theater and two other houses, and Brothers E. Kemp, C. D. McBoth, Robert Lane, W. McWilliams and Nathan of Local Union No. 321.

Now, as you may imagine, I was feeling real kittenish after my go-around-like-a-top-all-day-and-four-fifths-of-the-night, followed by 341 miles of travel, but quickly learned there was to be no rest for the weary, for a banquet was staged for midnight, to be followed by the lecture. Well, your Uncle Dudley was game, and made good, but when it was all over he felt—— Well, I leave it to you to imagine.

The banquet—a very real one, beautifully staged, and most complete from the good-things-to-eat-and-drink point of view—was at the famous Spanish restaurant, El Pasije (pronounced El Pasawhe, emphasis on the "saw"), over in Ybor (pronounced Ebore) city, really a part of Tampa. The lecture was finished at 3 a. m., and the editor thanked his Good Angel that he had planned to lay over one day in Tampa.

Tampa is an industrial city, in which are literally dozens of huge cigar factories, mostly housed in really splendid modern buildings of brick. There are five club buildings, well paved streets, beautiful hotels, palms and flowers everywhere. It is a thoroughly charming city. The operators are a progressive body, and many of them are really very well posted on the technical end of projection—witness the fact that here for the first time some of the queries propounded in the course of the lecture were answered, and answered with at least approximate correctness. The union has maintained a school for its members, Manuel Nosti instructor.

The Tampa union, together with the Miami union, paid all the railway expenses of my trip into Florida in order to secure the lecture. Yes, Tampa operators are decidedly progressive. There is a license law here, which helps some. The men are, however, taking one stand of which I cannot approve, viz.: Most locals fight hard to get two men in the operating room. It is necessary to the best work to have two men on duty. Yet the Tampa local insists, I am told, upon a condition which works out, in practice, to keep only one man in the operating room a goodly portion of the time, and that is unfair to the manager and to the industry.

On the other hand, Tampa managers are a bit unfair in having operating rooms which are, in most cases, altogether too small, and which are very poorly ventilated. I would suggest, as a reasonably fair compromise, that, wherever it is practical to do so, the size of the rooms be increased, and that in all cases they be very much more thoroughly ventilated. I would suggest that the men work as follows: From 10 a. m. to 1 p. m., while the crowd is light, and there need be no rewinding done, that but one man be on duty, alternating the "off" on alternate days; from 1 to 5 o'clock two men in the operating room all the time. From 5 to 6 o'clock one man off; from 6 to 7 o'clock the other man off. Six to 10 o'clock both men in operating room continuously. At 10 o'clock one man to go, the other to finish the show, on alternate days, of course.

I have outlined this to some managers and some operators, who seemed favorably impressed. Of course this plan is not perfect, but at least while the crowd is heavy, and there is rewinding, trimming, et cetera, to be done it is absolutely imperative that there be two operators right there on the job in the machine room. Anything less than this makes for inefficient results on the screen, which is unjust to the audience, manager, artists, producer and the motion picture industry. On the other hand, it is highly unjust to the operator to expect him to remain cooped up in an undersized, ill-ventilated "coop" for twelve long hours, or even for ten hours. The compromise I have suggested seems reasonably fair under the conditions. It is therefore respectfully presented for consideration. The man on duty from 10 to 1 o'clock would, of course, leave the rewinding for the other man to do when he comes on duty.

While in Tampa I inspected the grand, A. H. La Belle, manager; the Bonita, F. M. Catron, manager; the Strand, C. D. Cooley, manager, and the Alcazar, T. Edwards Kans, manager. In all cases except the Strand, the operating room is not only too small, but unnecessarily so; also in all cases either the ventilation is inadequate or entirely absent. It is not ventilation, as you should know, to merely move the air around inside the room with a fan, and the operating room doors ought to remain closed, and not made to serve as vents. Fresh air should be brought in from the outside through proper ducts near the floor line, and be discharged through a proper vent flue, through the roof if possible. At the Strand conditions are good, but why the iron room? Why not partition that long, large room with 6-inch hollow tile, and thus get a fireproof operating room of greater width, with a high ceiling, which would be very much cooler? Also, it would have cost little if any more. John Fette and H. Wigmann are in charge of projection, and at the time of my visit the screen result was very excellent, indeed. A Martin motor generator set supplies current to two simplex machines. The light was white and pure in tone, and the picture brilliant, very steady and was run at correct speed. The auditorium is spacious and well lighted. The Strand has a beautiful front, and is Tampa's best motion picture theater. Admission is 25 cents to all.

Tampa's Finest Picture Theater—The Strand.

Brother Fette has put one over on the Simplex people. He has changed their speed control very radically, and, it seems to me, advantageously. I have asked him to describe it for the projection department, with photograph, if possible. He has placed the belt pully directly over the motor, and greatly simplified the controller, entirely eliminating the idler pulleys.

At the Bonita, E. G. Kemp and W. E. Sullivan, operators, I found auditorium lighting to be excellent. All light is at rear, with no side lights. The screen was evenly and fairly well illuminated, but it did seem as though it got considerably brighter with my advent—doubtless my imagination, however. The operating room here is much too small for comfort, particularly in a hot country; also ventilation, as such, is absent, and here I saw a queer thing: A man in Tampa is making what he calls the "Smith Economizer," which looks remarkably like a Hallberg, and which I suspect may be a copy of same. The Strand had trouble with rectifier tube breakage (G. E. rectifier), and this man Smith disconnected the regulating reactance coil and hooked in one of his economizers. It has stopped tube breakage, and seems to work well. By changing the economizer taps the amperage is varied between 16 and 35. It would be very interesting to know what the electrical efficiency of this combination is. The main reactance is still in use. Brother Kemp has changed his round Simplex motor belts to half-inch-wide flat belts, changing to flat lace pulleys, of course.

At the Alcazar I was not invited by Friend Kane to inspect the operating room, though we sat within two feet of its door. Well, I don't blame him, for, if both operators were inside, probably he would have had trouble shoving me in. The machines are Powers 6A. The screen result was good, but side and exit lights detract from the shadow contrasts of the photography. On the whole, however, it was not at all bad, but would be better with those exit globes near the screen a very dark red, and the useless side lights cut out. Put your auditorium lighting above and to the rear, Friend Kane, is my advice.

And now, last, but not least, the Grand, managed by that prince of good fellows, A. H. La Belle, to whom I owe thanks for many courtesies shown during my stay in Tampa. Manuel Nosti is chief operator, assisted by Ben Lance. A. G. E. rectifier supplies current to two Simplex machines. The operating room is too small, and there is no proper ventilation (sorry, La Belle—a poor return for your kindness—but truth is truth). The screen result is very good. In fact, the screen result in Tampa is all the managers have any right to expect, considering the inadequate operating rooms supplied. While in the city I met W. L. Burgert, president-manager of Tampa's supply house, and was by him shown many courtesies. Mr. Burgert is a hustling business man and a most pleasant gentleman.

At parting I asked Business Agent Nosti how he felt concerning my visit and lecture, to which he replied substantially as follows: "It was highly beneficial, and we are well satisfied; in fact, some of the men have told me they would not have missed it for fifty dollars!"

I shall always have a warm spot in memory for Miami and Tampa. They are jewel cities of the Sunny South, and to me they have been very kind. I most heartily wish I might say nothing but the kindest things in return, but that would be unfair to all concerned. Those things which are good it gives me genuine pleasure to praise; those things which are wrong it is my duty to point out, and do all I can to secure their rectification or improvement.

Macon, Ga.

From Tampa, Fla., to Macon, Ga., is a long, dusty, hot grind of half a thousand miles, but here I am, on this 16th day of March, all ready for business. Macon is a queer proposition. It is a typical, wide-street, sleepy old Southern city, of about 60,000 souls, and has only three moving pictures, the Palace, the Capitol and the Princess; also, these three are none too well patronized, though the Capitol and Palace are doing a very fair business. There are two other houses, the Macon and the Grand, which run some pictures, but the three named are the only nothing-but-picture theaters. The Empire Investment Company, A. P. Hall, general manager, operates the Princess and the Macon. Mr. Hall supplied the Macon for the lecture, and agreed to get the men together, the union having failed to respond to correspondence. Also, as soon as I located C. L. Leonard, president, and J. F. Beuff, secretary, Local Union No. 594, they expressed regret for the lack of interest shown, and promptly agreed to get busy and get all their men out at 11:30 p. m.

President C. L. Leonard (Right) and Secretary J. B. Buff, of Macon Union.

At the Capitol I found Brother Buff, secretary of the union, working under excellent conditions. He was two Powers 6B projectors, and G. E. motor generator sets, one for each machine. R. H. De Bruler, manager, is a real manager, who studies his business and attends carefully to its details. The operating room is accessible, of ample dimensions, well equipped, has slate-black walls; also, its observation ports leave little to be desired. De Bruler insists, as is right, that his operators keep their operating room incandescent lamps turned off while the picture is on the screen. I pointed out that, while the operating room ventilation seemed to be ideal, too much daylight enters at matinees, and he immediately agreed to have the fault remedied. In the auditorium the side lights were injurious and annoying to the audience, and De Bruler tried to get rid of the necessity for burning them. I was able to tell him how it could most likely be done. He agreed that my plan looked promising and would be tried.

Mr. De Bruler is putting on a stunt which is, so far as I know, original with him, and it most certainly is a pleasing feature of the program. His daughter, Miss Ester De Bruler, has a rich contralto voice. She selects some scene in the photoplay which will adapt itself to her purpose, and, standing in an alcove beside the screen, sings an accompaniment to the picture. During my visit she sang to a scene where the lover is proposing. It was both beautiful and touching, the song being, of course, selected to fit the scene.

Princess Theater, Macon, Ga.

I only visited the Palace briefly. The house was too dark. Darkness is ideal from the projection point, but I do not advocate it. A fairly light house, illuminated by properly placed lights, is the thing, but side lights are an abomination, and ceiling lights may be used very unintelligently. The operating room is fair, as to size, but there was the almost inevitable flood of light. Sorry, but I forgot to record the operator's name. At the Princess I found Brother C. L. Leonard, president of Local Union 594, working under perhaps as bad conditions, from the projection point of view, as I have ever seen. The room is large enough, well ventilated and has good ports; also, the equipment is very good (two Powers 6A machines and two G. E. mercury arc rectifiers), but right there it ends. If Leonard had the best equipment on earth he could not possibly produce results, for the metal-lined operating room walls are white, or nearly so, and the rectifiers are right behind the machines, absolutely unprotected, with their light flooding the rooms until the picture (110-foot throw) can only be seen indistinctly, and the fainter shadows, due to improper adjustment of the light, or other things, cannot be seen at all. But this is not all, for, were operating room conditions all they should be, it would still be utterly impossible to project a good picture in the Princess under present conditions, because of the long row of bright lights on either side, which operate to prevent a proper value of the shades of photography on the screen being discerned by the eyes of the audience. And all this is helped along by a smear of white light covering the dial of a clock, placed right up beside the screen, and its case and a good portion of the surrounding wall. I spoke to the house manager about these things, but he informed me he had no authority to make any change. I tried to see Mr. Hall, but he had gone for the day, and—there you are. Of what use to build a theater, put in machinery, rent films and then render good screen results utterly impossible by lack of ordinary common sense in operating room practice and auditorium lighting.

Mr. Hall has only just taken charge of the Macon business. Doubtless he will quickly change the conditions at the Princess; let us hope so. The house is an old one and the present abominable auditorium lighting has prevailed, I am told, for years. Friend Hall seems to be an up-to-date man. If so, he cannot act too quickly, in the case of the Princess: (a) Yank those side lights out, and do it so very thoroughly that they can never, never, never be relighted. (b) Cut down the c. p. of the clock lamp and confine the light to the dial of the clock. (c) Place your lighting in indirect fixtures in the rear half of the auditorium.

At midnight we gave the Macon operators a two and one-half hour talk on projection, but Macon house managers were all too sleepy to bother with a mere trifle like that. During the afternoon there came a gentle tapping on my door, apparently from a ten-pound hammer wielded by an able-bodied blacksmith, and in popped—Dave Chaney, former business agent of Local Union 306, New York City. Dave is putting Annette Kellerman in "The Daughter of the Gods" through her paces nightly. They are playing Macon for a week and then jump to Jacksonville.

Atlanta, Georgia.

Atlanta is a hustling southland metropolis, commercial to the core. The streets are crowded with traffic and suggest to one a hive of bees in clover time. All the picture theaters are, I am told, either owned outright or controlled by the Jake Wells combination, which has extensive amusement interests in many southern cities.

The Atlanta operators had been somewhat indifferent, and no arrangements for the lecture had been made, but as soon as I, through the good offices of Harry K. Lucas, the Atlanta supply man, got in touch with Mr. Evans, who is Mr. Wells' right hand man in Atlanta, and explained to him the purpose of my visit, he agreed that the matter was of real importance and said he would arrange for a meeting at the Criterion theater after the shows closed at night.

During the day Friend Lucas treated the editor to a bubble trip about the city and out to the Federal Prison, famous as "The Ewing Millionaire's Home." On the way we stopped to examine a most wonderful cyclorama of the Battle of Atlanta, setting forth in graphic style the argument of a difference of opinion between the Federal and Confederate forces some fifty odd years ago.

It was Saturday afternoon and we found the 1,100 prisoners gathered in the prison auditorium enjoying movin' picters—and very good ones, too, by the way. It was a sight long to be remembered. Wm. Hart in "The Gun Fighter" was on, and there could be no mistaking the enthusiastic approval of the audience. J. W. Higgins has charge of motion picture work in the prison. He is both competent and enthusiastic and his work reflects these two very necessary qualifications for such a position. The shows are given every Saturday afternoon, and every Sunday when baseball does not present a counter attraction. The films are loaned the prison, without charge, by Atlanta exchanges: a highly meritorious act, and one deserving of the highest commendation. Aside from the motion picture feature, the prison is decidedly interesting. It is the most important Federal prison in the country and is where most of our offending plutocrats are confined—when they are confined at all.

And, by the way, Harry K. Lucas, the Atlanta supply man, is a high voltage wire of the livest sort. His supply house is one of the best I have viewed up to date, and that includes my own home town too. The stock is remarkably well arranged; also it is surprisingly complete. This is not a "puff" for Lucas, but a deserved tribute to a wide-awake, hustling business man, who not only knows his business and its details, but gives it constant, careful attention.

I visited only two Atlanta theaters: the Criterion and the Strand. At the first named W. C. Patterson, manager, I found a very fine projection installation, in charge of Cliff Clower, chief, and Z. A. Huff, assistant operator. The room is large and the walls are all black, though it was necessary that friend Clower purchase the paint and apply it himself in order to get that highly desirable condition, which fact is not to the credit of the house manager. The lights were out and Brother Clower was right on the job beside his machines every minute I was there. He impressed me as being a live wire, capable operator. The equipment consists of two Baird projectors, taking current through the G. E. motor-generator sets, located in a good sized adjoining room. The ports are large, and aside from rather poor ventilation, there was little to criticise in the operating room.

In the Auditorium, however, it is a different story. The walls are a light shade of gray—too light for the best screen results, and along each side is that abomination, a string of entirely unnecessary side lights with light shades or globes. The Criterion auditorium lighting is distinctly bad from the projection point of view, though not nearly so objectionable as some I have seen. Cut out those side lights, place about three all-metal fixtures rather close to the ceiling at its highest point under the balcony, and put lots of light in them, is my advice.

At the Strand, also managed by W. C. Patterson, I found a good operating room, in charge of M. P. Foster and H. G. Glenn, operators. The walls of this room were not black, but raw galvanized iron. There were four incandescents burning at the time. The operator in charge (not the chief) claimed he usually kept these lights out, but that he was doing something just then which required their use. Um-m-m! It must have been a highly important duty which required four incandescent lamps. The equipment consists of two Simplex projectors, taking D. C. through rheostats.

At 11.30 about a dozen of the operators took sufficient interest to appear at the Criterion, but not a single house manager was there. There can hardly be any legitimate excuse for the house managers who show so little interest in Mr. Well's business that they fail to be present on such an occasion, and there most emphatically can be no excuse for the absent operators, except for the chief at the Strand, who appeared later and explained that he had been unavoidably detained. I am told that all the men were notified. The Atlanta men I met impressed me as being wide awake, and, by comparison, fairly well posted. Presumably, however, those present represented the progressives. I am told that the downtown theaters were pretty well represented by their chief operators, but that is not enough. Except for reasons absolutely preventing attendance, every manager and operator in the city should have been there. Mr. Evans was present and was an appreciative listener. I venture the assertion that Mr. Evans is a capable manager.

Chattanooga, Tennessee.

It has long been my impression that Chattanooga men were both energetic and progressive. I am glad to say that the impression has been more than verified during my visit to "The City of the Battle Field." Although Chattanooga had suffered severely from a flood, which utterly ruined large residential sections, this mere trifle was not allowed to interfere in any way with the energies of Local Union 259 in preparing for the lecture.

At the depot I was met by the entertainment committee, consisting of R. H. Johnson, chairman of the entertainment committee; Elbert Lowry, secretary of Local Union 259; Brother Burson Lowry, and John A. Hallberg, president of the Paramount Film Cement Corporation. First it was the hotel, to remove the grime of travel, then lunch, followed by a trip in Brother Hallberg's Cadillac gasoline cart out to Chickamauga Park, one of the famous battlefields of the country, returning by way of Mission Ridge for the sake of the marvelously beautiful view. This was followed by a two-hour rest, after which we were escorted to the Read House, where the lecture was to take place, and were met with a very genuine surprise. Not only was every Chattanooga operator present, but also all Chattanooga managers. In addition to this there were present the really "big bugs" of the local moving picture interests, in the person of F. H. Dowler, Sr., who is treasurer and member of the executive board of the Signal Amusement Company; also he combines this with holding the very important position of superintendent of terminals for the N., C. & St. L. Railway. Mr. Dowler's son, F. H. Dowler, Jr., general manager of the Signal Amusement, has, I am informed, done more than any other one person for the improvement of projection in the city of Chattanooga. In addition to this, W. E. Wilkerson, general counsel for the Signal Amusement Company, and a corporation attorney of more than local fame, was present. Both these gentlemen remained for the entire lecture, and really surprised me with the enthusiasm of their remarks afterwards. The banquet itself left nothing to be desired from the gastronomic viewpoint, and here is something entirely out of the ordinary: music for the occasion was supplied by the best twelve-piece string orchestra it has been my pleasure to hear. This orchestra is led by R. H. Johnson, moving picture machine operator and chairman of the entertainment committee, who himself played the lead. Many and frequent were the compliments paid the beauty of the music.

Following the banquet the editor spoke for almost two hours to a most highly appreciative audience. After the affair was over I was kept busy shaking hands with both managers and operators, who were enthusiastic in their remarks concerning my humble efforts. Local Union 259 and the Chattanooga managers had not only proved themselves to be progressive, but also to be good sports. They had not the slightest idea what I was going to say, and some of the opinions, as told me afterward, were really very amusing. They took a chance, however, put the thing on right, and were amazed at the things I really did have to lay before them. One member of the Local, who remembered me when connected with the Nicholas Power Company, expressed the opinion that I would talk about nothing but Power's machines, the surprise the gentleman met with almost took away his breath; but he was honest enough to admit his mistake.

I shall always remember my visit to Chattanooga as one of the particularly bright spots in what has thus far proved to be a decidedly strenuous experience, and, believe me, the word "strenuous" is used advisedly. Sleep and I are becoming only acquainted by courtesy. I have had banquets until I am really ashamed to look one in the face, and automobiles are no longer anything in my young and innocent life. How I would like to straddle old Nancy Hanks again for just five minutes. Automobiles are fine, but the little old go-devil can run in circles around them. Perhaps I may visit "the City of Lookout Mountain" again, and you can bet your last gold plated suspended button that if the chance ever affords, I will be there with bells on.

Circle Theater Breaks Records

Popular Indianapolis House Features Bryant Washburn and Hazel Daly to Big Business.

THE distinction of breaking all attendance records in the largest motion picture theater in America and making the most novel and spectacular personal appearance ever given a screen star belongs to Bryant Washburn, star of "Skinner's Dress Suit," and Hazel Day, his beautiful young leading woman in that screen play, when they appeared in person at the Circle Theater, Indianapolis, last Sunday and Monday during the run of that successful comedy.

Following the consummation of arrangements with Mr. Washburn for his personal appearance S. Barret McCormick, the managing and producing director of the Circle theater laid extensive plans to give the screen stars an unusual and striking entrance. The stage of the Circle theater is a mammoth one, forty feet deep, a hundred feet long and seventy-five feet high and it was decided by Mr. McCormick that the audience, after following the adventures of "Skinner" and his wife, "Honey," on the screen, would enjoy meeting them in all their new gained glory and success.

The stage was set as an elaborate flower garden with massive pillars and flower bedecked coves and the screen so arranged that it sank beneath the stage and hid from view when not in use. Behind the screen and masked by the scenery a score of carpenters built a trestled bridge eight feet high and nearly a hundred feet long. On this was driven a huge high-powered Premier touring car with full equipment, chauffeur and ready to drive on its own power.

As the last scene of "Skinner's Dress Suit" faded from sight the screen quickly and silently disappeared, the stage was bathed in the deep blue lights of night and off stage, as though in the distance, came the shriek of an auto siren, then as though rounding a bend in the road the head lights of a car flashed from the wings and with the lights burning, siren sounding and the smell of gasoline lending its touch of atmosphere the big car on its own power drove in upon the stage bearing Mr. Washburn and Miss Daly.

Stepping from the car to the footlights and blowing kisses with the sincerity and spirit of the character she had played on the screen, Miss Daly made a fetching little speech of appreciation to the thousands in the audience, stating with modesty that while she was not known to many she hoped to be some day. A hope that surely will be realized if the outburst of applause that greeted her serves as a criterion.

Following Miss Daly, Mr. Washburn spoke interestingly of the screen, its ideals and his, the desire upon the part of the producers and his particular hope that such plays as "Skinner's Dress Suit," clean and wholesome, refreshing and inspiring, would be the demand of the public, for only in presenting such things as typify the highest ideals of life could any art exist. Mr. Washburn's magnetic personality, so keenly felt on the screen, radiated from behind the footlights and his remarks were greeted with constant applause.

Following their stage appearance the players held an informal reception in the beautiful lounge room of the theater where they were greeted by thousands of friends and admirers.

The psychological entrance of these two principal players on the screen just at the time when the audience who had followed their trials were eager to meet the reconstructed "Mr. and Mrs. Skinner," and the spectacular effect produced by the huge car driving in upon the stage made for one of the most sensational stage scenes yet produced by Mr. McCormick at the Circle.

The Circle theater has a seating capacity of 3,100 and seven performances were necessary Sunday to accommodate the crowds. The Monday attendance records were likewise broken and the succeeding days of the picture's engagement continued the record attendance.

Ed. H. Philippi

E. H. PHILIPPI became associated with the Industrial Moving Picture Co., now the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Co. early in 1915 as salesman. Shortly after the connection was made he became sales manager of the company, and at the annual meeting of the board of directors of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Co. In January, this year, he was elected assistant treasurer of the organization.

Ed. H. Philippi.

Mr. Philippi has had thorough training in merchandising, beginning at the age of 15, at the bottom of the ladder, in the retail field. Soon afterwards he was given a position in a prominent jobbing house, and at the age of 18 became traveling salesman for that concern. Later he became manager of the mail order department of a prominent Chicago manufacturing and jobbing firm, with which he remained five years. In this connection he was strongly impressed with the possibilities in the advertising field, and so, concurrently with the discharge of his duties with this firm he acted as associate editor of a prominent trade paper in the same field. He conducted the editorial and advertising branches of this trade paper so successfully that he was made general manager of the publication, a position held by him until he engaged in moving picture work.

Mr. Philippi made a close study of the technical and mechanical details of the moving picture business as applied by his company to the advertising field, and has personally directed and supervised the field and industrial work in several of the important campaigns which the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Co. has successfully managed.

Mr. Philippi has held the chairmanship of the Industrial Moving Picture Committee of the Advertising Association of Chicago for the past two years, and was recently presented with a handsomely framed resolution, drawn up by the Association, conveying its appreciation "for his sincere and persistent efforts to produce high class moving pictures in the club rooms, which have been rewarded with success, meaning much added education and entertainment to the members of the Association."

GRIFFITH REACHES ENGLAND.

According to cable advices received at his New York offices late yesterday afternoon, D. W. Griffith, the American producer, who sailed for England a week ago Saturday on the Adriatic, landed at Liverpool early Tuesday morning. Mr. Griffith will remain in Europe for several weeks and is booked to take some motion pictures on the western battle fronts before he returns to this country.

Interesting Educationals

Two Scientific Subjects, Five Topical, Three Industrial, Three Zoological, and Six Travel Subjects.

"Our World as It Appears to the Ant." (Educational Films Corporation of America.)

ONE of the most interesting microscopic studies of recent date will be found in the picture entitled "Our World as It Appears to the Ant." We are told in subtitle that the star of the picture, a tiny ant, made an early start one morning and arrived at a certain house in time for breakfast. It climbed on the breakfast table, where it found it rather rough going, but by patient perseverance surmounted all obstacles. Then we are shown by means of a powerful microscopic lens how the table cloth looked to the ant; what seem to us but tiny threads in the weave of the cloth appear to be veritable ropes to the ant. He decides to climb a vase that stands in the center of the table, and on his way to it encounters several large boulders of salt, which through the microscope are magnified to appear almost as large as ordinary squares of lump sugar. After climbing the vase he continues his journey into the heart of a flower, where he encounters further difficulties in the gigantic construction which envelops the pistil, stamen and pollen of the flower. This portion of the picture includes remarkable closeup views of the stamen and the pollen, and should be of special interest to students of botany. Next he encounters a fly which to him has the appearance of a terrible monster, and after taking one look at the unprepossessing face of the fly he decides to "beat it." The much magnified study of the fly, and also a microscopic study of the head, and also of the eye of an ant are of unusual interest. On this reel appears also a brief but interesting study of sand

"The Eye of Modern Science." (Universal.)

The "Universal Screen Magazine No. 14" contains a well-illustrated study of the X-Ray process. We learn from the picture that the X-Ray is regulated with hydrogen. We learn, also, that when in use the tube is encircled in a glass globe, and that the glass of the globe contains lead which protects the surgeon and the patient from stray rays. A late model of the X-Ray generator is shown, and we learn, also, that decaying teeth can be detected by means of radiography. This is done by placing a small piece of film behind the patient's teeth and turning the current on for about one-fifth of a second. We learn, also, that the Orthodiagraph is used for examination of the chest and abdomen, and we are shown the coil and spark of the Orthodiagraph. The taking of hand is an interesting feature. We see a photographic plate placed under the hand and the tube focused and the current applied. X-Ray photographs are also shown.

"Artificial Exercise" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In this subject, which will be found illustrated in "Reel Life No. 47," our attention is attracted to the fact that much beneficial exercise can be taken artificially. We learn that special machines have been invented for this purpose, by means of which we can exercise legs, arms, wrists and body. One of these allows of exercise such as is obtained in riding a horse. Instructive and entertaining.

"Young Men Who Didn't Go West" (Universal).

In the "Universal Screen Magazine No. 14" will be found interesting animated portraits of the following individuals: Colonel John A. Murray, who for thirty-seven years has been an important factor in the United States Assay Office; Richard J. Daly ("Big Dick"), who has untangled traffic at Dey street and Broadway for twenty years; John J. Henley, warden of the Tombs, twenty-nine years in the service; Lieutenant Kennell, bodyguard to New York's mayors since 1895; Max S. Schmittenberger, police inspecter, forty-three years in the department; "Smokey Joe" Martin, thirty-three years a fire-fighter, and still active; John Lent, who has delivered mail to New Yorkers for forty-four years, and William Wilkinson, known as the Bishop of Wall Street.

"Concentrated Food Products" (Universal).

The "Universal Screen Magazine No. 14" contains a detailed illustration of the preparation of concentrated food as it concerns the vegetable. In it we learn that potatoes are peeled by machinery sixty times as fast as by hand; we witness the coring of cabbage, the shredding of potatoes and their removal to the drying machine which removes every vestige of water from them. We learn that a barrel containing 100 pounds of "Dryfresh" soup vegetables is sufficient to make 6,000 portions of vegetable soup, and that the warring armies subsist almost entirely on this type of food. The accompanying illustration shows the amount of water extracted from the vegetables that fill a 10-pound tin. The subject closes with a demonstration by Mrs. A. Louise Andrea, the Screen Magazine's cooking expert, of how to prepare a dried vegetable dinner.

"Making Food Cheaper" (Mutual-Gaumont).

We find also in "Reel Life No. 47" an excellent demonstration of the preparation of dried vegetables. In this we learn that vegetables are 90 per cent water, and that consequently there is a great saving in the freight and express charges in the transportation of dried vegetables, as opposed to the transportation of the normal vegetable. We learn also that the water is removed from them by means of air currents, and that in cooking them all that is necessary to bring them back to normal is to soak the dried shreds in water. This picture contains a nicely detailed illustration of the subject.

"Mobilizing the Red Cross" (Paramount-Bray).

In the Paramount-Bray-Pictograph No. 60 will be found scenes and illustrations of special interest at the present time. We learn that nurses must have three years' training before they are deemed fully efficient for service in the Red Cross corps. In this picture we are privileged to watch the nurses in training advancing step by step along the road of information and knowledge necessary for the work which they have chosen to follow. We see them learning to assemble hospital equipments, receiving instructions in home nursing, also in the preparation of foods and other practical knowledge in connection with the work.

"Sponge Fishing" (Pathe).

The scenes exhibited in this picture were photographed along the coast of Florida, and give an excellent idea of the sponge fishing industry. The sponges, we learn, grow on the rocks at the bottom of the sea, and are detected by the fishermen by means of a glass-bottomed pail through which they look. They are detached by means of long-handled rakes, and are set aside to dry so that the jelly-like substance with which they are filled may be pounded off. They are then placed on strings and taken to the docks, where they are assorted for the market. We are also shown huge samples of the bell sponge, the grass sponge, and the giant velvet sponge. This reel ends with a cartoon, entitled "Happy Hooligan."

"Arid and Fruitful California" (Pathe).

The fifth of the Combitone series of pictures appearing under the title of "Know America, the Land We Love," opens with interesting views of the arid portion of California, looking from Gold Hill. Illustrations of the trees and plants which subsist on this arid soil are shown, including the mesquite tree, and various kinds of cacti. Coming to the fruitful portion of southern California we are shown excellent illustrations of the ponderosa lemon, the grapefruit, and views of an orange plantation. The quackless duck, in other words, the muscovy, comes in for a share of attention in this picture, and also a six-horse potato digging machine. Views of Palm Canyon, and of Indian women weaving baskets are also of interest.

"Pineapples Under Glass" (Mutual-Gaumont).

An instructive study of the pineapple and its adaptability to hothouse growth will be found in "Reel Life No. 47." The picture shows us the pineapple plant at its various stages. We see the cutting taken from the mother plant and placed in the earth for the purpose of forming a new plant, and we learn, also, that a year after it is set out the fruit can be gathered from it.

"Feeding the Bears" (Educational Films Corporation of America).

An interesting number of "The Living Book of Nature" exhibits the various kinds of bear, including the Alaskan bear, the Kadiak bear, the Polar bear, the Syrian bear, the giant Yezo bear of Japan, and the big-eared Russian bear. We see the keeper feeding them stale bread, eight loaves to each bear, and tough beef. Some amusing scenes illustrate the greed of individual bears in hoarding up all the food they can gather together, sweeping it across the floor of the den into a heap in a corner. Many interesting scenes will be found in this picture, including an attempt to lure a vicious member of the bear family into a shifting cage so that house cleaning may be pursued in his den. This picture is beautifully photographed.

"A Snail Race Under Water" (Mutual-Gaumont).

The arranging of the views of the slow moving snail in this picture, which will be found in "Reel Life No. 47," has been cleverly done. We are treated to familiar views of the snails underneath the water. We see a couple of snails start for apparently the same goal, and are led to believe that the element of hurry has at last entered into the make-up of the snail. An interesting feature of this picture is a closeup view of a snail egg ready to hatch out.

"Odd Fresh Water Creatures" (Pathe).

This interesting study of the organisms that inhabit quiet streams and ponds will be found intensely interesting to the student of entomology. The picture is colored, and gives us close and magnified views of these various organisms, including the naucoris or water scorpion, the dytiscidae or water beetle, the hydrachnidae or water mite, the leech, and the piscicoli, a parasitic species of leech that preys on fish.

"California" (Pathe).

The opening number of the Combitone series of pictures, under the title of "Know America, the Land We Love," is devoted to a portion of the state of California. Views of special interest are shown in and around the cities of Santa Barbara and Pasadena. We also make with the cameraman an ascent of Mount Lowe to the Lowe Observatory. Mount Wilson and Mount Echo are also dealt with in this number.

"Arizona" (Pathe).

The fourth number of the Combitone pictures, or the "Know America, the Land We Love," series, covers the state of Arizona. The Grand Canyon of the Colorado gives an opportunity for wonderful color effects, and the views of this remarkable spot displayed in this picture give a comprehensive idea of the beauties of the canyon. Other interesting features of this number are scenes on the White River Indian Reservation, the Petrified Forest, the Bottomless Pit, the remains of the homes of the ancient cliff dwellers, and the Cosinino Reservation.

"Mission Life in California" (Paramount-Bray).

In the Paramount-Bray-Pictograph No. 60 will be found an interesting resume of the principal missions of California. Pictures of these missions, which were founded more than a century ago by the Franciscan Fathers and Brothers, were secured for the Pictograph by Dr. Burbank Shattuck, of Vassar College, among them the San Gabriel, the Santa Barbara, and the San Luis Rey. We learn from this picture that these missions primarily were intended to foster Christianity among the Indians, that many of them are now in ruins, and that some of them have been repaired and are being used as chapels. We learn, also, that many beautiful and rare flowers are cultivated in the gardens of the missions, and we are given familiar views of the monks at work in these gardens, and also a close view of the bell-ringer ringing one of the old mission bells.

"Cettinge, Montenegro" (Mutual-Gaumont).

The pictures of the little kingdom of Montenegro seen in "Mutual Tours Around the World No. 20" were photographed before the war, but are no less interesting on this account. The picture takes us on a zigzag climb through the mountain passes between Dalmatia and Montenegro, passing through the valley which leads to Cettinge, the capital of Montenegro. The town, we are told, has only 4,000 inhabitants, and consists principally of white-washed cottages. Its public buildings are plain. In the picture we see King Nicholas going about among his people, and also interesting types of the simple living people of that country.

"The Island of Guernsey" (Mutual-Gaumont).

"Mutual Tours Around the World No. 20" contains some attractive views of the Island of Guernsey, one of England's Channel islands. Beautiful views along the rocky shores are interspersed with scenes at points of interest on the island, such as the house where Victor Hugo spent many years of exile, and the room in which he carried on his literary work. The principal town of the island, St. Petersport, which dates from the twelfth century, is also shown with its harbor protected with breakwaters built by Edward I of England.

"Cintra, Portugal" (Mutual-Gaumont).

Interesting scenes and historic spots about the city of Cintra, Portugal, will be found in "Mutual Tours Around the World No. 20." Cintra, we are told, is one of the better known summer resorts of Portugal, and is situated near Lisbon. The royal palace, dating back to the time when Cintra was occupied by the Moors, and ruins of the ancient fortification are shown.

Pictograph and Its Cartoon

Bray Cartoon Delightful Addition to the Family Group or Children's Matinee Program.

IT IS no doubt an understood fact by our readers that the Paramount Pictographs are now being assembled at the Bray studios in company with the delightful Bray animated cartoons. William O. Hurst under the supervision of J. R. Bray does the actual labor connected with the assorting, assembling, and subtitling of the subjects used in what is now known as the Paramount-Bray-Pictograph.

Scene from "Miss Nanny Goat at the Circus" (Bray).

Our reason for making special note of this educational release which has been from time to time noted in our educational reviews is to draw attention to the unusually entertaining and artistic quality of the cartoon member of the group of subjects which comprise it.

The Bray cartoons have long been known as the most finished examples of this class of animated photography in the field. The refined comedy subjects upon which they are based are sketched against backgrounds which serve not merely as fillers, but are of artistic design. We would also draw attention to the fact that cartoons of the "Quack Doodles" and "Bobby Bumps" series are delightful additions to the family group of children's matinee program. The accompanying cut from the Pictograph for April 2, showing what happened at the circus when "Miss Nanny" had her temper aroused, while belonging to neither of these, is an excellent illustration of the art displayed in the making of these cartoons.

Some day we will take a journey to the Bray studios and learn something of how the work there is conducted.

Bible Film Company's Censors

Bible Film Company Announces Names of Well-known Ministers and Theologians Who Will Censor Its Motion Picture Products.

THE OBJECTS of the Bible Film Company, recently organized in Las Vegas, New Mexico, for the purpose of filming bible stories, were made known in these columns a short time ago. The growing demand for films suitable for church purposes, the necessity which has arisen for the visual illustration of the various subjects connected with bible study has made such an organization as the Bible Film Company doubly welcome. The following list of names of individuals comprising the board of censors of this new company, who will pass upon every picture released by the Bible Film Company, should, therefore, be of special interest: Rev. Allen H. Andrews, pastor First M. E. Church, Fort Worth, Texas, chairman; Right Rev. Frederick B. Howden, D. D., Episcopal Bishop of New Mexico; Ref. Prof. Theodore Graebner, Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, Mo.; Rev. B. A. Abbott, D. D., pastor Union Avenue Christian Church, St. Louis, Mo.; Dr. Ozora S. Davis, Ph. D., D. D., president Chicago Theological Seminary; Prof. Theodore G. Soares, Ph. D., D. D., head of department of religious education, University of Chicago; Rev. D. H. Martin, D. D., minister Fort Washington Presbyterian Church, New York City; Rev. Christian F. Resiner, D. D., pastor Grace M. E. Church, New York City; Mr. Fred S. Goodman, secretary religious work department, Y. M. C. A. International Committee; Mr. Frank L. Brown, general secretary World Sunday School Association, New York City, and Mr. W. C. Pearce, field superintendent International Sunday School Association.

Film Show at Military Base

Bennett Molter, Aviator and Former Director, Tells of Show at Avord, France.

BENNETT A. MOLTER, former assistant producing director for Universal and Metro, who is at present in the Franco-American Flying Corps in France, writes interestingly of motion pictures near the front. In a letter to a member of the staff of the Moving Picture World, Mr. Molter, after telling of some of the discomforts following his transfer from Buc, France, to the military base at Avord, France, writes:

"However, the silver lining of the cloud soon asserted itself. On going into the 'Reflectoir' (mess hall) the next morning I was attracted by a sheet metal booth about six by ten feet. It looked familiar, so I ventured closer. At the far end of the room a six-sheet flared out: 'Moving Pictures!' Imagine, here, away from everything, at a military post, pictures! I could hardly believe it.

"Inquiry, however, brought the information that three performances were given every week. On Wednesday nights an admission of one franc (about twenty cents) is charged. Wednesday is supposed to be 'society' night. On Thursdays they show the same pictures for fifty centimes (about ten cents), and on Friday nights the show is free. I went on Friday night, and, believe me—some audience.

"The audience was composed entirely of men—soldiers, and I never saw such a variety of types. Here were some Annanites from Indo-China, chattering like monkeys; next to them were Arabs—Algerians, Tunisiens; behind, French types from all provinces of France, both young and old, and all over the gathering were groups of big black Senegalese who grinned foolishly and carried on with their French brothers. A smattering of Kabyles, five Japanese, a few natives from Morocco and two Americans completed the bunch. It was the most cosmopolitan audience I have ever seen.

"After quite a wait the bunch became impatient and directions were shouted at the operator in a dozen different tongues. A stamping of feet was suddenly hushed by the sizzling of the carbons, and the show was on.

"No doubt you wonder what subjects would interest a bunch like that. All the films were of French manufacture —two single-reelers, one two-reeler and a split-reel comedy. The single reelers were the eternal triangle stuff and rotten. The two-reeler was worse than either of the singles, but the comedy would have done credit to Mr. Keystone. The plots of the dramatic subjects were terribly crude and hackneyed, but they got over well. The performance as given that night, if given even in the most outlying stake in the States, would have resulted in the tarring and feathering of the exhibitor, probably, but here it got applause that shook the walls. Oh, for a look at a good five-reeler!"

A YEAR'S PROGRAM.

Paramount's Outlay of Burton Holmes Travel Pictures for the Year 1917 Presents an Interesting Appearance.

THE Paramount Pictures Corporation has surely sounded the pulse of the times in getting together an entire year's program of the Burton Holmes Travelogues for the exhibitor to look over and choose from at his leisure. Our readers are no doubt well acquainted with the fact that Burton Holmes, whose travel pictures have been and are released exclusively through Paramount, has journeyed through almost every land on the face of the globe, and is, therefore, able to lend to the educational program a variety of subjects and scenes arranged in individual and entertaining style. Mr. Holmes, who is about to leave the country for a trip through foreign lands to take additional pictures for Paramount, assembled in his laboratories previous to his going pictures for the entire year. The following is the program as it will be released to the public:

GOLDFISH RECOVERS FROM INJURY.

Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, who recently injured his leg while playing handball in the gymnasium at his club, has now fully recovered from the effects of the accident and returned to the Goldwyn offices. During his confinement he conducted at his home many of the details of the company's organization of its distribution.

Last week he was able to leave his home on crutches, and at once began to reorganize certain details of studio management and production in Fort Lee, and a few days later found him back at the office in conference with many of the country's best known distributing specialists and important exhibitors.

note that practically all of this advertising is art work and atmospheric layouts and an effort is made to carry the theme and atmosphere of the play into the advertising. Perhaps I could write you a thesis on the "psychology" of atmosphere in advertising, but that would be too raw a press-agent stunt, and while I surely appreciate the value of personal publicity I will not impose upon our acquaintanceship.

It is quite remarkable, isn't it, the great progress of the art, yet the slow strides it makes in the advertising end! What great pains producers take with their little details, yet how they neglect the advertising possibilities. Even now, as back in the dark ages of the photoplay, about all the producer does is to make the film and put it in the can and say, "Here, run this!" A set of still photos and the one, three and six sheets usually comprise the wealth of advertising assistance. What a handicap this must be for a great many theatres not so fortunately equipped perhaps as ourselves, with artists, engravers, etc., and have to grope around in the dark hunting for that psychological touch.

Some time ago I had quite a "via mail" argument with one of the leading producers who took exception to my criticism of one of his productions and inferred that its lack of success was no doubt due to a lack of showmanship. I quite agreed with the gentleman, but chose to assume that the lack of showmanship was 50-50 between his company and myself. We, of course, realize that every picture will pull more money if you find the appealing part or, let us say, "the psychological touch," but why don't producers find that vital selling argument? A specializing clothing manufacturer tells the dealer the selling points and this paternal attitude stirs the interest, sometimes the imagination, of the dealer, which eventually reaches the consumer. It is a recognized fact that 95 per cent. of the exhibitors lack creative imagination, likewise 95 per cent. of the merchants in all classes lack the ability to write convincing selling talk. I know this from experience, for in several years of advertising work I have written advertisements for everything from bread to caskets, all because the merchant could not write copy and it meant either loss of space or writing the ad yourself. Now if this condition exists, why should producers suffer their artistic efforts to be turned over to butchers for exploitation? This particular producer suggested that there were a dozen or more points about his production that would draw business, but upon a close examination of his copy and "ad suggestions" I found nothing but the trite, the unconvincing and the stereotyped phrases that are a heritage from the first "spiel" of the first man that ever tried to separate the gentle public from their cash at the box office. Unfortunately, this producer's copy was no different from the rest.

Seldom do we find argument in the submitted copy that contains enough selling argument or interest-creating matter to make people leave their fireside, dress and take a car-ride to your theater. Practically every line of home office copy is as trite, as uninteresting, as lacking in selling power, and as a result 95 per cent. of the theaters must use it while the other 5 per cent. must grope in the dark, struggling for that "psychological" touch. Undoubtedly it would be a great advantage to the entire industry if the producer would maintain a paternal interest in the selling end of the exhibition business.

There is a lot to what Mr. McCormick says—and he might have said much more. Of course, there are campaign books on many features, yet these do not always serve, because some of the suggestions are worse than useless—they are calculated to be positively hurtful. The book looks all right to the boss, who may know nothing whatever about advertising, but it does not do the work of the exhibitor. One company now has an exhibitor on its sales staff who aims to reach his fellow exhibitors. He is not one of those whose reputation has been founded upon bluff, but upon really good work. When others line up, there will be more real help given the exhibitor and perhaps less said about it.

The Indianapolis newspapers do not get very good impressions in their sheeets, and some of the best of the McCormick samples are spoiled by rotten press work. Some of the stuff is very nearly ruined, but the artist is almost equally at fault, for he keeps on doing fine line work and mass color when he knows that it will not reproduce. A study of this two cut will show the differeencee. The open line drawing works well. The scene sketch in the upper right hand corner is little more than mud. If it is reproduced from a photograph, the print should have been touched up before being sent to the engraver. Much better results come from the bottom cut of solid bricks and whites, for here the white shows strongly. A better effect is gained by routing out the figures. This adds to the expense, but it gets a real value to the cut. This example will show the difference, though both are rather too heavy a reduction to fully show the idea.

Of course, Mr. McCormick doesn't keep on doing the same thing over and over, and later examples avoid these pitfalls. These two are taken from some of the earlier work before he got the artist in line, but even now there is an occasional slip. One is due to too great a reduction or else to the use of too fine a line in drawing the original. We know one cartoonist who failed merely because he drew to his original and with no idea of reduction. The original looked excellent, but when it was reduced to a tenth of the original size, the lines ran together and the printed result was mostly mud. If a cut is wanted four inches wide and the original is sixteen inches wide, the lines of the original should be four times as thick as they should be in the cut—and four times as far apart. Mr. McCormick knows all this as well as we do, for he has been an advertising manager as well as impressario, but the stuff he sends in gives good material for a talk on drawn designs.

Something he says about atmosphere would serve as a text for another page of comment. Take a plain type advertisement for "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." The mere words cannot convey the suggestion created by the picture of the octupus. That is what atmosphere means. You show a picture of the sea bottom. Then you need say little more about that. You have your space for other argument, and while the pictures serves as a condensed explanation, it also reaches out and gets the eye of a reader who might pass the type over without seeing. Art work costs like onions and potatoes, but it brings results where it can be afforded, and lately we showed that even some smaller houses can afford just this sort of thing.

Mr. McCormick seldom uses full pages. He prefers the striking quarter page, and some of these layouts are unusual. One shows the way he handled "War Brides." In the arrow can be seen the scale of prices. The barb of the arrow points to clippings from the Chicago Herald and the New York Times dated only six days before and giving the prices that start where the Circle stops and winds up a dollar.

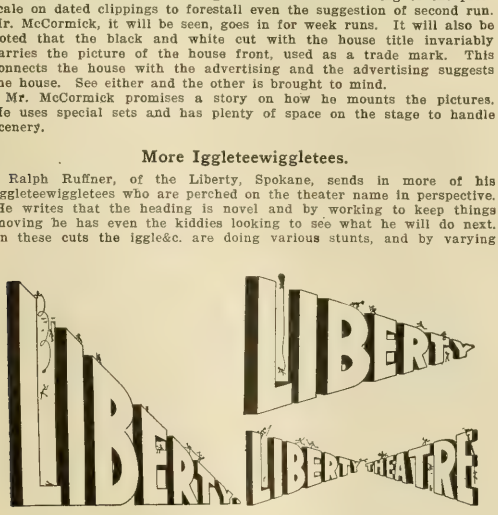
Nothing can be more convincing than the actual showing of the price scale on dated clippings to forestall even the suggestion of second run. Mr. McCormick, it will be seen, goes in for week runs. It will also be noted that the black and white cut with the house title invariably carries the picture of the house front, used as a trade mark. This connects the house with the advertising and the advertising suggests the house. See either and the other is brought to mind.

Mr. McCormick promises a story on how he mounts the pictures. He uses special sets and has plenty of space on the stage to handle scenery.

More Iggleteewiggletees.

Ralph Ruffner, of the Liberty, Spokane, sends in more of his Iggleteewiggletees who are perched on the theater name in perspective. He writes that the heading is novel and by working to keep things moving he has even the kiddies looking to see what he will do next. In these cuts the iggle&c. are doing various stunts, and by varying these stunts the idea can be kept new with a stock heading but new action. Where this is done it will save drawing to have a master cut made with the lettering without the iggle&c. and the print from this on good card, drawing in the figures as may be necessary. The perspective lettering is quite the reverse of new, but the general idea is novel. National advertisers are constantly looking for something of this sort, and the small beings with the long name should keep Ruffner busy for some time to come.



Uses a Six.

William P. Donlon, of the Orpheum, Utica, N. Y., writes:

Herewith you will find my latest effort in the program line. You probably do not recall it, but you suggested this six page form to me over a year ago, when I was using an eight page program wire stitched. I discontinued The Photogram shortly after I received your suggestions, and did not use any for over a year.

Owing to the increased cost of paper, ink, etc., I found the eight page proposition out of the question. I like the six page folder fully as well, and our patrons seem to like it also.

We have a good sized mailing list made up of requests only.

The six page folder works very nicely; much better than an eight, and the saving in the stitching permits more to be put on the program at the same cost. The pages are 3 by 5 inches and the cut shows the layout of the inside pages. The back pages are given to underline and the neat title page. The film chats could be replaced with house talk to good advantage, or better still, one of the underlined pages given to talk about the house, which is more important to the management than gossip of the stars. The color of the ink is varied each week, but the general appearance of the sheet remains the same. These are mailed out in a specially printed envelope, announcing that it is the Orpheum Program. It is all neat and workmanlike and about the only suggestion to be offered is that the cuts be of a screen suited to the quality of the paper. Some of the cuts are too coarse a screen to show up well. The paper has a finished surface and the newspaper cuts look crude and unfinished. We would rather have no cut at all than one not suited to the stock, valuable as attractive cuts are. But that is just the point. A coarse screen cut on fine paper is quite the reverse of attractive and looks like the makeshift it is.

A Mikadow.

No, that is not a misprint. It's the Mikadow, though Mr. Kadow's name is John and not Mike. His house at Manitowoc, Wis., is called Mikadow and if you can spell the name of the town you can stand the seeming play on Mikado. Francis M. Kadow is manager, and he writes us that he has been following this department until he has felt a desire to know what we think about him. We think he has learned a lot, for his specimens show up well. Two four-page folder cards are 3 1/3 by 6¼, printed the long way. We reproduce the front page of one. Inside there is announcement of a Minter picture and a suggestion that you get the same music and service in the afternoon and a better choice of seats. The back page is blank, which is more or less of a waste. The other card is similar, but the front page offers a free admission to the person who will check a list of his preferences. There is a full program here, running over to the back page, and as the preference list is on page two, this sheet can be torn off and filed with full information. There are blanks for the name, address and telephone number of the patron.

Another sample is a fire sale advertisement, done to burlesque a craze for fake fire sales. There have been as many as four fire sales going on at one time, so Mr. Kadow burlesques the general style of these advertisements to announce that "Fire Sales" in very large type, "are not in it with our Tremendous Bargains," the last two words getting big type, too. One film is "Marked down from 15 and 20c to 5 and 10c," and the general type of announcement is followed, though this is a distinct departure:

TUESDAY

Here we are with both feet. A most wonderful picture of a timely subject. "The Wolf Woman," starring Charles Ray Glaum and Howard Hickman. Miss Glaum wears gowns in this picture valued at $25,000, for instance the Devil dress. It clings, oh, how it clings. The management guarantees this dress, if handled right, will break up any home inside of 24 hours.

We would like to see more of Mr. Kadow's work. He seems to use his brains, but he doesn't seem to need criticism.

Good Idea.

A. E. Bayer, of the Opera House, Leighton, Pa., has had another good idea. On the front of the house program he says:

Perhaps you sometimes desire information of the current production at the Opera House, after having mislaid our program.

For your convenience, our program appears daily on the first page of The Evening Leader.

For further information call us on the 'phone. We will answer your inquiries cheerefully—and truthfully.

There is something pleasant about that way of putting it.

Up to Them.

K. B. Wesleder, of the Glendale, Glendale, Oregon, wants to know what keeps the Oregon exhibitors out of the department. Laziness, probably. He writes:

Am enclosing a few samples of my work, and if it will do any exhibitor any good I would like to tell him something that it took me quite a while to learn. I have found that selling talk is the only kind of advertising that pays. Tell something interesting about the picture—just enough to catch the eye and the attention and make them interested and then chop it off. By the way, what's the matter with the Oregon exhibitors? I am a steady reader of Advertising for Exhibitors (of all of the department for that matter) and Oregon seems to be the least mentioned. The little thought represented in the enclosed picture helped business for that night.

Being the only one in town who would give the kids a tow, they reciprocated by making all the noise they could and attracted as much attention as a brass band. There were more sleds in the line, but to show the entire collection would make the picture too small. The close-up will give the idea. I find postcards the best and cheapest program stock for this sort of town, and send samples. The local minister notified me yesterday that he was going to fight my Sunday shows. I met him in the printing office and if the editor prints everything I made the minister admit, the public will mob him. He admitted that pictures were good and did good and that he was going to try and close me up merely because I took his congregation away from him. I sprang the pool halls on him and he admitted he was not trying to close them up because they did not draw his congregation. I have run one minister out of town and I am going to try and put this one under. He tried to argue that the picture theater takes money from the town people, but I pointed out that only the payment for service went out of town and the rest stayed right here. More than that, the church pays no taxes and I pay taxes and rental, license, lights and a lot of other things. I think I've got him going.

We don't exactly like the idea of running ministers out of town, but men of that stamp who wink at infractions of the law that do not affect their own contributions and get after the theaters that do are not fit to be in the pulpit. If a minister makes a fight for strict Sunday observance one can respect his consistency if not his arguments, but to fight Sunday shows and ignore pool rooms is not fighting for principle, but for profit.

One of the post card programs is punched and the top line is a big type "Hang it ——," with "this card is designed to be hung on the wall for your information" in smaller type below, with the program following. The house runs only Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays. The post cards are nicely laid out and the "Hang it" idea will work as well on calendars and door knobs. But Mr. Wesleder has not read the department as carefuly as he thinks if he is just finding out that to draw business an advertisement must rouse curiosity and yet not satisfy it. That is the essence of advertising, to pique curiosity and create a desire to know all about it. He also enclosed a page from Paramount Progress and asks:

What do you think a job like this ought to cost the printer's best customer, only 150 and the books furnished?

We do not know what the prices are in Oregon, but it costs just as much to set up a form and make the press ready for one impresesion as ten thousand and it takes very little longer to run a thousand after the press is started. Speaking generally it should cost from $3 to $5 to set the page, and another dollar or two to make ready and run off the job. Anything under $5 would be within reason and much under that would be cheap. It is not so much the number of impressions that counts. It is the composition and make ready, and this has to be done no matter how large or small the job may be.

Straight Talk.

The Lyceum, Clovis, N. M., has been running a fancy prices picture, and E. R. Hardwick anticipated comment by telling just why it costs more to see this than some other subjects. He has found a variant to the well known Wilby "phonograph" simile, though we do not like it quite as well. If you pay $1.50 for overalls you get overalls, and you get a suit for the $25, but when you buy phonograph records at any price they are always phonograph records. At the same time the simile is well chosen, and the text will help others.

WHY THE PRICES FOR "THE EYES OF THE WORLD" ARE 25c, 50c and 75c.

Several people have asked us why the admission prices for "The Eyes of the World" are 25c, 50c and 75c. The following are the reasons: "The Eyes of the World" is in ten reels, just twice as long as most feature subjects, and the cost to produce it was several times the cost of other five-reel features. Accompaning the picture is a special orchestra and an operator. The picture is put on in much the same manner as "The Birth of a Nation," only on a smaller scale. Harold Bell Wright receives a royalty of probably ten per cent of the receipts. These several things and the excellence of the production make the advanced admission necessary. It is much the same principle as you going to a store to make a purchase. You can get a pair of overalls for $1.25 or a Hart Schaffner & Marx suit for $25. The quality is in both and you get value received for your money, but you cannot buy the $25 suit for a dollar. Neither can you see a picture for 15 cents which cost upward of $100,000 to produce. "The Eyes of the World" will be shown in Clovis even before it is shown in the East. it is now playing a ten weeks' engagement in Los Angeles at Clune's theater. It will not finish there until some time in March. The prices for the picture in Los Angeles are 25c, 50c, 75c and $1. You can see their advertisement in any Los Angeles Examiner. We are making this explanation to show you that you are not being charged more than people of other places.

We do not believe that many "dollar top" pictures will help the business, but one now and then does have an excellent effect in showing how much good entertainment is generally offered at the lesser prices.

Lines.

Ralph Ruffner wants to know if anyone else has used these lines:

A Tangle of Tickles in Three Keys—B. V. D.

A Tangle of Tickles in Three Rips.

He used them a year or so ago but just got around to telling them.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Criticism.

SOME time ago Hector Turnbull offered to supply a criticism of all scripts sent the Lasky company. Some writers complain that this has not been done, but they might, perhaps with better reason, complain when it has been done. One woman writer, who has been playing the game nicely for some years, lately got a letter from Mr. Turnbull, "per J. M.," pointing out some changes necessary in the story. It seems to be a careful and helpful criticism. The changes suggested that it was a Pickford story and should be sent there, and to discover that while the story had been "lifted to a higher level," it was "too conventional, with a main situation too sensational." The first criticism offered no comment upon the conventionality of the theme, nor did it speak of the sensational.

Even more confusing was the same writer's experience in seeking to land a story for Miss Pickford. It was sent to Famous Players and returned with the statement that the company had no one to play the lead. Sent to another company, the editor made the same reply, and suggested that it be sent Miss Pickford, as it was just her type of play. Back it went to Famous Players, and once more it returned as "not suitable to any of our leads." Two other editors suggested that it was a Pickford storp and should be sent there, and when H. R. Durant took on the job the story went in again. He was the first one of the three F. P. readers to discover that it was a Pickford type story, but that they were at that time changing to a more dramatic style, so the story was finally sold, the next time out, to another company. It just goes to show that you never can tell and that criticism is often misleading rather than helpful.

How About It.

One producer declares "the play's the thing."

Another manufacturer writes: "The scenario is the foundation, the bulwark of the photoplay."

A third says that scripts have not kept pace with production methods, for which reason the business lags behind.

And not one of the three has ever made even a half-hearted effort to develop, intelligently and helpfully, the art of writing plays for the camera. They pay fancy prices for book and play rights, they pay four figure checks for the use of names minus idea, but not one of this trio has ever made the slightest effort to help and encourage the type of writer who might, with something to look forward to, develop into a photoplay writing star. Why not do something besides gushing press work?

The True Story.

Recently a woman wrote that she felt morally certain that her story had been stolen because it was based upon an actual happening in the life of a friend. In Technique of the Photoplay we cite an incident which several authors assured us in our editorial days must be new because it happened to some relative, and we cite an entry in Pepy's Diary giving the same happening. In his Plot Catalogue Albert Phillips says:

> Complete plots are seldom the work of nature, but, rather, of the skill and genius of some accomplished builder of plots. Those that fall into the hands of plot collectors are bound to be branded with two damaging stigmas. They are either the finished product of some other plot builder, or prodigies of nature that will no doubt be seized upon as common property by a score of current writers.

The last sentence refers to the strikingly unusual, but even the commonplace is apt to serve as a suggestion and found to have been duplicated. Most of us know of some man or woman whose progress is retarded by the incubus of a close relative, a stick mother, an ailing wife or an invalid husband. It is useless to argue that because a story based upon the life of the person we know is true that all similar incidents are stolen from this particular case. That a story is true is by no means assurance that it is unusual or unused. To the contrary, no practiced writer ever employs the true story that needs no amplification to be a plot.

Inspiration.

Unless you make a business of writing, it is best at the start to watch your periods. When your mind is plot active, don't write the first play that comes to you. Write all the plots you can and keep them against the time you are less inspired. This will give you material for the periods in between, when you can do the more laborious work of development. If you make a business of writing, you must be able to create every day, whether you feel like it or not, but if writing is merely an avocation, humor the situation and learn to make the fullest use of your moments of exaltation. Get your plots then and plod over them when you cannot think of new material. Only the trained writer can think of an idea and slap it down on paper in complete form, and usually he does not, if he can avoid it, knowing that even the best story improves by being ripened.

Prices.

If you offer a story "at usual rates" and are notified that it has been accepted, do not then put a price on the story. Wait and see what you get. Usual rates means the company's usual rate, and not your own usual price. If you have a usual price, tell what it is when you submit the script.

Even in Synopses.

Even in synopses knowledge is required, so study the technique of the synopsis as you would the technique of the continuity. The second part of Technique of the Photoplay (the chapters on plotting) and the chapters on the Synopsis are as much necessary to the synopsis writer as is the rest of the book to the continuity writer and the synopsis writer must study continuity writing now if he would be in line when the fashion changes.

It's Work.

Do not suppose that because companies ask for the synopsis alone that you do not have to do more than put your ideas on paper. You must put down those ideas in the best, most attractive and most practical form. One man wrote lately that he could not seem to get the punch into his synopsis and wanted to know how it could be done. He was told that only through practice would facility come. Just because the synopsis is short is no reason why it should be easy. The shorter it is the more difficult it is to write because condensation with clearness is a fine art indeed. Too many writers are loafing on the synopsis where they should be studying and working.

Sell Story.

Do not try to sell effects when you know, or should know, that the demand is for stories. It is not light effects, close-ups and vignettes that sell a story as you see it on the screen. Perhaps the director was too busy with his little bag of tricks to follow the story and the light effects may overshadow the story that lighted scene is to tell, but what was sold in the first place was a story. The tricks came afterward, so offer story plot and not light effects in your submissions.

Complete.

In a recent lecture at Columbia Vachel Lindsay said that a photoplay was a sentence of which the scenes were words. Look at it in that way and frame your sentence nicely and with complete words. Long ago we pointed out that each important scene should have its punch. It might deal with two or more matters, but there should be one particular idea for that scene, and this should form the reason for the existence of that scene. It cannot be a lot of unmeaning action. It must be some definite happening which advances the story, but in this connection understand as a "scene," all of the action in one spot at one time, even though it may be interrupted by cut backs to other locations. John comes to kill Henry. You may cut in to hide the actual murder, but the two parts of the film showing the killing are a single scene, though divided by another action into two nominal scenes.

Different.

It takes nine tailors to make a man, but one man can, unaided, make a mess of the best script ever written.

Cumulative.

Every time you write a story, no matter how poor it may be, you are one story nearer success. The story you wrote yesterday and fell down on may help a sale five years from now. Figure you are going to live that long.

Use Judgment.

The fact that you wrote a story doesn't make it good.

The THIRD Edition of Technique of the Photoplay

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Coles Projector Being Marketed.

Replying to N. E. Stevens, Calgary, Alberta, recently, the editor threw a small pebble in the general direction of the Coles Picture Machine Corporation. Evidently the pebble landed, for it brought results and brought them quickly. Immediately upon reading the aforesaid article, my old friend, Howard B. Coles, president Coles Picture Machine Corporation, grabbed a stenographer and put her to work on the following:

> I was very much suprised to read, page 682, February 3 issue, your reply to N. E. Stevens, Calgary, Alberta. This was hardly complimentary to us, and not at all in accord with the facts in the case. We are right here in town where we can easily be reached, and I cannot understand why you should publish such a statement without first having found out the present status of our business. In addition to the apparent offense of "maintaining an office," we are now maintaining a loft at 242 West 41st street, which is in charge of an old friend of yours, whose ability I think you will concede. (Huh! Mean Tonnerson, don't you? Well, if you do, he's all right.—Ed.) We are keeping 5,000 fet of floor space pretty well occupied in our operations of assembling and shipping machines. The fact that we did not say anything does not make it any the less true that we are now filling orders, and the machines we are shipping out are giving satisfaction.
> Now, don't you think, Richardson, that when a fellow is making a serious attempt to produce something better in projection machines—something which you and the other authorities will approve of, and is quietly and persistently pursuing that course, and spending a lot of money in doing it, that it is rather unfair just at the time the machine is being introduced to the trade to give us a knock, or at least a hard rub, without first having found out the true conditions? Please think it over and let me know if you don't think I am right. All we want is a square deal and to be judged according to the facts.

Nope, Brother Coles, frankly I don't think I did anything even faintly resembling wrong. Through your acquaintance with me, covering a period of several years, you certainly know that I do not, never have (and never will) chase around after manufacturers. I have spent seven years of hard labor in building up a department which has become an authority in its particular field, and which I believe you will admit has done a large amount of good, in a great many different ways, to machine manufacturers. This being the fact I firmly believe it is nothing more than right that the machine manufacturers should keep this department posted instead of compelling us to seek them out and literally pry loose the desirable information. True, you were right here in the city where you could be reached. Well, Brother Coles, it is no farther from 41st street to 23d, or 17th street, than it is from 23d or 17 to 41st street. I would not knowingly do you or any other manufacturer an injustice, nor do I consider what I said as being in any way, shape, manner or form a knock. I am glad to know that the Coles' machine is finally being placed on the market, but it seems to me you should have advised the projection department of that fact.

New Catalog.

We are in receipt of a new accessory catalog of the Lucas Theater Supply Company, Atlanta, Ga. It is a well gotten up, profusely illustrated book of 151 pages, which may be had by any theater for the asking.

Friend Lucas is a live wire. He is one of the boys who are on the job seven days a week and fifty-two weeks a year.

New Local.

O. Gerke, Sheboygan, Wis., says:

> This is to inform you that an I. A T. S. E. local was recently organized in Sheboygan, Wis., with the following officers and members: H. Fredericks, president; A. Brenchel, vice-president; Otis Gerke, recording secretary; A. Schieble, secretary-treasurer. Members: A. Bendler, J. Silverhorn, F. Kramer, Art Schieble, W. Baartz, F. Hintz, A. Konrad, C. Knocke, W. Madson, W. Thill, W. Kuehl, T. Kernan, A. Damrow, S. Gerlach, J. Schmidt and O. Schmidt.

The department desires to congratulate the Sheboygan men, and wish the new local every possible success. We trust that it will live long, and that its endeavors for the improvement of the condition of its members will meet with success. I would, however, warn the brothers they must not expect to organize a union today and upset the universe tomorrow, because it can't be did. I would also suggest that the use of diplomacy and brains is ordinarily far more successful than the use of the "big stick." Only resort to industrial war (strike) as a very, very last resort, after every other honorable means of adjusting your grievances has been tried and has failed.

Wants to Join.

H. W. Burkitt, Morrison, Ill., says:

> Can you inform me as to what date you will deliver your lecture in the following: Chicago, Milwaukee, Oshkosh and the Tri-Cities? I am very anxious to hear and meet you, and will try to make arrangements to meet you in one of the six cities. I am not a union man, so do you suppose they would allow me to hear you lecture, if I am willing to stand my share of the expenses of the meeting? Have been trying to join the union for the past three months, but can't seem to be able to find out to which local I am eligible. Can you help me out?

No, I cannot help you out, except to tell you that you are eligible to the nearest union to you, and that seems to be the Clinton, Iowa, local of which Mr. Edward W. Schaley, Box 332, Local 332, is secretary. Whether this local has an operator membership or has not I am not sure. If it has not, they might be willing to surrender jurisdiction, in which event you would, I believe, have the right to make application to the Tri-Cities' union, though the acceptance of your membership would be a matter of pure local autonomy, with which neither I or anyone else could interfere.

As to your being allowed to attend the meeting, why you most emphatically will. I will arrive in the Tri-Cities June 25 (subject to one day variation). I will try to remember to write to you when the precise date is finally set. Cannot give you any date with regard to Chicago, or Milwaukee, because I don't yet know that I will lecture in either city, though I shall visit both.

Getting Ready to Fight.

Corporal W. Johnston, formerly of Toronto, Canada, writes from London, England, under date of December 30, 1916:

> I wonder would you care to hear from an old correspondent of the department. I would like to wish you and all the readers of the Moving Picture World a very Happy New Year, although it will be rather late when this reaches you. I am in England training for the front, and, although not allowed to tell you the conditions here, I can assure you, had you seen the Christmas dinner the Canadian troops enjoyed, you would know that we don't starve, by a long shot. Everyone is in the best of spirits, because we realize we are on the winning side of the game, as it were, and shall shortly get back home again, where I will be found in the most up-to-date operating room I can discover when the time comes.

Well, Brother Johnston, let us trust your hopes of an early return are not doomed to be shattered, though it certainly does not look promising at this particular moment. It must be a queer feeling putting in your time training to kill people. Well, God knows we all hope the time is not far distant when that whole crazy proposition will fall of its own weight, Europe will come to her senses, and the butchery of mankind be stopped.

In a personal letter from an operator occurs the following:

> I also wish to state that in my operating room the ports are up so high I must stand on a platform to see the screeen. I have asked the manager to have the holes cut lower, but he says he does not wish to disfigure the front of the operating room; also my manager does not believe in a stool for the operator.

Now isn't that a real bright idea? The manager "does not wish to disfigure the front of the operating room." Dear me, no, he would prefer to disfigure the picture on the screen. Of course the picture is a mere trifle. It is merely the insignificant thing the audience pays its money to look at, and it would be a shame to disfigure the front of a valuable operating room in order to give the operator at least half of an opportunity to put the picture on the screen properly. We can sympathize with this manager and sympathize with him deeply, because he was very evidently absent on the day when the Creator was giving out brains. He probably called next day and got sawdust. At least I can see no other plausible explanation for such a proposition as that. As to the stool, why doubtless having the ports so high the operator can't see the picture he figures there is no use for him to remain at the machine, so why have a stool?

Engine Firing.

C. V. Caver, Stephenville, Texas, asks:

> Can you supply me with wiring diagram for firing a gas engine from a generator? Generator is a 110 volt D. C. and uses a jump spark through Motsinger vibrator. If you cannot give me this information kindly refer to your files for correspondence from an exhibitor in Canada a few months ago who supplied this information, which I am unable at this time to locate.

You will find the diagram on page 1829, September 16, 1916, issue. Presumably, from what you say, you have a full file of the department on tap. If you have not, send 15 cents to the Moving Picture World and the issue will be forwarded immediately.

Quite Some Letterhead.

T. Glucksmann, New Orleans, La., sends me a sample of a new letterhead of Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union Local 293, and asks: "What do you think of it?"

Why its a real warm baby, Brother Glucksmann—real warm. Up in the left hand corner appears something which we by courtesy call a face, the mouth of which is extremely wide open. Presumably this is designed to warn managers that unless they "come across" with desirable working conditions and proper salaries Local 293 will bite them. That is to say this is the impression at first glance, but when we observe that the brow of the face is adorned with a wreath of full blown and very red roses, we conclude that the face is really smiling with glee at the accomplishments of the local in the betterment of New Orleans operating conditions. Occupying something like one-third of the letterhead is a stage, surrounded by a red curtain with yellow ropes, upon the screen of which an I. A. T. S. E. slide is being projected with yellow light. Shame upon you, and then some! Clear up that screen, gentlemen, and get white light. But worse than that a closer glance discloses the fact that there are white streaks in the yellow, so that the resultant light on the screen is spotted. Really, 293, I'm s'prised.

Well it is some letterhead all right, but its darned lucky there is no more of it, else you would be compelled to write the letter on the back of the sheet. I guess, considering the color of that light, the joke is on 293.

Claw Movement Intermittent Sprocket.

Maine inquires:

> Can you get me a claw movement intermittent sprocket for a moving picture machine; also intermittent for camera of the same movement? If you can get them what would the two cost complete ready for installing on the machine?

Your query, Maine, is very indefinite. The machine which has a claw movement has no intermittent sprocket, the claw taking the place of same. I would have to know what kind of machine you have before I could answer your question, and anyhow I don't believe there is a claw movement projector now being manufactured, therefore no projector claw movement is made. You can, however, get a claw movement for a camera. If you will be a little more explicit, I will try to help you.

Small Diameter Condensing Lenses.

The editor has had several inquiries as to where condensing lenses of small diameter can be obtained. Knowing that the Victor Animatograph Company uses such lenses, I asked them concerning the matter. They write as follows:

> We do not know where 3 inch diameter condensing lenses, which we use in Model 2 Victor Animatograph, can be secured in this country. We have, however, perfected an arrangement and are securing deliveries from a foreign maker. We shall be glad to supply these lenses, in restricted quantities, at 75 cents each.

All of which is respectfully referred to anxious inquirers, with notation that it is the only place I know of where these lenses can be obtained.

Carbon Setting.

Roy G. Atkinson, Douglas, Wyo., says:

> As an active member of the "Don't Know It All Society" I would like to have your advice with regard to carbon setting. Have tried every way mentioned in the Handbook, but still cannot get a crater, and there is always a spot on my screen. Have 110 volt, 60 cycle current, taken through a Fort Wayne compensarc, usually pulling 40 amperes at the arc. The > crater seems to form on the lower carbon instead of the upper. Use 5/8 inch Bio cored, both above and below. Have tried 1/2 inch and 5/8 inch solid lower, but it makes it all the worse. Have had best results with the common D.C. set, and a very modified jack knife set.

> the rewinding table. The switch on the edge of rewinding table is for the light to make splices, as shown in the Handbook. The rack in Figure 3 is for slides. We have a Simplex projector with type N lamp. Throw 105 feet to a Mirroroid screen using two 7½ inch condensers with a Gundlack objective lens. House seats 450. Enclosed find 25 cents for question booklet.

I am publishing three of the five photographs sent, one of the five shows the front of the theater, which is of brick and very neat. It will be observed that Brother Atkinson has a place for everything and everything is in its place, which is as it should be. The lens port is cut down to the actual size of the light ray. This is a very important matter, since it shuts off considerable light which would otherwise enter the auditorium and do nothing but harm after arriving. The observation ports are of goodly size, and evidently the pitch in projection is not very much.

As regards carbon setting, why Friend Atkinson, with 40 amperes A. C., you won't get much of a crater. All you can expect is a little rather flat spot, perhaps 3/16 of an inch in diameter, on the carbon point. As a matter of fact, it very frequently does seem as though there was more actual crater on the lower carbon than on the upper, when using 40 amperes A.C. You cannot successfully use solid lower carbons with A.C. I notice you say you get the best results with the ordinary D.C. set. Well, that is what the Handbook tells you, and that is what you will get, too. I would suggest, however, that you jack your amperage up to 60, which is little enough when you are using A.C.; 70 would be very much better..

As to the "spot" on the screen, you have not described it sufficiently to enable me to help you a great deal on that, but using 40 amperes with plano-convex lenses, I would suggest that you try two 6½ inch plano-convex condensers with 22 inches from the center of the condenser combination to the aperture, with the condensing lenses as close together as you can get them without actually touching each other. I think you will find the spot will disappear, and that your general result will be improved. Anyhow, try it and let me hear from you as to the results. If you do what you ought to do, however, and raise your amperage to 60, and still use two 6½ inch condensers, but reduce the distance from the condenser to the aperture to between 19 and 20 inches. In trying this don't judge by appearance of spot at cooling plate, but by results on the screen.

Don't Go to the Cellar.

Fred H. Wood, Fort Scott, Kans., says:

> In re-reading some old copies of the department, I notice Brother Ralph W. Martin's article on the aperture lens. Now, if this lens is what he says it is, it is just what I am looking for. My distance of projection is practically 100 feet. The objectives are 7½ inches, with 5¾ inch back focus. Am using one 7½ and one 6½ inch condenser, with 19 inches between front condenser and aperture. You can readily see it would be impossible to set my shutter at the ideal position, and the result is, there is a great deal of flicker, which I cannot get away from, even by speeding. What I want to know is, are these lenses now available, and if so, where can I get them? I am using one Sixteen Model Motiograph and one Model D Edison, and believe me, the Motiograph does what it is supposed to do in the way of a rock steady picture. I read the department regularly, and you can take it from me, I don't go into the cellar to do it, either. It is no disgrace for a man to educate himself; the disgrace lies in the other direction.

No, Brother Wood, the aperture lens is not available, except in the shape of an objective lens known as the "Sabo." I would suggest that you correspond with the Sabo Manufacturing Company, 240 West 23rd Street, New York City, setting forth your exact conditions, that is to say, the exact throw, exact width of picture, etc. Meanwhile get your lamphouse back as far as you can. I haven't the diameter of your objective, and, therefore, cannot advise you as to what condenser combination you need, but the point is to get your lamphouse back just as far as you can, in order to minimize the divergence of the light ray beyond the aperture, and use condensers which will give you as nearly as possible a 1½ inch spot with the arc located the proper distance from the objective, which latter will vary with the amperage. See Table B, page 701, November 4th issue.

I will be in your city and deliver a lecture on practical projection on April 10th. Hope to meet you there.

Quite True.

A few days ago, just to take the conceit out of them, I sent one of the machine manufacturers a horrible roast I got from an operator on one of their projectors, even as I get similar roasts on all makes of machines. The general manager of the company in question replies as follows:

> This boy utterly forgets the fact that he has an old model, and it may be possible he is buying some of the phony parts that are being produced. And yet this situation brings to my mind the fact that those who make odious comparisons of machines do so when they are in possession of or have information of a model which has more than served its purpose, and was manufactured before the competing machine was even so much as finally developed. We know of situations where, for instance, a No. 5 Power's is working alongside of the latest model of another projector, the latter machine not being out of the factory for more than a period of six months, or a year, whereas the No. 5, alongside of it, has been doing its duty for eight years, yet when the projection of that little, old type machine is not up to the minute there is criticism. We would we had the time and opportunity to bring this matter properly before some of the hearers of the above mentioned criticisms, so that false opinions may not be created.

All of which is quite correct. In order to make a fair comparison between projection machines, one must not only compare machines which are in equally good repair, but which are using the same amperage, same kind of carbon set, and same kind and line up of lenses, etc., but one must also have the same models, that is to say, models of at least the same year. It certainly is not fair to compare a 1917 Motiograph with a No. 5 Power's, or even with a No. 6 Power's, or a SixA Power's.

As a matter of fact, however, aside from details of construction, materials, etc., comparisons are literally odious, because there are so many things which may alter the performance of a projection machine. For instance: place two late model machines, of any make, in two theaters, where the conditions are exactly alike, and the machines may deliver decidely different result, on the screens, due to the fact that one operator is a high class man who understands the technical end of his profession; uses the latest approved carbon set, the proper amperage for size picture and type of screen he is using, and has his revolving shutter carefully adjusted to the local conditions, whereas the other operator may be one of the Oh-this-is-good-enough type who knows nothing about the technical end of his profession and is not interested in anything except the pay envelope Saturday night. This chap connects up a rheostat, a motor generator (if he knows how) or an economizer, finds he gets a fairly good light on the screen and that, to him, is sufficient. He does not consult standard text books, and find out whether he is using too little amperage or too much amperage for the size and type of screen he has. Far be it from him to bother with such trifles. He takes the shutter that came with the machine and sticks it up as close to the lens as he can get it and lets it go at that. He would not know the dissolving point of the light ray from a seven-passenger touring car. He probably never heard of such a thing. The shutter is right, of course. Did it not come with the machine? Well, there you are. He should worry! Of course the result on the screen is nothing like that attained by the first man. But is it the operator who gets the blame? Oh, dear no. It's the poor projection machine which must, perforce, pose as the goat.

Of course there are certain fundamental principles involved in projection machine design which may be fairly criticised, and concerning which comparisons may fairly be made, provided they be made by men who have studied the subject: also one may with justice compare the general workmanship and materials used in various projectors, but in doing this it is necessary that the item of price be taken into consideration. It is hardly fair to compare a machine which can be bought for $300 to $325 with a machine which costs $450. The $450 machine ought to contain better materials, and be of better workmanship.

In conclusion, I would suggest to operators that more often than not the man who criticises the projection machine he is running, is unconsciously and unintentionally criticising only one thing under heaven, and that is himself. I venture the assertion that I can take any standard late model machine on the market today and get good results and good service out of it, always remembering that I have the right to and would expect more from the machine which costs more money than I would from the one which costs less.

In Calm Repose.

The editor is just in receipt of a communication, postmarked January 13, 1917, emanating from the Bay State. This particular letter was addressed to Fred H. Richardson, 125 East 23rd Street, New York City. It contains a money order for $2.00, and says: "Mr. F. H. Richardson: Please send me one of your Motion Picture Handbooks."

For heaven sake where has this good brother been sleeping! I carefully examined the communication, and it positively was not signed R. Van Winkle, as we well might suppose. The Moving Picture World removed from 125 East 23rd Street four or five years ago—in fact, nearer five than four. Yet, here is a man who has not yet discovered the fact that the first edition of the Handbook, price $1.50, is slightly out of date, or that the World does move, or, to quote it more correctly, in this case, has moved.

Has Built Four Models.

Camera Construction:

I have just finished reading your article on moving picture cameras. Was very much interested to note that your ideas of a moving picture camera are very much like mine, but up to date no one has cared to put a camera of this description on the market. Every branch of the moving picture business has advanced except the camera end, and we are still using the camera of yesterday.

It is easy to understand why the camera has not progressed when one takes into consideration the expense and time required to design and build a "perfect" moving picture camera. Almost every professional camera on the market is of the very best mechanical construction, and to employ mechanics who do this work is very expensive. Also, you must consider that every camera must be handmade, as not enough of each model are sold to warrant the building of special machinery for their construction.

Under existing conditions the investor can never hope to make a profit on his investment. I have had a good deal of experience along this line. About five years ago I started to design and build a moving picture camera for professional photographers, without taking into consideration the above stated facts. In this time I have built four different models, and am at present on the fifth, with an outlay of approximately $10,000. I think I have just about the design of camera that the cinematographic photographer would require. You can readily see that with the money and time spent I could never hope to be repaid, even if every company should use my machine. I think other designers have been more businesslike than I, and have hesitated to put a camera on the market, as I myself would have done had I known previously the expense and time involved.

Answers to Correspondents.

G. A. B. writes:

Do you know the address of the Motion Picture Department of the U. S. Government, where I could inquire about camera work?

Several of the Government Departments have motion picture cameras but they are generally operated by employees of the various Government photographic laboratories whose regular employment is still camera work. Most of the work taken by Government photographers is developed and printed by outside concerns, although the Agricultural Department has a small but complete laboratory for the finishing of motion pictures.

Motion pictures are constantly being taken by the Agricultural, Forestry, War, Reclamation and other departments.

A large number of men are constantly employed in the various photographic laboratories of the Government, and civil service examinations for these positions are given in all the large cities of this country at irregular intervals.

If you wish to work for the Government as a motion picture photographer, write to the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., asking that you be notified of the next examination for motion picture photographer. If you are willing to do still camera work also you will stand a much better and quicker chance of employment by taking an examination for a position as a photographer or assistant in a photographic laboratory.

J. E. McG writes:

Enclosed are two pieces of negative, in one of which you will note that the sprocket holes are punched by the claw movement of the camera which is an Ernemann Model "A," and the other piece, which is off of the same strip, is O. K. in the sprocket holes. Now what I want to know is what caused this? The camera was loaded and threaded same as usual, and cranked at two turns to the second and a trifle slower than at times.

Kindly let me know what it would cost to get all of the back numbers of the Department starting—whenever it was started, for I want to get posted on all that I can get in the Department. Also kindly let me know of any good books on the subject.

What do film companies pay for weekly or topical stuff?

In regard to cameras: I have an Ernemann camera; but as regards the manufacturers of this camera, I have written them but do not get an answer to my letters. Are they still in business? And is their Model "A" camera a good machine? I have not bought yet; have rented same for a while with the privilege of buying it. Would you advise me to buy same, or is there another make that you would advise to buy? Any information along these lines I would thank you very much to give.

I am not familiar with the particular model of camera which you have, but the punching between sprocket holes was probably on account of low temperature which causes the film to become very brittle. Most cameras have runners mounted on springs which keep the film in mesh with the claws. When the claws happen to strike the film between the perforations these springs permit the runners to recede until the claw slips down into the next sprocket hole. However, if the runners are not mounted on springs, or if the springs are too strong, the claws will punch through the film instead of slipping down into the sprocket hole as it should do. The remedy for this is to weaken the spring tension, or to thread the film onto the claws while they are in the position of downward travel.

The Photography Department started July 1, 1915. The complete file from that time to date would cost about $5.

Good topical stuff brings from 25 cents to $1 per foot.

The Ernemann camera was manufactured in Germany, and their agency here was discontinued shortly after the war began. I cannot advise you about purchasing this camera as I do not know its condition.

Artistic Titles asks:

I have been trying to make titles with an artistic border; that is, scenes around the title plate. Now, I have made the scenes with black India ink, which would naturally make the designs of black and white. This takes very good. Now here is where I have trouble.

In making the wording on the title plate I have printed this with black, but in taking this on a negative film and then transferring it back to the positive the letters are black.

Will you kindly give me by return mail an exact description on this subject for taking both negative and positive titles? Also which kind of film is most satisfactory, the negative or positive, for taking the negative title direct from the card?

Positive film is the best for making titles, as you can get a clearer black and white than with negative stock. You can make your titles direct in the camera by threading the film with the celluloid side towards the lens. If you wish a negative to print duplicate titles from, make a print in the usual manner from the title made in the camera and use this print as a negative in making further titles.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN and NORMAN STUCKEY.

THE dsign of this department is to diffuse among musicians and exhibitors correct information on all important subjects pertaining to music for the film, to improve the quality of playing and to raise the standard of music in motion picture theaters.

Any question concerning music; suitable instrumentation; questions relating to the organ and mechanical players; in fact, any queries, criticisms or suggestions dealing with the musical interpretation for moving pictures will be answered through this department.

Well-Known Musical Directors.

Hugo Riesenfeld, Rialto Theater, New York City.

OWING partly to the position he holds as conductor of the orchestra at The Rialto, and partly to the rare spirit and intelligence he displays in his work, Hugo Riesenfeld is perhaps the most popular musical director in New York today. Certainly he is known to a larger number of people than anyone else holding a like position. Four times a day, week in and week out, he steps into the pit, welcomed always by a friendly round of applause, and leads his men through a variety of selections which ranges from the most complicated symphonies to the lightest of musical comedy hits. Always earnest, always alert, and always magnetic, he holds his forty musicians to the finest shading of tempo and volume with a nicety which marks the truly gifted artist.

In Mr. Rothapfel, who selects each musical number played at The Rialto, and Dr. Riesenfeld, who arranges the selections and interprets them for the public, the institution has a working combination difficult to excel. Mr. Rothapfel has a natural intuition for the emotional significance of various kinds of music. Dr. Riesenfeld is the thoroughly schooled musician who can make the emotional quality of a selection apparent to those who hear it. Working together, the two produce harmonious results, which are a natural reflection of the harmonious personal relations existing between them. Each understands the other's temperament, each respects the other's distinctive abilities, and though they disagree occasionally upon the respective values of certain compositions, such an enduring friendship has sprung up between them that all disputes, no matter how heated, inevitably end in the linking of arms and an exit in search of a place where all arguments may be drowned in a convivial cup of coffee.

Much of Dr. Riesenfeld's marked success in the field where he is one of the pioneers is due to his pride in his position and his sincere belief in the genuine educational work which the Rialto Orchestra is accomplishing.

"To be the bridge which connects those incompetent to judge good music with those who appreciate the high standards of the Metropolitan Opera—that is the mission of an orchestra such as we have here," he explains, "I feel quite safe in saying, and I say in all sincerity, that because of the thousands of persons whom it reaches every day of the week, this orchestra is more directly responsible for awakening a widespread demand for good, well executed music than any symphony orchestra now in existence."

This explains why a man of Riesenfeld's musicianship, a man who has held the baton over the orchestra in the Imperial Opera House at Vienna, not only consented to devote his talent to the music of an institution dedicated primarily to the screen drama, but has entered wholeheartedly into the work with the firm belief that his organization has a definite, laudable mission to perform. His interest in the musical program is by no means confined to the overtures, the soloists, and the various concerted numbers which make it up. He is just as sincere in his musical interpretation of what is transpiring on the screen. It was this musical interpretation of the pictures which put Mr. Rothapfel in the position he now occupies, and in Dr. Riesenfeld Mr. Rothapfel has an able exponent of his theories along that line.

"The dramas portrayed on the screen, the wondrous views of Nature, the gripping interest of history-making events—all these have their distinct emotional appeal," he says. "It is there to be seized upon by the true musician and translated by him in a way that will move his auditors. By adding the sense of hearing to the sense of sight, the psychological appeal of the film is just doubled and if the selections used be of the better sort—the truly interpretative sort—the film becomes one of the greatest educators the world of music has ever known."

Dr. Riesenfeld was born in Vienna. He graduated as violininst from the Vienna Conservatory and after leaving that celebrated institution he became a concert violinist. He has had the distinction of playing before the German Emperor. When Gustave Mahler, director of the Vienna Opera House, heard him play he engaged him at once, and it was at the Imperial Opera House that Dr. Riesenfeld conducted the ballet and produced the first ballet that he composed himself. It was called "Chopin's Dance," and met with enthusiastic approval. Oscar Hammerstein brought Riesenfeld over to New York and for four years he was engaged at the Grand Opera House as concert master and conductor. Later Klaw & Erlanger engaged him as conductor and produced a comic opera which he composed. Mr. Rothapfel, hearing him interpret a Strauss waltz, engaged him as conductor for The Rialto, where he has had charge of the orchestra ever since the institution opened.

The Art of Registration.

An organist seated before the keyboard to some extent resembles the artist who holds the palette in his left hand. Here are many colors to choose from. Which combinations will produce the desired effect? There are the diapason, string, wood and reed families. What can surpass the fine, rich, honest sonorousness of the diapason stops when united for full effects? And then, the strings, with their characteristic color. These combined on the different manuals seem so pure and yet so penetrating. The mellow wood or flute stops—how different they are from the metal stops! Finally the characteristic reeds with their ear-arresting quality. What beautiful sounds lie here.

In the hands of a discriminating, ignorant, or tasteless player, these rich resources may be rendered hideous and repelling. Careful study and close observation may cause the organist to make combinations which are safe and sane, and therefore not offensive to good taste.

But the feeling for "color"—as is the case in the art of painting—is born, not made. An organist can sit before a thirty stop, three manual instrument, hours a day for years, without exhausting its possible combinations. Of course, many of these would be inartistic or disagreeable, but it would rest with him to learn what to unite.

The organ has frequently been compared to an orchestra, but the comparison is not just to either side. While many names of organ stops are taken from orchestral instruments, yet the similiarity, in a number of instances, ends with the name. It is, of course, radically impossible to obtain a true string effect by means of a column of air passing through a metal tube, yet the names of the entire family of stringed instruments (including a number now obselete) are freely used by organ builders in their nomenclature of stops. Then, in regard to what is generally termed "tone color," an effect with an oboe, a clarinet, or a horn may be desired by the orchestral composer. He writes in such a manner that the special instrument called for is emphasized, but in only one note at a time. But the organist who has his oboe stop out can only make a single note prominent by playing it on a separate manual from that containing the other parts. The stop affects all other keys on the same manual. With the orchestra a variety of kaleidoscopic color effects may continually go on by means of instruments being added or dropped, but the organist cannot do this continually without injuring the flow of the music; so he must depend more upon a set of registration.

He is therefore necessarily more limited in obtaining variety of color than is the orchestral conductor, and sometimes must employ stops which he would prefer to omit. Indeed, an organist is apt to have his judgment calloused by the difficulty in obtaining a variety of registration, and thus become accustomed to retaining one or more stops when he feels that they should be discontinued. The reeds are liable to suffer in this respect. Their effectiveness is frequently abused by those who consider that they should employ them at every opportunity.

The present writer here takes advantage of his position and experience to give a few points of advice on registration to those who might have occasion to profit by them:

Be sparing of reeds; use the tremolo very seldom, and then only for special effect; do not use many 16-foot stops for ordinary playing—it makes the tone sound "thick"; be careful of the use of the 2 and 4-foot stops; some may say that the organ sounds like "a box of whistles"; good, 8-foot tone besprinkled with 4-foot is what is reliable; combine diapasons, strings and wood with discrimination; avoid bizarre effects, and especially loud playing. A few salient features in his work such as these as a basis, with occasional legitimate departures, may give an organist a reputation as being skillful and tasteful in registration.

Worth While Songs.

Five songs which will certainly find a conspicuous place in concert hall and theater very promptly are "I Am Thy Harp," "A Little Friendship Song," "A Weesome Little Baby," "Requiem" and "I Love You, Dear," compositions by Hallie Cooke Caldwell, which are from the press of Luckhardt and Belder of New York.

These songs are far above the average. The musical conception is original and fine, the accompaniments ideal for the piano, and the flow of melody is in strictest harmony with the charm of the beautiful poems. The collection is altogether worthy of immediate and serious attention.

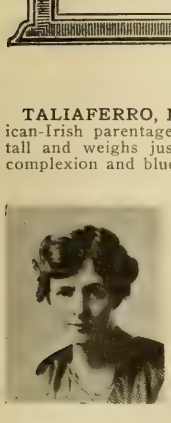
COMPILED BY THE STATISTICAL DEPARTMENT

TALIAFERRO, Mabel. Born in New York City. American-Irish parentage. Is five feet two and one-half inches tall and weighs just one hundred pounds. Fair hair and complexion and blue eyes. Miss Taliaferro has been on the stage since before she can remember and at one time was perhaps the best known player of child parts on the American stage. She has appeared in seventy-one stage plays, including such widely contrasting productions as "Blue Jeans" and "Children of the Ghetto." In 1911 she played a special engagement for the Selig Company as Cinderella in that well remembered five-reel production, but did not follow up this success until lately when she joined the Rolfe-Metro forces. Since then she has been seen in "Her Great Price," "The Snowbird," "God's Half Acre," "The Dawn of Love," "The Sunbeam," "A Wife by Proxy," and other five-reel feature plays.



Mabel Taliaferro

DARLING, Grace. Born in New York City. Scotch-American descent. Is five feet six and one-half inches and weighs 129 pounds. Blond hair, dark blue eyes. Miss Darling made an unusual screen debut, for she first appeared in a cross country tour for Hearst's weekly, as most fans will remember; a sort of Seeing America First trip. She also played in "The Perils of Pauline" for Pathe and in "Our Mutual Girl" for the Mutual. Her more recent hit was scored in "Beatrice Fairfax," produced by the Hearst International studios, and she is still under engagement to that company. She has had no stage experience, making her debut directly into pictures, and though primarily selected for her photographic qualities, she has given good account of herself in heavy dramatic work. She is an ardent autoist and fond of country life, golfing, swimming and dancing, not to mention automobiling.

Grace Darling

CHAPLIN, Charles Spencer. Born in France. English parentage. Is five feet six inches tall and weighs 135 pounds. Dark complexion, black hair and blue eyes. Mr. Chaplin made his debut with the Fred Karno companies. Mr. Karno, an English producer, has a sort of sketch factory, and Mr. Chaplin began with him when a youngster and worked up to stellar parts. Later he played under Charles Frohman, and in October, 1913, he went to the Keystone Company, appearing first in "Making a Living." It might have been called earning a living, for those were the strenuous custard pie days. For a time Mr. Chaplin was merely among those present, but not for long. He presently became an even larger proposition than the Keystone. Then he played for a year under the Essanay management and then signed his now-famous contract.

Charles Spencer Chaplin

HALL, Ella. Born in New York City. Miss Hall is not content with "American parentage," for she is proud of her New England ancestry. Is five feet one inch tall, and weighs a flat hundred pounds. Blond hair, light complexion and dark blue eyes. When she was but nine years old she made her stage debut in one of the Belasco companies and remained with that manager for two seasons. She does not recall the first picture in which she appeared, but it was one of the old Mary Pickford Biographs, and she was but sixteen years of age at the time. Later she went to Kinemacolor, but it was with her present connection, the Universal, that she gained stellar honors. The parts she takes the greatest contentment in are the title role in Jewel, as Ruth Gallon in "The Master Key," and Gabrielle in "We Are French," but this by no means exhausts the list of successes. She drives her own car.

Ella Hall

CORBIN, Virginia La Verne. Born in Prescott, Arizona. Her father is French-English and her mother Scotch-Irish. She is but four years of age and weighs 37 pounds, but is growing. Light hair, violet eyes. She made her screen debut in December, 1916, and before that had posed professionally for artists. A regular "tear shedder," she is in demand for emotional parts and has played with many of the famous screen stars in Los Angeles. Her debut was made with Marie Empress in "The Chorus Girl and a Kid," and she has played with Universal, Lasky, Metro and others, her present connection being Fox. She is a versatile little entertainer and in demand in Los Angeles for club and society entertainments, for tear production is by no means the limit of her art and she is a singer and dancer of merit. Children who can cry without looking as though their grief had come from a recent spanking are in demand and she is a tragedienne in miniature, though naturally she has a sunny disposition.

SLATTERY, Nellie. Miss Slattery withholds details as to her personal characteristics. She made her stage debut in 1907 with Yorke and Adams in "Playing the Ponies." She remained with them for three years and turned her attention to vaudeville, appearing with Charles Slattery. In 1912 she became interested in motion pictures and her initial appearances were made with the Biograph company, playing under Tony O'Sullivan. Starting with small parts, she rapidly rose to more important character and heavy roles. Changing over to Universal, she remained with this organization until the exodus from the New York studios, when she turned a deaf ear to offers for the Coast and connected herself with the Fox, her present connection. Though a young woman, she has made grande dame parts particularly her own around the Fox studio.

"When Love Was Blind," Five-Reel Thanhouser Production, Numbers Eleven and Twelve of Patria, and the Fifth Instalment of "Mystery of the Double Cross."

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"When Love Was Blind."

WHEN a writer has made an unusual success in one branch of work it is generally safer to stick to that line of endeavor. Agnes C. Johnston, the author of "When Love Was Blind," a five-reel photoplay produced by Thanhouser, has earned an envious reputation for her whimsical, often irresponsible, but always entertaining, stories for the screen. In the play under discussion she has attempted to give an authentic reproduction of several serious phases of life, and has quickly found herself beyond her depth. Lack of experience in the deeper moods of existence prevents much of her story from ringing true—an indictment that makes the entire picture unworthy of serious consideration.

Scene from "When Love Was Blind" (Pathe).

The efforts of Florence La Badie, who heads the cast, and of Frederick Sullivan, director of the picture, lend every possible assistance to Miss Johnston's story, but the scenario is never worth while.

"Sunset Falls."

The scenes of "Sunset Falls," the eleventh instalment of "Patria," take place on Patria Channing's ranch on the Rio Grande. Baron Huroki is just across the border, and sends a number of Mexicans to raid the ranch. Donald Parr, who accompanied Patria West, is captured by the marauders and carried over the Mexican line. Patria finds this out, follows, and succeeds in freeing her lover. Pursued by Huroki and the outlaws, Patria and Donald find themselves on the edge of a high cliff. Their one chance of escape is to jump from the cliff, and they take it. As an exhibition of genuine nerve, it is equal to the stunts of the professional dare-devils. The entire number is full of action and, in many respects, quite the best of the serial.

"Peace 'Which Passeth All Understanding.'"

Another Mexican raid figures in the twelfth instalment of "Patria," and is a vivid illustration of the danger run by many American families who lived on the border line. During the raid an American girl, spiritedly played by Marie Walcamp, is carried off, but not before she puts up a fight that forces the men engaged with her to defend themselves in reality. The details of the raid are carried out with grim realism, the number ending with Patria preparing to effect the rescue of the captured girl.

"The Life Current."

Number five of the "Mystery of the Double Cross" serial has several moments when the thrills are sufficiently strong to satisfy the most ardent lover of sensational drama. Bentley gets Philippa to accept him in this instalment, and tries harder than ever to put Peter out of the way. He attempts to hang him, but the Masked Stranger appears in the nick of time. In the struggle Peter is shot. He is then hurried to a hospital. During the operation Bentley cuts the electric light wires, and again the Masked Stranger is on hand to foil the villain. He holds the wires together and the operation is continued, the number closing at a critical moment for Peter and the other person concerned in the action.

A full supply of shocks go with the two reels, and Mollie King continues to look as beautiful as ever, even to the jaded eyes of the hardened reviewers.

"The Clock"

Franklyn Farnum and Agnes Vernon Featured in Refreshing Five-Reel Bluebird Photoplay Made From Story by Aaron Hoffman.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THERE is a refreshing air of naturalness about "The Clock," a five-reel Bluebird photoplay made from a story by Aaron Hoffman, the featured players being Franklyn Farnum and Agnes Vernon. No great dramatic moments occur during the unfolding of the plot, but the doings of the characters are always of interest and are frequently highly amusing. The love affair between Jack Tempest and Vivian Graham forms the theme, an unhappy failing of Jack's to realize that punctuality is a virtue being the stumbling block in his course of true love. Vivian finds a way to cure him of his bad habit, and to start him on a promising business career; also, to become Mrs. Jack. The clock is worked into the action very cleverly.

The picture is not at all pretentious, but so much good taste is shown in everything pertaining to its production that the impression it makes is one of unmixed satisfaction. The characters are human beings, and their actions are never strained for theatric effect. William Worthington has directed the production skillfully, and put in many bits of business that add considerably to one's enjoyment.

Scene from "The Clock" (Bluebird).

It goes without saying that such a result could not have been accomplished without the co-operation of a capable cast. Franklyn Farnum as Jack Tempest is more youthful in spirit than in appearance, but makes the character a most likeable chap, and acts him in a natural, easy fashion that just suits the atmosphere of the play. Agnes Vernon as Vivian Graham realizes the type of well-bred young woman she is intended to represent, and shows a commendable aptitude for doing the right thing at all times. Frank Whitson as Bob Barrett, Mark Fenton as John Graham, Frederick Montague as George Morgan, and Willis Marks as Brandon are the other members of the excellent cast.

"The Family Honor"

Robert Warwick Leads Cast of Five-Reel Peerless Photoplay That Has Good Dramatic Moments—Released by World.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THERE is material enough in "The Family Honor," a five-reel Peerless photoplay, to supply two scenarios with dramatic situations. Adrian Gil-Spear, the author, has taken for his motive the love of two brothers for the same woman, and treated it after the manner of the French school of plot-making, from which it sprang. The woman in the case, a grand opera singer, first attracts the younger brother, and he proceeds to ruin himself for her. The elder brother seeks the singer, to demand that she cease endangering the family honor, and becomes infatuated with her himself. Anthony, the younger brother, steals from his father in order to buy jewels for Marcia, and Stephen, the elder of the two men, takes the crime upon himself. His love awakens the woman's better self, and she is made a member of the family whose honor she helped to endanger.

Scene from "The Family Honor" (World).

The preceding outline barely hints of the amount of incident in the story. A scene that first saw the footlights in the land of Dumas and Augier is where the father of Anthony puts a revolver in his son's hand and bids him blow out his brains, for the sake of the family honor. A female "David Garrick" scene in which the singer tries to disillusionize Anthony by the freedom of her actions at a supper party and several scenes taken during a performance of "Tosca" are portions of the plot.

The somewhat feverish nature of the story, and its blending of domestic life with that of the stage, requires that it be given careful treatment at the hands of a properly selected cast. This demand has been met. Robert Warwick plays the elder brother and Henry Hull the younger. They sustain the contrast between the characters of the two men with sound discrimination, and are equal to all the situations. June Elvidge is the opera singer. Her appearance justifies the infatuation of the two brothers, and she plays her scenes for their full value. Her steady improvement in the finer effects of screen acting is evident with each succeeding picture in which she appears. Gerda Holmes, Alec B. Francis and Frank Beamish are thoroughly competent members of the cast.

The production, directed by Emile Chautard, and photographed by Lucien Tainguy, is marked by adequate settings and skilled handling of the cast.

"High Finance"

Five-Reel Fox Photoplay That Permits George Walsh to Revel in the Role of an Athletic Hero.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ENCOURAGED, evidently, by the manner of his reception in plays of this type, George Walsh as the hero of "High Finance" is again seen in a role that calls for physical prowess and acting ability, in equal parts. This Fox photoplay was written by A. F. McGrew Willis, from a story by Larry Evans, and is not at all novel in plot. The star acts with great gusto, however, and, as the character he portrays is the best substitute we have in these prosaic days for the swashbucklers of old romance, the daring young gentlemen created by Dumas and the rest, it is unwise to become too critical. Most of us are so thankful to escape from the realities of life, we welcome with open arms a story that pretends to be nothing but good-natured fooling with a number of persons who don't mind being laughed at, even in their most serious moment.

The plot has to do with another of that numerous family of wealthy youths who start out to show father that he is an easy mark when they determine to beat him in a business deal—and who always bring back the kale. The particular wealthy youth in "High Finance" gets the better of father on a lot of worthless mining stocks, and puts one over on the uncle of his sweetheart at the same time. The young lady is neatly played by Doris Pawn. The brace of elderly financiers are given much unction by Charles Clary and Herschel Mayall. Willard Louis is amusing as Pringle. Rosita Marstini and William Marr are capable in their respective roles. The production reflects credit upon the management; also upon the director, Otis Turner.

"The Test of Womanhood"

Stuart Holmes the Star of a Foggy Five-Reel Photoplay Taken from a Foreign-Made Stage Drama of a Past Decade.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

IN THE days of Charles Frohman's Empire Theater Stock Company a Paul Potter adaptation of a French play was produced by the organization, and called "The Conquerors." "The Test of Womanhood" is a screen version of the same play. The theme is dramatic, but unpleasant, with war for a background; and there are scenes of conflict between the opposing forces. A town is invaded and a number of the conquerors take possession of a chateau in company with several easy mannered burlesque queens, and drink and carouse to the scandal of the owners of the house. One young officer tries to force his attentions on the companion to the mistress of the chateau, and pursues her when she takes refuge in the inn where she was formerly employed.

During a struggle with the officer, the girl faints and awakes to the knowledge that she has been assaulted. She finds the inn-keeper lying dead on the floor, and supposes that he has been killed in her defence. After considerable twisting and turning of the plot, it is revealed that the inn-keeper was the guilty man. The officer had a revulsion of feeling as he held the unconscious girl in his arms, and, placing her in a chair, he left the inn. The inn-keeper was about to take advantage of the helpless young woman as the officer re-entered the room. In the fight that followed, the officer killed the inn-keeper in self-defence. A case of true love results between the officer and the girl.

Whatever interest such a story may possess for the moving picture public is nullified by the faulty construction of the scenario and the bad direction of the entire production. Foggy is as good a word as any to describe the result. There is an abundance of physical action in the picture. Detachments of armed men dash about on horseback, cannon and musketry belch forth smoke, walls crumple, crowds of frightened men and women flee before hostile troops—but all to no apparent purpose. Of intelligent direction there is scarcely a trace.

Scene from "The Test of Womanhood."

Under such conditions it is not worth while to criticise the acting. Stuart Holmes and his associates labor heroically against such adverse circumstances, but it is a losing fight from the start.

Director Raymond Wells is filming at Universal City a five-reel photoplay entitled "Jimmy Dolan, Prince," featuring Jack Mulhall. There is more or less comedy running throughout the play, which has a distinct French atmosphere, but with an American boy in the lead.

MUCH action has been crammed into the two reels that comprise the latest release of Kalem's "The American Girl" series, entitled "The Vulture of Skull Mountain." The title is more or less indicative of the type of story written by Frederick R. Bechdolt for this episode. Mystery is uppermost at all times, and the film holds interest unwaveringly. It is a thrilling western.

Scene from "The Vulture of Skull Mountain" (Kalem).

Madge King, her father and the ranch superintendent each is made to feel the power of the Vulture, but in the end the villain is downed. The Vulture is a bandit who holds forth on Skull Mountain, and the spectator is made to feel several shivers during the running of the two reels. Marin Sais, as usual, plays the lead, and is supported by Frank Jonasson, Edward Hearn, Ronald Bradbury, Edward Clisbee and Hart Hoxie. Directed by James W. Horne.

"The Lone Point Feud."

Besides showing an unusually daring feat on the part of Helen Gibson, this one-reel number of the "A Daughter of Daring" series tells a much more interesting story than have many preceding releases. Miss Gibson this time leaps from a bridge over a railroad into the tender of a rapidly moving locomotive. The stunt gets over well. The Lone Point operator takes the chance in order to avert a collision between the train on which the superintendent is eloping with the Squire's daughter, and the engine which has been commandeered by the Squire.

"The Whip"

Eight-Reel Screen Version of Drury Lane Melodrama by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton Full of Thrills —Produced by Paragon Films, Inc.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE Drury Lane melodrama, "The Whip," which had a long stage run in England and also in this country, has been turned into an eight-reel screen play, under the management of the Whip Motion Picture Company, the production having been made by Paragon Films. In its original form the Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton drama was a genuine thriller, and abounded in sensational climaxes. The scenes were English, the play taking its name from a race horse called "The Whip." The story itself was not much out of common, but the features of the plot were exciting enough to insure the success of any melodrama. The main motive, the efforts of the villain to injure the horse that carries the fortunes of the good people in the drama, brought in a realistic railroad wreck and a sure-fire finish, where the heroine donned a jockey's blouse and breeches and rode a race to victory. A fox hunt was another feature of the play.

In adapting "The Whip" for use on the screen, the story is made to open on the other side of the Atlantic, but is quickly transferred to the United States. A number of the principal characters come together on shipboard, and the drift of the plot is here foreshadowed. The ship scenes are the least satisfactory portion of the picture, the illusion being marred by the use of three different boats to indicate the crossing of one ocean liner. With the landing of the ship at New York the production improves greatly, and the big sensations of the story are pictured on the screen with a degree of realism that far surpasses the canvas sets of the spoken stage.

The fox hunt, in which a live fox is used, is the real article, the scamper across the country being shown in every detail. A well contrived auto smash-up is another sensation, and the railroad wreck forces one to hold his breath from apprehension while "The Whip" is taken from a freight car an instant before a passenger train crashes into it and rolls into the ditch. Then, there is the race at the finish, and Diana Beverly, on the back of the rescued animal, dashes under the wire a winner! The old thrill is all there. Most of the comedy in the original has been wisely left out. The scenes at the Wax Works Show have been retained, however, but occur at the Eden Musee, in place of Madame Tussaud's.

The picture is excellently cast, and was directed by Maurice Tourneur. The principals are Irving Cummings, Warren Cook, Paul McAllister, Alfred Hemming, Dion Titheradge, Alma Hanlon, June Elvidge, and Jean Dumar. Aside from commending the acting, a special word of praise is due Dion Titheradge and Alma Hanlon. Both are required to ride race horses during the action; they do it like professionals.

"The Whip," in pictures, is a worthy successor to the long line of Drury Lane dramas that began with "The World" and have thrilled theatergoers for four decades. If the present generation hasn't had all the primitive emotions refined out of it by sex plays, pathologic dramas and other intellectual oddities, the red blood in its veins will respond to the sensations of a thriller whose highest aim is to entertain.

"The Girl in the Checkered Coat"

Dorothy Phillips in Dual Role in Five-Reel Bluebird—Directed by Joseph De Grasse.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

THE sort of a picture that an exhibitor can book with the assurance that its paper claims are backed up on the screen is "The Girl in the Checkered Coat," a five-reel Bluebird slated for release on April 23. Dorothy Phillips is seen in a dual role in a photodrama that, begun on the foundation of a story by Magnus Ingleton, has been builded in such a manner by Director Joseph De Grasse as to make a strong structure. Miss Phillips' work in this picture is one of the best dual characterizations that has ever been done for the screen. She plays the parts of two sisters whose moral characteristics are as opposite as are the views of Washington and Berlin in a manner that leaves the spectator almost doubting that the two parts are played by the one person. The illusion that the two parts are played by two persons is further carried out by a number of excellent double-exposure scenes.

Miss Phillips is ably supported. Lon Chaney, as the villain, does his usual good work. William Stowell and Mrs. A. E. Whiting are also capable.

The picture proves that "as the twig is bent the tree will grow." We see the effect of environment and early training on two daughters of mismated parents. In childhood the girls are thrown practically upon their own resources. There is mystery and romance in the story. Some may be disappointed at the ending of the picture, inasmuch as the two girls are never brought to the realization that they are sisters. Interest is sustained throughout the five reels, though, by frequent indications that this is about to happen several times.

Scene from "The Girl in the Checkered Coat" (Bluebird).

The picture has been produced by Mr. De Grasse in a manner that leaves little to be desired in the line of lightings and other details that help. Credit is due for an almost unbroken continuity to Ida May Park, who scenarioized Mr. Ingleton's story.

A number of short stories of railroad life, by F. Lovell Coombs, that comprise the contents of "The Young Railroaders," will be produced in one-reel length for release on the Conquest Pictures program.

Pallas Shows Two Good Pictures

"As Men Love" Has Real Strength and "The Bond Between," Featuring George Beban, Will Interest.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THERE are situations of real strength in "As Men Love," the Pallas release for March 29. It is a story of deep friendship between two men, pals from childhood; of self-sacrifice on the part of one in order that the other may suffer a lesser shock than he would have experienced had he known the truth. House Peters and Jack W. Johnston have the roles of the friends. Myrtle Stedman is Mrs. Gordon, the wife who falls in love with the chum of her husband and is promptly spurned.

Scene from "As Men Love" (Pallas).

In spite of the fact that the picture gets away to a not impressive start, after the first 1500 feet the interest picks up sharply and holds tightly. There are tense situations, the kind that thrill as well as stir. Miss Stedman as the faithless wife will not be liked—she will be heartily disliked—which, after all, probably is a tribute to her art. Mrs. Gordon is a type of woman who must reap her entertainment from others. When her husband, an ambitious architect, labors over his library table in the evening she wanders about the house or moons in the garden. Books and the company of her silent mate have no attraction for her. Lois Zellner has made her Mrs. Gordon a character on whom no sympathy need be wasted. All of that goes to the two men and a second woman.

There is a fourth person in the cast, the third in whom interest markedly centers. It is Helen Jerome Eddy in the role of Marjorie Gordon, the sister of the injured husband. It is a combination of a splendid player and an appealing role.

The picture is carefully staged by E. Mason Hopper. The acting is of a high quality. "As Men Love" should make a fine release.

"The Bond Between."

On April 2, Paramount will issue "The Bond Between," a story featuring George Beban. The script, too, is Mr. Beban's, and it has been produced by Donald Crisp. The player is seen not as an Italian, but in his alternative characterization, that of a Frenchman. He seems to play either equally well.

Mr. Beban has the role of Papa Duval, a teacher of the piano, living in a French boarding house in New York. There is present the atmosphere of Bohemia—the musician is surrounded by a trio of cronies, the birthplaces of which have been sprinkled among the warring nations of Europe. The international side of the story provides a number of incidents which give the picture a topical touch. The treatment accorded to these situations, however, is unusual, and on the whole most welcome. The cordial relations of the five are strained in the discussions of the coming war, but friendship rises superior to these differences when trouble falls on the old music teacher, and his former companions rally to his aid.

Heart interest is the long suit of Mr. Beban's pictures. There is a measure of this most necessary quality in "The Bond Between," but hardly in the same generous quantity we are led to expect in Mr. Beban's productions. The player is surrounded by a long and competent cast. John Burton, Nigel De Brullier and Paul Weigel have the roles of the international trio. Vola Vale has the female lead, that of a secret service operative who takes lessons on the piano in order to determine if the son of Duval is concerned in the operations of smugglers of paintings and falls in love with the son. Eugene Pallette is the smuggler and Colin Chase is young Duval.

The major charm of the story lies in its portrayal of the Bohemian quarter, in the camaraderie of the follow-artists, and the interesting way in which it uncovers the activities of the smugglers of old masters.

Triangle Program

"Her Official Fathers," Five-Reel Fine Arts Comedy, with Dorothy Gish, and "Sweetheart of the Doomed," Five-Reel Ince-Kay Bee Drama, with Louise Glaum.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

"HER Official Fathers" is a light and pleasing comedy, short weight in material but made very entertaining through clever handling and a fine cast, with Dotty Dimple Dorothy at her best. Without her personality, or that of some equally attractive and capable interpreter, the play would have dragged badly at the outset, as the period of preparation is almost destitute of story interest. As it is there exists from beginning to end a lot of movement back and forth through entrance halls and exits that is pure and simple padding. It is all nicely handled, however, and the author develops his characterization with skill. It is this clever characterization which gives the young acress her opportunity. She is the innocent and capricious daughter of a bank president whose death sets up a struggle among his associates for her hand in marriage. She promises to marry two of them on her birthday and weds one of the clerks instead.

With such slender material, without other distinct or amusing characterization than that of the principal, it is astonishing that the story gets over with any effect, but it does. Prime factor is Miss Dorothy of expressive face and duck walk. Her wonderful eyes combine successfully with her mouth in exceptionally clear revelation of feeling, a constant study in psychology, and she has improved decidedly in this form of interpretation, but she still lacks poise and grace of movement. Youthful by nature, eternally so, it is an easy matter for her to play the part of a rollicking, care-free girl, but one role becomes a self-imposed limitation—she must rise to greater adaptability. She and her fine support, as it is, carry this comedy to where it will please almost any audience.

"Sweetheart of the Doomed" has some very strong situations—there are signs of power in all branches of artistry, but there is a prevailing weakness which has apparently passed supervision at the studio and may escape the attention of people in the audience—a weakness to be summed up in the word "exaggeration." There is a tendency observable throughout to make the characters incongruously important—the men are Generals and Marshals of France. It would have been more convincing if they had been men of minor military rank and high social standing, especially as they are concerned with the personal acts of a dispatch-handling spy and an adventuress. Then there is an effort to intensify situations until they become theatrical, such as a spy continuing to telephone after the shack he was in was blown to atoms. That incident could be cut out to advantage. This undue enlargement becomes jarring when an adventuress so well known everywhere as to be easily recognized becomes the fiancee of a great general in France, in a country where even the publication of marriage intentions brings out the character and standing of the contracting parties.

Where story interest depends largely upon unique social conditions those conditions deserve careful study, for the sake of plausibility. This is especially true in the case of Ince products, where infinite pains are taken to present the correct atmosphere. The fine settings, both interior and exterior, in "Sweetheart of the Doomed," together with splendid interpretation by Miss Glaum and her support save the play. Miss Glaum is everywhere effective, most so in the soul redemption, making it almost a pity that her way to redemption was so commonplace. She should have gone to her duty through a powerful native impulse, one springing straight from her heart through the purest and finest love of an adventurous career, instead of merely executing an assignment. There is power in the play that may pull with the average audience, but there are some very rough places in the construction.

"Mothers of France"

Sarah Bernhardt in Six-Reel Photoplay Made in France Contains a Powerful Appeal to Patriotism—Released by World Film Corporation.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

IT IS a difficult matter to review "Mothers of France," the six-reel photoplay now being released by the World Film Corporation, from its artistic side, and write of its story as a piece of cleverly devised fiction. The reality of it, the knowledge that it is a human document which is being rewritten at the present moment in hundreds of French villages, makes it seem as if one were witnessing an actual occurrence or recording history in the making. The tale that Jean Richepin has provided to sound a powerful appeal to patriotism and show other nations the spirit that animates the wives and mothers of his native land has the simplicity of truth. It takes the inhabitants of a small community, and reveals how rich and poor alike are bound together by a common desire to serve France—to make any sacrifice demanded by the war. The titled lady at the big house gives her husband and son, and after they are gone pauses only long enough in her work at the hospital to comfort the humble women of the district who have parted with their loved ones.

The touch of romance woven about the pretty peasant girl Marie and her two lovers, and the sacrifice the schoolmaster, blinded in the trenches, makes for the woman he loves, is like a leaf from a war correspondent's notebook, and from first reel to last it is impossible to follow the unwinding of the story with anything like composure. Its grip upon the emotions is extraordinary. Told with dignity and restraint, it fans the fires of patriotism to a white heat. It is a call to duty that will not be denied.

Another cause for congratulation is the fine quality of the picture's production. With a cast led by Sarah Bernhardt and comprised of actors that are actuated by the thought that they are engaged in a sacred duty—helping to tell the world how France is doing her share in the great war—the depth of feeling put into the picture is its greatest artistic merit. In addition to this, the verity of the locale and of everything else appertaining to the pictures, especially the scene at the statue of Jeanne d'Arc in front of the ruined Cathedral at Rheims, places "Mothers of France" in the highest class of moving picture productions.

The Price of Her Soul

Six-Reel Variety Films Photoplay That Attempts to Make a Right Out of Two Wrongs.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

FROM a dramatic point of view, "The Price of Her Soul" is a well-made and effective photoplay. Morally, it is beneath contempt. Put out under the guise of a preachment against the drug evil, it upholds an example of mental depravity that will prove quite as pernicious to the immature or poorly balanced mind as the evil it claims to oppose.

The writer of this review is firmly of the conviction that the men who can enact the laws that will properly control the sale of cocaine do not need to view a screen play depicting the horrors of the traffic in order to be awakened to their plain duty. The less the rest of humanity are enlightened on the use and abuse of the drug, the better. Where the knowledge is put to a good use in one case, it is abused in double that number. It is but fair to add that in "The Price of Her Soul" the use of the drug is shown with only sufficient fidelity to make clear the story.

The main points in the plot are as follows: Snap Gun Conner, a young gentleman with a criminal record, discovers that his younger brother has become a dope fiend, and determines to trace the sale of the drug until he reaches the man at the head of the traffic. This man is a prominent physician, the father of the girl Connor loves. Alive only to his passion for revenge, the ex-convict abducts the doctor's daughter, and traps her into forming the drug habit. So addicted does the girl become to the drug that she offers to exchange her virtue for a supply of the narcotic. When the man who loves (?) her has degraded her sufficiently to satisfy his lust for revenge, he takes her home, and father and daughter learn the truth about each other.

In obedience to the demand for a "happy ending," Connor takes his victim and his brother to a mountain retreat, and cures them both; he then marries the girl.

The moving picture screen keeps a sharp eye on physical depravity; what about mental depravity? Here is an example of making a hero out of a man whose moral instincts and craving for revenge put him on the level of a beast. Had he pursued the doctor alone, and assisted justice to mete out to him the punishment he so well deserved, no fault could be found; but, to take an innocent girl and deliberately fasten upon her so revolting a vice—— The reader is permitted to finish the sentence after his own light.

The glorification of such a method of revenge in its effect upon the grade of intellect that will be attracted by "The Price of Her Soul" must result in more evil than of good. It is an attempt to transform two wrongs into a right. It cannot be done.

"Apartment 29"

Earle Williams Featured in Five-Reel Vitagraph Production of Fair Strength.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

A PROGRAM offering of fair strength is "Apartment 29," a five-reel Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature in which Earle Williams is featured, and which will be released on April 9. The story presented through the film is of the sort that usually makes its biggest hit with middle-class audiences. The more intelligent viewers will likely take the picture with more than one grain of salt, and so seasoned, swallow it not distastefully. The story, which was written by Edward J. Montague, is pure screen fiction. The writer ventures this opinion despite what happens in the picture to a dramatic critic who opined that a play lacked logic.

The film tends to prove that no man can tell beforehand what he or any other man will do under given circumstances. The framed-up adventures of a dramatic critic who believed that no rational human being would possibly act in real life as did the hero of a new play form the greatest portion of the action of "Apartment 29." Earle Williams, as the dramatic critic, is framed up by the author of the play in much the same manner as was the hero of the play. The critic is caught up in a whirlpool of happenings that cause him to act just as he said no rational man would, and in addition to disproving his own assertions the critic gets a bump on the head that wasn't in the plot, and also becomes engaged to one of the plotters. The denouement is more or less surprising and pleasing.

A superfluity of footage has been given several scenes.

Mr. Williams is entirely satisfactory, as is also the rest of the cast. Ethel Gray Terry is seen as The Girl. Others on the screen are Denton Vane, L. Johnston, Billie Billings, V. Stuart, Bernard Seigle, Frank Mason and Tommy Brett.

The picture has been adequately produced, under the direction of Paul Scardon.

"The Hidden Children"

Harold Lockwood and May Allison Featured in Five-Reel Adaptation of Robert W. Chambers' Novel—Produced for Metro by Yorke.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

METRO'S March 26 release, "The Hidden Children," a five-reel adaptation of the novel by Robert W. Chambers, produced by the Yorke Film Corporation, is a poor picture. Because of its advertising possibilities the picture may attract patrons to a theater, but it is a fairly safe bet that few who see the film will advise their friends to do likewise. Chief among the box office arguments is the fact that the author is well known and that "The Hidden Children" has been widely read, and that the featured players—Harold Lockwood and May Allison—are popular.

As far as the picture itself is concerned the unfavorable features overbalance the favorable. Mr. Chambers' story has been butchered. The production shows an absolute lack of consistency in that the impression left is that no story has been told, unless the spectator relies on the assistance of an overabundance of titles. The five reels comprise more a procession of scenes, one following the other on the screen, but each having little if any relation to the other. Things just happen on the screen—we are not given to know why or what for—they just happen.

The story is laid back in the Colonial days when Indians were still a menace to our forefathers. The theme is based on the Indian custom of giving children to foster parents until maturity. In the story two white children become "hidden" children.

The work of the cast is entirely satisfactory, and there are many scenes in the picture that in themselves are beautiful, due to effective lightings and excellent photography, as well as backgrounds. There are also some fair scenes of battles between Indians and Colonial troops.

Others on the screen than the stars are Lester Cuneo, Lillian West, Henry Hebery, George MacDaniel, A. B. Ellis, Lillian Hayward and Howard Davies.

The picture was directed and adapted for the screen by Oscar Apfel and photographed by Antonio Gaudio.

" The Devil's Assistant"

Spectacular Six-Part Melodrama Appearing on Mutual Program Features Marguerita Fischer.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

WHATEVER else may be said about "The Devil's Assistant," produced by the Pollard picture plays, we have to admit that it is a well-made production, and that Marguerita Fischer has never been given a better opportunity for the display of dramatic ability. We must also admit that she has left nothing to be desired in the portrayal of the character of an unfortunate woman who became the victim of a drug administered with an evil purpose by a doctor who was formerly her lover.

Scene from "The Devil's Assistant" (Mutual).

The story is based on a peculiar situation in which the feminine member of one pair of supposed lovers and the masculine member of the other pair fell in love with each other and marry, leaving the odd pair to plot a vengeance which is aimed at the young wife. At the birth and simultaneous death of a child which is born to her, a nervous condition which requires attention opens an opportunity for the evil-minded doctor to get in his work, administering with the aid of the other woman the drug which soon becomes a necessity. The visualization of hallucinations which are the result of the wife's receiving an overdose of the drug, and later the delirium which accompanies the near approach of death in an electric storm afford opportunity for startling spectacles, which are effected by means of double exposure. Some of the old trick work has also been resorted to in a scene where diminutive figures play about a bottle of the drug which stands on a table at the doctor's side.

The picture is, as would be expected from the nature of the subject, an unpleasant one. It makes no pretense at moral suasion, but we do not believe that after viewing the picture there would be an inclination on the part of any spectator to adhere to the use of drugs. Viewed as an entertaining spectacle the production might be enjoyed.

"Mr. Dolan of New York"

Five-Reel Red Feather Production Features Jack Mulhall as American Pugilist Abroad.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel number, written and produced by Raymond Wells, again features Jack Mulhall as an American youth on foreign shores. The comedy manner is still apparent, but the story itself does not come up to previous numbers.

Scene from "Mr. Dolan of New York" (Red Feather).

The incidents are light and entertaining in a way, but lack the suspense necessary to keep a strong hold on the interest.

In the opening scenes Jimmy Dolan, an aspirant for the welterweight championship, is seen taking a knockout blow from Spider Flynn, the bout being staged in Paris. Dolan and his trainer are left stranded after this affair and leave Paris to seek adventure. They wander into a principality named Konigstadt, ruled by a dyspeptic king.

Jimmy's entrance into Konigstadt is perhaps the best part of the story. It is made additionally interesting from the fact that he has agreed to palm himself off as a certain Prince Frederick, who for reasons of his own desired to disappear from public view for a couple of months. The deception works very well at the start, and Jimmy's breezy American assurance promises a greater interest than the plot develops later on. He meets the king and makes himself generally at home in the court. He even goes so far as to tell the king funny stories and takes him into training in a physical way. Later the real prince shows up and Jimmy is forced to confess his status as an impostor to the princess, who has become greatly attached to him. The plot, while not essentially new, has greater possibilities than were realized. The final scenes occur in Paris, where Jimmy again fights for the welterweight championship, this time successfully.

Others in the cast are Noble Johnson, Julia Ray, Al. MacQuarrie, Harry Mann, Ernest Shields, Grace Maclean and Francis MacDonald.

"The Web of Life"

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE claims made by the producers of "The Web of Life" that it is not a sex or problem play is a truthful one. The Gold Medal Photoplayers, makers of the picture, have taken the sort of material that is easy of comprehension and put together a moving picture play that comes under the head of middle class melodrama. A dissipated young man from the city elopes with a simple minded country girl, and she is saved from a false marriage by the devotion of a former sweetheart, who forces his rival to make the girl his wife. The marriage hardly proves a happy one, the husband leaving his wife and baby for the society of his old companions of the fast life. The neglected wife bears her troubles with great meekness, and is finally rewarded by having her husband realize his duty to his family. This takes place after the usual amount of trials that fall to the heroine of a melodrama, the faithful friend sacrificing his life in a final effort to set matters right for the woman he still loves.

There are no new turns to the plot, but it has considerable action and several real dramatic moments. In a certain grade of picture houses it will be voted an interesting photoplay. The cast is on a level with the work required of it. James Cruze comes first in point of merit as the self-sacrificing friend. Hilda Nord has an appealing personality, but is restricted in her ability to portray the various emotions. George Soule Spencer, Billy Quirk, Frank Holland, George Moss, and Redfield Clark are also members of the cast.

"The Bond Between" at the Strand.

GEORGE BEBAN was seen at the Strand theater the week of April 1 in "The Bond Between," a photodrama of which he is the author, as well as the star. In this play he enacts the role of Papa Duval, a Frenchman living with four cronies in a French restaurant in New York City. Mr. Beban has carried throughout the picture a true Bohemian atmosphere of the real artists' section of New York. One of the unusual scenes is the entire basement and first floor of a typical New York boarding house. Included in the cast are Colin Chase, Vola Vale, Mrs. Buehler, John Burton, Nigel de Brullier, Paul Weigel, Eugene Pallette, W. H. Bainbridge, and Signor Buzzi. Some thrilling and interesting pictures of the Pendleton (Ore.) Round-Up were also presented, showing cowboys and cowgirls racing, bulldogging, riding bucking bronchos, contesting for the world's championship. Victor Moore in his latest comedy, "His Military Figure"; an educational study showing the evolution of agricultural machinery, and the Topical Review completed the pictures.

Rosa Lind, Mery Zentay, Arthur Depew, and Ralph Brigham were the soloists.

"Even as You and I" at the Rialto.

In "Even as You and I" the Rialto had a dramatic feature which gets quite away from the ordinary run of motion pictures. It is styled a "photo-allegory," and was produced by Lois Weber. Wisdom, Experience and Loyalty appear as characters, struggling in opposition to Satan and three of his Imps. The conflict between these opposing forces centers about an artist and his wife, who start their married life with Youth, Love and Honor as their household gods, and who battle bravely against those disillusionments and temptations which are the common heritage of humanity.

The fifth week of the Rex Beach-Dr. Salisbury pictures took the exploring party into the jungles of Costa Rica, showing the coffee industry, from the planting of the bean to its shipment. Quantities of wild game, insects, butterflies and other denizens of the tropics were introduced.

"The Glory of Motherhood" at the Broadway.

A new Vitagraph feature picture, "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," opened an engagement at the Broadway theater Sunday night, April 1. Alice Joyce has the leading role.

Eighty-first Street Theater Bill.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, at the Eighty-first Street theater, Dorothy Dalton was seen in a drama of love and intrigue, "The Dark Road." Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday Seena Owen, in "A Woman's Awakening," was on the program.

Paramount Pictures

Two Thrilling Lasky Productions on Program Week of April 9, Featuring Kathlyn Williams and Blanche Sweet.

BEULAH M. DIX'S latest "thriller," "The Cost of Hatred," and F. Hopkinson Smith's famous story, "The Tides of Barnegat," head the Paramount program for the week of April 9. In the former Kathlyn Williams and Theodore Roberts are starred, while in the latter Blanche Sweet plays the leading role. Surrounding these two features, are three single reel productions; the sixty-first edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen; the sixty-second Paramount-Burton Holmes travel pictures, entitled "East of Suez," and a Klever Komedy, entitled "His Military Figure," in which Victor Moore is starred.

"The Cost of Hatred" is without doubt the most thrilling heart interest story that Theodore Roberts, the greatest of screen character actors, and Kathlyn Williams have ever appeared in. The story tells of the alienation of the affections of Justus Graves' wife by Robert Amory, and of the husband's fleeing the country after he has shot at the youthful lover, and believing that he had killed him, carrying with him his young daughter to a foreign land. The production was directed by George H. Melford, and the cast surrounding Miss Williams and Mr. Roberts is the following: Tom Forman as Ned Amory, J. W. Johnston as Robert Amory, Jack Holt as Huertez, H. B. Carpenter as Ramos, Lucien Littlefield as Pepe, Charles Ogle as McCabe, Lillian Rosine as Dolores.

"The Tides of Barnegat," F. Hopkinson Smith's thrilling drama of the life of a little colony of fisher-folk near the famous bay on the Jersey Coast, is the best vehicle that Blanche Sweet has had for screen production, for it blends thrills with pathos, as the tale of self-sacrifice of a sister, played by Miss Sweet, unfolds the human interest, the story showing the devotion of the young girl shouldering the disgrace to save her sister. Mr. Smith, one of the most popular figures in the history of American letters, never wrote a more interesting best seller, and this production, full of action, has the added quality of having been produced with the picturesqueness of unique sea coast scenes. The story is laid in the little sea coast town of Barnegat.

Miss Sweet is supported in this cast by Elliott Dexter as Dr. John Cavendish, Tom Forman as Bart Holt, Norma Nichols as Lucy Cogden, little Billy Jacobs as Archie, Walter Rogers as Captain Holt, Harrison Ford as Sydney Gray, and Lillian Leighton as Martha.

The 61st edition of the Paramount-Bray-Pictographs contains four very interesting subjects, which will make it a decidedly big feature single reel; there is pictured in the release "Mobilizing the Red Cross," the third of the Quacky Doodles entitled "The Early Bird," the second installment of the "Animated Picto-Puzzles" by Sam Loyd, and "Mission Life in California," the latter having been secured by Dr. Burbank Shattuck, professor at Harvard College.

In the 62d of the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Pictures to be released this week the world's greatest traveler takes his fellow journeyers to Suez. Mr. Holmes finished his series of trips through Canada, and is now starting to take his little tours in foreign countries.

The words of Kipling's "On the Road to Mandalay" have done much to give meaning to the mention of that mysterious part of the world called "East of Suez," and vividly creates a mind picture of the sort of places which are to be found there —a land "where the best is like the worst and there ain't no ten commandments and a man can raise a thirst" must necessarily appeal to any one with an imagination. It may not appeal to many as particularly desirable to live in; however, it does make one of the most interesting and unique pictures that Burton Holmes has ever taken his travelers to see.

The Klever Komedy for this week entitled "His Military Figure" gives Victor Moore a distinct opportunity of doing the most unusual things conceivable, for, in the role of a West Point graduate, so as to gain the respect and confidence of the father of the girl whom he desires to marry, he is compelled to rig himself up in a corset-tight suit, which is instrumental in getting him into all sorts of comedy difficulties. As would be expected, his efforts have a happy ending.

More Constabulary Features to Follow "Trooper 44."

Dixon Boardman, president of the E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation, under whose personal supervision the five-reel feature, "Trooper 44," was produced, announces that in all probability he will now proceed to make a series of features, each complete in itself, but each enlisting the services of the Mounted Troopers as a background. It is also announced by the E. I. S. concern that they have inaugurated an "Exhibitors' Advisory Department," and upon application to the publicity bureau of the concern the E. I. S. people will be glad to furnish not only press sheets, cuts and general publicity matter, but also give special advice as to the best means of advertising "Trooper 44" in the particular sections in which it may be played. In this connection it is interesting to note, say the heads of the concern, that legislation is now pending in thirteen states for the establishment of a state police, and, in fact, in New York State such a bill has been already passed by the Senate.

Comments on the Films

General Film Company.

DOUBLES AND TROUBLES (Kalem).—A quite clever comedy reel. Ham and Bud are considerably nonplussed when they meet themselves at a party and are told that they have been there half an hour before they arrived. That may sound queer, but that's just what happens to Ham and Bud. The two get over quite a number of laughs during the running of the reel. Henry Murdoch assists with the funmaking. Directed by Al. Santell.

THE SHOOTING STAR (Essanay).—A split-reel embracing comedy and educational. The comedy is not much. It contains the usual knockabout stuff expected in seashore scenes. The educational is worth while, and shows the harvesting of the wheat crop in Alberta, Canada.

THE RAILROAD SMUGGLERS (Kalem).—A number of the "A Daughter of Daring" railroad series. Chief interest centers around Helen Gibson's stunt. In this reel she is seen riding a motorcycle at breakneck speed alongside of a train. She is pursued by filbusterers. As she reaches a station platform she shoots the motorcycle through the open doors of a box car and onto a flat car in a train moving alongside. Miss Gibson should be given especial credit for this stunt. It is a difficult and dangerous one. With Miss Gibson in the cast af G. A. Williamson, George Routh, Hal Clements and L. T. Whitlock.

THE GREATER PUNISHMENT (Selig).—A rather mediocer one-reel drama. A young married man seeks funds from his uncle. The uncle is knocked unconscious through a runaway, and the nephew obtains securities from the uncle's pocket. The youth buys presents for his child. The theft is fastened on the youth, but the old uncle relents when he sees how things are and when the youth realizes the enormity of his offense. The cast, headed by Charles Wheelock and Edith Johnson, includes Georgette Campbell and Lafayette McKee.

THE LONE POINT FEUD (Kalem).—A one-reel episode of the "A Daughter of Daring" series. This reel holds up well. Helen Gibson performs an unusually daring stunt when she leaps from a bridge over a railroad into the tender of a speeding locomotive. In this manner she averts a collision between a train on which the superintendent is eloping with the daughter of a squire and a locomotive carrying the irate squire. The story is quite interesting, too. In the cast with the leading player are G. A. Williams, Gladys Blue and L. T. Whitlock.

General Film Company Specials.

THE BOOB (Selig).—A two-reel offering of worth. There is much humor and pathos to be found in the two reels. "The Boob" parts with his cash to learn to become a detective. He finds that his detective-hero is a thief, and surprises the latter rifling the rural postoffice. In the end the "Boob" proves that he is not so much of a boob after all. There is an element of romance that helps considerably. In the cast are Casson Ferguson, Byrdine Zuber, Frank Owen and Fred Eckhart. Produced by Otis B. Thayer from the story by Roland Ashford Phillips.

THE VULTURE OF SKULL MOUNTAIN (Kalem).—A two-reel episode of "The American Girl" series. Much action has been crammed into the two reels. A story of mystery in which are used the elements that compose sure-fire melodrama is told on the screen. We see much good and exciting horsemanship. The Vulture is a bandit who holds forth on Skull Mountain. Although each of the three leading characters are made to feel his power, he is at last downed. Marin Sais plays the lead. She is supported by Frank Jonasson, Edward Hearn, Ronald Bradbury, Edward Clisbee and Hart Hoxie. Reviewed in another column.

THE HAM THAT WAS (Essanay).—One of the "Black Cat" Features. This two-reel offering is good stuff. There are numerous humorous touches that get over well. The film has a sort of O. Henry touch. A vaudeville team, whose stock in trade is a trained pig, goes broke. They get a notice of a week's work and, in celebrating, eat the pig. They learn that all that was wanted was the trained pig. Harry Dunkinson and Mabel Bardine get just the right amount of humor out of their roles.

MEDDLING WITH MARRIAGE (Essanay).—A unit of the "Is Marriage Sacred?" series. This two-reel drama tells of a girl who rather favors a man in moderate circumstances. The mother favors a marriage with a man who is apparently wealthy, and pushes her plans through. Just as the ceremony is to take place the other man proves that the would-be bridegroom is unworthy. The offering is interesting. The cast is composed of Marguerite Clayton, Edward Arnold, Lillian Drew, Ullrich Haupt and Thomas Commerford.

FEEDING THE FISH-EATERS, March 19.—This interesting subject appearing in the Ditmars "Living Book of Nature" series shows us a number of animals that live all or partially on fish, being fed at the Bronx Zoo. Among these are the sea lion, the pelican and the penguin. A full review of this subject will be found in the Motion Picture Educator of our issue of April 7.

FEEDING THE BEARS, March 26.—This is an interesting and well photographed number of the Ditmars "Living Book of Nature" containing interesting scenes about the dens of the various kinds of bears at the Bronx Zoo. ELEPHANTS, April 2.—An interesting and instructing number from Ditmars' Living Book of Nature.' In it are explained the chief characteristics of the African and Indian elephants, and the particular parts of these countries which are inhabited by them. Amusing incidents in connection with the elephants' daily habits are shown.

HIGH FINANCE (Fox), March 26.—Taken from a story by Larry Evans, this five-reel photoplay is intended for a George Walsh vehicle, and fulfills its mission. It has plenty of adventure and touches of comedy. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

APARTMENT 29 (Vitagraph), Apr. 9.—Earle Williams is the featured player in this five-reel Blue Ribbon Feature. The reproduction is a program offering of fair strength. The story tells of the framed-up adventures met with by a dramatic critic who "panned" a play and was given much the same experience as was the hero of the play. THE HIDDEN CHILDREN (Yorke), March 26.—A five-reel adaptation of the novel of the same name by Robert W. Chambers. Harold Lockwood and May Allison are the stars. The picture is a poor one. Mr. Chambers' story has been butchered. The theme used in the story is the Indian custom of sending children to foster-parents until maturity. In the picture two white children become "hidden" children. A longer review is printed on another page.

THE AWAKENING OF HELEN MINOR, March 26.—The women are going to like this comedy especially. The Sidney Drews are seen in a reel that shows what a wife can get from her husband if she uses flattery. It is when Mrs. Minor realizes this and plays to hubby's vanity that she gets the expensive things. The humor throughout is refined and subtle. There will be many a quiet laugh over this reel long after it has been seen. The story was written by Helena Laighton.

REEL LIFE NO. 48 (Gaumont), March 29.—The subjects treated in this number are "Weaving Indian Blankets," "The Pulmotor," "Swedish Gymnastics," "The Famous Herald Clock," too briefly treated to be of value, and "Winter Sports in Florida." These subjects are fully reviewed in the Motion Picture Educator of April 14.

FREED BY FIDO (Vogue), March 31.—A two-reel farce comedy that consists chiefly of slapstick work. Some of the players apparently have considerable acrobatic ability and are entertaining in this sense. The production has no plot of any account and centers about the rescue of a girl, who has been kidnapped, through the betrayal of the situation by her little dog.

THE DEVIL'S ASSISTANT (Mutual Star Production), April 2.—A six-part melodrama featuring Marguerita Fischer. The subject of the production is an unpleasant one, dealing with the vengeful act of a doctor who, because the woman he loved married another, administered a harmful drug to her during an illness, with the result that she became a dope fiend. The picture is well made and contains considerable of the spec-similar element in the visualization through double exposure of the woman's hallucinations. A full review will be found elsewhere.

ADVENTURES OF SHORTY HAMILTON NO. 12 (Monogram), April 2.—In this chapter Shorty comes nearer to winning the hand of his lady love and is entertaining an attempt to solve a wireless mystery. Several thrilling incidents in connection with rescues at sea, and the discovery that a piano was used in the sending of secret messages with regard to the sailing of vessels from American ports, are included.

Paramount Pictures Corporation

PARAMOUNT-BRAY PICTOGRAPH NO. 60, March 26.—The subjects covered in this issue of the Pictograph are "Crab Fishing in Virginia," "Americanizing an Oriental Art," and "Assaying the Nation's Gold." Full reviews of these subjects will be found in the Motion Picture Educator of our issue April 7. The reel closes with an animated cartoon entitled "Bobby Bumps, Office Boy."

AS MEN LOVE (Pallas), March 29.—A strong picture, in which the principal players are House Peters, Jack W. Johnston, Myrtle Stedman and Helen Jerome Eddy. The subject is reviewed in another column.

PARAMOUNT-BRAY PICTOGRAPH NO. 61, April 2.—In this number will be found illustrations on "Mission Life in California," "Picto-Puzzles" by Sam Loyd, and "Mobilizing the Red Cross." Full reviews of these subjects will be found in the Motion Picture Educator of our issue of April 14. The reel closes with an animated cartoon entitled "Quacky Doodles and the Early Bird."

THE BOND BETWEEN (Pallas), April 2).—George Beban has the leading role in this picture, the script of which also was written by Mr. Beban. It lacks the quality of heart interest we have been taught to associate with the subjects in which this player is featured. The picture is reviewed elsewhere.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

SUNSET FALLS (International), March 25.—The Mrs. Vernon Castle serial, "Patria," reveals a lot of lively doings in number five. The scenes takes place on a Western ranch. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

PEACE "WHICH PASSETH ALL UNDERSTANDING" (International), April 1.—The twelfth installment of the "Patria" serial is a lively continuation of the exciting incidents in the former number. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

SPONGE FISHING (International), April 8.—An excellent exhibition of the method of gathering sponges in the waters around Florida is on the same reel with a Happy Hooligan cartoon by F. Opper. "The New Recruit" is the name of the cartoon and is done in Opper's most amusing style.

THE LIFE CURRENT (Astra), April 15.—The fifth number of "Mystery of the Double Cross." The life current relates to a critical moment when Peter Hale is being operated upon and the villain severs the electric light wire and throws the hospital into darkness. The number is given a longer review on another page of this issue.

ARID AND FRUITFUL CALIFORNIA (Combitone), April 15.—This Combitone picture is the fifth of the series. The reel shows several examples of the wonderful scenery of the state and brings out the tones with pleasing fidelity.

WHEN LOVE WAS BLIND (Thanhouser), April 15.—The scenario of this five-reel photoplay was written by Agnes C. Johnston, and is a radical departure from her usual style of work. The story is not at all convincing. It is given a careful production by the Thanhouser Company and the cast is headed by Florence La Badie. A longer review appears on another page of this issue.

FLORENCE ROSE FASHIONS, NO. 27 (Pathe), April 15.—"Accepted Styles" is the title of this number of the Florence Rose Fashions. The array of modish frocks and other articles of ladies' apparel shares the reel with a colored educational, "Odd Fresh Water Creatures."

Universal Film Mfg. Company

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 65 (Universal), March 28.—Arrival of U. S. Steamer Orleans at Bordeaux, aftermath of Indiana tornado, boys in training on Ward's Island, Woman's Rifle Club at Boston, demonstration over England's "Victory Fund," and other features are included in this entertaining number.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE, NO. 13 (April 6).—The subjects dealt with in this issue are: "A Modern Hotel's Kitchen;" "Porpoise Fishers;" "The Making of Shells;" "Be Your Own Manicure," and a Willie Hopkins animated clay cartoon entitled "America, May She Always Be Right."

CROOKS AND CROCODILES (L-KO), April 8.—Mr. Nappy, impersonated by Bill Armstrong, goes fishing. He gets in bad with some alligators, some of the scenes apparently being taken at an alligator farm. This makes an amusing offering of the eccentric, knockabout type.

HIS FAMILY TREE (Victor), April 10.—A comedy number, by Tom Gibson, featuring Milton Sims, Eileen Sedgwick, Ralph McComas and Chas. Haefeli. Prof. I. M. Bunk induces an old man and his daughter to think they are descendants of royalty. The hero exposes the deception. This is fairly humorous in conception, but not particularly funny as developed. An average subject.

THE DESERT GHOST (Big U), April 12.—A Western drama, by E. B. Lewis, featuring Neal Harte and G. Raymond Nye. It pictures the way in which a bandit outwits some Mexicans who have stolen valuable plans of fortifications. He gives his life in the accomplishment of this. The number is well presented and quite strong in its appeal.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE, NO. 14 (April 13).—This issue of the "Screen Magazine" contains a large amount of valuable information. The subjects treated are "Concentrated Food Products;" "Young Men Who Didn't Go West," and "The Eye of Modern Science," which is a detailed explanation of the mysteries of the X-Ray. The reel closes with an interesting animated clay cartoon modeled by Willie Hopkins.

HER PRIMITIVE MAN (Rex), April 15.—An artist lady gets an order for some primitive sketches. She goes into the woods and discovers some mountaineers. The son, who has really been to college and is a law graduate, poses for her. Later he rescues her from a drunken half-breed. A simple, obvious type of story, set in attractive surroundings. Myrtle Reeves, Harry Griffith, Jack Mulhall and Jean Hersholt appear. Fairly strong.

Universal Film Mfg. Company Specials

MR. DOLAN OF NEW YORK (Red Feather), April 9.—A five-reel comedy, written and produced by Raymond Wells, featuring Jack Mulhall as an American boxer abroad. The young pugilist loses his fight for the welterweight championship in Paris and drifts, with his trainer, into the principality of Konigstadt. Here he poses as a prince and makes love to the daughter of the ruling monarch. He also improves the King's health by telling him funny stories and teaching him boxing. This has a good comedy style, but the plot itself lacks suspense and does not hold the interest as closely as it should. It is not as strong as other features of recent date by the same producer.

HAIR-TRIGGER BURK (Gold Seal), April 10.—A good three-reel Western subject, by Eugene B. Lewis, featuring Harry Carey, Teddy Brooks, Vester Pegg, Claire Du Bray and others. This tells an entertaining story of a young lad whose father is mortally wounded in a stage holdup. The youth becomes the pal of a bandit, who befriends him in time of need. The part of the wine room girl is effectively handled by Miss Du Bray. This is a natural picture of Western life of the accepted romantic type.

THE MAGPIE, April 10.—A three-reel number, by George Dana Smith, featuring Tina Marshall, Claude Cooper and others. The banker's daughter discovers a burglar in the house. She pretends to be "The Magpie," a lady crook whom she greatly resembles, and becomes the burglar's pal in order to bring him to justice. There is some novelty in this situation. The action mingles comedy and melodrama in a way that keeps it from becoming really strong in either way, but there is a good deal of entertainment as the events proceed. It is a number of average strength.

UNCLE JOHN'S MONEY (Rex), April 12.—A two-reel number, by Henri Canard, featuring George Berrell, Malcolm Blevins, Marjorie Ellison and Burton C. Law. The rich uncle comes to the city and calls on his nephews. He practices the familiar device of pretending to be poor. He also pretends to get very intoxicated and the first nephew and his wife order him out. The drunken scenes might be cut a little to advantage, as some observers will think the first nephew was almost justified in his course. The number is very pleasing and, with this one exception, well presented. It makes an entertaining offering.

THE SIGNET RING (No. 6 of "Pearls of the Secret Service) (Imp), April 13.—A two-reel subject, based on a story by George Bronson Howard. This features Kingsley Benedict in another of his adventures as a society detective. He gives a girl with whom he is in love a signet ring, which will save her from danger. She proves a traitor to his government, but because of his regard for her, he spares her from prosecution. Some of the points are not entirely cleared up, but the number proves entertaining.

VOICE ON THE WIRE, NO. 6 (Universal Special), April 16.—This two-reel installment continues the efforts of Detective Shirley to solve the mystery of the Oriental death punch. Carns is killed by the phantom hand and Sairley himself almost meets a like fate. Polly Marion is kidnapped by Red Warren and his gang and Shirley takes up the pursuit. The number holds the interest closely.

Triangle Film Corporation.

HER OFFICIAL FATHERS (Fine Arts), April 8.—A five-reel light and entertaining comedy of character, that of a jolly and irresponsible banker's daughter, with Dorothy Gish at her best.

SWEETHEART OF THE DOOMED (Ince-Kay Bee), April 8.—A drama of deferred vengeance with Louise Glaum strong in the title role, and some scenes of power, though it has many jarring inconsistencies.

World Pictures.

THE FAMILY HONOR (Peerless), April 9.—Robert Warwick and June Elvidge have the leads in this five-reel photoplay, which is dramatic in quality and contains a number of good acting scenes. It is given a longer review on another page of this issue.

MOTHERS OF FRANCE (Made in France), April.—This is a remarkable photoplay. It is in six reels, and Sarah Bernhardt heads the cast. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Miscellaneous

THE WEB OF LIFE (Gold Medal Photoplayers).—A middle class melodrama in five reels, this picture is fairly well acted and produced. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

THE TEST OF WOMANHOOD (Miles), April.—This five-reel photoplay has little to recommend it. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

THE PRICE OF HER SOUL (Variety Films), April.—Full information regarding this photoplay is printed on another page of this issue. The picture has no moral standing.

THE WHIP (Whip Feature Motion Picture Co.), April.—An eight-reel screen version of the English melodrama of the same name, this photoplay is full of thrills. The horse-racing, fox-hunting and railroad wreck scenes are remarkably realistic, and the story is interesting. A good cast also helps to make the picture a success. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

First Arbuckle Comedy on April 23

Paramount Pictures Corporation to Issue These Two-Reel Comedies Featuring Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle to All Exhibitors.

THE first Paramount Arbuckle Comedy, a two-reeler, in which Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle will make his debut under the banner of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, will be released on April 23. The comedy, which Mr. Arbuckle himself asserts is the most hilarious piece of screen work he has ever accomplished, has been christened "The Butcher Boy," and the production will be finished within a few days.

Despite the fact that the first comedy is still in course of production, Paramount has already signed contracts for over 200 showings during the first week of the picture. In New York City alone there will be over thirty-five showings simultaneously, including the Rialto, the Marcus Loew theaters, the Fox theaters and many others, and in every big city in the United States Arbuckle will be bringing forth laughs from thousands upon thousands of motion picture fans who are anxiously waiting this first comedy to be issued through Paramount.

The Arbuckle two-reel comedies will be released by Paramount to all exhibitors, without interfering with the exclusiveness of the franchise clauses in their program distribution. This will give others than Paramount exhibitors the opportunity of booking these features, and adding to the drawing power of their program for that week.

In all the Paramount Exchanges separate departments have been established for the handling of these comedies, and a vast amount of exhibitors' aids material will be distributed in connection with the pictures, as money-getters for the exhibitors. The most elaborate array of one, three and six sheets will be used, together with slides, stills, publicity mats and a vast amount of pre-publicity that is destined to make these comedies, two-reel features, the talk of every community in which they are shown. Other exhibitor aids in the form of newspaper layouts for advertising and publicity are also being arranged by the Exhibitors' Aids Department in the different Paramount exchanges, and the promotion work that will be done for these comedies will outstrip anything of its kind ever attempted in the industry.

"Fatty" is not only appearing in this production as author-actor, but he is also his own and his company's director. He has surrounded himself with a wonderful cast of players, chief of whom known to the film industry is Al St. John, who has been one of "Fatty's" side-kicks for years. "Fatty" has a brand new leading lady, Miss Josephine Stevens, who will take the comedy screen-lovers by storm. She is not only remarkably beautiful, but of the snappy, vivacious type that is so essential to this type of work.

ART DRAMAS TO HOLD TRADEMARK CONTEST.

Following the announcement recently made that Art Dramas had under consideration the advisability of holding a contest to secure a suitable trademark for the concern, the offices have been flooded with suggestions, none of which, however, exactly pleases Harry Raver, president of the company.

Mr. Raver has now decided that a contest must be held, if Art Dramas is to obtain the best trademark possible. Out of the suggestions received, only a few were worth even passing consideration. Several of these, while artistic and simple, were, nevertheless, not distinctive enough to be adopted.

Definite details concerning the proposed contest have not yet been worked out. Mr. Raver is anxious to have some artists of note act as judges, and he expects to be able to announce their names in a day or so. He himself will act as one of the jury in charge of the decision.

The contest will probably be open to all, as planned, although this will make the decision so complicated that a later report may contain some restrictions.

"SKINNER'S BUBBLE" (Essanay).

"Skinner's Bubble," a sequel to "Skinner's Dress Suit," will be released April 23. Bryant Washburn, the hero of the Henry Irving Dodge picture, will again be seen in a delightful comedy role in the sequel. Hazel Daly, the "Honey" of the first production, is occupying the same position in the second. All the rest of the original "Skinner" company is being utilized in the cast. The forthcoming comedy is declared to abound in that same natural, life-like humor which has made "Skinner's Dress Suit" one of the biggest screen hits of the year.

"Skinner's Bubble" is simply another chapter in the laughable life of the Skinners—himself and Honey. It takes up Skinner where he was promoted to a junior partnership in his big commercial firm, after capitalizing his dress suit and his social prestige.

Following so closely upon the sensational success of "Skinner's Dress Suit," the sequel is practically assured of a big welcome from exhibitors and photoplay patrons. Reports from the Essanay studios are to the effect that "Skinner's Bubble" is even better than its predecessor.

The story of "Skinner's Bubble" was written by Harry Beaumont, who is also directing its production. This arrangement is by special permission from Henry Irving Dodge, author of "Skinner's Dress Suit." Mr. Beaumont directed the production of "Skinner's Dress Suit." No detail is being overlooked to give the second production exactly the same atmosphere as the first.

Scene from "Skinner's Bubble" (Essanay).

"Skinner's Bubble" will have a screen time approximately of one hour fifteen minutes. It will be released through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service.

Fox April Releases

Several Sterling Features Are Offered for the First Half of the Month.

THEDA BARA, Genevieve Hamper, Gladys Brockwell and Stuart Holmes are the notable stars who head the casts of the first four April releases which William Fox announces. The order of the photoplays will be:

April 2—Theda Bara in "Her Greatest Love," a special production, also, Genevieve Hamper in "Tangled Lives."

April 9—Gladys Brockwell in "Her Temptation."

April 16—Stuart Holmes in "The Derelict."

Miss Bara's third super de luxe feature, "Her Greatest Love," is a magnificent film based on Ouida's widely read novel, "Moths." J. Gordon Edwards directed the picture and has put the beautiful natural backgrounds in and around St. Augustine and Palm Beach, Fla., into the work. Adrian Johnson wrote the scenario. Harry Hilliard, Glen White, Walter Law, Alice Gale, Marie Curtis and Calla Torres are in the cast.

J. Gordon Edwards also screened "Tangled Lives," in which Genevieve Hamper, the distinguished star of silent and spoken drama, has the lead. The cast, of extraordinary power, includes Stuart Holmes, Robert B. Mantell, Walter Miller, Henry Leone, Claire Whitney, Genevieve Blinn, Louise Rial, Millicent Liston, William Gerald, and Hal de Forest, who played the mad sultan in "A Daughter of the Gods." The story is by Mary Murillo.

A sterling company appears in support of Gladys Brockwell in "Her Temptation," which Richard Stanton filmed from the script by Norris Shannon. In the drama are Bertram Grassby, Ralph Lewis, James Cruze, Beatrice Burnham and Carrie Clarke Ward. A psychic theme underlies the action, and Miss Brockwell's characterization of the heroine is one of the finest things she has yet done.

Stuart Holmes does brilliant dramatic work in "The Derelict," written and directed by Carl Harbaugh, whose production of "The Scarlet Letter" for Fox Films was so popular throughout the country. Georges Benoit contributes the same splendid photography he gave to the Dickens classic, in Mr. Holmes' new vehicle.

Mary Martin, June Daye, Carl Eckstrom, Dan Mason, Ollie Trevor and Wanda Petit are the other principals in the photo-drama. Director Harbaugh has shown skill equal to that he exercised in "The Scarlet Letter" in selecting his "types" for "The Derelict."

"THE LAW OF COMPENSATION" READY.

Norma Talmadge's second Selznick-Pictures offering, "The Law of Compensation," will be released this week. In this production Miss Talmadge returns to America from her tragic journey through Russia, England and France in her recent success, "Panthea," and is the central figure in a gripping drama of modern social conditions in this country. The story is by Wilson Mizner, whose ability as an author was proved in his collaborations with Paul Armstrong in "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and "The Deep Purple."

"THE POWER OF PIN-MONEY."

"The Power of Pin-Money," the latest of the Selig multiple reel dramas, released in General Film Service, contains an unusual thought, and one that will strikingly impress every person who sees it. There are perhaps hundreds of thousands of girls in this country, who are living in comparative luxury, being given generous financial allowances by their parents, who, nevertheless, long for "pin money." Making frivolous purchases, they squander their monthly allowance, and when their parents refuse to encourage their extravagances and refuse them additional money, they plan by other means to gain funds. Their favorite plan is to apply for a position with some concern, working for wages much lower than could be depended upon by a real wage earner for a livelihood. The girls call this "PIN MONEY," and with this addition to their regular allowance, they are enabled to gratify their desires for the purchase of frivolous and unnecessary things.

Scene from "The Power of Pin-Money" (Selig).

The Selig drama is the story of a girl who longs for "pin money," and who finally realizes what an injustice she and her sisters are doing to those men and women who depend upon the daily wage to support their families, their mothers and their sisters. It is a drama that everyone should see, for there is not a dull moment; the situations are exciting and the photography is excellent.

"MAX IN A TAXI" THIRD LINDER COMEDY.

"Max in a Taxi" will be the title of Max Linder's third Essanay comedy. The noted European comedian, at his Culver City, Cal., studio, has nearly completed the filming of this production. It is scheduled for release the fourth Monday in April through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service.

While the filming of "Max in a Taxi" is being completed, the comedian's second Essanay comedy, "Max Wants a Divorce," is having a record run, according to reports from the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service. Backed by the big hit which the first Essanay-Linder comedy, "Max Comes Across," has made, and the national advertising campaign which Essanay is conducting for the comedian's "made in America" films, "Max Wants a Divorce" is drawing capacity business wherever it is being shown. Critics and exhibitors alike have praised the production, many declaring it better than the first comedy, even.

With two hits to his credit already, Max's third production, "Max in a Taxi," cannot fail to be a big drawing card. A special line of novelties has been arranged by Essanay for exhibitors who book the comedy.

"Max in a Taxi" will have a screen time approximately of thirty minutes. The comedian's original comedy company, which was transported almost in toto from the Essanay Chicago studios to the Pacific coast, appears in the forthcoming offering.

"THE GYPSY PRINCE" (Cub).

"The Gypsy Prince," the Cub comedy scheduled for release through the Mutual Film Corporation on April 12, may aptly be described as a "comedy with thrills."

Practically all of the action of the story is set in and near a gypsy camp in the mountains, and these natural settings are utilized to mingle thrills with comedy. Fights take place upon rocks overlooking deep ravines, and there are perilous rescues to add to the effect of the action.

The story centers about George Ovey as Jerry. Jerry comes into possession of a wallet stolen by footpads, and which officers are seeking to recover. Jerry escapes the officers, and takes refuge in a gypsy camp. The gypsy chief covets the horse upon which Jerry strays into camp, and offers to give him his daughter in return for it. This incurs the displeasure of Hank, who is in love with the chief's daughter, and he contrives to make away with Jerry so that there will be no interference with his plans. Jerry then has a series of thrilling experiences, which have such an effect upon him that he decides to return to his former position, instead of becoming a gypsy prince. Accordingly, he returns horse and money where it belongs.

A big cast is used in the picture. It includes, besides George Ovey, such players as George George, Claire Alexander, Louise Horner, E. A. Browne, William Foxe and a host of others. The story was written and picturized by Milton H. Fahrney.

STRAND BOOKS ENTIRE O. HENRY SERIES.

The popularity of General Film Company's widely heralded series of two-reel pictures based on the O. Henry short stories was attested last week, when the Strand theater, New York, contracted for the entire series, and will show one of these features weekly, starting this week. The Strand management will feature the O. Henry pictures equally with their regular feature each week, and the title will appear in electric lights across the front of the theater. Manager Edel intends to conduct a special advertising campaign on this series, as he is convinced that it is the best drawing series of short subjects ever placed on the market.

The first picture to be shown by the Strand will be "The Third Ingredient," based on what is probably the most widely read story ever written by O. Henry.

BLUEBIRD SCHEDULE CHANGED.

Because of S. L. Rothapfel showing two Bluebirds at the New York Rialto on pre-release, there has been a change in schedule, for the New York territory only, in handling "The Clock" and "A Jewel in Pawn." During the past week "The Clock" has been showing at the Rialto, and on April 16 "A Jewel in Pawn" will be the attraction there. In all districts outside of the New York office territory "A Jewel in Pawn" will be released April 16, and "The Clock" on April 30, but this order will be reversed for New York, as far north as Poughkeepsie, and Long Island and eastern New Jersey, comprising the territory supplied by the New York branch. By carefully noting that "The Clock" (in New York territory) will be released April 16, and "A Jewel in Pawn" on April 30, exhibitors supplied by the New York office will be rid of all confusion.

"LITTLE MISS NOBODY" (Bluebird).

The fourth production made at Bluebird's Leonia (N. J.) studio, with Violet Mersereau as its star, originated from the story written by Robert F. Roden and Alfred Solman, "Little Miss Nobody." The scenario was prepared by John C. Brownell. Edwin Stevens supervised Miss Mersereau's previous efforts at Leonia, but in the present instance Harry Millarde directed.

John Mackin, James O'Neill, Dean Raymond, Clara Beyers,

Scene from "Little Miss Nobody" (Bluebird).

Sidney Mason, leading man and featured with Miss Mersereau; Helen Lindroth, Willis Baker and Robert Clugston will comprise the support. Alfred Solman, one of the authors of "Little Miss Nobody," will be recalled by those musically inclined as the writer and composer of many high-class ballads, including "Mine" and that one-time sentimental craze, "If I Had a Thousand Lives to Live." This is the second moving picture story Mr. Solman has written, "The Mischief Maker" being his first essay.

The locale of this Mersereau-Bluebird is in the North Woods, and many picturesque scenes add to the interest. Fine photography was noticeable in the projection room showings of "Little Miss Nobody" given for employes, and the publicity man for Bluebird declares that this is about the best medium Miss Mersereau has ever had to display her versatility.

HALL GETS WORLD RIGHTS TO "THE BAR SINISTER."

Frank G. Hall, of the Civilization Film Corporation of New Jersey, one of the biggest of the Eastern state rights organizations, has added to his list of attractions "The Bar Sinister," to which he controls the world's rights. "The Bar Sinister" is a new multiple-reel drama produced by Edgar Lewis, and is said to be better than "The Barrier." A trade showing will take place in the near future.

Among the other productions to which Mr. Hall controls the state rights in New Jersey are "Joan the Woman," "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," "The Whip," "The Garden of Allah," "Beware of Strangers," "Enlighten Thy Daughter," "Civilization," and "War's Women." Charles Abrams and Arthur Werner of the Candler Building were the brokers through whom Mr. Hall obtained "The Bar Sinister," which is expected to be a sensation.

WILLIAMSONS CONTRACT FOR PAPER.

Contracts have been entered into between Worthy Butts, of the Greenwich Lithographing Company, and the Williamson Brothers, regarding an unusual line of artistic five color poster work, which will permit the beauties of the submarine pictures to show to the best possible advantage. The contract is one of the most extensive entered into between a film manufacturing company and a lithographing house, as it covers a period of two years' duration. For each of the Williamson Brothers' pictures, the lithographers will supply everything from a a half-sheet window card and a one-sheet lithograph up to a twenty-four-sheet stand.

"THE POWER OF DECISION" FROM METRO APRIL 9.

"The Power of Decision," with Frances Nelson as star, is the April 9 release of the Metro Pictures Corporation. In this photodrama of a great problem that confronted a wife, and of how she reached a decision amid tragic circumstances, Miss Nelson has one of the strongest emotional roles of her career.

George W. Gunn wrote the story, which was put into scenario form by June Mathis, and directed by John W. Noble. B. A. Rolfe presents the play, which was produced by Rolfe Photoplays, Inc. The photography was done by Herbert O. Charleton.

"Musty Suffer" Comedies

Made by Essanay Through Arrangement With Kleine and Released Alternately by Each Firm.

ESSANAY in co-operation with George Kleine has launched a new series of "Musty Suffer" comedies. These comedies, presenting Harry Watson, Jr., in the varied "Mishaps of Musty Suffer," will have a screen time each of approximately fifteen minutes. They are being released through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service.

Through the co-operative plan, the two firms alternate in making the release. The first production, entitled "The Fried Egg Hero," was released by Essanay April 1. A week later, April 8, the second comedy, entitled "The Soda Jerker," was released. The remainder of the series will be released as follows: April 15, "Wet and Dry," by Essanay; April 22, "Truly Rural," by Kleine; April 29, "The Ladder of Fame," by Essanay; May 6, "Pure and Simple," by Kleine; May 13, "Spliced and Iced," by Essanay; May 20, "Starlight Sleep," by Kleine; May 27, "Musty B. Young," by Essanay; June 3, "Musty's Vacation," by Kleine. Filming of the entire series has just been completed.

WIDE BOOKINGS FOR GENERAL'S "THE WAR."

The General Film Company announces a tremendous booking on the Official Government Picture Company's series of motion picture records of "The War." Prominent newspapers in all of the big cities of the country have taken up these pictures and are handling preliminary showings as benefits for war relief funds. The Philadelphia North American recently gave one of these benefits, using "The War," and the benefit packed the Philadelphia Opera House to the doors, at prices ranging from $2 to $5. The showing of the pictures in Boston a few weeks ago at the Boston Opera House brought in the largest receipts ever received at a single performance in the world—the total being $60,000. A similar benefit in Hartford, Conn., last week also netted a tremendous sum. The impetus given to bookings by these big war relief benefits, and the resultant advertising and publicity has been very large, and General Film expects to break all records on this series.

FAIRBANKS SURROUNDED BY GOOD CAST.

For his initial Artcraft picture, "In Again—Out Again," Douglas Fairbanks has selected an efficient supporting cast which includes artists of wide screen prominence, as well as of theatrical experience. Appearing opposite "Doug," in the role of Janie Smith, is Arline Pretty, the popular motion picture star of many successes. Her most recent work was in the serial which has been widely exploited, "The Secret Kingdom."

Arnold Lucy and Helen Greene are also given plenty of opportunity to assert their talents in this picture. Both have had wide experience on the screen and speaking stage. Ada Gilman is given a role particularly adapted to her talents as a character actress. Frank Lalor, who plays the part of the rural drug store owner, is a well-known stage comedian. Walter Walker is another recruit from the speaking stage. Albert Parker is given another important characterization in this Fairbanks subject.

Dauglas Fairbanks and Arline Pretty.

LASKY TO SCREEN "THE VARMINT."

Owen Johnson's world famous story of Lawrenceville School, "The Varmint," which created a sensation both in magazine and in book form, is to be adapted to the screen by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, with Jack Pickford in the stellar role. Owen Johnson has won a unique place in the history of American literature through his wonderful insight into school and college life, his Lawrenceville stories being the first of their kind to win popularity, because of their humor and their keen analysis of schoolboy psychology. Mr. Johnson wrote with the understanding of one who had lived the life pictured, and has painted his characters in vivid hues. The Varmint, the Tennessee Shad, "Doc" Macnooder and many other characters in the story rank among the best known and most beloved of present day fiction.

The selection of Jack Pickford to play the title role of this picture is the natural result of the success he made of William Sylvanus Baxter in the Famous Players adaptation of Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen," his memorable interpretation of Pip in the same company's adaptation of Charles Dickens' "Great Expectations," and his more recent triumph as the youthful "detectuv" in the Famous Players adaptation of the great stage success, "The Dummy," by Harriet Ford and Harvey J. O'Higgins.

PATRIOTISM PERVADES HEARST-PATHE NEWS.

The Hearst-Pathe News is performing a patriotic service by illustrating the various efforts being organized for national defense in the hour of national danger.

Issue No. 24 has scenes showing how Portland, Me.; Cambridge, Mass.; Sparkill, N. Y.; Charleston, S. C.; San Diego, Cal., and Washington, D. C., are awake to the necessity of quick and intelligent action by Americans. In Portland students of the University of Maine arouse patriotic spirit by organizing a spectacular parade. In Cambridge Harvard men "do their bit" by forming a machine gun company and drilling. At Sparkill the citizens form a home guard and drill for service. In Charleston the German ship Liebenfels, sunk in the harbor by her crew when war between Germany and the United States first threatened, is raised by U. S. Army engineers and work begun to restore her to service. At San Diego the U. S. Army Aviation Corps rush the training of junior aviators to make them ready for the day they will be needed, while at Washington the War Department officials are shown trying out new inventions designed to increase aeroplane efficiency.

SELZNICK LAUDS "THE DEEMSTER."

Speaking of his deal with Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, of the Arrow Corporation, under which he attained control of "The Deemster" in New York state, Lewis J. Selznick states that he proposes to give this picture the widest possible publicity campaign.

"I am taking up 'The Deemster,'" stated Mr. Selznick, "because it fulfills my idea of what a special feature production should be, both in subject and magnitude. There are real brains behind this photoplay, from the author, Hall Caine, down to everyone who had anything substantial to do with its development on the screen. It's a big story founded on a big theme, and it has been made a big thing from the highest standpoint of motion picture production.

"It long ago became evident to the men who are the real leaders of progress and attainment in picture production that the only substantial foundation of a successful picture is a real story—one that has sufficient spiritual force behind it to make an impression on the consciousness of an author. 'The Deemster' is that kind of a picture."

"SUNNY JANE" RELEASED MARCH 26.

E. D. Horkheimer, under whose supervision Miss Jackie Saunders is to star in Mutual features, announces that "Sunny Jane," the first of the series of six picture plays featuring the sunkist star, will be released March 26. "Sunny Jane" is a new idea in picture stories, and it was written by H. O. Stechhan, who also produced "The Wildcat." Both plays were created especially for Miss Saunders, and they give the versatile little girl an opportunity to display her best wares, from hoyden to tragedy queen; for in "Sunny Jane" there are flashbacks that show her as Cleopatra and Mary Queen of Scots.

In the six Mutual releases there will be discovered a purpose to offer something sincere and wholesome, for Miss Saunders is herself an exponent of clean pictures, and in this series she has done the best work of her career, because her heart has been in her work. Sherwood MacDonald will direct all Miss Saunders' pictures, and William Beckway is the cinematographer in charge.

NANCE O'NEIL PRODUCTIONS READY.

Word comes from the studios of the Frank Powell Producing Corporation, at College Point, Long Island, that Nance O'Neil, the celebrated star who was recently signed to appear in Powell pictures released by the Mutual, has completed two dramas.

"Mrs. Balfame," the picturization of Gertrude Atherton's famous book of that title, which brings the works of that celebrated novelist for the first time to the screen, was completed a number of weeks ago.

The release date of this first O'Neil offering through Mutual exchanges has been set for April 9, in accordance with the Mutual's policy to have all productions completed at the studio at least four weeks in advance of release date.

The second of Nance O'Neil's Mutual-Powell dramas is Henrik Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler," that striking characterization and picture of Norwegian life, which formed one of the noted actress' strongest stage roles. It will be released some time in May.

CAST COMPLETED FOR RECREATION.

With Nellie Parker Spaulding and Carey Lee added to the list of well-known players scheduled to appear in support of Edna Goodrich in the coming Mutual production, "Reputation," an exceptionally strong cast has been completed for this interesting drama.

Constance Bennett—the central figure in the story—played by Miss Goodrich, is a beautiful cloak model in a large wholesale house in New York City. The part of her employer, Edmund Berste, whose name is wrongfully linked with hers in the ruining of her reputation, is played by Frank Goldsmith, while the popular leading man, William Hinckley, is cast for the part of John Clavering, whose love for the unhappy victim of Berste's desperate wife causes him to solve the mystery of her persecution.

"Reputation" is from the talented pen of John Clymer, and is being staged by John B. O'Brien at the Glendale studios on Long Island.

WASHBURN MAKING ANOTHER SKINNER PICTURE.

Bryant Washburn is being filmed in another comedy at the Essanay studios. According to the story, it promises to outdo "Skinner's Dress Suit." "Skinner's Bubble" will be the title. It will be released through the K-E-S-E service April 23.

Every possible effort is being utilized to make "Skinner's Bubble" a better comedy even than "Skinner's Dress Suit," declare reports from the Essanay plant. Mr. Washburn is being supported by Hazel Daly, who played the role of Honey in the Henry Irving Dodge story, and the original cast has been retained for the second production. Harry Beaumont, who produced "Skinner's Dress Suit," has written the new story and is directing its production.

"Skinner's Bubble" will have a screen time of approximately 1 hour, 10 minutes.

"A MAN AND THE WOMAN" (Art Drama).

For the first time in the history of motion pictures, a novel by Emile Zola, most famous of the French novelists, is to be seen on the screen. "A Man and the Woman," an Art Drama play produced by Herbert Blache, is an adaptation of this writer's "Nantas," a story which aroused the whole world to discussion when it was first published.

The original story has been followed closely in the adaptation, only the locale being changed. In the screen version the story is laid in America, instead of in Paris.

A cast of sterling merit enacts this tense drama with conviction and force. Edith Hallor, the beautiful and talented young star, is Agnes. Leslie Austen gives a vigorous characterization of Duncan, while Crawford is played by Kirke Brown. The supporting cast is of uniform excellence.

GIL-SPEAR MADE GOLDWYN SCENARIO CHIEF.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation announces the engagement of Adrian Gil-Spear as the chief of its scenario department, effective April 1.

Gil-Spear, who scenarioized "The Barrier," Rex Beach's recent production of his own novel, and who has just completed the scenario for "The Auction Block," another of Mr. Beach's stories, is also well known as a poster and magazine artist whose name and work are familiar to virtually all readers of the better-known illustrated magazines.

His last work before joining Goldwyn will be the completion of the scenario of "The Dark Star," a Robert W. Chambers story, for the International.

ARIZONA IN NEXT PATHE COMBITONE.

The fourth installment of Pathe Combitone, the travel pictures along new lines that are attracting such favorable comment, covers the state of Arizona with one thousand feet of carefully selected film showing the most interesting scenic, historical, industrial and archaeological features of that state.

EUROPEAN DEMAND FOR WILLIAMSON PICTURE.

Among the recent arrivals from abroad was R. S. Shanahan, European representative of the Williamson Brothers Submarine photoplays, who said that "The Williamson Submarine Expedition Picture" met with much success on the other side. Mr. Shanahan brought with him an offer to purchase foreign rights for any future productions the Williamsons may release.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS AND THEODORE ROBERTS CO-STAR.

When the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company's production of Beulah Marie Dix's "The Cost of Hatred" is released by Paramount on April 9, it will present Kathlyn Williams and Theodore Roberts as co-stars for the first time. Though both Miss Williams and Mr. Roberts have won great successes in Lasky productions, and are stars in their own right, it was felt by the producers that the two strong characters which were drawn by Miss Dix, the well-known playwright, in "The Cost of Hatred" required the interpretation of people who were of stellar caliber. Therefore, Miss Williams and Mr. Roberts have been chosen to play the roles of Sarita and Justus Graves. In addition to these two well-known stars, this cast includes some of the best known players in the Lasky roster, among them being Tom Forman, J. W. Johnston, Charles Ogle, H. B. Carpenter, Lucien Littlefield and Jack Holt.

The production was staged under the direction of George Melford. In the story, Miss Williams plays two roles—that of Sarita Graves, the wife of Justus, and, later, her own daughter, Elsie. Mr. Roberts as Justus interprets an especially difficult role, inasmuch as he is shown as a happy and devoted young husband, but is later embittered by the elopement of his wife.

FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF MUTT AND JEFF.

This week marks one year since Mutt and Jeff first made their bow in the films. The famous funny men of Bud Fisher's popular cartoons have had a most successful film career, being the only cartoon characters who have lived through a year successfully in motion pictures.

This anniversary will be marked by a decided innovation by H. Grossman, the distributor. The Mutt and Jeff cartoons are in releases of 500 feet per week, and heretofore it has been necessary for the exhibitor to balance his show with a short length subject. But, beginning the second year of the cartoons, each subject will carry with it sufficient length of an educational subject to make up a full reel release. This will be in the nature of a carefully chosen scenic or industrial picture that will be at least equivalent to the best on the market.

Exchanges now buying Mutt and Jeff will be given the additional subject on a most unusual basis, which is only made possible by Mr. Grossman's great activity in the import and export of films. He now has ready a great variety of educational negative, so that for the next year, or until market conditions dictate otherwise, Mutt and Jeff will represent educational opportunity, as well as the wholesome fun that has made them a film fixture.

NETTER BUYS "BEWARE OF STRANGERS" FOR OHIO.

Leon D. Netter, of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, 1201 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., has purchased the Ohio rights to William N. Selig's production, "Beware of Strangers," featuring Thomas Santschi and an all-star Selig cast.

The picture is an expose of the methods employed by the members of the underworld, and the means resorted to by them to extort money from innocents.

This announcement, immediately following Mr. Netter's purchase of "The Garden of Allah" for Ohio, indicates that the Masterpiece Film Attractions will in the future be firmly established in this state.

"THE EASIEST WAY" (Selznick).

The Selznick-Pictures production of Eugene Walter's "The Easiest Way," with Clara Kimball Young as the star, has been completed, and was viewed last week by Lewis J. Selznick and the various executives of the corporation. It was the unanimous verdict that Director Albert Capellani had created a masterpiece, and more than maintained the Selznick-Pictures standard throughout, in photography and unique effects, no less than in the vigor of his story-telling. Miss Young has never looked more beautiful than in the numerous closeups.

"The Easiest Way" tells directly the same story as Mr. Walter told in his original play, as produced by David Belasco, adding, of course, many details which could not be staged. The supporting cast contains an unusual array of actors who have big reputations. Joseph Kilgour plays the part of Brockton, which he created in the original Belasco production. Rockcliffe Fellowes as Madison has one of those Western roles in which he is so much at home. Louise Bates, a former star of the Winter Garden shows, is seen as a frivolous show girl. Other members of the cast are Mae Hopkins, Walter McEwan, Frank Kingdon, George Stevens and Cleo Desmond.

WARREN EXPLAINS "WARFARE OF THE FLESH."

Edward Warren, who has just completed the state right feature, "The Warfare of the Flesh," featuring Sheldon Lewis, Marie Shotwell, Walter Hampden, Charlotte Ives, Theodore Friebus and Harry Benham, was asked the other day at a meeting of state right buyers and big exhibitors held at Hotel Astor, New York, to explain the significance of the title so that it may be properly advertised in house organs, daily papers and other local business getting mediums.

"'The Warfare of the Flesh,'" said Mr. Warren, "has spiritual significance. It does not mean a battle nor a struggle of flesh in the material sense. It means the eternal conflict spirit and soul wage against the desires of the flesh. In our story we have two dramatic forces: those of good and those of evil. We see Satan and Sin in the Garden of Eden, and as pawns the men and women as they have come down the ages since Adam and Eve. Thus, warfare and flesh are really general terms, and not specific. Psychologically, the specific application of warfare and its relation to the flesh is more internal than external. As the warfare relates to the individual it is really the internal conflict between mind and matter.

"Thus, we develop this theme by first showing the warfare of the flesh in the beginning, when the first transgressors were expelled from Heaven for their wrongdoing. We see the fallen angels in Hell and on earth intent on spreading the scourge of evil. We see Santan and Sin in the Garden of Eden, and Sin tempts Eve, who falls, for she is not strong enough to engage in a warfare with the desire of the flesh, and win. We then pass on to a later civilization, and see the Magdalene about to be stoned because she was vanquished in the warfare of mind with matter. The Good Samaritan comes to her rescue, and the machinations of Satan and Sin are thus frustrated in a conflict with Good. Then there is a quick transition to the present era, and again we see Satan and Sin casting their ominous shadows over the affairs of mankind and accelerating evil, in the guise of a lady and gentleman of the leisure class. They temporarily befog the vision of weak men and women thrown into the maelstrom of life, where the warfare of the flesh is perpetual. In the stress of circumstances our heroine is about to give up her fight with matter, but the eternal spirit of Good again comes to the relief of the distressed and the unfortunate. Thus, Satan and Sin lose out in a clash with the forces of Good. But the conflict is everlasting, and virtue is proven and truly won by a conflict with malignant forces that invade the planet earth."

Pathe's April Gold Roosters

Pearl White, Charlotte Walker, William Courtenay, Marguerite Snow and Florence La Badie Featured.

IN its Gold Rooster Program for the weeks of April 1, 8, 15 and 22 the Pathe Exchange believes it is offering to exhibitors a feature program of special merit, with stars of real box office value and stories and direction that entitle the pictures to be ranked with the very best on the market.

On April 1 will be released "Mary Lawson's Secret," produced by Thanhouser from a decidedly original story by Lloyd Lonergan, and with the famous Charlotte Walker as the star. John O'Brien, former director of Mary Pickford, directed the picture, which shows the ablest workmanship throughout. A splendid mystery idea has been logically carried through to the conclusion, furnishing a climax which will be a complete surprise to most persons and which is most dramatic.

On April 8, Easter Sunday, will be released "Mayblossom," with Pearl White. "Mayblossom" lives up to its name, and furnishes an excellent Easter offering. It is filled with flowers and has been staged with rarely beautiful backgrounds. The picture was sent abroad and treated with the famous Pathecolor process. The result is superb. Scene after scene fairly glows with the color of life and from the standpoint of beauty alone the picture is a particularly strong offering. But that is by no means all—the story of Anthony Kelly, depicting the struggles for happiness of a charming young southern girl, married to a scoundrel, is always interesting and filled with appealing touches of heart interest. Pearl White, as the star, gives to the exhibitor a name the box office value of which is exceeded by few on the screen. Edward Jose directed the picture.

On April 15 will be released "When Love Was Blind," a Thanhouser-made picture, with Florence La Badie in the stellar role. Miss La Badie has a strong following, and her name is always an excellent attraction. "When Love Was Blind" was written by Agnes Johnston and tells the story of a girl who, through misfortune and severe handicaps finally attained happiness.

"The Hunting of the Hawk" was directed by George Fitzmaurice of the Astra. This fact in itself is sufficient to make the picture a sterling attraction, since Mr. Fitzmaurice directed "Via Wireless," "At Bay," "New York," "Arms and the Woman," "Kick In," and other big successes on the Pathe Gold Rooster Program. In addition, William Courtenay and Marguerite Snow are the featured players. "The Hunting of the Hawk" is a play which centres around a stolen necklace and throws suspicion upon a man who eventually proves to be a detective and not the crook. It is full of action and surprises, is beautifully staged and promises to be another "Kick In," which, to use a slang expression, is "cleaning up." It is an original story written by George B. Seitz.

MAKING SCENES IN RECTOR'S.

From 9 o'clock last Thursday morning until 5 in the afternoon the gold room of Rector's restaurant was occupied by a moving picture company headed by Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge, engaged in taking scenes for a World Picture-Brady-made, called "The Crimson Dove." A wooden scaffold sustained dozens of the big electric lights which illuminated different sections of the great apartment in which the various episodes occurred, canvas-clad electricians scurried from place to place, Director Romaine Fielding's hoarse voice roared orders to everybody in succession, and hundreds of "extras" in evening gowns and dress clothes feverishly simulated the gay midnight life of wicked Broadway, Manhattan, New York City. The proceedings indicated that Miss Elvidge was supposed to be a young female person yielding to the lure of wine and song, to be ultimately rescued by a very serious and sporadically athletic clergyman from back home, impersonated by Mr. Blackwell. Realism was materially heightened by the enlistment of Mr. Rector's regular day force of waiters. One of these with extreme regret sprained his left thumb in catching the limp form of an amorous rounder neatly polished off by the clergyman for having imprinted an unhallowed kiss upon the reluctant but inviting lips of the young female person depicted by Miss Elvidge. At the close of the ceremonies at Rector's the principals hastened home to pack up for the night train to Galveston, where outdoor scenes are to be photographed this week.

"The Crimson Dove" cast includes Carlyle Blackwell, June Elvidge, Marie Le Varre, Julia Stuart, Blanche Davenport, Mildred Beckwith, Dion Titheradge, Norman Hackett, Louis Grisel and numerous others.

"WHO'S YOUR NEIGHBOR?" PUT IN PRODUCTION.

The entry of the Master Drama Productions, Inc., into the manufacture of motion pictures will be marked by the production of "Who's Your Neighbor?" a screen version of an original drama by Willard Mack. The company was formed by Edward Small, for years one of the prominent figures in vaudeville, and Herman Becker, treasurer of the Robert Warwick Film Co.

For their initial production, the Master Drama Co. has secured the services of S. Rankin Drew, director of "The Girl Phillipa," recent Vitagraph success, and many other notable feature film productions for Vitagraph and Metro. Mr. Drew is responsible for the scenario and also the direction of the feature.

Prominent in the cast are Evelyn Brent, who attained stardom on the Metro program; Christine Mayo, star of Ivan features; Frank Morgan, the well-known leading man; Anders Randolf, for years the leading featured character man of the Vitagraph organization; William Sherwood, the well-known juvenile; George Majeroni, Franklin Hanna, Dean Raymond, Mabel Wright, Gladys Fairbanks, and other equally capable performers. When completed this feature will be exploited on the states-right basis of distribution after a premiere showing at a Broadway playhouse.

BIG BATTLE STAGED IN "PATRIA."

A battle was staged in the fourteenth and fifteenth episodes of "Patria" such as has seldom been seen before in a motion picture. Modern warfare in its every phase with the use of armored "tanks," dirigible balloons, aeroplanes, big guns, trenches, gas masks, as attacks, liquid fire, barbed wire entanglements, etc., in their entirety is shown and on a truly colossal scale. Director Jaccard had several miles of trenches, protected with barbed wire, dug in accordance with correct military plans drawn by regular U. S. army officers. In these trenches were thousands of men in army service uniforms. Opposing them were thousands of others, the invading army who were to try and pierce the line of Patria's army.

Two dirigible balloons are shelled before the camera and fall to the earth in flames. A battle plane is also hit and falls. Giant shells in profusion hit the ground and spout earth and rocks high in the air. Others hit buildings of wood and stone and the buildings at once become matchwood and powdered rock. It is almost unbelievably realistic.

The crowning feature is perhaps the battle at night. Unlike the usual way of taking the scenes in the day time and then tinting to give the night effect, this entire battle was staged and photographed with no other lighting but the "star" bombs and flares which are used on the battle line in France. The result is wonderfully spectacular.

REX BEACH PICTURES HAS BOOK OF HELPS TO EXHIBITORS.

A unique and helpful book is being issued by the Rex Beach Pictures Company, in connection with bookings for "The Barrier." The book will contain thirty-six pages of helpful hints to the exhibitor. It will show samples of long and short advance notices, and a number of special stories, poster and lobby displays, slides and samples of "pulling" advertisements that may be adapted to local use.

A department of especial interest is one devoted to suggestions on "How to Increase Attendance." Among these are a number of store window decorations and outdoor displays that are bound to attract attention and increase business. Attractive lobby magnets are outlined, as well as ways and means to tap out of town tributaries, prepared by W. G. Beecroft, director of publicity, who for many years has made a careful study of neglected opportunities for increased box office receipts in motion picture houses. Those shown in this brochure never before have been published.

The book will be off the press in a few days, and may be had, without charge, upon application to the Rex Beach Pictures Company, 440 Fourth avenue, New York City.

THRILLS IN FIFTH "DOUBLE CROSS" EPISODE.

Thrill follows thrill in the fifth episode of Pathe's "Mystery of the Double Cross" starring Mollie King, and announced for release the week of April 15. This chapter is entitled "The Life Current," and it is marked by three diabolically clever attempts to do away with Peter Hale, the hero.

With him on the operating table, Bridgey Bentley, the villain, plans to cut the electric light wires and bring darkness at a time when it will prove fatal. The suspense is at fever heat up to the last foot.

K-E-S-E Idea Catches On

Quick Response to New Policy of One Feature Every Week Is Reported.

KLEINE-EDISON-SELIG-ESSANAY announces that, as an accelerator of business, Mr. Kleine's recent statement that, beginning April 2, Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay would release a feature every week has proved a great success, as evidenced by the yearly contracts already signed and the large number pouring into the general office from the several branches. Exhibitors recognize pictures of unusual merit, and are glad to contract for a year at a time, thus ridding themselves of the vexations incident to shopping for pictures to fill in open dates.

In New York alone, Manager W. E. Raynor reports an unusual response to Mr. Kleine's announcement, and he expects to have at least 300 new yearly contracts signed in his territory before the new policy goes into effect April 2.

"The Trufflers," by Essanay, featuring Nell Craig and Sydney Ainsworth, will be released April 9 as the first release following this new policy.

"Builder of Castles," Edison, featuring Marc MacDermott and Miriam Nesbitt, will follow April 16.

"Skinner's Bubble," Essanay, presenting Bryant Washburn and Hazel Daly, will be released April 23.

"The Faith of Nancy," Selig, with Tom Santschi and Bessie Eyton featured, will be released April 30.

"Skinner's Big Idea," Essanay, in which Bryant Washburn will be featured, supported by the identical cast that made "Skinner's Dress Suit" such a success, is scheduled for release May 7.

"The Mystery of No. 47," Selig, Ralph Herz, star, is scheduled for May 14.

"The Door of Dread," Essanay, presenting Nell Craig, will follow on May 21.

"The Tell-Tale Step," Edison, with Shirley Mason in the titular role, is scheduled for May 28.

"The Lad and the Lion," Selig, with Vivian Reed and George Fawcett as stars, will be first screened June 4.

"The Ghost of Old Morro," Edison, with Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Conness, is scheduled for June 11.

It will be noticed that the three Skinner features, so called by reason of the great success attending "Skinner's Dress Suit," will be released in K-E-S-E regular service.

GENERAL NOW HAS FOUR TWO-REEL SERIES.

With the recent announcement of the Kalem company that the popular "Ham" comedies featuring "Ham" and "Bud" in the persons of Lloyd V. Hamilton and Bud Duncan are to be two reelers, the General Film Company will have for regular Weekly distribution a quartette of two-reel series which offer to the exhibitor a wide range of subjects and sustained quality in this popular length of subject. The "Ham" comedies are thoroughly established, and their extension to two-reel length will be welcomed eagerly by the millions who laugh at the antics of the popuar long and short comedians. "The American Girl," featuring Marin Sais, is the second of the group of two-reel series, but in popularity it is not second to any subject being shown in picture theaters today. The fact that the public is still demanding cowboy and Indian atmosphere is ably demonstrated by this series. The scenarios of "The American Girl" series are all by Frederick Bechdolt, the famous short story writer and novelist, who is one of the best known authors writing for the screen today. The third in the General's group is the O. Henry series, which promises to be one of the most popular groups ever released for the screen. The fourth series is the Selig cycle of two-reel dramas, which are thoroughly established and which have been a feature of General Film service for some time.

KORSON AND AMSTERDAM GET THE "NE'ER-DO-WELL" FOR PENN.

Messrs. Korson and Amsterdam, of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, 1225 Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa., have added another big feature production to their state right purchases by a deal with Sol L. Lesser, of San Francisco, for the eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey rights to "The Ne'er Do Well," Selig's famous picturization of the popular novel by Rex Beach.

"The Ne'er Do Well" was originally presented in this territory at the Forest theater, at $1 prices, where it played three weeks to capacity business. Since that time it has enjoyed the enviable record of having played at most every suburban house in the city of Philadelphia.

Messrs. Korson and Amsterdam announce that they are now ready for bookings on this subject.

EMMY WEHLEN COMPLETING TWO FEATURES.

"Sowers and Reapers," a Metro-Rolfe feature production with charming Emmy Wehler as star, is being completed at the Rolfe studios under the direction of George D. Baker, author of the play. Exteriors were taken in Florida for this five-part photodrama, as well as for "The Duchess of Doubt," written by Charles A. Logue and John Clymer, work on which will be finished as soon as "Sowers and Reapers" is completed. Thus two pictures with Miss Wehlen as star, directed by George D. Baker, will be finished at almost the same time.

Week's Activities at Fox Studios

New Players Added to the Staff and Several New Subjects Started.

WILLIAM FOX announces this week the addition of many new players to the casts of pictures which are now, or soon will be, in work. To the William Farnum company in the studios at Hollywood, Cal., are added Alan Forrest, Florence Vidor, Lillian West and Genevieve Blinn. Miss Vidor was seen in "A Tale of Two Cities" and Miss Blinn appears in "Tangled Lives," a Fox release for April 2.

Three newcomers to Fox Films have been assigned to roles in the next George Walsh feature, which Otis Turner will direct. They are Florence Mayon, Kenneth Everett and Phil Gastrock. Mr. Walsh's leading lady will be Doris Pawn. Also in the cast are Williard Louis, William Burress and Josef Swickard. Mr. Swickard will be recalled for his excellent portrayal of Dr. Manette in "A Tale of Two Cities." George Walsh himself will have the part of a book agent in the photodrama.

In the East, Valeska Suratt has just begun posing before the camera under the direction of William Nigh, who joined the Fox organization a short time ago. Miss Suratt herself returned a few days since from Tampa, Fla., where Kenean Buel has finished the scenes showing the star in the screen version of a famous Rider Haggard novel.

Mr. Nigh wrote the scenario for this subject, just as he did for "The Blue Streak," his initial production for Fox Film Corporation. The principals in the picture are Herbert Heyes, Violet Palmer, Dan Mason, Eric Mayne, Ruth Thorp, Edward Kennedy, Martin Faust and Edward Roseman. Joseph Ruttenberg will be the camera man on the subject.

June Caprice's new photoplay continues to make good progress. Ethel Cook, John Borkel, Harry D. Southard and Inez Marcel, who was in "The Mischief Maker," have been added to the cast of the production.

WILLIAMSON BROTHERS DO NOT WANT SCRIPTS.

Williamson Brothers, producers of the Williamson submarine expedition picture, the sensational undersea portions of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," and other submarine motion pictures, desire to go on record to the effect that they are not in the market for scenarios.

The undersea work is so difficult of execution, and so little understood by authors who have not had a personal connection with submarine possibilities that the Williamson Brothers have decided to depend entirely upon their own staff of writers, unless definite contracts should be made with authors of renown or for coypright material.

"THE PLANTER" (Nevada).

Tyrone Power, upon his completion of a several months' engagement in the stellar role of "Hertzer" in the Nevada Motion Picture Corporation's 12-reel production of "The Planter," has pronounced his work in this production as the greatest of his career on either stage or screen.

The character of "Hertzer" is a most unusual one. It is the battle of a studied, cruel nature against an inherent and inborn love of the good and beautiful, and this conflict wages a war of emotions throughout the life of this man, which brings about continual gasps and thrills as the story advances. Mr.

Scene from "The Planter" (Nevada).

Power has had a notable cast surrounding him, including Helen Bateman, Mable Wiles, Lemar Johnstone, George Odell and Louis FitzRoy.

The story of the "Planter" has always been noted for its remarkable characters and its intense situations, aside from the many possibilities for sensations in the way of fights, fires, etc., so that the ultimate result will be a combination of the dramatic and sensational which should exceed anything ever before placed in a multiple reel feature.

Art Dramas for April

NAOMI CHILDERS, Anna Q. Nilsson, Jean Sothern and Alma Hanlon are the Art Drama stars who will be seen by exhibitors and fans during the month of April. The four stars will appear in releases remarkable for their variety of theme. These will be released on the one-a-week plan, following the usual Art Drama custom.

"The Inevitable," an Erbograph production, which stars Anna Q. Nilsson, is the first of the month's features. This is released on April 5. It is a stirring story of intrigue and love, in which a girl sets out to wreck a man's life, and discovers, almost too late, that she is in love with him. A murder mystery, some clever detective work on the part of the principal character, and quantities of human interest make this one of the most appealing and interesting productions of the month.

Supporting Miss Nilsson in "The Inevitable" are Chester Barnett, well known for his work in previous Art Dramas, William Bailey, who plays the heavy role, and a notable cast. Ben Goetz directed the production.

Second of the month's releases, and equal to "The Inevitable" in suspense and novelty of plot, is "The Great Bradley Mystery," a unique play written by Edward Ellis. This was adapted from the stage play which had a great run in New York several seasons ago. Mr. Ellis is known to fame as the author of "Any Night," a Princess theater success. He also played Blackie Daw in the original production of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford."

Alma Hanlon stars in this production, with Edward Earle in support. Mr. Ellis also plays an important part. The story is a mystery tale, centered around a baffling murder. Three people might have killed Bradley, as all of them had sufficient cause. Which one did commit the crime, and how it was discovered, are worked out in the picture in a fascinating manner. The audience is kept in suspense as to the real solution of the puzzle until the very end. Richard Ridgley directed the play.

From the Van Dyke studios comes "One Woman's Ordeal," a problem play of domestic life. Jean Sothern plays the lead, while Walter Miller, known for his splendid work in previous Art Dramas, is the heavy. Arthur Housman also has an important role. The story was written and directed by Will S. Davis. "One Woman's Ordeal" will be released on April 19.

The first picture starring Naomi Childers, whose acquisition by the U. S. Amusement Corporation was announced last week, will be "The Auction of Virtue." This is from the pen of Joseph Poland, the celebrated novelist and writer, whose photoplay "The Cloud," a recent Art Drama, won such unqualified praise from the critics.

"The Auction of Virtue" is a dramatic narrative telling a startling story and pointing a keen moral in an unobtrusive way. In it Miss Childers has a role full of emotional possibilities. The story was written especially for the star, who has won renown in motion pictures through her work with Vitagraph and other companies. Herbert Blache directed the production, which is to be released on April 26.

BUSHMAN AND BAYNE START ON FIVE-REELER.

The taking of the first interiors for the new Metro five-reel feature, "The Voice of One," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are co-stars, has begun at the Quality studios. These scenes are laid in the living rooms of a number of shacks located in a lumber region, and furnish much opportunity for local color and action incident to the home life of the lumberjack.

Director William Christy Cabanne has had much experience in filming mining and lumberjack camps and devoted much time to attaining accuracy in these particular scenes for "The Voice of One."

Besides the principals in the cast are Jack Prescott, W. O. ("Pop") Kennard, Mrs. Sue Balfour, Dan Jarret, Charles Ripley, Frank Leigh, Robert Anderson, Art Ortego and Miss Chi Chester.

"THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD" MOST PICTURESQUE PRODUCTION.

Robert Izant, in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, says: "The first photoplay to reach the screen bearing the hallmark of the Photoplay League is "The Vicar of Wakefield." This play, without any doubt, deserves this stamp of approval, as it fully meets all the requirements in making a picture one of the worth-while sort. Frederick Warde, who takes the role of the Vicar, is one of those actors whom you may depend upon would never prostitute his art or work on anything inferior. The play is pictured in a red-blooded fashion, and there is nothing stilted about it. By far and away, it is the most picturesque production we have had this season."

"THE DEEMSTER" OPENS IN BOSTON.

Louis B. Mayer, of the New England Metro, who has purchased the territorial rights for New England, announces the opening of the Arrow production at the Park theater, Boston, April 9. Derwent Hall Caine, one of the authors, who is starring in "The Deemster," will appear in Boston the same week in the Shubert production, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," from the novel of the same name by Hall Caine.

WAR DEPICTED BY GAUMONT REELS.

The Gaumont Company certainly catches the spirit of the times in its single-reel releases through Mutual. Its editors are now watching war developments closely and picturing the more important phases of war activity. The first reel for the week of April 22 is "Tours Around the World," No. 25, released April 24. It contains pictures of Moscow, the "holy city" of Russia, where the Czars were crowned; Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, where the present world war started, and Brest, the most western fortified seaport of France.

These pictures are particularly timely; Moscow because of the revolution in Russia; Sarajevo because of our own entrance into the European conflict, and Brest because it may become a United States naval base for operations on the other side of the ocean.

The second release of the week is Gaumont's The Mutual Weekly. There is no way of now telling what pictures it will be showing late in April, for it is not prepared for exhibitors until the day it is issued.

The third single-reel is "Reel Life," the Mutual Magazine in Film. This will be No. 52, issued through Mutual April 26. With this number the film magazine completes the first year of its life. It has been successful even beyond the expectations of its sponsors, and has amply demonstrated the growing demand for motion pictures of this nature. An unusually attractive number has been arranged. It has pictures of "A Tabloid Bungalow," "Red Clay Workers of Barbados," "An Altiscope Rifle for Trench Warfare," "Cargo Boats of To-Morrow," an animated view of the future, "Metal Spinning," and "Native industries of the Sengalese in the Soudan."

"THE VALENTINE GIRL" (Famous Players).

Marguerite Clark's next Famous Players-Paramount picture following "The Fortunes of Fifi" will be "The Valentine Girl," scheduled for release April 23. The production, which is an original story, was directed by J. Searle Dawley, who has been responsible for the majority of Miss Clark's pictures, and will present her in the role of a very young girl—the type of character which Miss Clark has played with such infinite delight in "Snow White," "The Prince and the Pauper," "Molly Make Believe" and other of her most successful Famous Players productions.

But Marian Morgan's personality is different from the other little girls that Miss Clark has played upon the screen. The pathos of "Snow White," the quaint comedy of the little girl in "Still Waters." and the powerful appealing of the little beggar chap in "The Prince and the Pauper" are all rolled into one in Marian Morgan, the litle daughter of a professional gambler, and an outcast in society.

Frank Losee, who has appeared with Miss Clark in several of her pictures, and who has won the reputation upon the screen as being one of the foremost character actors before the camera, plays the important role of John Morgan, Marian's gambler father. Others in the cast are Edith Sampbell Walker, Adolph Menjou, Maggie Holloway Fisher, Katharine Adams and Richard Barthemess.

"THE HUNTING OF THE HAWK" BETTER THAN "KICK IN."

"Better than 'Kick In.'" That is the verdict of the Pathe film committee on "The Hunting of the Hawk," the Gold Rooster play produced by Astra, which is to be released April 22. The comparison with "Kick In" is natural, since "The Hunting of the Hawk" has a not dissimilar story, was directed by George Fitzmaurice, who directed "Kick In," and stars, also, William Courtenay, whose work was so impressive in "Kick In."

"The Hunting of the Hawk" is crammed full of action. The sets are beautiful, and the play notably staged. Marguerite Snow is featured with William Courtenay, thus appearing in a Pathe picture for the first time. A large and very well selected cast gives splendid support. The picture is aptly described by the use of the word "impressive."

"Kick In" has scored such a pronounced success in the best houses in the country that "The Hunting of the Hawk" is expected to be heavily booked. Certainly, from the standpoint of merit, it deserves to be put in the preferred class.

TWO SELIG COMEDIES.

The girl never had any spending money in her life. Dad always made her save her money. "Take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves," said he. One day the girl went on a spending spree. She bought a pair of two-dollar gloves. She liked the gloves and she spent some more money. Finally as she forgot economy she won the heart and hand of the town's wealthiest bachelor. "Two Dollar Gloves" is the name of the latest of Selig film features to be released in General Film service. There is plot and counter-plot and a lot of entertaining situations.

"Romance and Roses" is another of the Selig farce comedies now being released through the General Film service. There is a company of fun makers, including such well-known comedians as Irene Wallace, John Lancaster, Lyllian Leighton and Wm. Scott. The newlyweds arrive at a summer resort together with the newly rich. And then it happens!

Selznick's Spring Drive

Four Pictures Ready for Release and Four More Well Under Way.

THE great spring drive of Selznick pictures is on. With four new features ready for release and four more well under way, the assault of the Selznick forces upon the trenches of the program producers looks more formidable than ever.

The next Selznick picture to be released on the general market is Herbert Brenon's presentation of Florence Reed in "The Eternal Sin," now playing its third week at the Broadway theater, New York City, where it is drawing even larger houses than the phenomenal success, "War Brides."

The production to follow "The Eternal Sin" on the Selznick schedule is Norma Talmadge's second feature under the management of Joseph M. Schenck, a drama from the pen of Wilson Mizner, the noted author, entitled "The Law of Compensation."

In April two Selznick productions of extraordinary interest will be released, the first being Robert Warwick in "The Silent Master," a picturization of E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel, "The Court of St. Simon." This marks the American premiere of the famous French director, Leonce Perret, and every one who has had private glimpses of this picture predicts a real sensation. The second April release will be Clara Kimball Young in Eugene Walter's tremendous play, "The Easiest Way," produced under the direction of Albert Capellani.

Meanwhile, the Selznick stars and producers are busily engaged on their new productions. Herbert Brenon and his company return this week from New Orleans, where they have been making the exteriors for an adaptation of Louis Joseph Vance's widely read mystery story, "The Lone Wolf." Norma Talmadge and her associate players have already returned from the South to complete the filming of "Poppy." Director Charles Giblyn has finished the scenario adaptation of Virginia Terhune Van De Water's story, "Why I Left My Husband," for Clara Kimball Young, and Robert Warwick is well advanced in the production of an original story by his director, Mr. Perret, entitled "The Modern Othello."

It is expected that the schedule of two productions a month will be maintained throughout the Spring and Summer. The May releases as planned will be "The Lone Wolf" and "Poppy," and for June the new Clara Kimball Young and Robert Warwick pictures.

PAULINE FREDERICK AS SELF-SACRIFICING MOTHER.

Pauline Frederick, whose beauty and wonderful histrionic ability made her an ideal Sapho in the Famous Players adaptation of the celebrated Daudet novel, is to play a completely different type of character in her next production, "Sleeping Fires," which is scheduled for release by Paramount April 16.

Whereas Sapho was a heartless, uneducated seeker after pleasure, Zelma Bryce, the character assumed by Miss Frederick in "Sleeping Fires," is a woman of high mentality and very evident refinement, whose life is wrapped up in her little son. Widely different from the character of Sapho in every respect, Mrs. Bryce is at the same time an intensely emotional woman who is forced by the cruelty of her husband to put away her finer sensibilities and to meet fire with fire. It is a doubly sympathetic characterization, and on which will show Pauline Frederick in a new light, even to her most devoted admirers. "Sleeping Fires" was written by George Middleton, the well-known playright and author, and was directed by Hugh Ford.

Among those in the cast are such well-known players as Thomas Meighan, John Sainpolis, Helen Dahl and Joseph Smiley.

LULE WARRENTON FEATURE READY.

The newly organized Frieder Film Corporation, of Chicago, Ill., and Lankershim, Cal., makes its initial bow with a five-part offering of Kate Douglas Wiggin's celebrated story, "The Birds' Christmas Carol," work on which was completed recently at the Lankershim studios.

The direction is under the sole management of Lule Warrenton, one of the best known directors on the Pacific Coast, and qualified by temperament and experience for the work. Mrs. Warrenton bears an enviable record. She is generally recognized as having few peers in the handling of child players.

Dainty little four-year-old Mary Louise is the star of "The Birds' Christmas Carol," and this extraordinary bit of femininity has done the role full justice.

"The Birds' Christmas Carol" will be handled on a state rights basis.

THREE MAY BLUEBIRDS.

Exhibitors of Bluebirds will find much interest in the three releases already set for May on that schedule, marking the reappearance of Violet Mersereau and Dorothy Phillips, and the introduction of Allen Holubar, with Joseph Girard, in features of promised excellence. Miss Mersereau leads off, May 7, with "Little Miss Nobody."

"Treason," May 14, will make a stirring appeal to loyalty and love of country in its military details and battle scenes, coupled with an engaging love story created by Robert Lee Wiegert. The leading lady will be Lois Wilson, and the featured players will be Allen Holubar and Joseph Girard. Mr. Holubar directed the production. Leo Pierson, George Pearce, Burton Law, Edward Hearn, L. M. Wells and Dorothy Davenport will be in the supporting company.

Dorothy Phillips makes her stated appearance in "The Flashlight Girl," a five-act reflection of stirring adventure, with a "surprise finish." The story, by Albert M. Treynor, was originally printed in a popular magazine, and was prepared for the screen and directed by Ida May Park. This is Miss Park's first production, although she has furnished hundreds of scenarios, and assisted her husband, Joseph De Grasse, in producing numerous Bluebirds of earlier favor. Lon Chaney and William Stowell will, as usual, be cast in prominent supporting roles, and will be featured.

HORSLEY STUDIO ACTIVE.

With the Crane Wilbur company beginning operations last week, the David Horsley studios in Los Angeles have assumed an air of enthusiastic activity. Three producing organizations are now engaged in making pictures on the Horsley lot—the Crane Wilbur company, the Ovey company and an outside feature company, which has leased studio space in the plant.

Crane Wilbur and his company, under the direction of Mr. Wilbur and Harrish Ingraham, are staging a five-reel picture to be called "The Eye of Envy." The picture is being made from a story written by Mr. Wilbur, and when finished will be distributed as one of the series of six Crane Wilbur features now being released by Mr. Horsley through the Mutual Film Corporation.

Director Milton Fahrney is staging his seventy-eighth Cub comedy, with George Ovey. It is called "Somewhere in the Mountains," and will soon be released through the Mutual.

Helen Holmes, the Money Getter

Mutual Film Corporation Lauds "The Railroad Raiders" as Great Box Office Magnet—Seventh Chapter in Production.

THE Mutual calls "The Railroad Raiders," Helen Holmes' photonovel in fifteen chapters, a "pre proved product." Significant statistical facts relating to Helen Holms and her value to the theaters are offered from the Mutual's accounting department. The lease records and reports indicate that approximately $2,253,000 was paid to the theaters in admissions to see Helen Holmes in "The Girl and the Game," her first Signal-Mutual screen novel. The records on the booking now in progress on "The Lass of the Lumberlands," second Holmes photonovel for Mutual, indicate that the theaters are enjoying a nearly equal success with this production.

Scene from "Railroad Raiders" (Mutual).

These figures are cited to show that Helen Holmes is getting the money for the man who runs her pictures. Miss Holmes' pictures for Mutual have made for exhibitors something near a total of five million dollars since the release of the first chapter of "The Girl and the Game."

"Demonstrated box office earning power like that is of very distinct significance to the exhibitor and of important meaning to the picture industry," observes President John R. Freuler of the Mutual.

"It is with such statistical evidence before us that the Mutual Film Corporation is now making its plans, accepting and rejecting film distribution propositions and charting the corporation's course.

"We are interested only in proved products, in so far as the photoplay product may be proved.

"I say this now in behalf of the coming of Helen Holmes' production, 'The Railroad Raiders,' now being made at the Signal studios under the direction of John P. McGowan, the man who has directed all of the big Holmes successes."

Even the development of minor detail in the making of the Holmes pictures is, by the Mutual's system of business analysis, being reduced to approved and proved formulas of success.

"We have done and are doing everything to insure success,' said Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the Signal Film Corporation at Los Angeles the other day. "Art no longer has to be left entirely to chance.

"This is the prescription for the big Helen Holmes successes in serials: First, Helen Holmes herself, the star of the chapter play type of production; second, John P. McGowan, the man who can find a real story and put it in pictures; third, the real story, and fourth, but extremely important, the story itself. We have added a fifth strengthening factor by retaining Frank Hamilton Spearman to write the syndicated story of "The Railroad Raiders." Mr. Spearman, it will be recalled, is the author of many successful novels, and is known to films as the author of 'The Girl and the Game' and 'Whispering Smith.'"

The story of "The Railroad Raiders" is of the very certain and successful type of railroad adventure fiction. The plot revolves about a band of thieves preying upon the railroad, plotting and counterplotting. There are wrecks, hold-ups, hairbreadth escapes, man hunts, battles and perils and incidents of suspense without end.

Director McGowan is now at work upon the seventh chapter of the production—with six perfectly good negatives completed and delivered—a valuable assurance to the exhibitor of the delivery of the pictures on release dates.

The fifteen chapter titles are in the nature of an index to the swift action of the story: "Circumstantial Evidence," "A Double Steal," "Inside Treachery," "The Deal in Silks," "A Woman's Wit," "The Overland Disaster," "The Yellow Peril," "The Millionaire's Special," "The Fight for the Pass," "The Great Tunnel Disaster," "The Mystery of the Counterfeit Tickets," "Total Paralysis," "The Road Wreckers," "The Trap" and "Hearts and Trumps."

The cast chosen to support Miss Holmes is almost identical with that of "The Lass of the Lumberlands," including William Buhler, Katherine Goodrich, Florence Holmes, John Hemphill, Thomas G. Lingham, Leo D. Maloney, Paul C. Hurst, the able villain; William Brunton, Will Chapman and Charles U. Wells.

Paralta Getting Ready for Business

Herman Fichtenburg Comes to New York to Take Up Work —Outline of Plans.

HERMAN FICHTENBERG, chairman of the board of directors of Paralta Plays, Inc., the newly incorporated distributing company, arrived in New York from New Orleans last week prepared to take an active part in carrying out the plans on which he and President Carl Anderson and General Manager Nat Brown have been developing during the past eight months.

A sort of slogan of the new company is "Buy for the year, not for the day—do not rent feature films, but buy them for a territory for a specific time." Otherwise, get a feature film which may be run as often as the exhibitor desires, and, instead of paying $100 a day for it, pay but $100 for a year.

A feature of the Paralta plan, as it is described, is the provision made to cover the matter of "repeats," or return runs of a film. An exhibitor controls all Paralta plays in his district. One is released called "Rose o' Paradise." He knows the star and company, and, from the information given him, he believes he will be justified in booking the picture for three days or a week, for it is a real feature production and not a padded pretense to merit. Under the old plan this would have cost him from $300 to $700. Under the Paralta plan it will cost him but $100. He would have taken it for three days, and perhaps for a week under the old scheme, knowing it would pay him a profit. Under the Paralta plan he knows he will certainly make a profit of the difference he would have paid under the old system and $100.

This leaves him a special margin for advertising, and he takes advantage of it and makes a special effort to interest all families in his community. He makes the run of the picture. It scors a hit. There is a liberal response to his advertising, and at the end of several days he returns the print. After hearing from patrons who liked the picture a repeat run occurs to him.

Under the old system this would cost him $100 a day, for actual hits really become more valuable on repeats. They are known. After a while he sees an opportunity to make the second run, and he announces the booking and advertises it liberally. He can afford to, for he has bought it by the year originally for $100. He has the exclusive right to it in his territory for twelve months, and he can run it just as often as he pleases and can make it draw.

In a few days President Carl Anderson and Mr. Fitchenberg will begin to make known the full details of the Paralta plan through trade paper and direct advertising.

CURRENT PARAMOUNT-BRAY PICTOGRAPH INTERESTING.

The three sections of the magazine portion, together with one of the famous Bray cartoons, combine to make the sixty-second release of the Paramount-Bray-Pictographs one of the most interesting yet produced.

The first subject, "Prehistoric Tar Traps," shows natural tar pits in southern California, which have been there for more than 100,000 years, and which are full of the bones of the great monsters that roamed over the American continent a thousand centuries ago. Dr. George B. Shattuck, one of the world's foremost geologists, made the trip there especially to secure this picture.

Ottokar Bartik, ballet master of the Metropolitan Opera, trots out his proteges before the Pictograph camera to show how he develops the coming Pavlowas of the ballet. The third subject, "Curiosities of New York," shows a number of unique, out-of-the-way spots in the world's greatest metropolis, and finds them in places that are unknown to even most New Yorkers.

An old friend of Paramount audiences, Miss Nanny Goat,, makes her reappearance in the cartoon section of this release.

"POKES AND JABS" COMEDIES ON OPEN MARKET.

Announcement is made by the Jaxon Film Corporation, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, that the "Pokes and Jabs" comedies, which have heretofore been released on the General Film Company program under the Vim brand, have been withdrawn from the General program, and will be distributed hereafter on the open market, through the medium of independent exchanges. These comedies are single reel pictures, and feature George Burns as "Pokes," and Walter Stull as "Jabs." Both these comedians are well known throughout the country, and their work in the Jaxon comedies is said to have made the "Pokes and Jabs" release a very popular one.

Four Stars in Pathe Program

Florence LaBadie, Mollie King, Mrs. Vernon Castle and "Lonesome Luke" in Strong Program.

FOUR strong box-office stars head the Pathe program for the week of April 15, 1917. They are Florence LaBadie, Mollie King, Mrs. Vernon Castle and Harold Lloyd, better known as "Lonesome Luke."

Florence LaBadie appears in a five-reel feature entitled "When Love Was Blind," written by Agnes C. Johnston, author of "The Shine Girl," "Prudence the Pirate," "Her New York," "Divorce and the Daughter," all of them successes. The many twists of the story hold the interest from beginning to end and the action is characterized by the subtle touches which have made the work of Miss Johnston famous. The carefully chosen cast supporting Miss LaBadie includes Thomas Curran, Boyd Marshall, Harris Gordon, Ethyle Cooke and Gladys Leslie. The picture was directed by Frederick Sullivan.

The fifth episode of "Mystery of the Double Cross" is called "The Life Current." It is one of the strongest chapters yet, giving Mollie King splendid opportunity to show her beauty and her ability. William Parke's direction is a feature.

Mrs. Vernon Castle appears in the fourteenth episode of "Patria," entitled "The Border Peril." It is characterized by wonderful spectacle scenes in which as many as three thousand people appear.

The second "Lonesome Luke" Bombshell of Joy is called "Lonesome Luke on Tin Can Alley," it is even funnier than "Lonesome Luke's Lively Life," which S. L. Rothapfel ran at the Rialto theater, New York, and said was the funniest comedy he had ever seen. Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard, Bebe Daniels and Bud Jameson are in the cast. The picture was directed by Hal Roach.

"Arid and Fruitful California" is seen in the fifth "Know America, the Land We Love," Combitone Scenic release. These pictures get an enthusiastic hand at the Broadway theater, New York, and they should do the same anywhere.

"Accepted Styles" is the title of the twenty-seventh Florence Rose Fashion release, the feature of which is a preparedness suit for patriotic young ladies. On the same reel with this is a Pathe-colored picture entitled "Odd Fresh Water Creatures."

The International Cartoon and Scenic split-reel consists of "Bringing Up Father," "Music Hath Charms," cartoons, and "Button-Making," industrial.

Hearst-Pathe News No. 32 and 33 complete the program.

Plan Film Day at Fair

New York State Fair at Syracuse May Set Aside "Motion Picture Day."

IF the plans which were discussed at a conference held in the New York Lieutenant Governor's chambers in the capitol at Albany during the past week materialize, it is not unlikely that a "motion picture day" will be set aside during State Fair week in Syracuse this year.

Lieutenant Governor Edward Schoeneck, who is president of the New York State Fair Commission, invited several film executives who were at the capitol attending the hearing before the Joint Codes Committee on the various bills providing for Sunday motion picture shows, to confer with him. Those at the hearing included William A. Brady, director general of the World Film Corporation and president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry; Arthur S. Friend, treasurer and attorney of the Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation, Paramount Pictures Corporation and Artcraft Pictures Corporation; J. E. Brulatour, Eastman Films; J. Robert Rubin, attorney for Metro Pictures Corporation and the National Exhibitors' League, and Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Lieutenant Governor Schoeneck, who is an enthusiastic advocate of motion pictures, stated that there were few persons up State who knew anything at all about the making of motion pictures, and thought that if a day were devoted to the motion picture industry at the State Fair it would attract the greatest number of people to the fair during the week.

It is proposed to erect on the State Fair grounds at Syracuse a temporary structure for the use of the motion picture companies representing the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, where they may include exhibits and make sets for scenes. The Lieutenant Governor proposes to interest some of the great directors as well as several motion picture stars to attend the State Fair upon this day. Each of whom will be asked to give short talks upon their experiences and explain how films are produced. While in Syracuse, the film officials, directors and stars will be the guests of the State Fair Commission and the city of Syracuse.

SECOND TWO-REEL "LUKE" APRIL 15.

The second of Pathe's two reel "Lonesome Luke" comedies will be released April 15. It is entitled "Lonesome Luke On Tincan Alley," and is described as being funnier than "Lonesome Luke's Lively Life" which S. L. Rothapfel ran at the Rialto theater in New York, calling it the funniest comedy he had ever seen.

The comedy shows Luke as a pickpocket with a fake arm, the boss of Tincan Alley and the backer of the most screamingly ridiculous prize fight ever filmed. How Luke wrests victory from seeming defeat is told in a hilarious manner.

GAUMONT SHOWS WAR APPLIANCES.

Exhibitors who wish to float with the current of popularity must be sure to show the Gaumont single-reels. They are edited with an eye to popularizing theaters with the public through the interest they arouse and the desire they create to see the succeeding issues. War being now uppermost in the minds of all citizens, these Gaumont pictures have a liberal assortment of views and animated pictures of the science of warfare. A consideration of the pictures released the week of "The Altiscope Rifle" (Gaumont).

April 22 brings to light how carefully they have been prepared to help exhibitors keep their public pleased.

"Reel Life," No. 52, has as a leading section pictures of the altiscope rifle, the new firearm developed to meet the changed conditions created by trench warfare. There are pictures of it at close range to demonstrate how it is operated, and then an exhibition of how it is used by the men on the firing line.

Another section of this same reel is called "Cargo Boats of Tomorrow." These are vessels of 1,000-ton capacity, which have such shallow draught that a torpedo launched at one of them would go under the boat. As this is a development of the future to combat subsea warfare, there are no pictures of such boats extant. It is for this purpose that the Gaumont animated department is maintained. Pictures have been made from authoritative descriptions and plans, and thus the spectator is able to have a look into the world of the future.

"Tours Around the World," No. 25, takes the spectator to Moscow, Russia; Sarajevo, Bosnia, and Brest, France—all cities that are of unusual interest because of their prominence in the war news.

NEW YORK EXHIBITORS PRAISE "DOUBLE CROSS"

Two hundred and seventy-five representative exhibitors of New York attended a trade showing on Monday, March 26, on the New York Roof, at which the first four episodes of "Mystery of the Double Cross," Pathe's latest serial, were shown. The serial was accorded an enthusiastic reception and the New York branch is having a busy time arranging for bookings.

"We are convinced that 'Mystery of the Double Cross' will show to more millions of the American public than has any serial of the past," states J. A. Brest, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange. "There are three reasons for this. The most important is the story. In my opinion it is the greatest serial story that has ever been written. There is mystery and suspense in every episode in addition to the unusual thrills. Added to this, there is a sustained interest that is certain to bring audiences back week after week."

The trade showing in New York was arranged by A. S. Abeles, manager, and H. E. Friedman, associate manager of Pathe's New York branch. The theater was artistically decorated and a full orchestra was on hand for the musical accompaniment Mollie King, the featured player in this serial, appeared in person and made a pretty little speech.

"THE WHIP" FAVORABLY RECEIVED.

"The Whip," reproduced as a motion picture from the greatest success ever recorded in the history of spoken melodrama, appears to have registered an even greater triumph upon the screen. The picture version was shown to the New York public for the first time at the Park Theater on Sunday, March 25, and the receipts for the day are reported to have been in excess of $2,200.

The large audience room—one of the most capacious in the city—has since been packed, day and evening, and the applause and cheering have indicated an entirely extraordinary enthusiasm on the part of the spectators. This same spirit is reflected in the criticisms of the daily newspapers, which commend the immense photoplay without reserve.

NOVELTY SOUVENIRS FOR "DOUBLE CROSS."

Supplementing the usual fine line of advertising matter, the Stern Publishing and Novelty Co., 220 West 42d street, has prepared novelties for "Mystery of the Double Cross" as follows: Puzzles, buttons, felt pennants of Mollie King, mirrors with a photograph of Mollie King on the back; photos on easels, of Mollie King.

There are also dolly cut-outs of Mollie King, printed in colors on heavy cardboard and showing authentic styles as seen in the Florence Rose Fashion Films. These cut-outs are supplied to exhibitors through Pathe exchanges, the other novelties are to be ordered from the Stern company.

There is a series of three advance slides which have been prepared with a view to creating an anticipatory interest in the story. These slides play up the mystery end of the serial as do the tack cards which are issued for the first four episodes.

Through the liberal use of these slides and tack cards, exhibitors are able to directly tie their theater up with the great national advertising campaign which is being read by thirty-two million people every week.

FILMCRAFT FILMS WALT MASON STORIES.

The Filmcraft Corporation of 8 West 40th street announces that it has secured the exclusive motion picture rights to the material of one of America's most widely known writers, Walt Mason. The first of these pictures, "The Dipper," in one reel, has already been completed and is scheduled for a week's run at the Rialto in the very near future. In speaking of this after reviewing it, Mr. Rothapfel said in part: "It is the kind of comedy that the industry needs, clean, wholesome and done with good taste. The humaneness and the wit and simplicity of this picture makes it an extraordinary release."

The picture was directed by Addison J. Rothermel, formerly with the Edison and Kalem companies, and embodies a very effective combination of "legitimate" screen dramatization with a touch of animated comedy, the latter work being under the direction of A. B. Heath of the Kineticartoon Corporation. Miss Sarah Ayres and Bob Clugston take the leads and do some very effective work. No releasing arrangements have yet been made.

'UNCLE SAM AWAKE" PART OF PREPAREDNESS PROGRAM.

"Uncle Sam Awake," the Rogson Film Company's patriotic feature film, was one of the attractions at the monster preparedness performance arranged for the Junior Patriots of America, and staged at the New York Hippodrome on Sunday night, March 25. The film was ushered on the screen by former Ambassador to Germany Gerard. The picture was received with great enthusiasm.

The film shows the coasts which will have to be protected in the event of war, President Wilson and his cabinet, pictures of army and navy life, etc. Arrangements have been made with the Junior Patriots by Louis T. Rogers, president of the Rogson company, to show "Uncle Sam Awake" in New York State and the New England states. In this manner it is hoped to greatly increase the fund for carrying on patriotic work.

IS GLADYS LESLIE A STAR?

"I have not lost faith in my belief that the right kind of star material can be developed overnight," says Edwin Thanhouser. "This sort of material is very scarce, I grant. I think our Miss Gladys Leslie is this sort of material, and I expect to prove it in a feature that Van Dyke Brooke is making at this moment."

Mr. Brooke says of Miss Leslie: "She has that unexplainable charm that needs only development to get across. She has sense, and really feels her part. I think it is all a mater of 'part,' so far as her success is concerned. She would never do as a vampire! But in the right atmosphere she will make a profound impression. I think we have the right atmosphere in this, her first feature, and I believe that Mr. Thanhouser's prophecy will be fulfilled."

AMSTERDAM BUYS "DEEMSTER."

B. Amsterdam, of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, of Vine street, Philadelphia, has purchased the Hall Caine masterpiece, "The Deemster," for the states of Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia. The deal was completed on Wednesday, March 28. Mr. Amsterdam, who is associated with Mr. L. Korson, will present "The Deemster" in the National theater, Washington, the week of April 23 for a run of four weeks, and the same week in a legitimate theater in Baltimore for a period of two weeks, and possibly more.

Mr. Amsterdam is arranging a Press Club showing at Washington the week of April 16. He advises that he will handle "The Deemster" throughout his territory as a road attraction, playing all the larger cities.

SCHWALBE BUYS "DEEMSTER" FOR EASTERN PA.

Harry Schwalbe, of the Peerless Feature Film Exchange, of Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa., completed a deal in the last week with the Arrow Film Corporation for "The Deemster" for eastern Pennsylvania. Mr. Schwalbe will present "The Deemster" possibly at the Chestnut Street opera house, Philadelphia, in the course of the next five or six weeks on an elaborate scale.

"THE WITCHING HOUR" FOR UTAH.

Lester Park, representing the Potoplay Exchange of Salt Lake City, Utah, has consummated a contract for his organization with President William L. Sherrill of the Frohman Amusement Corporation for the exclusive rights to the Frohman master production, "The Witching Hour," for the territory of Colorado, Wyoming and Utah, at a price reported to set a new record by their territory.

The Photoplay Exchange has been accorded a phenomenal request for bookings of this subject, with nought save the small preliminary amount of news given from the Frohman offices to those exhibitors who have written direct to that office for information in reference to "The Witching Hour."

TRADE SHOWING OF "THE FATED HOUR."

The Cines Film Corporation of America announces a trade showing to state right buyers of their six-reel melodramatic feature, "The Fated Hour," at the Simplex theater, fifth floor of the Candler Building, 220 West 42d street, New York City, at 3 o'clock, Monday afternoon, April 9.

"The Fated Hour" is frankly melodramatic, containing 6,000 feet of thrills.

TRADE SHOWING OF "GOD'S MAN" AT RIALTO.

The trade and professional pre-release screening of the Frohman Amusement Corporation's nine-reel production of George Bronson Howard's novel of New York's Broadway and night life, "God's Man," in which H. B. Warner is starred, will have a trade showing at the Rialto, New York, on Wednesday, April 4, 10:30 a. m.

HEARST-PATHE NEWS AIDS RECRUITING.

The Hearst-Pathe News is aiding the government by running patriotic titles designed to promote recruiting in both army and navy. As this news weekly has probably fifteen times the circulation of the largest newspaper in the United States, the aid thus given the government is of decided importance.

Notes of the Trade

THE Brand of Satan," by Jere F. Looney, a new World-Picture Brady-Made, will feature Montagu Love and Gerda Holmes. Prominent in the cast is Evelyn Greeley.

Roy Neill will direct Enid Bennett in her new Triangle-Ince-Kay Bee play, in which she stars as the granddaughter of a Civil War veteran. Margery Bennett, the young sister of Enid Bennett, who arrived from Australia to join that star last fall, will appear upon the screen in the cast supporting Enid Bennett.

* * *

Kitty Gordon's photoplay, "Forget-Me-Not," is ready for release. It contains a number of scenes which were not in the stage drama of the same name when Genevieve Ward and Rose Coghlan played it successively. A particularly effective finish has been provided by Director General William A. Brady of World-Pictures, to take the place of the former unsatisfactory ending.

* * *

Mollie King and Sybil Carmen are among the Broadway favorites posing in Gaumont fashion pictures for The Mutual Weekly.

* * *

"Darkest Russia," to be released by World-Pictures Brady-Made, is just in time to meet the desires of a vast number of persons in America who fled the Czar's dominion to escape conditions which led to the present revolution. This play, of which Alice Brady is the star, illustrates many of the cruelties and oppressions of autocratic government and carries a love story of unusual fervor and interest.

* * *

Alan Forrest, Florence Vidor, Lillian West and Genevieve Blinn have been added to the William Fox fold in Hollywood, Cal. All four will be in the supporting cast of a forthcoming William Farnum production. Miss Vidor had a small part in "A Tale of Two Cities," and Miss Blinn will be seen in "Tangled Lives," which is a Fox release for April 2.

Lucile Dorrington, Wilson Reynolds and Albert Favernier are the important players who support Anna Q. Nilsson and Chester Barnett in "The Inevitable," an Erbograph Art Drama.

* * *

Ethel Clayton is at work on a new World-Picture Brady-Made called "The Stolen Paradise." Edward Langford is the featured male player in this production and the cast also includes George MacQuarrie, Robert Forsyth, George Cowl, Lew Hart and Pinna Nesbit. The play is directed by Harley Knowles.

Trade News of the Week

GATHERED BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS

Propose Theater Ticket Tax for Nova Scotia

New Bill Provides That Tax Shall Be Collected by the Owners of Theaters Through Sale of Tickets Supplied by Censor—Rates, Etc.

By F. F. Sully, The La Tour, St. John, N. B.

HALIFAX, N. S.—A bill to provide for the taxation of theater patrons throughout the province of Nova Scotia has just been introduced into the House of Assembly, which is now in session, by Premier George E. Murray. According to the bill the rate of taxation will range from one cent on a ticket costing five cents to ten cents on a ticket costing fifty cents or more. This bill, which would amend the law governing theaters and moving picture houses, provides that each person attending any performance shall at the time of entry pay to His Majesty, for the benefit of the Province of Nova Scotia, a tax to be collected on the following scale:

Upon each admission where the admission fee is not more than five cents, a tax of one cent; where the fee is more than five, but not more than ten cents, a tax of two cents; where the fee is more than ten cents, but not more than fifteen cents, a tax of three cents; where the fee is more than fifteen cents, but not more than twenty-five cents, a tax of five cents, and where the fee is more than fifty cents, a tax of ten cents.

The bill provides that the tax shall be collected by the owners of the theaters by means of tickets issued by the Board of Censors, and that every theater owner shall place at the entrance to his place of business a receptacle, in which shall be placed the tickets provided for under the act. Under the workings of this bill no one is allowed to enter a theater for the purpose of attending a performance unless complying with the above requirements.

S. Starfield Here to Open Independent.

St. John, N. B.—S. Starfield, formerly city salesman for the Independent Film & Theater Supply company in Montreal, has arrived in St. John to open an Independent branch in conjunction with the Standard Film Service Limited. The supply company, which already has offices in Toronto and Winnipeg, besides Montreal, is sole Canadian agents for the Powers and Simplex machines. Under a separate head, but under the same management, The Perkins Electric Company is now located here, with the temporary offices of all three concerns, under the supervision of Mr. Starfield, at 167 Prince William street. Larger quarters are to be occupied at an early date. The new manager has had five years' experience as supply and exchange man, and is filling the chair made vacant by the resignation of Jules H. Wolfe, who left last Saturday night for Montreal, where he is to be located temporarily.

S. Starfield.

Must Show Censorship Slide.

Halifax, N. S.—In the future all theaters showing pictures in any part of the province will be obliged to throw upon the screen previous to all performances a slide supplied by the Province and reading: "All pictures shown in this theater have been passed by the Nova Scotia Board of Censors."

Lieut. H. Wambolt "Missing."

Halifax, N. S.—Harry Wambolt, manager and proprietor of the Buzz theater, this city, and the Palace theater, Dartmouth, has been reported missing on the Somme front since March 4th. He is a flight lieutenant with Royal Naval Air Service and has been in the service of the Empire for more than a year. Harry, or "Buzz," as he is known to his intimate friends, was a capable and popular member of the trade, and his friends join with his family in hoping that he may be alive and well and only a prisoner of war.

Business Notes and Personals.

St. John, N. B.—Dave Richards, proprietor of the Gem theater, Fredericton, was here, getting a line on some of the serials. He closed with R. J. Romney of the Greater Vitagraph for the "Secret Kingdom," and signed with G. A. Margetts for several Universal features.

St. John, N. B.—Through the courtesy of Charles Burman and William J. Reid of the Regal Film, and Walter H. Golding, manager of the Imperial, several private screenings of some of the new Brady-Made pictures were given at the Imperial. In addition to the above the screenings were attended by Steve C. Hurley of the Unique and Lyric theaters; Fred Trifts of the Gem; Harry Beahman of the Opera House; J. Kattahar of Sydney, N. S.

St. John, N. B.—J. Kattaahr, of Kattahar's theater, Sydney, N. S., was here, looking for some war pictures, which he claims are very popular with his audiences.

St. John, N. B.—A new record for serial runs in St. John has been established by "Patria," the Pathe production, which is to have four runs in the city. R. G. March, local manager, has closed negotiations, with Steve C. Hurley of the Unique for the opening run on April 9, 10 and 11. The picture will be seen at A. B. Farmer's Star, W. C. Smith's Empress and J. O'Rourke's Gayety. The first of the Red Rooster superfeatures, "The Vicar of Wakefield," by Oliver Goldsmith, will be released in this territory early in May. Frederick Warde appears in the title role.

Halifax, N. S.—Reg. Marsh, Maritime representative of the Specialty Film, was in the city last week with seven reels of the much-talked-of preparedness serial, "Patria."

NOTES FROM PINE TREE STATE.

Maine Exchanges Find Parcels Post Convenient.

Bangor, Me.—House Manager Curran reports that the parcel post is being extensively used in Maine for shipping reels and that in some ways it is quite an improvement over express. The mail service goes where the express does not in many instances and the exchanges find that delivery is just as quick. The Federal regulations prohibit shipping films by express to the islands off Maine, but they can be sent by mail all right to these points. Oftentimes the rates are less than by express. From Bangor the reels are sent to Aroostook and Washington counties.

P. J. McConville in Charge of Publicity for Maine Theaters, Inc. See account on page 1962, issue of March 21, 1916.

Other Maine Notes.

Harrington, Me.—S. A. Anderson, of Harrington, the well known exhibitor, is contemplating rebooking "Stingaree" in the vicinity of his town, after having had a wonderful run of it in Harrington. The town went crazy over this picture, he reports.

Bangor, Me.—R. B. Marston, of the K-E-S-E forces, Boston, was a business visitor to Bangor this week, calling on the local film trade.

Winn, Me.—It is rumored that houses are about to be built or established at Winn and Lagrange, Me.

Kenduskeag, Me.—E. R. Jordan, proprietor of the moving picture theater at Kenduskeag, has sold out to the grange in his town, and the manager will be Charles A. York. The name of the theater is to be the Mystic, and it will probably be the first theater in Maine to be run by a grange. Mr. Jordan plans to leave soon for Oklahoma. The house is using General Film Service.

Notes of Local Exhibitors.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Albert E. Brown has completed arrangements for the presentation of Paramount pictures at his theater, the Grand, at 52d and Market streets. This is the first time that this program has been shown here.

Philadelphia, Pa.—H. Osborne, manager of the local Pathe exchange, is patiently waiting word from the fire underwriters to learn whether he will be permitted to move his exchange into the second floor of a large fireproof building, which he personally considers to be very appropriate for his use.

Philadelphia, Pa.—H. Nields, formerly of the New Coliseum theater, has been transferred to the Tioga theater as house manager. Some of his pet ideas on theater management will soon be tested out here.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Herbert Effinger, who is giving the patrons of his Strand theater a series of unusual musical programs, has secured the orchestra of the Wanamaker tea room, one of the most noted small orchestras of the city, to play every evening at his Leader theater, 41st street and Lancaster avenue.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Harry Ertel, manager of the Great Northern theater, Broad street and Erie avenue, recently instituted a series of duets between piano and organ which are proving attractive features of his musical programs.

The largest staff of experts in all departments makes the MOVING PICTURE WORLD the one paper in the trade that fully fills the requirements of every reader.

Film Series to Teach the Art of Cooking

Philadelphia Newspaper Woman Has Prepared a Series of Film Lectures to Combat the High Cost of Living.

By F. V. Armato, 144 N. Salford Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The all important question of reducing the high cost of living will presently be discussed on the screen in a highly novel and entertaining way. Under the direction of R. Greenwalt, of the Stanley Company, a series of illustrated lectures on cookery are being prepared by Caroline B. King, a newspaper woman, lecturer and expert on domestic science and dietetics. The pictures, which are to be released serially, will show the process of preparing and serving foods palatably and tastefully. The first of the series, "The One Piece Dinner," has already been made, and others will follow weekly.

Mrs. King is editor of the woman's page of "The Evening Telegraph," a staff writer on "Good Housekeeping," and has lectured extensively on cooking and dietetics, under the auspices of the University Extension Society, various women's clubs and other organizations. The first picture was staged in a model kitchen specially prepared by the United Gas Improvement Company.

Legislators See "John Doe vs. the People."

Philadelphia, Pa.—The motion picture invaded the State Capitol at Harrisburg last Wednesday, when the special film "John Doe vs. the People" was shown before the entire Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Pennsylvania. This unusual spectacle was the result of a fight against capital punishment which is being made throughout the State.

Stanley V. Mastbaum, who owns the state rights of the picture, is an earnest opponent of capital punishment and lent his presence and influence toward securing permission to have the picture shown. Speaker Baldwin of the House suggested a resolution permitting it to be shown, which was passed on Monday.

The exhibition evidently made a deep impression on the legislators and is expected to prove the final means of securing the abolishment of this mode of punishing crime.

A representative body of film men, comprising F. W. Butler, general manager of the Central Market Street Amusement Co.; Abe L. Einstein, publicity director of the Stanley Company, and W. Herchendider, made the trip to Harrisburg and saw that the picture was properly presented.

For one hour and twenty minutes the lawmakers were held spellbound while "John Doe vs. the People" conveyed its lesson and showed the danger of convicting an innocent man of a capital offense.

A. R. Boyd Improving Family Theater.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Spring house cleaning is not ordinarily such an institution among exhibitors as it is in the average household. Yet the first week of the new season finds many local exhibitors busy installing new devices in their houses. Alexander R. Boyd, who has recently acquired the Family theater, is now making extensive alterations and improvements without disturbing the performances at the house. At the back of the screen two organ chambers are being constructed to receive a new and beautiful organ. Where the balcony once stood will be a new and magnificent arch to enhance the beauty of the house. In addition a new ventilating system will be installed capable of changing the air of the house every two minutes. In the basement a modern and sanitary retiring room for men is being built, while a ladies' parlor is also being designed in another part of the building. Mr. Boyd is personally supervising the work and is always on hand to aid in the solution of any difficult problem. Some three years ago Mr. Boyd successfully completed the erection of the Arcadia theater, which was then extensively described in these columns. Robert Taylor, house manager of the Family, is a man of many years' experience in the motion picture world.

John O'Neill Joins General Film.

Philadelphia, Pa.—John O'Neill, formerly a newspaper man, has joined the General Film forces as traveling representative, and will cover New Jersey, Delaware and Virginia.

George Ames Now District Superintendent.

Philadelphia, Pa.—George F. Ames, local manager of the General Film, has been promoted to be district superintendent of eastern Pennsylvania, Washington and a large adjacent territory. He is now setting things in motion for a big spring drive and says that prospects are favorable. He has added several young men to his road staff and is beginning a large advertising campaign. P. A. Bloch arrived recently from New York to take over the management of the local office, left vacant by Mr. Ames' promotion.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Carlos Morteo, who is the manager of the Regent theater here, comes from Buenos Aires, Argentine Republic. He will return to his native country after learning all the American methods of conducting a motion picture business and plans to build a fine large theater in the Argentine capital.

All Theaters in Lewiston, Maine, Combine

Union Theater Company Formed With Capital of $200,000 All Paid In—Lewiston and Portsmouth Men Behind the Deal.

By John P. Flanagan, 151 Park View Ave., Bangor, Maine.

LEWISTON, MAINE. — A $200,000 theatrical combine, believed to be the largest ever made in Maine, was completed last week in Lewiston, under the provisions of which all the Lewiston theaters are united under one company and the policy of each is to be changed.

The Union Theater company is the new corporation, and it is controlled by William P. Gray and William F. Carrigan—better known to the public as "Bill" Carrigan, manager of the World Champion Red Sox of Boston—both of Lewiston, and John H. Bartlett and Albert Hislop of Portsmouth, N. H.

The company is capitalized at $200,000 and every cent of it is paid in. This is one of the things which make the deal so exceptional and important. It is on an absolute business basis. Mr. Bartlett is president; Mr. Gray, vice-president; Mr. Carrigan, and these three, with Mr. Hislop, the directors. They will have complete control of the theaters, dividing the profits or the losses.

Mr. Gray is to be general manager of all the theaters. The company has already taken them over, and the change of policy went into effect on March 26.

Music Hall will be the only vaudeville house in Lewiston, the Keith acts being transferred there from the Empire. The Empire will feature moving pictures and all of the good road shows that can be secured, and the Union Square will offer an attractive picture program. The Mystic closes March 26 and will be remodeled into an up-to-date dance hall, opening probably on Easter Sunday.

Mr. O'Brien will remain with the Empire as resident manager and resident managers will later be selected for the Union Square and Music Hall.

Messrs. Bartlett, Hislop and Gray are mutually interested in six New Hampshire theaters, four in Portsmouth, N. H., and two in Littleton, N. H. Mr. Gray also controls two theaters in Rumford, Me., and three in Berlin, N. H. But the Union Theater company, it is stated, has nothing to do with any of them. It is a distinct and separate proposition.

shot, and John H. Curran, short, but just as good looking, on the right. They are on the aggressive all the time and keep things moving in their business all the time.

Mr. Smith has just placed Black Cat features with the Graphic theater, Grant & Burns, proprietors, Bangor, Me.

San Francisco Newslets.

A. M. "Doc" Salmon, is now on the road for the Warner, booking "The Crisis," "Purity" and other attractions. This concern has installed an exhibition room in its new quarters at 280 Golden Gate avenue.

Edward H. Kemp, the Western representative of the Enterprise Optical company, recently started on a trip through the southern part of the State in the interests of the new Motiongraph. Among the recent out of town shipments has been that of a machine to Baker & Littel, of Yerrington, Nev.

J. A. Lipman and bride recently returned from Australia from a honeymoon trip spent in the Antipodes and in Africa. Mr. Lipman controls extensive rights to the Charles Chaplin productions outside of America, and states that they can be seen in places but seldom heard of, where they are making a big hit.

Northern California News.

Oakland, Cal.—The Clement theater has been sold to K. Moller.

Stockton, Cal.—The Lyric theater has been remodeled and enlarged and has been reopened by R. B. Davis.

Monterey, Cal.—J. M. Rice, who has the Star and Monterey theaters, has also taken over the new Elks theater, and will transfer his program from the Monterey theater to the new house, using the old one for road attractions and for Sunday shows.

Petaluma, Cal.—Taylor Squires has sold the Gem theater to J. C. Wayne, who has made a number of changes and reopened it as a ten-cent house.

Palo Alto, Cal.—The Palo Alto playhouse has been sold to Arthur Washburn, and will be remodeled.

Fall River, Cal.—J. E. McIntosh has disposed of his interests in the Colonial theater to his partner, H. E. Niekirk, who has agreed with Charles E. Kormel, manager of the Paramount theater, to consolidate the two houses.

Porterville, Cal.—The Circle theater, formerly the old Majestic theater, has been opened by the Circle Amusement company.

Salinas, Cal.—R. F. Shinn has assumed the management of the White theater.

Lodi, Cal.—Stark & Hodges, of the Tokay theater, have purchased property and will erect a large moving picture house.

San Mateo, Cal.—George Kirstein has been appointed resident manager of the Regent and Peninsula theaters.

Colusa, Cal.—The Star theater is being remodeled and the seating capacity increased.

Kleinschmidt War Film Reported as Stolen

All Star Feature Distributors of San Francisco Lose Film Shipped on C. O. D. Basis—Detectives Have Been Placed on the Search.

From T. A. Church, 1507 North St., Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—Through the working of a clever plan, which might deceive almost any one looking for new customers in the film exchange business, a thief succeeded in making away with valuable films owned by Eugene Roth, of the Portola theater, and handled by the All Star Feature Distributors. Recently a man who gave his name as George Miller telephoned to the All Star distributors from Sacramento, asking for a war picture to be used at Broderick, a small place on the other side of the river. Complying with his request a copy of the Kleinschmidt production, "War on Three Fronts," was sent by express to the address given and was delivered upon the payment of C. O. D. charges. When the film was not returned after several days the management of the exchange began to make inquiries and found that the picture had not been shown at Broderick and that no man by the name of Miller lived at the address to which the film had been sent.

Nat A. Magner Moves to Film Row.

San Francisco, Cal.—Nat A. Magner, who has been located on the fourth floor of the Pacific building since entering the film exchange business three years ago, has secured a lease on the premises at 288 Golden Gate avenue, being vacated by the K-E-S-E service, and expects to be well settled here by the middle of April. His stock of film includes the stock formerly owned by Charles Klopot and the stock of the United Film service, which has just come into his possession. Mr. Magner is meeting with great success in booking his latest acquisition, "Beware of Strangers," this having been booked for the entire Turner & Dahnken circuit of nine houses.

"Great Secret" Proves Big Success.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Metro corporation has been very successful in placing its serial, "The Great Secret," the bookings on this having exceeded all expectations. At Sacramento this is being shown in three of the ten houses, while at Fresno it is being featured in two of the six theaters devoted to moving pictures.

Triangle Representative Here.

San Francisco, Cal.—P. M. Brink, special representative of Triangle, arrived recently for a stay of several days, and during his visit local manager B. F. Simpson took advantage of the opportunity of making a business trip to Santa Cruz.

Mutual Secures Services of New Booker.

San Francisco, Cal.—Donald B. Smith, who has been in charge of the credit department of the Progressive corporation for the past several months, has severed his connections with that concern and is now booker for the local Mutual Exchange. While with the Progressive exchange he completely reorganized the credit department and the system that he installed is proving very effective.

Film Man in Hundred Per Cent Club.

San Francisco, Cal.—One of the most enthusiastic workers of the One Hundred Per Cent Club, an organization of salesmen formed last October for the purpose of increasing efficiency, is V. R. Moore, director of publicity for the Progressive and a live wire among the local film exchange fraternity. This organization, which now has a membership of more than two hundred, issues a daily bulletin containing "leads" which may be followed to advantage by salesmen in different lines. A picture of Mr. Moore was recently used in this bulletin, and special mention was made of the energy displayed by him in his work and in furthering the interests of the organization.

Busy at Artcraft Office.

San Francisco, Cal.—The local office of the Artcraft has been very busy of late, and several fine contracts for service have been secured, especially on the George M. Cohan and Douglas Fairbanks productions. C. M. Simmonds, who has been touring the southern part of the state, has returned to relieve J. J. Patridge, who has been looking after office duties. Louis R. Loeb arrived here recently, and will leave for home by way of Los Angeles. Mr. Loeb is well known in San Francisco through his former connection with the General Film.

Sol Lesser Returns With Films.

San Francisco, Cal.—Sol L. Lesser, of the All Star, has returned from his Eastern trip and reports having secured the Art Drama program, "Intolerance," "Panthea" and the "Argyle Case" for this territory. Immediately upon his return preparations were made for removing to the new offices at 191 Golden Gate avenue.

United Office Closed.

San Francisco, Cal.—The office of the United Film Service, located at 217 Taylor street, has been closed, all of the film in stock having been disposed of by M. A. Levy, who has been here for some time arranging for its sale.

Portola Theater Has Big Week.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Portola theater recently closed an unusually successful week with the "Girl Philippa" as the drawing card. This attraction was advertised heavily, full page advertisements being used in some of the daily papers, and the public responded in a manner that was very gratifying.

Supply Man Visits New York.

San Francisco, Cal.—G. A. Metcalfe, of the supply house bearing his name, left recently on a trip to New York, planning to stop at several points on his way there and on his return. During his absence the business here is being conducted by Walter Stern.

The New Home of the San Francisco Branch of the Fox Film Corporation, 243-245 Golden Gate Avenue. This exchange was recently described in the Moving Picture World.

Postpone Fire Ordinance Hearing

Pittsburgh Public Safety Committee Puts Off Enacting New Fire Code Till After Another Hearing—Protest of Exchange Men and Building Owners Effective—Some of the Measure's Worst Points.

By Pittsburgh News Service, 6016 Jenkins Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—An attempt to perpetuate a new and stringent building code regulating moving picture film exchanges in Pittsburgh was blocked by a committee of exchange men and building owners when the ordinance was about to be passed by the Public Safety committee of the City Council at a meeting, March 28. Notice of the proposed new code and copies of same were not received until the previous afternoon, and the trade entered a protest, demanding more time for its consideration. Charles Seltzer, owner of the Seltzer film building, and a number of exchange managers, representing thirty film concerns in the city, were present and secured a postponement of a hearing on the ordinance until April 9.

The new code contains a number of provisions that will affect all of the exchanges to a greater or less degree. Several buildings occupied by exchanges will have to be vacated under the enforcement of the new rules, while in other instances extensive alterations will be required. The trade has been called upon to unite in securing a revision of parts of the code and formulate a more acceptable standard than that laid down. Charles Seltzer, whose building is occupied by a large number of the leading exchanges, is backing the movement, although the Seltzer film building has been approved by the authorities and cited as a model structure of its kind.

Sections of the code that are especially severe and are protested against are as follows:

"Applications for occupancy permits shall be made by each person, firm or corporation occupying or to occupy any building or part of a building for the purposes of storing, examining, repairing, demonstrating or exchanging films."

The manufacture of inflammable motion picture film is prohibited within the city limits.

In addition to the equipment of all buildings and film vaults with an extensive sprinkler system, standpipes equipped with hose are required.

The occupancy of buildings for the purpose of film exchanges over six stories or 80 feet in height shall not be permitted.

The section of the code pertaining to the construction and arrangement of film vaults contains many provisions that are strongly objected to.

Craig Buys Strand at East Liverpool.

East Liverpool, O.—The Strand theater, St. Clair avenue, East Liverpool, Ohio, operated by John M. Fitzgerald, of the East Liverpool Photoplay company, has been purchased by Charles Craig, who takes over the leasehold and entire stock of the concern. Mr. Craig is a well-known exhibitor of McKeesport, Pa., and also has been interested in the Craig Amusement company of Bellaire, Ohio. The Strand is one of the most attractive and popular picture theaters in its locality and the new owner expects to continue it on a more profitable basis than ever before. High-class feature pictures will be shown.

Hyman Bros. Take Over Orpheum.

Huntington, W. Va.—The Orpheum theater, Huntington, W. Va., has been taken over by Hyman Bros., owners of the Lyric and Dixie theaters in Huntington. The latest acquisition of the firm is one of the largest and finest picture houses in the state, having a seating capacity of 1,550. The Lyric seats 1,400 and is also a handsome theater. Hyman Bros. will show the best feature productions at the Orpheum, maintaining the high standard they have set in the Lyric. They plan to discontinue the Dixie theater.

"20,000 Leagues" Film Handled by Fontana.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The A. G. Fontana Productions, Pittsburgh, has purchased the rights on the big Universal production, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," for a block of states, comprising Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina and the District of Columbia. Manager L. Newman is negotiating for other noteworthy subjects, to be announced soon. The offices of the A. G. Fontana Productions have been moved from the fifth floor to larger quarters on the fourth floor of the Seltzer film building.

H. E. Nichols in Charge of Arbuckle Comedies.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Pittsburgh branch of the Paramount has secured H. E. Nichols, formerly with the local Mutual exchange, to take charge of the new Arbuckle comedies. Mr. Nichols recently loked after the Chaplin comedies department of the Mutual. He is one of the best-known film salesmen in this section of the country, having been with the Mutual and General here for the past six years. His many friends in the trade wish him continued success in his new connection.

The Pittsburgh Paramount exchange announces the following important additions to the list of Paramount exhibitors in this territory: The Grand, Kane, Pa.; the Elite, Homestead, Pa.; the Strand, Akron, Ohio; the Jewel and the Crown, Cleveland, Ohio; the Grand, Port Allegheny, Pa.; the Orth, Rock Creek, Ohio.

The new open booking policy just inaugurated by the Paramount, whereby the first fifty-two releases may be booked without a contract to use Paramount pictures permanently, is also meeting with much favor.

W. W. Hines, general sales manager of the Paramount Pictures, was a recent visitor at the local branch of the company.

David Adler Now Owns the Cymric Theater.

Farrell, Pa.—The Cymric theater, Farrell, Pa., has been sold by James Burke, a Pittsburgh business man, to David Adler, formerly engaged in the film business in Cleveland, Ohio. The Cymric was recently conducted by F. W. Moore. It is a handsome theater and modern in every particular, having been erected only about a year ago. The seating capacity is 650. Music is supplied by a large Seeburg organ. Mr. Adler will continue to show the best feature productions.

National Booking Begins Its Exchange.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The National Film Booking company, 804 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh, has been incorporated and last week launched into the film business as an exchange, has acquired for this territory the D. W. Griffith production, "Her Condoned Sin," featuring such stars as Henry Walthall, Mae Marsh and Blanche Sweet. It will be released about April 9, and many inquiries for bookings have already been received. Manager McQuiggan reports excellent bookings on the Ebony and Motoy comedies.

F. H. Hart Buys the Alhambra.

Beaver Falls, Pa.—The Alhambra theater, Seventh avenue, Beaver Falls, Pa., has been sold by John Straub to F. H. Hart, who will personally look after its management. Mr. Hart is prominent as an exhibitor, having been for several years associated with C. M. Daniels in the firm of McDaniels & Hart, conducting the Empire theater, New Brighton. The Alhambra is a handsome theater, with a seating capacity of 1,700. It will be continued as heretofore with high-class features pictures exclusively.

Rex at Reading Wins Advertising Prize.

Reading, Pa.—Congratulations are being received by Frank A. Gould, manager of the Rex theater, Reading, Pa., upon his being awarded the first prize by the Bluebird in the contest among Bluebird exhibitors for the most ingenious and extensive general advertising campaign. Considerable interest was displayed by the exhibitors of Pennsylvania in the competition, which is the first of a series of such contests to be conducted by the Bluebird.

C. S. Reed Reopens the Rex.

Uniontown, Pa.—The Rex theater, Uniontown, Pa., has been reopened by the owner, C. S. Reed, after undergoing an extensive remodeling process. The house presents a very beautiful appearance and boasts much new equipment, in addition to being more comfortably arranged. Mr. Reed has contracted for Paramount pictures at the Rex.

F. W. Moore Leases Theater in Vandergrift.

Vandergrift, Pa.—The Lyric theater, Vandergrift, Pa., has been leased by F. W. Moore, formerly a well-known exhibitor of Farrell, Pa. Some extensive alterations are planned by Mr. Moore. The Lyric will show an exclusive program of Universal subjects, including serials.

Colonial Theater Opens.

Altoona, Pa.—Ralph N. Le Fevre has been appointed manager of the new Colonial picture theater in Altoona, Pa., at Eighth avenue and Twelfth street. The new house is a fine example of an up-to-date picture theater. The seating capacity is 500 and the appointments and furnishings are modern in every respect.

M. Van Pragg has succeeded S. F. Clark as booker at the Pittsburgh Pathe exchange. Mr. Praag was formerly assistant booker.

Baltimore News Letter

By J. M. Shellman.

War Pictures at Parkway.

Baltimore, Md.—Through the activities of Bernard Depkin, Jr., manager of the Parkway theater, 3-9 West North avenue, the first public presentation of the official British war pictures were shown at this house, under the auspices of the Baltimore News. It is understood that the British War Department assigned 200 photographers, who volunteered, to this work, of which 20 remain alive. These pictures are so vivid and clear that A. R. Gordon, of this city, recognized his nephew, whom he has not seen since 1900, as a soldier in one of the scenes.

Baltimore Business Notes.

Baltimore, Md.—Joseph Blechman, owner of the Picture Garden theater, 31 West Lexington street, states that he now has first run Fox, and they seem to have made quite a hit with his clientele.

Baltimore, Md.—The Belvedere theater, 313 Belvedere avenue, which was formerly managed by A. H. Ahrens, was reopened to the public on Saturday, March 31.

Baltimore, Md.—The Crescent theater, 1509 West Lafayette avenue, reopened to the public on Monday, March 26, under the management of R. Newberry, after having been closed for about two months.

Baltimore, Md.—E. R. Price, representative of Triangle, is now making an extended tour of the cities of the Eastern Shore of Maryland and the state of Virginia.

Baltimore, Md.—The Park theater, 2667 North Fulton avenue, has again reopened under the able management of Samuel G. Smith. Mr. Smith has had quite a good deal of experience in the managing of suburban houses.

Baltimore, Md.—Robert L. Byrum, who bought the Princess theater, Eager and Bond streets, about two weeks ago, has raised the price of admission to 10 cents, owing to the high class of releases he is running.

BOSTON NEWS ITEM.

By J. J. Phelps.

Screenings and Feature Offerings.

BOSTON, MASS.—Mary Pickford in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" opened to a third successful week at the Modern theater, Boston, and on the same bill at this popular playhouse her brother Jack is seen to good advantage in the Paramount's picturization of the famous play "The Dummy." Manager Pinansky announces that he will give the first showing of George M. Cohan "In Broadway Jones" here next week.

Boston, Mass.—The first three chapters of the Mutual's latest serial, Helen Holmes in "The Railroad Raiders," was shown to an audience of New England exhibitors and newspaper men at the Fenway theater on Thursday, March 22, under the direction of J. L. Roth, the Mutual branch manager.

Boston, Mass.—The first trade showing of the Artcraft "Broadway Jones," featuring George M. Cohan, was given at the Exeter Street theater, Boston, on Friday, March 23. Manager Bernfield of the Artcraft announced that he has received word from New York that the D. W. Griffith productions will be released through the Artcraft exchanges throughout the country.

Boston, Mass.—"Beware of Strangers," the spectacular film that has been purchased for the New England territry by Louis B. Mayer, of the Metro, will be shown to the trade and the newspaper men of Boston and New England at the Park theater, Tuesday, March 27.

Boston, Mass.—Manager Farrell of Pathe announces that "The Mystery of the Double Cross" serial is breaking all records up to date of any serial yet presented by this company.

Boston, Mass.—On Friday morning, March 23, a private showing of "The Whip" was given at the Park theater, Boston. This spectacular production has been purchased for New England by Louis B. Mayer of the Metro Pictures Corporation, who will present it throughout this territory in lavish scale.

Lon Vail, manager of the Lyric theater, Warren, R. I., and Charles Steadman, manager of the Palace theater, Cranston, R. I., were in Boston this week and report that business is good in their respective vicinities.

BUFFALO NOTES.

"Intolerance" at the Star for Holy Week.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Dr. P. C. Cornell, manager of the Star theater, Buffalo, which features high-class legitimate productions throughout the year, booked D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "Intolerance," for Holy Week. The film attracted large audiences. Manager Cornell recently gave a benefit for the local Red Cross, featuring the Dolly Sisters, dancers.

Claims Films Have Distributed Poison

Pacificist in Buffalo Newspaper Says Moving Pictures Would Have Set Any But Americans at War with Germany.

By Joseph McGuire, 152 North Elmwood Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—If half the rumors of war plots accredited to Buffalo become a reality this city will be featured on the screen for some time by the film news services of the country. According to printed reports a widespread plot to destroy the municipal waterworks and a number of factories and other structures in the city, particularly those in any way connected with the manufacture of war supplies has been discovered in Buffalo by the United States Secret Service agents. The federal officers are said to have found here a well organized anti-American war party said to number 30,000 men. Points in Buffalo vulnerable to attack are being closely guarded. Niagara Falls, whose scenes have always been popular on the screen, may also get into the big film news. Power and other plants at the cataract city are being guarded by the militia.

Even moving pictures are brought in as an interesting side feature of the anti-war propaganda. For instance, a local pacifist in an open letter to Representative Charles B. Smith of Buffalo, asking him to oppose the war measures, indulged in this little shot: "The moving picture screens alone have distributed enough poison among the people to set any other but Americans at war with their German neighbors."

E. O. Weinberg Shows "Snow White" to Crippled Children.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Edwin O. Weinberg, manager of the Elmwood moving picture theater, Buffalo, has a warm corner in his heart for unfortunate children. It was this impulse that prompted him to invite several hundred youngsters to a recent matinee at that house. Miss Henrietta H. Wilson, corresponding secretary of the Crippled Children's Guild of Buffalo, wrote a letter of thanks to Mr. Weinberg for the entertainment furnished several kiddies from that institution. She said they especially enjoyed the picture, "Snow White." Several hundred boys and girls from the Buffalo School of the Deaf also attended the show. In the last number of The Leader, a magazine published in the interests of that school, the editor thanked Mr. Weinberg "for the splendid entertainment." The article closed with the remark that a word of praise is due also to the Elmwood itself for its tasteful, artistic and comfortable arrangements."

Charles Johnston to Manage the Allendale.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Charles Johnston has been appointed manager of the Allendale moving picture theater, Buffalo. He formerly managed the Ellen Terry and Marlowe theaters, this city. Mr. Johnston's new policy at the Allendale is to run a double feature programme. He shows two features every evening, the program being changed daily. He recently did capacity business with "The Press and the Spoilsman," a picture produced by the Buffalo "Evening News."

Miss Grace Blandin plays Bemen's orchestral organ at the Allendale.

M. H. Whitman on Road for General.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Matthew W. Whitman has been appointed New York state road representative for the General Film, Buffalo. He was formerly with the Popular Cinema Exchange, this city. Mr. Whitman had a wide experience in the show business at the Teck theater, Buffalo.

Sunday Shows at Shea's.

Buffalo, N. Y.—For many years Sunday shows were not given at Shea's theater, Buffalo. Lately, however, moving pictures have been shown there on that day. Last Sunday Manager Carr added vaudeville to his film program. The pictures included Clara Kimball Young in "The Price She Paid."

Rochester Theaters in Controversy with Union.

Rochester, N. Y.—The proprietors of the Rose Garden, Plaza and Astor theaters, Rochester, have brought legal action to enforce a temporary injunction restraining the officers and members of the Motion Picture Operators' Union of that city from interfering with the business of the theaters. The theater owners claim that because of a difference with the union its officers attempted to enforce a boycott and keep pickets posted in the vicinity of the houses.

Big Theater Opens in Olean.

Olean, N. Y.—The Palace moving picture theater, seating 1,600, was opened recently in Olean, N. Y. The house is metropolitan in its appointments.

Elmira, N. Y.—Manager Walters of the Amusu theater, Elmira, reports that he broke the attendance record at that house when he recently showed the sixth episode of "Patria."

Buffalo, N. Y.—Among those discharged from bankruptcy in Buffalo this week were Thomas Pease and Lena S. West, individually and as copartners in the Park moving picture theater, this city.

MORE ST. JOHN ITEMS.

"The Common Law" Makes a Decided Hit.

St. John, N. B.—"The Common Law," featuring Clara Kimball Young, was the first of the Monarch and Artcraft features to be introduced in St. John. It was given a three-day run at the Imperial theater, at a 10, 15 and 25-cent scale of prices, and the results were very satisfactory. It has demonstrated beyond question that St. John theatergoers are willing to patronize and pay extra for productions de luxe.

The Itzit Theater Begins.

New Glasgow, N. S.—Warren N. Smith's new Itzit theater opened for business Friday, March 16. The house was literally packed at both performances, and its finish and general appointments caused considerable favorable comment, not only from the theatergoing public, but also from members of the trade who attended. R. J. Romney, St. John manager for the Greater Vitagraph, was among those who went from this section of the Maritime Provinces.

Universal Notes.

St. John, N. B.—G. A. Margetts, manager for the Maritime Provinces for the Canadian Universal, has just returned from Montreal, where he attended an exchangemen's conference, and among those present were M. H. Hoffman, general manager for the Universal forces, and Clare Hague, Canadian general manager. Mr. Barney, of the Montreal exchange, was the host for the meeting. On his return Mr. Margetts announced that the new serial, in fifteen episodes, starring Ben Wilson, and entitled "The Voice on the Wire," will be released in the provinces at an early date. Another noteworthy production that is finding its way to this section is "Neptune's Daughter," with Annette Kellermann. This picture has already been booked by N. W. Mason, of the Roseland theater, New Glasgow; by the Casino Amusement Company, in the Casino theater, in Sydney; by J. G. R. Metzler, of the Empire theater, Halifax; by B. Graystock, of the opera house, Pictou, and by F. G. Spencer, in Charlottetown, P. E. I.

Cleveland to See Big Films this Spring

Three Superfeature Offerings to Open Immediately After Easter—Prices Will Be As High As $2—Other Theaters Raising Prices.

From M. A. Malaney, 218 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—This spring will see Cleveland on the map as a high-priced film show town.

Three big features are to open right after Easter: "Joan the Woman" at the Stillman; "A Daughter of the Gods" at the Hippodrome (not absolutely definite); "The Birth of a Nation" at the Opera House.

Besides this the New Mall and Alhambra will show the new Douglas Fairbanks pictures at 25 cents admission. The prices for the above named spectacular pictures will be from 25 cents to $2.

Other first run theaters in Cleveland raise their prices every now and then. Joe Grossman of the Standard gets 25 cents on the combined Fox super-picture and Max Linder program. The prices at the Metropolitan and Knickerbocker are 15 and 25 cents.

The Orpheum theater, now under new management, is cutting quite a figure with its new policy. Pictures on the order of "The Girl Who Did Not Care," "The Libertine," "Little Lost Sister" and "The Black Stork" are given week runs and going over fine.

Two New World Film Roadmen.

Cleveland.—Manager Eschmann of the World Film, has added two high class road men to his staff. They are E. C. Fielder, who will work eastern Ohio territory, and J. A. Conlen, who will cover Toledo territory.

Exclusive Gets "Where Are My Children."

Cleveland.—The Exclusive Photoplays, Inc., have bought the rights on "Where Are My Children?" and are now making bookings. The announcement of the company reads:

"We are in a position to place this big drawing card in the smallest or largest towns. It is now within the reach of every exhibitor, and we are receiving many return dates."

"Where Are My Children?" has a record for playing to over a million people in Ohio.

Beatty Bill Not Likely to Live.

Cleveland, O.—It is more than likely that the bill introduced by Rep. Beatty of Cincinnati, which passed the Ohio House of Representatives unanimously two weeks ago will die a natural death.

It has been lying in the Senate since then and may never come up for a vote this session, which ends soon. In case it is passed this law, which is aimed to stop the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in Ohio, cannot become a law for ninety days after the governor signs it.

Suit for $15,000 Against Pastime.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—The Pastime Amusement Co., operators of the Sun theater, 1116 South Eighteenth street, has been made defendant to a suit for $15,000, filed by Oris Dumas, an infant, alleging damages and injuries to this amount, received March 13, 1917, by being assaulted by an employe of defendant company while a patron of its theater at 1116 South Eighteenth street. The Sun is in a rough neighborhood, where the management is often forced to bounce tough kids who interfere with the performances.

Recent Visitors in Louisville.

Louisville, Ky.—Recent visitors to Louisville included E. J. Schmidt, Idleweiss Photoplay Co., Cleveland, Ohio; J. H. Cristy, of Scottsburg, Ind., who has just taken over a theater there; J. S. Hamilton, of Campbellsburg, Ky., and William F. Reed, of the Harrodsburg Amusement Co., of Harrodsburg, Ky.

Gem at Maysville to Open.

Maysville, Ky.—The Gem theater, which has been closed since early last summer on account of being involved in bankruptcy proceedings, will be reopened on Monday, April 9, the day following Easter.

The new management is composed of Lloyd M. Salter and Walter Baughman, both of Circleville, Ohio. They have installed a new projecting room, steel lined and absolutely fireproof, to conform with the laws of the state of Kentucky. In the booth will be installed two simplex motor-driven projecting machines. A velvet gold-fiber screen will be used. A Wurlitzer organ will be installed, the first of its kind to ever be used in a moving picture house in Maysville.

The picture which will be shown on the opening night of the Gem will be "Faith," starring Mary Miles Minter. All pictures shown at this place will be features—Triangle, Blue Bird, V. L. S. E. and Mutual.

No Low Ceiling House for Him.

Louisville, Ky.—An exhibitor of Louisville, who has had considerable experience in opening small theaters in old business blocks, recently made the statement that it was foolish to try to do anything with a building where a high ceiling could not be obtained. The low ceiling makes it impossible to get anything like fair ventilation. If large exhaust fans are installed to carry off the stale air, the fans cannot be placed far enough away from the audience to prevent drafts, and the result is that patrons take cold, and are always complaining about a drafty house. "Never again for me," exclaimed this exhibitor, who continued, "If a high ceiling building cannot be obtained, or the building converted, I'll pass it up every time."

Kentucky News Notes.

Louisville, Ky.—L. J. Dittmar, head of the Majestic Amusement Co., has gone to Florida, where he expects to spend several days in making arrangements for producing some pictures.

Glasgow, Ky.—News was recently received here of the death by suicide in Philadelphia, Pa., of A. K. Maluf, former manager of the Lynn Opera House of this city. Maluf was about thirty years of age and is survived by two children. He lost a good deal of money while in business at Glasgow, where competition in pictures became very strong.

Louisville, Ky.—All children of sixteen years of age and under were admitted free to the Alamo theater if accompanied by their parents, during a four-day showing of the Triangle drama, "The Little Brother," in five reels. Free admission to children was allowed up to 6 o'clock in the evening.

Louisville, Ky.—The Strand theater is admitting all children free of charge to its Saturday morning children's show, and is merely charging admission for adults who care to accompany the children. Any child, whether with parents or not, can go free of charge, or a whole orphan asylum. Of course, there is no profit to be derived from free shows of this kind, but it gives poor children a chance, and is good advertising.

Louisville, Ky.—Lyman Howe's travel pictures were shown last week at Macauley's theater, which had an open week due to cancellation of the road show, "The Snare," due to illness in the company.

Falmouth, Ky.—Elmer Woodhead, manager of the Duncan theater, has started giving regular matinees on Saturday afternoon, and is getting a good volume of business from the country people who come into town on Saturday.

Lexington, Ky.—J. H. Stamper, Jr., head of the Orpheum theater, was badly cut and bruised by a fall through the glass marquise in front of the house, from which he was removing the snow when his foot slipped. He fell eleven feet to the sidewalk.

Queen Theater at Knoxville Sold.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—The Queen theater building and property was sold on March 23 to U. D. Beeler for a consideration of $36,000 by W. C. Ross, who purchased the building on March 5. It is located at 513 Gay street. The Queen was remodeled about four years ago, and is one of the handsomest moving picture houses in the city. The theater is under the management of Geo. N. Shorey, who holds a fourteen-year lease on the property. It has proved one of the most successful investments in this section, and is recognized as a leading photoplay house of East Tennessee. Mr. Shorey also operates the Gay in Knoxville, as well as a number of smaller houses in neighboring towns.

Columbia House Has Fire.

Columbia, Tenn.—The Dixie theater, operated by the Crescent Amusement Company of Nashville, recently suffered damage by fire, but is again in operation. The blaze originated in the projection room, destroying a number of films and otherwise damaging its contents, as well as the building. There was no disorder in leaving the theater, and no injuries were reported.

Fifth Avenue Vaudeville Acts Please.

Nashville, Tenn.—The plan of furnishing a vaudeville act between picture performances is proving a drawing card at the Fifth Avenue theater. On every side can be heard commendatory expressions from pleased patrons favoring the idea, and the policy of running the special act, with weekly change of actors, will probably be continued indefinitely.

"The Crisis" in Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn.—The Lyric has booked "The Crisis" for a four days' run, beginning March 28. Prices have been arranged at 25 cents to $1.00, and a special symphony orchestra accompanies the picture. The Lyric has booked "The Crisis," "Intolerance," and a return engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" in rapid succession, thus presenting three of the greatest screen spectacles of the time within a short period.

Tennessee Film Notes.

Nashville, Tenn.—Manager Carson Bradford of the Strand theater is enjoying a two weeks' vacation in Oklawaha, Fla. During his absence his father, J. H. Bradford, has assumed management of the Strand.

Nashville, Tenn.—"Civilization" has been booked by Manager W. H. Wassman for early presentation at the Knickerbocker.

E. A. Schiller Visits Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala.—E. A. Schiller, president of the Schiller Amusement company, large operators of amusement houses throughout the country, was in Birmingham a few days ago in the interest of the new Loew vaudeville and picture house to be opened here. The Loew and Schiller interests are closely allied, and their capital is remodeling the old Bijou theater for presentation of Loew Vaudeville and motion pictures. Mr. Loew made the statement while in Birmingham that the remodeling work would be completed by the middle of April, and that the house would be placed in immediate operation. No manager has been named for the house up to the present time.

Triangle Gets Fairbanks Rights.

Birmingham, Ala.—Manager L. B. Leftwich has been successful in securing the exclusive franchise in this city for the new Douglas Fairbanks Artcraft pictures. The first of the pictures, "In Again, Out Again," will make its appearance at the Triangle theater on or about April 15.

Additions for Gadsden, Ala., House.

Gadsden, Ala.—W. T. Cox, manager and proprietor of the Alamo theater, will erect an additional story to his theater, which will provide an added seating capacity of 200. Other minor repairs will be undertaken when this work is done.

Nashville, Tenn.—Manager Joe Goldberg has announced that "The Birth of a Nation" has been secured for April 16-17 at his Clarksville house, the picture to be shown two nights and one matinee.

Nashville, Tenn.—"The Girl Philippa," Vitagraph's Anita Stewart feature, has been booked for a solid week at the Strand, beginning March 26.

Birmingham, Ala.—"Intolerance" has been booked for a four days' run at the Jefferson, leading road show house of Birmingham.

Cartoon Causes Rumpus.

NOW comes a party who endeavors to start something with the Maryland Board of Motion Picture Censors by writing to the Baltimore News and stating that an animated cartoon was shown recently at one of the theaters which ridiculed President Wilson. The cartoon showed the President writing numerous notes and splashing ink over everything, and then handing them to a messenger boy. This cartoon, no doubt, was released some months ago and it would have been a great deal better for everyone concerned if the exhibitor who screened this picture had cut out the cartoon at this time. One cannot blame the Maryland Censor Board for going after matters of this kind. A little brain work on the part of the exhibitor would have saved a nasty situation. It is rumored that the censors are endeavoring to locate the offending piece of film.

Memorial Service at Grand.

Baltimore, Md.—Through the courtesy of Charles S. Anderson, manager and owner of the Grand theater, Highlandtown, the Chesapeake Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, held their twelfth annual memorial service in this house. Judge Frank S. Duncan was the speaker.

Hull Theater Improved.

Baltimore, Md.—The Hull theater, 1444 Hull street, which is now managed by Mrs. J. Goelers, opened about two weeks ago, after having been greatly enlarged and renovated. A large brick addition has been built at the back, which extends all the way to Haubert street. The entire interior effects, lights and heating arrangements have been changed.

Victoria Beauty Contest Scores.

Baltimore, Md.—There is no question about it but that the beauty contest arranged by Manager Charles E. Thropp at Nixon's Victoria theater, 415 East Baltimore street, recently, was a success. On Thursday night when Mr. Thropp presented the prizes to the winners the theater was thronged to its capacity and then some. The police would not permit the sale of tickets to continue, owing to the crowded condition of the house. The first, second and third prizes were, respectively, a diamond ring, a diamond lavalliere and a gold wrist watch.

How League Nipped "Nation" Film Protest

Miami Valley Exhibitors' League Backed Up Its Demand for Right to Show the Picture by Attending the Council Hearing in Body.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First Nat. Bank, Cincinnati, O.

DAYTON, Ohio—D. H. Thompson, president, and A. F. Kinzeler, secretary of the Miami Valley Exhibitors' League, the live and efficient organization of exhibitors in Dayton, Ohio, were in the city recently, and Cincinnati exhibitors learned how it was that a threatening movement to prevent the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in Dayton was nipped in the bud. The city commissioners, as reported in these columns, had gone so far as to acquiesce in the demand of colored residents for the suppression of the picture, and had instructed the city attorney to prepare an ordinance for that purpose, when the exhibitors stepped in.

Secretary Kinzeler took the matter up with the authorities, showing the injustice of favoring a small portion of the population at the expense of the rest, and pointed out that with such a precedent the city would be called upon by fanatics and partisans to take action whenever any picture touching on a question of general interest was shown. This argument so impressed the authorities that they decided to drop the matter. To emphasize the point, incidentally, the entire membership of the league attended the next meeting of the commissioners in a body, and there was no mention at that session, or at any other since, of an ordinance to suppress "The Birth of a Nation."

Stock of New Dayton Theater on the Market.

Dayton, Ohio.—A brokerage house has announced an issue of $125,000 in preferred stock by the Dayton Theater Building Co., of Dayton, Ohio. The house referred to recommends the issue to its patrons and the public generally as a good investment. The building will cost, it is announced, not less than $225,000, with all of the equipment not only of an up-to-date photoplay theater, but of a modern speaking theater as well, with dressing rooms and a full sized stage. A seating capacity of 2,400 persons is planned, making the house the largest in Dayton. The stock issue is the first of its kind to be offered to the public in this section, and has attracted unusual interest in consequence.

Erie Theater at Hyde Park Gives Benefit for Tornado Victims.

Hyde Park, Ohio.—The management of the Erie theater, one of the two busy and successful houses in the business district of Hyde Park, made a decided hit by donating all of its receipts for one evening recently to the relief fund gathered for the benefit of sufferers from the tornado which devastated a part of Hyde Park not long ago. The usual admission charge of ten cents was dispensed with, and those who attended were requested to pay whatever they wished for the benefit of the good cause, a large collection resulting.

"Nation" Film to Run Indefinitely in Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O.—The first week's run of "The Birth of a Nation" in Cincinnati, at the Grand opera house, met with all the success anticipated for it, crowded houses being the rule. Newspaper approval of the picture was unanimous. The management has decided to let the picture run indefinitely, thus closing the Grand's regular season and serving admirably to connect the regular and the summer moving picture seasons. The continued success of the picture at the Grand has been virtually assured by the announcement that it will not be shown elsewhere in Cincinnati, at least for the present, and those who desire to see it, and who have been anticipating an opportunity to do so at lower prices than those now prevailing, will therefore, presumably, visit the Grand during the present run of the picture.

"Daughter of Gods" to Open at Lyric.

Cincinnati, O.—All arrangements have been completed for the closing of the regular season at the Lyric theater, and the opening of the moving picture season, with "A Daughter of the Gods" leading off. Col. Ben Stern, who managed the picture's record-breaking run in Chicago, has charge of the Cincinnati engagement, and with the aid of the other Fox department heads, who have arrived in the city to take up their work in connection with the picture, expects to make its Cincinnati run a huge success. One feature of the exhibition will be a big orchestra, to make room for which it has been necessary to remove several rows of seats at the front of the house. It has been announced that the entire publicity campaign of "A Daughter of the Gods" in Ohio will be conducted from Cincinnati under the supervision of Colonel Stern. The Cincinnati run will last several weeks, being at present indeterminate.

Prices at the Walnut Encourage Afternoon Attendance.

Cincinnati, O.—A plan which is usual with theaters showing stage attractions, but which is not common with moving picture houses is in force at the Walnut theater, where Manager Lisbon has arranged a schedule of 15 cents for all seats up to seven o'clock in the evening, after which time 25 cents is charged for all lower floor seats, with 15 cents for the balcony. The arrangement has been found to work well, as the plan offers an inducement to the public to patronize the afternoon shows, and relieve the invariable congestion in the evening.

Anita Stewart Film Repeated at New.

Baltimore, Md.—"The More Excellent Way," featuring Anita Stewart and Charles Richman, played a return engagement at the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week, due to the number of requests from the patrons of this house who were unable to see this feature.

Sterling Company in Bad Light.

Baltimore, Md.—If the story of Frederick Unfried, 17 years old, is true, it places Samuel K. Sterling, president of the Sterling Film Manufacturing Company, in a very bad light. According to Unfried's statement to Detective Captain McGovern, when he applied for a position as actor with this company, he was told that he must buy stock. Buying 24 shares at $1 each, he was given a part in a play which was finished three weeks ago. He has been unable to locate Sterling or any member of the company since. Several other complaints have been made and both Captain McGovern and Marshall Carter now want to have a little talk with Sterling.

Premiere of "Jimmie Dale" at the Wilson.

Baltimore, Md.—A premiere screening for the exhibitors of Baltimore of the Mutual picture, "Jimmie Dale, alias the Gray Seal," was given under the auspices of O. D. Weems, Mutual manager in this city, on Wednesday night, March 28, after 11 p. m., at the Wilson theater, 418 East Baltimore street. This theater was loaned for the occasion by G. L. Wonders, manager, who has just returned from a trip to New York City. Beginning with last Saturday, the admission price after 1 p. m. on Saturdays will be 10 cents.

Intolerance Spasm in Lansing

Ministers' Union Has a Committee Appointed to Agitate State Censorship—Is Trying to Be Efficient—Griffith's "Intolerance" Taken as an Argument—Plea Advanced That Other States Have Censorship.

By Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

LANSING, MICH.—The big Griffith film "Intolerance" aroused the antagonism of the Lansing Ministers' Union and that organization has appointed a committee of three local ministers to start a city-wide agitation to turn local sentiment in favor of the state censorship law. "This presentation of 'Intolerance' in Lansing last week," said Rev. George L. Cady, chairman of the committee, "is the straw which should break the camel's back, the camel's back figuratively being representative of the patience of the people of Lansing. How the state legislature can stand to see such lewd pictures as are being exhibited in different parts of the state go on unmolested is practically impossible to understand. I am glad that some action is being taken at last to restrict the indiscriminate showing of these films. The bill now up in the state legislature shows that the law makers through their constituents are coming to understand the necessity for such a bill.

"Other states have these moving picture censorship laws, and now is an opportune time for Michigan to institute a law of this kind. The committee appointed by the president of the Lansing Ministers' union is intended not only to work for complete understanding on the subject among Lansing people, but to bring pressure to bear on local members of the legislature as well as the rest of the state lawmakers. Local censorship is a failure in almost every instance."

Rev. James Collins, another member of the committee, had not seen "Intolerance," but declared: "I can say that other pictures which have appeared in Lansing theaters should have been barred, and will be barred in the future if this censorship bill passes the state legislature."

[The irritation of professional moralists has to be allowed for at all times. It is usually a half-blind emotion, for they often do not know what it is that at bottom makes the cryout. It is a cold fact, though, that if the films had never offended level-headed majorities, these momentarily unbalanced stormers would have little effect. These irritated moralists carry a grudge until they get a chance to make a fuss. Fuss is a relief, and relief is pleasant. They seek occasions. They are unjust; but they provide an outlet for irritation at large that a good many people take advantage of. But the cause of the irritation is due less to pictures than to life in general.]

Escanaba Metro Exchange Moves.

Escanaba, Mich.—The exchanges of Metro and the Standard Film Company have been removed to 823 Escanaba avenue, where a building has been remodeled to meet the especial needs of film exchanges.

Traverse City Man Asks for Censorship.

Traverse City, Mich.—A. W. Barak, a local merchant, has asked the city commission to investigate the operation of moving picture theaters on Sunday. Bartak's ideas on regulation of the local photoplay houses are still more exacting, and he would have a local board of censorship created.

Children's Shows Started in Copper Country.

Houghton, Mich.—Organized efforts of Women's clubs in the copper country for special shows for children are being reflected in promises of managers in Houghton and Hancock to put on Saturday matinees. Two theaters here and one in Hancock have started these shows. Civic organizations at Calumet, Lake Linden and South Range are expected to affiliate with the motion picture survey committee of the Houghton Civic Club and a committee from the League of Good Citizenship of Hancock.

Michigan Theater Jottings.

Ionia, Mich.—Plans are being made for the erection of an amusement house, it is reported. S. C. L. Brown of Ionia and Louis Schmitz are interested in the project.

Flint, Mich.—Walter Jacobson, formerly of Lansing, has succeeded A. F. Winstrom as resident manager of the Garden theater. Winstrom has been transferred to the Bijou vaudeville and picture theater, another of the Butterfield enterprises in Bay City.

Manistee, Mich.—Manager John Stronach, Jr., of the Ramsdell theater, has booked "Intolerance" for June 20-21.

Jackson, Mich.—The Family theater has installed a new pipe organ.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—The lower house of the Illinois state legislature has passed the Jackson bill, which prevents the exhibition of motion pictures which hold the negro race up to ridicule. The measure has yet to go through the state senate.

Crystal Photoplays to Begin Production.

Peoria, Ill.—Production of the first important feature of the Crystal Photoplays Corporation, which resulted upon the reorganization of the Barker-Swan Film Corporation, will start April 1, according to A. H. Shields, president.

George Siegmann has been signed as director for the Crystal Photoplays. He will bring his camera man and assistant director. The first production will be a patriotic story.

Mutual Leases Big Building in Waukegan.

Waukegan, Ill.—J. G. Sullivan, general manager of the Mutual, has leased from the Manufacturers' Terminal Company the five-story tile construction building which formerly was a part of the Corn Products Refining Company. It contains about fifty thousand square feet of floor space and, it is reported, will be used for a studio.

Quincy Exhibitors Win First Commendation.

Quincy, Ill.—Quincy exhibitors will be shown as among the leaders for better pictures, according to Mrs. John T. Ingham, chairman of the committee, which made the local survey of motion pictures for the State Federation of Women's Clubs. Her report to the state body highly commends Quincy managers and says that a minimum standard is being maintained here.

Sunday Referendum Will Be Merely Advisory.

Rockford, Ill.—The question of Sunday moving picture shows will go on the ballot at the regular spring election April 17. But the decision will not be binding on the incoming mayor and the city council. It will merely be advisory. The city council voted 11 to 4 to again get the sentiment of the voters.

Theater Changes in Illinois.

Oregon, Ill.—J. H. Dales of Rochelle has purchased the Star theater from E. B. Coddington.

New Berlin, Ill.—The Foutch moving picture theater was among the business buildings which were destroyed when the town was fire swept.

Browntown, Ill.—A moving picture theater has been opened here, operating Wednesday and Saturday nights.

Snap Shots at Illinois Showmanship.

Farmington, Ill.—Money for the annual Junior-Senior school reception was provided when the Strand theater gave the students a benefit.

Peoria, Ill.—The Gem theater, 3119 South Adams street, has installed a new mirror screen and two new projectors.

Watseka, Ill.—Watseka merchants are conducting a prize contest to select the leading actors in a home talent picture which will be staged by the Star theater.

Moline, Ill.—The Lyric theater in Moline and the Lyric theater in East Moline are co-operating with the Industrial Extension committee by showing safety first pictures free of charge.

Victoria, Ill.—Victoria has a better film committee seeking educational pictures for children.

Astoria, Ill.—The Princess theater is being remodeled.

Monticello, Ill.—"Ramona" has been booked at the Princess theater for April 3.

Sunday Shows Killed in Lower House.

MADISON, WIS.—The lower house of the Wisconsin state legislature has killed the senate bill which would permit the operation of moving picture shows on Sunday.

Ebony Film Files Incorporation Papers.

Madison, Wis.—The Ebony Film Corporation of Pierre, S. D., has filed articles of incorporation to do business in Wisconsin, with state headquarters at North Milwaukee. The capital stock provided in Wisconsin is $25,000.

Mrs. Cecile Woerheide Talks.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Mrs. Cecile M. Woerheide, prominent in affairs of the Exclusive Film attractions on the Pacific Coast and the DeLuxe Film Corporation, was in the city, engaged in promoting educational pictures. She appeared at the Orpheum theater, where the film "Real Life in China" was being shown, and made an interesting talk.

Interesting Notes and Theater Changes.

Milwaukee, Wis.—William Gray, who has been manager of the Crystal theater for the last four years, has resigned to accept the management of the new Miller theater on Third street. He will be succeeded at the Crystal by Jack Yeo, who for the last two and one-half years has been manager at the Orpheum.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Paradise theater on Second street near Grand avenue, formerly known as the Toy theater, has been taken over by Zambreno & Dunn of Chicago. The first attraction under the new management was "Does Germany Actually Want Peace?"

Ripon, Wis.—Ward & Diggins of Chicago have taken a lease on the new municipal auditorium and will operate it as an amusement house, effective April 10. The new proprietors are conducting houses in Beaver Dam and Beloit, Wis., and Illinois, operating under the name of the Associated Theaters Company.

Paul C. Mooney Believes in the Program.

Detroit, Mich.—Paul C. Mooney, district manager in the Middle West for the Fox Corporation, is out for a record this year. When the Fox district and branch managers were in recent convention, Mr. Mooney was held up as an example of what can be accomplished by proper effort. The secret of Mr. Mooney's success has been co-operation with the exhibitors, and having the right organization in each of the Fox branches. Mr. Mooney is fair at all times with exhibitors and it is for this reason that adjustments are easy to make at the Fox exchanges. Mr. Mooney is a strict advocate of the program, not because Fox pictures are sold on the program system, for he believes it is the best thing from the standpoint of the exhibitor as well as the producer. It guarantees the exhibitors, as he says, standard productions week in and week out, and naturally the producer is going to endeavor to make good pictures in order to hold the exhibitor. Mr. Mooney has supervision over Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis and he is just opening a branch office in Indianapolis.

M. S. Bailey Is General Manager of Metropolitan Company.

Detroit, Mich.—M. S. Bailey, for the past three years with the Detroit Universal, and for over 18 months manager of the Detroit division, tendered his resignation Saturday, March 24, to become president and general manager of the Metropolitan Co., devoted to animated cartoon advertising in films. Offices of this concern have just been established at 923 Peter Smith building. Mr. Bailey started as salesman with the Detroit Universal Co. and gradually worked up to the position of division manager. When he got back to the office last Saturday afternoon the employes gathered around him and presented him with a handsome solid gold watch, the presentation speech being in the hands of George Weeks, district manager. No successor has yet been appointed. Mr. Weeks will look after Detroit in addition to his other territory for both Universal and Blue Bird. Sam H. Barrett continues at Detroit, in charge of Blue Bird bookings.

Grant Heth Will Manage Local Erker Office.

Detroit, Mich.—Grant Heth, Michigan representative for the Minsua screen, has been appointed manager of the Detroit office of Erker's. R. E. Miller, present manager, will return to the St. Louis office in a few weeks. Mr. Heth will continue to represent the Minsua screen. The Detroit office of Erker's is located at 35 East Grand River avenue.

Co-operative Booking Concern Dissolves.

Detroit, Mich.—The organization known as the Michigan Theaters association, with offices at 923 Peter Smith building, Detroit, has been dissolved. It was started originally for the purpose of co-operative booking. E. R. Bloom, formerly of the Metro, was manager. Several big productions were booked for the members of the association, but for some reason or other there was lack of proper co-operation, and rather than continue under such conditions, the members decided to disband the organization.

Board of Commerce Opens New Oakland

Pontiac's New Picture Theater Nets $2,500 for Local Board of Commerce at Its Premiere Show—House Loaned by Its Owners—A Fine Theater.

By Jacob Smith, 718 Free Press Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

PONTIAC, Mich.—The opening of the New Oakland theater in Pontiac, Mich., took place Tuesday evening, March 27, under the auspices of the Pontiac Board of Commerce, the management donating the house, the trade association furnishing their own talent and selling their own tickets. The theater was crowded for the event and something like $2,500 raised for the Board of Commerce. The regular public opening took place Wednesday, the following evening. The premier attraction was "A Poor Little Rich Girl," which ran two days. H. C. Griffin is house manager of the Oakland theater, and the property is owned by four Detroiters—Harry Goldstein, A. I. Marantette, Mr. O'Donnell and Frank C. Cooke.

James Lynch, president of the Pontiac Board of Commerce, presided at the opening and congratulated the owners in addition to urging local support by theater patrons. The city of Pontiac presented the owners with a handsome floral piece.

The Oakland seats 1,500 people and is built amphitheater style, the same as the Majestic and Riato theaters, Detroit. The policy will be vaudeville Monday and Tuesdays, with features the balance of the week. Those concerns who will furnish service to the New Oakland are Vitagraph, Artcraft, World, Pathe and K. E. S. E.

Simplex projectors are used in the projection booth. There will be daily matinees and two performances at night.

W. M. Elliott to Manage Barnett Film in Michigan.

Detroit, Mich.—Will M. Elliott, formerly publicity man in Michigan for Paramount and for the past three months city representative for Greater Vitagraph, has been appointed manager of the Barnett Film Attractions in Michigan. The company has offices at 307-308 Peter Smith building. Mr. Elliott went to New York on Sunday, March 25, to look at "Joan the Woman," which his firm controls for Michigan. Mr. Elliott before settling down in Detroit was company manager for Cohan & Harris' productions.

C. G. Kingsley Weds.

Detroit, Mich. — Congratulations and best wishes to C. G. Kingsley, manager of the Detroit Fox exchange, who gave up the life of a bachelor on Monday, March 19, and joined the ranks of the benedicts when he married Miss Louise McFarlane, prima donna with "Pom Pom," a Klaw & Erlanger attraction that is now playing through the East. The wedding took place at the cathedral in Buffalo, and the wedding breakfast was at the Hotel Iroquois. Mrs. Kingsley will remain with "Pom Pom" for a few weeks longer, finlishing out her contract for the season, and then will then join Mr. Kingsley at Detroit, where the "newlyweds" will take up housekeeping.

Important Notice.

The Detroit office of the Moving Picture World will be located hereafter at 718 Free Press building, telephone Cadillac 718. The new quarters are larger in every way. Jacob Smith, who has represented the World for a number of years, will continue to act in that capacity.

Howard O. Pierce to Handle State Film Publicity.

Detroit, Mich.—Howard O. Pierce, recently with the Tri-State Film Co., in Detroit, and formerly with the Blue Bird exchange, and the John H. Kunsky enterprises, has been appointed publicity manager for the State Film Co., Detroit, taking the place of Harry S. Lorch, who has been advanced to exchange manager, succeeding Charles H. Muehlman. Mr. Lorch has been connected with the Butterfield interests for several years, coming to Detroit to handle publicity direct from Chicago. Mr. Pierce formerly managed the Washington and Liberty theaters for John H. Kunsky and was also editor of the Weekly Film News, the Kunsky house organ.

Metros for Full Week at New Madison.

Detroit, Mich.—John H. Kunsky announces that Metro pictures will hereafter be shown from time to time at the New Madison theater, Detroit, for a full week. This means that the big features at the Madison will be divided between Metro and Vitagraph. Mr. Kunsky has also signed up for the Sidney Drew comedies for the Madison. He relinquishes the first-run franchise on Max Linder comedies, which go to the Majestic theater.

With State Rights Features.

Detroit, Mich.—"Civilization," having concluded a three weeks' engagement at the Washington theater, is now on a six weeks' tour of the other Detroit motion picture houses. Many houses are playing it from two to four days at prices from 25 to 50 cents. This production is being played by the State Film company in Michigan on a flat rental basis. Col. W. S. Butterfield, president of the company, says this is better for the exhibitor, because if the picture draws big the exhibitor makes more money than he would on a percentage basis.

Detroit, Mich.—John H. Kunsky, who bought "Enlighten Thy Daughter" for Michigan expects to show it at the Washington theater at the conclusion of the engagement of "The Barrier" now showing there. Mr. Kunsky looks for "The Barrier" to remain at least four weeks at the Washington, and "Enlighten Thy Daughter" about the same time. He is planning a monster advertising campaign in connection with the latter.

The Local Fox Manager.

Detroit, Mich.—C. G. Kingsley, manager at Detroit for the Fox Corporation, is well in the front row of leading Fox business getters. Mr. Kingsley has practically spent his life in the show business, having covered thoroughly all angles. His experience in the film industry goes back nearly ten years, starting in the city of New York. Previous to his management of the Detroit office he was manager at Cincinnati for Fox productions and later was in charge of the Paramount exchange in Pittsburgh. Everybody in Michigan knows him as "Neal" and the Moving Picture World voices the sentiments of many exhibitors by saying he is one of the best-natured exchange managers in the Middle West, in addition to being one of the best business producers on the pay-roll of the Fox Film Corporation.

C. G. Kingsley.

West Branch, Mich.—Ange Lorenzo and W. E. Huck, who open the Strand theater in West Branch on April 19, were callers at the World office last week.

Advertising Films Organization

National Body Formed at Indianapolis Known as Advertising Film Service Assn. of America—J. J. Noethe Is Elected President; Leo Barry, Vice-President, and H. P. Hornaday, Secretary — Object Is Betterment of Business.

By Indiana Trade News Service, 861 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The formation of an organization of distributors and exhibitors of motion picture advertising, to be known as the Advertising Film Service Association of America, was completed last week at a meeting at the Claypool hotel. The new organization numbers about fifty persons from different parts of the United States, who are identified with the exhibition of motion picture advertising in motion picture houses.

A set of bylaws was adopted and officers were elected as follows: John J. Noethe, Chicago, president; Leo Berry, New Orleans, vice president; Harry P. Hornaday, Indianapolis, secretary; Arthur V. Canger, Kansas City, Mo., treasurer. William A. Lockren of Minneapolis, Fred C. Laffin of Chicago, and Arthur B. Morris, Boston, were named as members of the board of control, of which the officers also are members.

The new organization adopted resolutions, submitted by Seth Brown of Chicago, an honorary member of the association, pledging the support of the body to the President, and reading in part as follows:

"The members of the Advertising Film Service Association of America, in convention assembled, pledge to the President of the United States and the congress their united support in a campaign of patriotism. They pledge all the assurance they can give to the President, either individually or as a body."

The purpose of the association, it is pointed out, is to better business conditions among the distributors and exhibitors of motion picture advertising.

A. C. Zaring Laid Up for Few Days.

Indianapolis, Ind.—A. C. Zaring, secretary of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' league, has been confined to his home for the last few days because of illness.

New House to Replace Burned Orpheum.

Evansville, Ind.—A new theater, modern in every respect, will take the place of the old Orpheum, popular motion picture and vaudeville house, destroyed by fire recently, according to the decision of the board of directors of the Evansville Public Hall company, owners of the Orpheum, at a meeting last week. The new theater will cost about $30,000.

While no definite plans have been agreed upon by the owners of the property, they have given assurance that the new structure will be thoroughly up-to-date and will have the same line of attractions at popular prices which marked the success of the old Orpheum. Manager Sweeton intends to operate his motion picture show in Evans hall until the new building is completed.

Fire at Emerson Theater in Gary.

Gary, Ind.—Remarkable coolness was exhibited by a large audience of men, women and children at the Emerson theater a night last week when fire broke out in the moving picture booth and spread around the entrance to the theater. All of the crowd filed out safely.

The picture, "Last Days of Pompeii," was being shown on the screen when a hot carbon dropped on the film, causing it to burn rapidly. The fire department was called and extinguished the blaze before much damage was done. The loss was estimated at $200.

Bert Deardorff Buys the Lyric.

Goshen, Ind.—The Lyric theater, one of the most popular photoplay houses in Goshen, has been purchased by Bert Deardorff, of Coldwater, Mich. Mr. Deardorff will assume charge of the place next Monday and has announced that he will give the patrons the best pictures obtainable.

Deardorff is well known in Goshen, having lived here about twenty years ago. He has lately been operating a motion picture theater in Coldwater, Mich., and was formerly in the same business in Three Rivers, Mich., and Bryan, Ohio.

Lyric Film and Supply Building Office.

Terre Haute, Ind.—The Lyric Film and Supply Company of this city has begun the erection of a $12,000 film distributing house at 210 North Ninth street, and it is to be ready for occupancy in June.

New Palace Opened April 1.

Churubusco, Ind.—The New Palace theater will be opened April 1 under the management of J. T. Aubry. The new house will feature high-class motion picture films and occasional vaudeville acts.

Marion, Ind.—The Washington Theater Co. has filed papers with the secretary of state announcing that it has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $100,000.

Auburn, Ind.—The Little theater, a motion picture house on South Main street, owned and operated by Miss Leah Little, closed its doors last week. The pictures and equipment will be sold and the room will be vacated at once. Lack of patronage is given as the cause of the closing.

Operators Are Declared Stage Employes

American Federation of Labor Notifies Omaha Central Labor Union That Moving Picture Operators Are Not to Be Classified as Electricians.

By Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

OMAHA, NEB.—The Omaha Central Labor Union has been notified by the American Federation of Labor that moving picture operators are stage employees, and not electricians. A new "electrical" union was organized several weeks ago and applied to the central body for admission. The central body asked for a ruling from the national body. The "electrical" union was composed of moving picture men, and it was reported to antagonize the present moving picture operators' union.

Nebraska Theater Changes.

Schuyler, Neb.—T. E. Huffer is now manager of the Favorite theater, succeeding A. B. Young.

Wahoo, Neb.—Dr. J. G. Smith has purchased a site for erection of a moving picture theater.

Dakota Theater Changes.

Yankton, S. D.—The Yankton theater has been leased to J. P. Mathewson, of Rochester, N. Y., effective April 1.

Canton, S. D.—The Empress theater is now under the management of L. F. Avis of Sioux City. A feature of the new management will be 4 o'clock matinees for school children Fridays and Saturdays.

Dakota Jottings.

Fargo, N. D.—The Garrick theater has discontinued its Saturday morning children's show because, it is announced, the management finds it impossible to secure the desired pictures.

Deadwood, S. D.—Manager Hurst of the Deadwood theater gave a free matinee to school children to show educational pictures put out by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Theater Has Long Runs With Chosen Films

St. Louis' Central Theater Has Just Played to Many Admissions at 15 Cents with "Hell Morgan's Girl."—Its Other Offerings.

By A. H. Giebler, 4123 Westminster Place, St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The Central theater at Sixth and Market streets has been making a record for long runs since the management of J. L. Sweeney. Heretofore St. Louis has always been known as a short run town. Outside of "The Birth of a Nation" and super-features of that character, one and two weeks' runs have been the limit.

But the Central has made a remarkable change in these conditions. The Central played ten weeks with "The Little Girl Next Door"; ten weeks with "Damaged Goods," and two and three weeks with several other features. Nothing is booked for less than one week. Just now "Hell Morgan's Girl" is running; it played to 26,441 admissions at 15 cents the first seven days. It is now in its fourth week and Sweeney says it looks like another ten weeks' run.

Mr. Sweeney says he books nothing but pictures with a punch to them. He is a strong believer in newspaper and lobby advertising. Here's what he says on advertising:

"You can use up as much newspaper space as you've got money to spend, and you can fill your house for the first two or three days, or possibly a week, by that method, but if the picture is not there, all the money you can spend will not make it go. Advertising is just a sort of invitation to come and look at a picture. Those who come first will go away and if they have been pleased two or three of their friends will come as a result of their boosting; if the picture was not up to the standard two or three of their friends will stay away as a result of their knocking, or silence about the picture.

"After all, it is the picture itself that fills the house day after day. Advertising helps, it tells the people what you have, but if they come and see that you haven't got what you said you had they will not come again."

Bob Worth's Name Like Abou Ben Adhem's.

St. Louis, Mo.—This is Bob Worth. What has Bob Worth done to get his picture in the paper? Wait a minute.

Bob works for the Pathe exchange in St. Louis, and last month, when the Pathe home office made up a list of the standing of one hundred of their salesmen scattered all over the country, Bob's name was giving a fine imitation of Abou Ben Adhem's by leading all the rest.

Bob Worth.

And when you come to consider the quality and mettle of the Pathe representatives you must agree that Bob must have done some fairly tall hustling to register that high on the ladder. Of course, as the late epigrammatist of Battle Creek, Mich., would have said, "There's a reason," and here it is—or rather here they are:

Bob has got about the biggest bunch of experience in all lines of amusement enterprises salted away in his system of any film man now playing the game in this bailiwick. He has been all up and down the line and knows the art of giving the public what it wants—from paper napkins to toothpicks.

Bob has been an actor—two kinds of actor—legitimate, and we were about to say illegitimate, but we'll call it perfectly legal—screen stuff, in other words.

That being the case he knows how and when, why and where pictures ought to be made. On top of that he has managed shows, sold tickets in the box office and booked attractions in the business office. In the moving picture end he has just as intimate an acquaintance with theaters from a managerial standpoint as he had in the regular drama; and in addition Bob is not a bad looking chap, as you can see from his picture.

He can tell a funny story—we'll send his last contribution to the unpublished gaiety of life to anyone who will forward a self-addressed stamped envelope—and the best part of it he knows when to tell a story and when to talk business. So many salesmen do not know this.

This is the reason Bob got his picture in the paper; he did things; he batted over six hundred in one of the hardest games in the country—selling film in competition with ninety-nine other film men who are just about as clever as he is.

Every time a salesman strikes ten, or does anything we think entitles him to a place in our hall of fame, we are going to do the same to him that we have done to Bob—"mug" him and print his picture in the paper.

Joe Levy to Manage L. C. F. Exchange.

St. Louis, Mo.—Joe Levy has been appointed manager of the L. C. F. Feature exchange at 3313 Olive street, succeeding F. J. Fegan.

IN DENVER, COLO.
"Libertine" Gets Big Contract.

Denver, Colo.—The Supreme Photoplays corporation of this city has booked "The Libertine" with the Moore, Greaves amusement company, and it will play their houses for a total of twenty consecutive days, opening at the Princess theater, Denver, for a week's run. It will also be shown at the Colorado Springs, Pueblo and Cheyenne houses of this company

League and Exchanges Confer

Minneapolis Exchange Managers Invited to Luncheon as Guests of the Northwest Exhibitors on March 27—Talk Over Matters of Great Interest—Part That Exchanges Will Play in the Coming Convention.

By John L. Johnston, 704 Film Exchange Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Film exchange managers of the city were invited to be the guests of the Northwest branch of the Exhibitors' League at a luncheon at the West hotel, Tuesday afternoon, March 27, so that the exhibitors could have a good discussion of many topics of vital interest to exchangemen. This luncheon gave the exhibitors and exchangemen the first opportunity of getting together in some time and the exhibitors had a chance to ascertain just how much they can expect from the exchanges of Minneapolis at the coming convention here in May.

Exchangemen have had sufficient time to get in touch with headquarters in New York and Chicago regarding authority to assist the exhibitors in making the convention a success and Tuesday's gathering will do much to assist managers of the convention in formulating their plans.

F. I. L. M. Club Discusses Hoy Agency's Work.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The F. I. L. M. Club of Minneapolis held its last regular meeting at the Universal-Laemmle exchange Tuesday evening, March 20, and the matter of giving the Hoy agency all claims of exhibitors and exchangemen was discussed at length. The Hoy agency, which is adjusting all claims for the F. I. L. M. Club, has not been kept very busy of late, mainly because exhibitors did not know of its activities. President W. K. Howard of the club urged all members to inform exhibitors of the Hoy agency's work and to have them present their claims to this branch of the F. I. L. M. Club at all times.

Jess Cubberley May Enter State Rights Field.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Jess F. Cubberley, former manager of the Universal exchange and general manager of several Zenith Feature Film Co. exchanges in the Northwest, has returned from New York, smiling but silent. Mr. Cubberley refused to announce his future plans, but it is believed he will enter the state rights field for himself shortly.

Exhibitors Stage a Benefit Vaudeville.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corp. of the Northwest was scheduled to stage its benefit vaudeville and motion picture midnight matinee at the Pantages theater here Tuesday, March 27, for the benefit of the convention fund. Secretary Hitchcock of the corporation reported a brisk advance sale of tickets.

Censor Bill Introduced in St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn.—Representative Frank Hammer offered in a session of the legislature last week a bill providing for a state film censorship body and salaries aggregating $1,250. Thomas J. Hamlin, James G. Gilosky and others prominent in Northwest film activities, aided by many telegrams, called upon Mr. Hammer and practically succeeded in having Mr. Hammer withdraw his bill. At least it is believed that by the time Mr. Hammer gets through reading and listening to protests he will give up in despair.

Exhibitors Denounce Return Expressage Plan.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Letters to local exchanges and the opinions of exhibitors visiting the city are strong in denouncing proposed plans to demand return expressage and purchase of all slides and paper and advance deposits. Exhibitors declare unless conditions take a sudden change that a good percentage of them will be forced to retire from business. Weather conditions since last summer have made even the best of theaters live a hand to mouth existence, and with the exchanges organizing to bring about more strict legislation for their benefit the exhibitors promise to do some "legislating" of their own here May 1, 2 and 3.

All the Locherens Are Patriotic.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Every male member of the Locheren Film Corp. exchange last week signed a pledge to join the United States army in case of necessity. Three girls of the exchange offered to act as nurses, also. The firm's "service jitney" may be pressed into service as an ambulance or ammunition wagon.

Demands Fireproof Booths in Schools.

St. Paul, Minn.—The Minnesota state fire marshal has proposed the adoption of measures prohibiting the showing of moving pictures in public schools of the state unless fireproof projection booths are erected. The fire marshal has pointed out the danger of showing films in schools on machines that are not enclosed in booths or walls of safety.

Bowlers Are Working Toward a Finish.

Minneapolis, Minn.—With the four teams going at a fast clip on the last lap of the season's championship race, the "Amusements" quintet is leading the Famous Players five by one point in the Minneapolis Film Men's Bowling League. Monetary prizes will be divided among the teams at the close of the season.

Under Sea Feature Doing Well.

St. Paul, Minn.—James V. Bryson's feature "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" has begun a week's run at the Strand here, and, judging from the first day's business, the Friedmans are in line to enjoy a good week's business with the under sea feature. The picture was given wide publicity in St. Paul.

Films Showing at the Strand.

Minneapolis, Minn.—So numerous were the requests for it, Manager James A. Keough of the Strand theater here set aside a regular Triangle release for the first time and played a four-day return booking of "Skinner's Dress Suit." The feature, which attracted overflow crowds at each showing of a previous three-day run, played to capacity on its second appearance at the theater. The Strand has booked "The Argyle Case" and "The Price She Paid" for showing in the near future. Mary Pickford's "A Poor Little Rich Girl" has also been booked for a second showing soon.

Charles Campbell a La Two Column.

St. Paul, Minn.—Manager Charles W. Campbell of the Blue Mouse theater here celebrated his forty-second birthday on Sunday, March 25, and—yes, sir, Charles' physiognomy appeared in the papers a la two column, too.

St. Paul, Minn.—Manager E. A. Westcott of the Westcott Film Corp., Minneapolis, staged a special showing of "The Little Girl Next Door" at the New Majestic theater here Thursday morning, March 22, for the benefit of St. Paul exhibitors.

Mrs. Al. G. Shear's New Carolton Opens

Pretty Suburban Picture Theater Has Premiere on St. Patrick's Day—Thirty-one Floral Offerings in Lobby—Big Crowds Attend.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—One might easily have thought it Christmas—in truth, it was St. Patrick's day—Saturday, March 17, there was so much good will in evidence at the opening of the new Carrolton theater, Carrolton avenue and Canal street, the last word in suburban houses.

The New Carrolton is owned and operated by the Sobel-Richards-Shear Enterprises and is managed by Mrs. Al. G. Shear, whose husband manages the New Orleans and the Consolidated. Thirty-one floral offerings with wishes for success were displayed in the lobby.

The crowds spoke emphatically for the good will already built up by Mrs. Shear in the operation of the old Carrolton at the same point. As to the floral offerings, these were from local exchange managers—but there are only thirteen regular service exchanges in New Orleans—so the rest were from friends of Mrs. Shear and the house. The opening day crowds were filmed and will be shown on the screen soon.

Local World Film Moves to Union St.

New Orleans, La.—The World Film corporation, Mrs. Anne E. Sessions, manager, has moved to new quarters at 815 Union street. The new quarters contain almost exactly twice the office room and floor space of the old Common street address. Mrs. Sessions is just back from a trip through southern Louisiana and reports trade conditions all that could be desired and then some.

F. E. Garner to Manage Local General.

New Orleans, La.—F. E. Garner, connected with the New Orleans office of the General Film for the past four years, and for some time assistant manager, has succeeded T. O. Tuttle in the managership of the New Orleans office. Mr. Garner has been in the business since 1906, with the exception of three and a half years in other lines of work, and is rated an A1 film man. The General's New Orleans territory has been increased to include all Mississippi and Louisiana, south Alabama and west Florida.

Local Metro Notes.

New Orleans, La.—Karl A. Bugbee, New Orleans manager for Metro, reports conditions throughout the territory excellent. Mr. Bugbee is the one and only New Orleans manager Metro has had. He is a veteran at the business and left an older exchange to become New Orleans manager for Metro when that service first entered the field here.

C. J. Bryant, roadman for Metro, recently returned to New Orleans after an extensive trip through Mississippi. He reports heavy competition as having a tendency to "force down prices to less than the pictures are worth." State rights offerings are making something of a bid for business, he said, but exhibitors are doing little spot-booking, sticking for the most part to the regular service man.

Farewell Luncheon to T. O. Tuttle.

New Orleans, La.—T. O. Tuttle, late manager of the General's New Orleans office, was the honored guest at a little luncheon at the St. Charles hotel, Saturday, March 17, to wish him godspeed on his departure for New York. All the thirteen regular service exchange managers were there and Al Shear of Consolidated acted as toastmaster.

Gastronomically and in every other way the event was, in the opinion of those present, a knock-out, for in the rather brief period of his stay in New Orleans Mr. Tuttle has made a lot of friends.

Al Shear's speech was worth listening to and before Mr. Tuttle had got through with his reply he had earned a reputation as a heart-to-heart talker as well as a regular fellow. Mr. Tuttle was the first president of the newly-formed F. I. L. M. Club of New Orleans, which post he resigned at the same time he resigned from the managership of the New Orleans office of his company.

F. I. L. M. Club Begins to Adjust Disputed Questions.

New Orleans, La.—The F. I. L. M. Club of New Orleans got down down to work. The first sitting of the grievance committee took place Thursday, March 15, and it successfully adjusted a difference between an exhibitor and an exchange which had threatened to result in hard feelings. Both sides to the controversy cheerfully accepted the ruling of the committee and are doing business with each other as before.

New Orleans Mutual Notes.

New Orleans, La.—S. T. Stephens, New Orleans manager for Mutual, announces the opening of a branch of the New Orleans office at Memphis, with Adam Weiss as assistant manager in charge. The Memphis office will serve Arkansas and west Tennessee.

Al Durning, roadman for Mutual, returned from a trip through southwest Louisiana and has gone into south Alabama. Miss U. Solanas has been added to the stenographic staff of the Mutual.

New Theaters and Changes in Gulf States

Eunice, La.—E. H. Keller, at Eunice, La., population 3,000, will build a new combination house on the site of his present theater, taking in extra ground so as to give him a ground floor space of 75 by 160 feet. The new house will play both pictures and stage attractions.

Abbeville, La.—A. O. Landry, at Abbeville, La., will take over the Triangle theater at that place. Mr. Landry is now operating the Victor at Abbeville and the Royal at Lafayette. He is said to be planning a big string of houses.

Rosedale, Miss.—J. D. Lobdell, at Rosedale, Miss., is putting up a new house which will seat 600. Two new machines will be installed. Metro pictures will be one of the offerings of the new house.

Clarksdale, Miss.—Clarksdale, Miss., is to have a new theater of the first class. According to the project it will cost $75,000.

Laurel, Miss.—C. T. Latimer, at Laurel, Miss., is taking over the Lomo. Mr. Latimer is from Booneville, Miss.

Meridian, Miss.—The Tri-State Amusement, at Meridian, Miss., is overhauling its Princess theater. Scenic artists have been at work for some days and at the reopening the public is promised something pretty. The Tri-State company also operates the Strand at Meridian.

Leland, Miss.—R. D. McRaven, at Leland, Miss., has a 300-seat theater with a soda fountain in the lobby. The house is prosperous and other exhibitors hearing of Mr. McRaven's arrangement are said to be considering doing likewise.

Indianola, Miss.—James Chapman, at Indianola, Miss., has taken over the Elite, 300 seats, from C. O. Smith.

Hazelhurst, Miss.—Spitchley & Wright have reopened the Airdome at Hazelhurst, Miss.

Plaquemine, La.—Lionel Delacroix, of Plaquemine, in New Orleans recently, announces a $50,000 house for Plaquemine. Mr. Delacroix will be the manager. The house will seat 1,000. The new house is now in course of construction.

New Orleans, La.—Josiah Pearce & Sons are refitting their Tudor theater, big first run house in Canal street. The Tudor has stood for the best in moving picture theaters since its opening just a few years ago. Giant reversible Typhoon fans are one of the items of the overhauling, now being installed.

Saenger's Lafayette theater, which for some time has boasted of the largest symphony moving picture orchestra in the South, last Sunday added seven pieces, making it now a twenty-two piece orchestra. The Lafayette is an old legitimate house, serving as the Saenger first run house pending the completion of their new Strand theater. The Lafayette is eight blocks from Canal street, but always full.

Atlanta in Favor of Sunday Picture Shows

Ordinance Committee of City's Council Reports Against Prohibiting Valuable Sabbath Amusements—Arguments for the Open Shows.

By A. M. Beatty, 43 Copenhill Avenue, Atlanta, Ga.

ATLANTA, Ga.—Friday afternoon, March 23, by a vote of 5 to 1, the Ordinance Committee of Council decided to report adversely the ordinance by Councilman Buchanan to prohibit the operation of motion picture theaters on Sunday, with voluntary contribution boxes at the entrance.

The committee held a hearing that occupied practically all the afternoon and attracted a large number of persons and organizations variously interested in the subject.

Among those who spoke against the ordinance were Victor H. Kriegshaber, former president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and a delegation from the Women's Study Club.

Mr. Kreigshaber opposed the ordinance on the ground that Atlanta already has so few amusements on the Sabbath that numerous industries find it hard to bring skilled labor here. He declared that the picture shows do no harm, but on the contrary are helpful to a number of charitable and educational enterprises to which they give their proceeds over and above expenses.

The ladies of the Women's Study Club opposed the ordinance on the ground that they are now largely supporting a school for girls at Mineral Bluff with contributions received from Sunday motion pictures.

Among those who spoke in favor of the ordinance was Jerome Jones, editor of the Journal of Labor. He declared that organized labor is against Sunday work and is therefore against Sunday motion pictures because they involve Sunday work.

Replying to Mr. Kriegshaber, Mr. Jones declared that if the laboring men were paid better wages and given shorter hours they wouldn't have to take their amusements and recreation on Sunday.

J. A. Manget, the citizen who has been crusading against Sunday picture shows for several months, declared that the guise of charity under which they operate is a deception. The theaters get most of the money, was his opinion.

This was denied by Sig Samuels, owner of the Criterion, who informed the committee that the Sunday shows pay expenses and no more, and the owners would not object to being stopped by law although they were not asking to be stopped. In other words, he said they did not care one way or the other.

The attitude of the committee was in favor of providing adequate investigation and supervision for the shows, but was overwhelmingly opposed to a prohibitive law.

Snapshots at the Film Business.

Atlanta, Ga.—"Civilization" played to capacity all week at the Rialto theater.

Atlanta, Ga.—J. H. MacEachron, Jr., who has been out with "The Warning," is back in Atlanta.

Macon, Ga.—Ralph DeBruler, of the Capitol theater, Macon, was in Atlanta seeing some future releases run off this week.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Reel Fellows are contemplating a dance soon, one of those old-fashioned get-acquainted affairs, which is looked forward to with eagerness by their friends.

Atlanta, Ga.—The re-entry of Gus Evans into the picture business is a welcome bit of news to his thousands of friends, for no more courteous and popular picture man ever owned a house in Atlanta; his entrance marks the return of the pioneer of all picture theater men in this city. He built the old Vaudette, one of the first moving picture theaters, and has been uniformly successful.

KANSAS CITY NOTES.

Algona, Ia.—N. C. Rice, manager of the Opera House, is an unusual type.

Alma, Kan.—C. A. Phillips of Ness City has taken over the Colonial theater from A. U. Simon.

Dodge City, Kan.—Rae Peacock of Stafford is the new manager of the Rath theater.

El Dorado, Kan.—J. O. Evertson will build a new theater. It will be of brick and stone, two stories, 24x120 feet.

Mineola, Kan.—The LaSalle theater here was totally destroyed by fire.

Oberlin, Kan.—George Gilkison has sold his picture show to Prof. Smick and McKinsie.

Ottawa, Kan.—The Crystal theater was totally destroyed by fire recently. The building was owned by Mr. Millington, who carried $2,800 insurance.

Osawatomie, Kan.—Wesley Williams has leased Convention hall to T. M. Henneberry of Paola, and Mr. Henneberry will install a picture show. Mr. Henneberry is manager of the Empress theater at Paola.

Wichita, Kan.—Wichita Theater Co., chartered with $50,000 capital stock by J. H. Cooper, Topeka, Kan.; C. C. McCollister and Neva McCollister, Wichita, Kan.

Blackwell, Okla.—The Elks Theater Co., incorporated $2,000, by A. R. Zimmer, M. L. Opperud, Blackwell and Vernon Rose, Kansas City.

Beaver, Okla.—Spangler Brothers expect to commence the erection of a new theater building next door to the Herald building.

Cement, Okla.—Cauthlin & Simler began work recently on a picture show building. It will be 100x50 feet, and will be of wood.

Claremore, Okla.—Fire of an unknown origin damaged the Electric theater to the extent of about $700. Insurance was carried.

Frederick, Okla.—R. L. Case has purchased the Electric theater, and is now in charge of same. Roy Daack and A. North were the former owners.

Miami, Okla.—W. B. Schmuckler will begin the construction of his new Main street opera house April 1st. It will be two stories with a 50 foot frontage. The seating capacity will be 1000.

New Wilson, Okla.—Adolph Henegger is the new manager of the Yale theater.

Sapulpa, Okla.—The St. Denis, a new $15,000 moving picture show recently built here, was opened to the public March 5th.

Tulsa, Okla.—Work will start soon on the new Empress theater. It will cost $150,000. The theater proper will be 150x80 ft. with a lobby 50 by 70 feet. The seating capacity will be 1800.

Tulsa, Okla.—Mrs. R. M. Johnson is the proprietor of the new Wonderland theater to be built here.

New Kansas Censor Board Formed

Miss Carrie Simpson Remains a Member of the Board—Mrs. J. M. Miller Is the Chairman and Mrs. B. L. Short Is Another Appointed Member—Board Not Satisfied With New Quarters—Many Applications for the Jobs on Board.

By Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Belt Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, Kansas.—Miss Carrie Simpson remains as one of the members of the new board of the Motion Picture Review, which succeeds the former censorship board of Kansas. She is one of the two members who will draw $1500 a year, the other being Mrs. B. L. Short, a prominent clubwoman of Kansas City, Kan. The chairman of the board is Mrs. J. M. Miller, of Council Grove, Kan., wife of a former Congressman. Mrs. Miller has been earning the living for the family since Mr. Miller became ill several years ago. She will draw $1800 as chairman. She will resign her present position as woman member and secretary of the Board of Corrections. She is president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, and perhaps the most widely known clubwoman of the state.

These appointments were made by Governor Capper, with the comment that he had found a board that would allow only pictures allowable under the law to enter the state.

The retiring members of the board are Mrs. C. J. Evans of Topeka, and the Rev. Festus Foster. The fact that Mr. Foster is not continued is considered significant of the changing sentiment with regard to too punctilious searching for objectionable matter in moving pictures.

The city of Kansas City, Kansas, has prepared quarters for the board of review in the basement of the old city hall, where the board will start inspection April 1. The exchange managers of Kansas City can make arrangements by telephone for showing pictures, and take their own films there in a few minutes, thus keeping in close personal touch with the board.

The women's clubs of the state had evinced so much interest in the censor board and the censoring of pictures that a large number of women thought they should be on the board. There were 108 applications filed with Governor Capper, and 101 of them were from women. Mrs. B. L. Short of Kansas City, Kan., led the list in the number of men and women, and organizations who endorsed her. She is the widow of a former assistant postmaster.

The board will appoint its own secretary. It is said that the position, which pays $1200 a year, will be given to Miss Hallie Tucker of Kansas City, Kan.

The new Board of Motion Picture Review of Kansas has objected to the quarters and facilities provided by Kansas City, Kan., and it is possible that the censorship will continue indefinitely in the basement of the state house at Topeka.

The board notified Governor Capper that it disapproved of the quarters in the basement of the old city hall at Kansas City, Kan., next to the fire department. So the governor called his executive council into session, and it promised to look into the matter. J. T. Botkin, secretary of state; Walter L. Payne, state treasurer, and W. D. Ross, superintendent of public instruction, took a trip to Kansas City, Kan., and viewed the quarters March 27. They didn't like the looks of things, either; and it is said they will report adversely.

"Witching Hour" Makes Hit in Kansas City.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Twelfth Street theater had a record run with the "Witching Hour" (owned by the Imperial Feature Film Co.). The film was first shown to a private showing of prominent Kansas City club women, ministers, and teachers, and met with their hearty approval. It was also excellently advertised. A white robed impersonation of Justice, carrying the sword and scales, rode a white horse through the downtown district and attracted much attention.

"Clean Pictures Night" Brings Patrons.

Kansas City, Mo.—Five theaters, the Alamo, the Ashland, the Colonial, the Linwood and the Strand, recently observed the first "Clean-Picture Night" with fair success, morally speaking and financially. In fact, the managers declare that the idea attracted the crowds more than usual. The theaters were acting upon the suggestion of the Collegiate Alumni and the Parent-Teachers' association. Mr. Frank Newman is at the head of the theater men who are putting the idea into practice. A typical program shown at the Alamo was Charley Chaplin in "Easy Street," with one reel eliminated, a travel picture, two cartoon comedies and a drama.

New Kansas City Theater to Seat 1,500.

Kansas City, Mo.—Joseph C. Wirthman, druggist, is erecting a quarter of a million dollar building, the ground floor of which will be one of the finest moving picture shows in Kansas City. The seating capacity will be 1500. It will be in the center of the fine residence district at 31st and Troost.

Find Business Good in Slaten, Mo.

Slater, Mo.—Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Jenkins, formerly owners of the Highland theater, Kansas City, Mo., in November took a lease on the Auditorium theater, Slater, Mo. The house has a seating capacity of 728, is fully equipped for running an up to date picture show, has a large stage, scenery for handling big shows, etc.

Mr. Jenkins reports business good. Service is used in Metro, World, Triangle. One serial is shown a week, and as the house is the center of things locally, many affairs interesting to Slater people are held at the Auditorium.

The "Birth of a Nation" was shown at the Auditorium March 14, with a big matinee and a capacity house at night.

Notes for Exhibitors Across Kansas.

Topeka, Kan.—The Cozy theater, under the management of Lew Nathanson, has been given some improvements lately. A new interior entrance has been installed in mahogany, and about forty soft-toned lights have been placed on the walls of the theater to enable patrons to find their seats.

Kansas City, Mo.—At the Twelfth Street theater Mary Pickford has scored another big hit in "Poor Little Rich Girl," having record crowds and many turned away. The picture, by request, was run another week.

Pittsburg, Kan.—W. H. Daly has bought the Mystic theater from W. A. Bandy. Mr. Bandy is arranging to take a position as traveling representative for the Pathe exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Wonderland theater, owned by Richard & Flynn, is going to run only five-reel features, contracting for the Art Orams. The Wonderland is the second (the Columbia was the first) to do this.

Wichita, Kan.—As an example of prosperous conditions, Stanley Chambers, manager of the Palace, is adding to his already model theater, picture frames of beaten brass in the lobby. Each frame is costing $300.

Great Bend, Kan.—Edward Nelson, son of W. S. Nelson, who, with his father, has been managing the Electric theater, died March 21 of pneumonia.

Gallatin, Mo.—Victor Newton recently sold the Isis theater.

Sponsorship Board in Spokane Makes a Hit

Out-of-Town Exhibitors Show Willingness to Make Good Use of Its Work—A Demand for Lists of Approved Pictures.

By S. Clark Patchin, E. 1811 Eleventh Avenue, Spokane, Wash.

SPOKANE, Wash.—The "sponsorship" committee of the Woman's Federations of Clubs of Spokane will be used as a clearing house for out-of-town moving picture show proprietors who want their pictures censored by the local committee before presenting them to their patrons. This was just announced after letters had been received from some of the outside exhibitors. J. A. Hurley, proprietor of the moving picture house in Davenport, Wash., in his letter says:

"Being interested in clean moving pictures I would like to receive from the sponsorship committee a list of the pictures being shown in Spokane which your committee recommends. I will gladly pay the necessary expenses of securing this information. Most of the pictures I secure are good, but some of them are not.

"I want to be able to look my patrons in the face after showing them a picture, and I am confident that if I secure pictures having the approval of your committee I will get only good, wholesome pictures, and that is what the people of Davenport want."

Allender Reappointed Civil Service Commissioner.

Spokane, Wash. Civil Service Commissioner J. W. Allender, owner and manager of the Lyric picture show, was reappointed to his position by the city council. His term of office had expired March 18. His new term runs until March 18, 1923.

The council split on the appointment when Commissioner J. C. Argall moved the reappointment of Mr. Allender. Commissioner C. M. Fassett, who recently was turned down by the Civil Service Commission in the Hunt dismissal case, voted against the reappointment.

Mr. Allender was the fourth man to serve during the first term of the commission, which started March 18, 1911, just after the commission government was organized.

H. S. Clemmer Working Up Good Program.

Spokane, Wash.—Manager Howard S. Clemmer, of the Clemmer theater, has contracted for the World-Brady screen productions, and they will be shown in addition to the regular Paramount service, which the Clemmer has had exclusively since it opened.

Dr. Clemmer expects to run all the Alice Brady, Clafa Kimball Young, Kitty Gordon, and the Warwick pictures on the World program. He has also contracted for special Vitagraph productions as suitable offerings are available.

The comedy end of the Clemmer program has been cared for in the booking of the Max Linder pictures, the "Luke" series, Foxfilm comedies and the Roscoe Arbuckle Paramount comedies, the first of which will be shown next month.

Beginning next Sunday, Jesse Crawford, organist, will begin a series of organ recitals at 12:30 o'clock, preceding the first picture exhibition of the day. These will be popular in nature and no extra admission will be charged.

Remodeling Begun on New Pantages House.

Spokane, Wash.—Plans for the new Pantages theater for pictures and vaudeville probably will be finished within a month, and work started on the remodeling of the present building, which is to be converted into a large auditorium. The lease for the building, including the adjoining store room has been signed, and the entire width of the old Holley-Mason structure with an additional depth of 25 feet will be used for the theater.

The entire front of the building will be remodeled, and will present an entirely different appearance. Considerable fancy terra cotta ornaments are to be used in transforming it into the appearance of an up-to-date theater. It has not been determined where the Pantages attractions will be housed in the meantime.

Local Film Men Back From Seattle League Meeting.

Spokane, Wash.—P. L. Carroll, manager of the Pathe exchange, Spokane, and C. E. Stilwell, of the Stilwell Theaters company, have just returned from a meeting of the Exhibitors' League in Seattle. They were addressed there by Lee Oches of New York City, president of the National Exhibitors League. C. R. Seeley, Pathe business manager from New York, was also present, and held a conference with the coast and local managers. There were persons from all sections of the state of Washington and Northern Idaho at the meeting.

Spokane Brevities.

Marguerite Clark, in "The Fortunes of Fifi" attracted large audiences at the Clemmer theater the first four days of the week. The latter part of the week the new feature shown was the World production, Brady-made, "All Man," with Robert Warwick in the leading role.

Marguerite Fisher delighted the crowds at the Liberty in "The Pearl of Paradise."

Many society women visited the Class theater to see Joan Sawyer, the famous dancer, with her luxurious evening gowns, in the production "Law of Love."

At the Casino Olga Petrova appeared as Eve in the "Secret of Eve," this theater was crowded to its capacity.

SEATTLE FILM JOTTINGS.

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

First Railroad to Use Animated Cartoon Advertising.

SEATTLE, Wash.—Hazen J. Titus, superintendent of dining car service for the Northern Pacific railroad, and originator of "The Great Big Baked Potato" as a delicacy in the dining car and a trade mark in advertising, has introduced a brand new idea in advertising for railroads. Mr. Titus' new advertising medium is the animated cartoon, which has never before been used to advertise a railroad. The "story" for this cartoon was suggested by the "King of the Great Big Baked Potato Patch" and tells a funny romance of the giant "murphy" both before and after it reaches the N. P. dining car.

The film is being placed by the H. A. Johnson Company of Seattle in theaters all over the entire United States.

De Luxe Gets Rights of "Intolerance."

Seattle, Wash.—The rights for "Intolerance" in the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana have been bought by M. Rosenberg, manager of De Luxe features, Seattle. Mr. Rosenberg, who also has the northwest rights for "War Brides" and "The Garden of Allah," will play both of these films as road shows. "War Brides" will open at the Moore, Seattle's leading legitimate house, on April 15, with admission prices of 25, 50 and 75 cents.

Pertinent Short Term Notes.

Baltimore, Md.—Louis Schlichter states that "The Fall of a Nation" scored well at his Edmondson theater recently. The batting average was high.

"I had some crowd here tonight," said L. A. DeHoff one night last week when he was showing "Panthea." Evidently this play had magnetical qualities, for the New.

Manager Bernard Depkin, Jr., did not have to call for volunteers to see "The Poor Little Rich Girl" last week; but he did have to arrange an extra matinee each day for 12:30 at the Parkway. Well, it used to be the same way when Miss Pickford was with the Biograph.

New House in Weiser, Idaho.

Weiser, Idaho.—A. C. Gorden and his associates of the Star theater here are about to build a new 450 seat picture theater. Work will begin May 1 this year.

Portland (Ore.) News Letter

By Abraham Nelson, 601 Journal Bldg., Portland, Ore.

Myrick to Manage Big House.

PORTLAND, ORE.—At the time of this writing, March 23, the details for the opening of the new Jensen & Von Herberg house, formerly James' Broadway, have not been divulged, but it is understood that E. J. Myrick, the popular manager of the Columbia, has been selected to preside over the destinies of the big theater.

J. G. Von Herberg has been in Portland on business connected with the firm's latest acquisition.

"Joan" Shown to Exhibitors.

Portland, Ore.—"Joan the Woman," the big Geraldine Farrar production, had a private showing to exhibitors at the Sunset theater March 21, after the last show. J. V. Lynn, formerly publicity at the People's and now with the Progressive Motion Picture Company, brought the picture down from Seattle for the exhibition.

Star Runs First Serial.

Portland, Ore.—"The Mystery of the Double Cross" has been booked at the Star theater. C. W. Meighan, of the People's Amusement Company, says that this is the first time that a serial has been shown in Portland in a first run old established theater.

"Civilization" will also show at the Star commencing April 1, at 25 cents admission.

Pathe Local Office Improved.

Portland, Ore.—W. W. Kofeldt, manager for Pathe, has completed extensive improvements at his exchange and the place looks brand new. Curtains have been removed from the windows, wood partitions have been replaced by glass, the counters rearranged and the old posters removed from the walls. Pathe exchange looks more cheerful now.

FATHER AND SON (Two Parts).—The cast: Harris (Fred Eckhart); Katherine (Byride Zuber); Elwood (M. C. Von Betz); Robert Harris (Casson Ferguson). Written by Oliver Harper. Directed by Otis B. Thayer.

After her marriage to Harris, Katherine realizes that she has made a mistake. When her baby boy is born she takes her child and leaves her husband. Later, securing a divorce, Katherine marries Martin Elwood, who proves a kind and indulgent father to Robert, the boy.

Twenty years later Robert is a typical "gilded" youth, and shows every inclination to follow in the footsteps of his own father. Finally Elwood refuses the boy admittance to his home.

Near a gambling joint, Robert is accosted by a beggar, who is really the boy's father. He plots with the beggar who consents to rob Elwood of money, so that Robert can pay his gambling debts. The beggar gains entrance to Elwood's home. As he is about to open the safe he sees a full length portrait of Katherine. He inspects the room and finds a portrait of Robert. The beggar suddenly realizes that the boy waiting outside is his own son.

Later Harris, the beggar, is sent to prison, and when Robert learns this he offers to help him, but the beggar refuses the boy's aid. The excitement of again meeting his son proves too much for Harris and he dies.

Robert, sincerely mourning the man who helped him, calls for what few effects Harris had with him when made a prisoner. Looking through them the boy finds a picture of his mother, himself and Harris, and this fact causes him to realize that the man who had just died was his own father. The shock brings Robert to realize that rather than let the boy discover the fact that the beggar was his father, he pleaded guilty to a crime he never committed. Through the beggar's sacrifice and through mother love, Robert becomes a new man.

THE GODDESS OF CHANCE.—The cast: Richard Hyde (E. J. Brady); Martha Hyde (Virginia Kirtley); Charles Curtis (Robyn Adair); Clara Curtis (Eugenia Forde). Written by D. F. Whitcomb. Directed by Burton L. King.

Richard Hyde is a broker by day and a gambler by night. Charles Curtis, another gambler, loses steadily and pledges his wife's pearl necklace that he may pay his gambling debts, and Hyde wins the pearls.

Curtis returns home and confesses to his wife that he has lost her pearls, and that they are practically ruined. Mrs. Curtis resolves to recover her jewels as they are rightfully hers, and she conceives the idea of masquerading in the clothes of her husband. She enters the Hydes' abode and finds her necklace. As she is about to leave, she is confronted by Mrs. Hyde, and she tells the woman why she is there.

In the meantime, Curtis left alone decides to take his life. He resolves to play one last hand of poker, this time with the devil. If Curtis wins he will live, but if the cards are against him he will take his life. He loses, and as he is about to kill himself, Hyde, the broker, rushes in, being sent there by his wife. The men shake hands and together they pledge never to again touch a card.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURE.

THE THIRD INGREDIENT (of the O. Henry Series—Two Parts).—The cast: Hetty (Mildred Manning); Cecilie (Alice Maun); Man (Frank Glendon). Scenario written by H. U. Bergman. Directed by T. R. Mills.

A buyer in the Big Store where Hetty Pepper worked became surfeited by the loveliness around him and on seeing Hetty, whose drab features came as a welcome relief in the sea of cloying femininity, pinched her arm three inches above the elbow and was knocked three feet by it. Thirty minutes later Hetty was without a job and with only twenty cents in her purse. The two dimes were exchanged for some rib beef. One hot beef stew, a good night's rest and Hetty would be fit to again go out and get a job.

Digging in the rats' nest of paper in her cupboard disclosed the tragic fact that no potatoes or onions were evident. Beef stew cannot be made without onions and potatoes. Taking her pan she went out into the hall and there discovered the artist girl from across the hall peeling some potatoes with a shoemaker's knife. They were new potatoes and Hetty demonstrated to the girl the proper way to peel them. In the ensuing conversation, the girl explained that Art did not seem to be much in demand, but that potatoes alone are not so bad, boiled and hot, with a little salt and some butter. She tried to sell her paintings, but with no success. Hetty suggests that they bunch their commissariat. If they only had an onion their heaven would be complete.

Hetty escorted Cecilie, the painter, into her room and set the stew pot onto the one-burner gas stove. Cecilie's eyes rested on a chrome of a ferry-boat on the wall and then bursts into tears. In explanation to Hetty's question she replies that two days ago she had been over to Jersey and was returning after another disappointment and that she in despondency had slipped over the side of the ferry-boat. But a young man had seen her and the next thing she knew she was supported by his arms. When the boat landed the man placed her in a cab. She refused him her name and address, but he claimed that he would find her anyhow as she belonged to him by right of salvage.

The beef and potatoes boiled on, yet they lacked the soul that an onion would give them and Hetty determined to have one. In the hall she ran into a young man with a large pink onion in his hand. He stated that he had received it from a friend and that he was going to eat it. Hetty explains their difficulty and invites him to donate to the cause. He acquiesces and Hetty goes in to inform the other member of the corporation, but, when she returned she found the young man leaning out of the window and giving instructions to a chauffeur in a green limousine below. To her question he replied that the car belonged to him. "But what were you going to with the onion?" asked Hetty. The man explained that he had caught a cold in saving a young girl who had fallen off a ferry-boat and that his mother had told him the best cure for a cold was an onion. He turns out to be the man who rescued Cecilie and they are soon in each other's arms. As Hetty peeled the onion at the sink a few minutes later, she remarked grimly, "But it's us that furnished the beef."

THE DEADLY DOUGHNUT (Ham and Bud Comedy).—Old man Doe has at last succeeded in perfecting the holeless doughnut by a process that will revolutionize the doughnut industry. He employes Ham and Bud to preside over the bakery, while he is busy soliciting orders for the new gastronomic confection. The doughnut king hears of the invention and proceeds to kidnap Doe, and lock him up in his vault until he will capitulate and produce the plans.

Meantime Bud has been experimenting on his own hook and produces a batch of dough that the merry bakers proceed to convert into ammunition of terrific explosive power. They try it out on the dog with satisfactory results. But Bud cannot remember the combination and Ham's dreams of wealth as a munition manufacturer are rudely shattered.

However, they still have enough of the original batch of holeless missiles to blast poor Doe out of his prison vault and wreck the bakery wherein

THE SECRET OF THE BORGIAS (An Adventure of "Grant, Police Reporter").—The cast: Grant (George Larkin); Doris Saltwell (Ollie Kirkby); Marsden Saltwell (Cyril Courtney); The "Spider" (Robert Ellis); Julius Elwell (Harry Gordon). Story by Robert Welles Ritchie. Directed by Robert Ellis.

Ralph Channing, a rather dissolute young man, plans to marry Doris, the daughter of Marsden Saltwell, a wealthy collector of antiques. He fails to convince Doris' father that he is worthy or that his financial affairs are in good shape and in this frame of mind he calls upon Elwell, an unscrupulous attorney, for advice.

Elwell is in league with the "Spider," a master criminal who, from his invalid chair, directs the machinations of a notorious gang of rascals. Knowing nothing of his attorney's plan, but willing to leave everything in his hands provided he can get the girl's money, Channing consents.

Doris' father gets a polite note from an antique shop which calls attention to a rare vase just received and believed to have come down from the period when Lucretia Borgia held men's lives in the palm of her hand. Saltwell buys the vase. That evening, in the presence of his daughter, he examines his purchase. As he inserts his hand to feel the finish of the inside he falls dead.

Grant, police reporter on the Chronicle, accompanies the detective sent to investigate. On the back of the dead man's hand he discovers three tiny punctures that have traces of a greenish substance spreading out underneath the skin. Picking up the vase that Doris says was in her father's hand when he fell, he approaches the lawyer who has arrived as he says to discuss a business matter with the unfortunate master of the house. Elwell registers a horror of the vase that arouses all of Grant's suspicions.

The next day he does some sleuthing on his own account. Denied admittance to the lawyer's office, he climbs across an "I" beam and so gains admittance through a rear window. Among the lawyer's papers he finds the address of the antique dealer. She is arrested and confesses that poisoned needless were concealed within the vase sold to Marsden Saltwell.

Elwell, trapped, admits that it was the "Spider's" idea to get Saltwell out of the way before he could change his will and thereby insure the money falling to whoever married Doris.

THE MYSTERY OF THE BURNING FREIGHT (An Episode of "A Daughter of Daring").—The cast: Helen (Helen Gibson); Victor Brown (L. T. Whitlock); Amos Brown (G. A. Williams); Jim Selby (George Routh). Story by Herman A. Blackman. Directed by Scott Sidney.

As a freight passes Lone Point, a young man falls from the brake rods. Helen, the operator, helps him into the station. The stranger reads the headlines of a newspaper lying on the desk. Relieved at not finding the item he had expected he turns to thank Helen for her kindness, saying: "My name is Victor Brown. Can you help me secure a position?" The scene shifts to the ward of a hospital in a city several miles distant from Lone Point. A nurse is restraining a patient who in his delirium keeps repeating the name "Victor Brown! Victor Brown!"

Time passes and Brown, thanks to Helen, is holding a job as fireman on the local freight One day when Helen and Brown, off duty, are cantering along the road a shot rings out and Brown pitches off his horse to the roadway. Thanks to a gunmetal cigarette case, Brown is uninjured and he tells his story to Helen. The man who shot him must have been Jim Selby, a gambler, smarting for revenge over a knockdown at Brown's hands. In falling Selby struck his head on the pavement, rendering him unconscious. Thinking he had killed him Brown fled. Sympathizing with Brown, but believing that he should explain matters to his worried father, Helen telegraphs Amos Brown to come to Lone Point.

The next day Selby and two hired thugs board the local freight. One of the thugs stays in a coal car while Selby and his confederate work their way over the tender into the engine cab, pitch the engineer out bodily and subdue Brown. After cutting the train just back of the coal car and running ahead for a mile or so, they stop the engine and tie Brown to the pilot. Then they open the throttle and leap off. As the engine and its few cars gather momentum a wisp of smoke curls upward. A cigarette stub has set off the refuse strewn on the floor of the car.

Helen hears about the runaway and leaping on a horse she rides down the track to prevent the almost certain destruction of the Special bearing Amos Brown to Lone Point. As the freight whizzes past her she leans out from her saddle and grasps the ladder of the last box car. Crossing this the wall of flame confronts her. By lassoing the brake rod of the box car ahead of the fire trap she has provided a perilous way of crossing, but it calls for superhuman nerve to accomplish the feat. However, she does it and reaches the engine in time to close the throttle, throw on the air and bring it to a stop within inches of the oncoming special. There is a happy reunion between father and son in which Helen joins.

RED FEATHER.

MR. DOLAN OF NEW YORK—(Five parts—April 9).—The cast: Jimmy Dolan (Jack Mulhall); Thomas Jefferson Jones (Noble Johnson); Alicia (Julia Ray); Count Conrad (Al. McQuarrie); The King (Harry Mann); Prince Frederick (Ernest Shields); Mlle. D'Orsay (Grace Maclean); "Spider" Flynn (Francis MacDonald). Written by Fred Myton. Produced by Raymond Wells.

Jimmy Dolan has just been defeated in a fight with "Spider" Flynn. Jones, Dolan's trainer, had bet their whole bank role on the battle.

Twenty-four hours from Paris, in the little principality of Konigstadt, lived a king and his ward, Countess Alicia, a beautiful girl, was courted by Count Conrad, the King's nephew.

Prince Frederick was to pay the King a visit, and the old King planned to wed him to Alicia.

Count Conrad gets a message from the Prince asking him to come to a certain cafe. Conrad finds Frederick in company with a Mlle. D'Orsay. He begs Conrad to say he is stricken with scarlet fever. The Count consents, but plans to be revenged on Alicia.

Jones and Jimmy enter the cafe. The Count calls Jimmy to his table, offers him twenty thousand francs to impersonate Prince Frederick, gain Alicia's consent to marriage and thus humiliate her. Urged by Jones, Jimmy accepts, and Conrad begins to teach him courtly manners. Jones is to play the role of an Arabian bodyguard.

Jimmy and Jones are presented to the King and to Alicia., Jimmy and Alicia are promptly interested in each other.

Some days later, Jones and Jimmy read in the newspaper about "Spider" Flynn's being the champion of all Europe and are indignant. He sends Flynn an insulting message, challenging him to another battle, and Flynn immediately accepts.

The King decides to call on Jimmy informally, and finds Jones and his friend boxing. The King takes up boxing and has a gymnasium built.

Prince Frederick and Mlle. D'Orsay quarrel. He arrives at Konigstadt the evening of a dance given in honor of Jimmy. Jones sees him at the hotel, and with Jimmy's help ties him in a chair. The Prince escapes and tells the King of the outrage.

The big fight is on between Jimmy and "Spider" Flynn. A great crowd has gathered, and among them the King, Alicia and the Prince. Jimmy defeats Flynn and the King is one of the first to congratulate him. The King looks from Alicia to Jimmy, saying there is a Count's title vacant in Konigstadt and that he hasn't had a good boxing match since Jimmy left.

LAEMMLE.

THE SILENT PRISONER (April 12.).—Grace's father, a smuggler, is killed in a fight with revenue officers. Grace engages her lover as the skipper of their ship. While on board they have a disagreement in regard to smuggling. As her lover is not a smuggler, he disapproves of it, and decides to take the ship to shore. Upon reaching shore he is taken in custody by a revenue officer and put into jail. He is forced to divulge the secrets of the smugglers, or whatever he knows about them.

The revenue officers set out after Grace. John makes his escape from the jail and in a motor-boat goes to warn Grace. Upon his arrival he is informed that the smugglers have captured a daughter of one of the revenue men in vengeance for the killing of her father. The officers reach the boat, and Revenue Officer Hardin is surprised to see his daughter a captive. John is holding a gun at her head and tells the revenue officer if he will let Grace go he can take his daughter with him. If he doesn't he will shoot his daughter. The officer agrees to let Grace go free.

RING RIVALS (April 11).—The cast: Dan, the Irish Terror (Dan Russell); Battling Bull (Dick Smith); Hot Dog Hattie (Gladys Roach).

Dan, the Irish Terror, is attracted by the charms of Hot Dog Hattie, but she does not care for him, as her affections are set upon Battling Bull. Both are members of the Stock Yards Athletic Club, and Dan sends Bull a challenge, which is accepted.

Dan decides to get a line on Bull's work. He goes to his training quarters, climbs up on a box and peeps through the transom. What he sees there disconcerts him so much that he kicks the box away from under him. The Bull sees him and shuts the transom on his fingers. But Dan escapes.

The day of the fight arrives. Dan has arranged for some dirty work, which fails to operate against Bull, and Dan is knocked out. Dan walks away from the ring, and takes the gate receipts. He takes them to Hattie, who shuts her up in her own hot-dog booth, and pushes it off down the steep grade of the street. He clambers on top of it and dresses himself there. The booth falls over a bank, and Dan rescues Hattie from the ruins. They are chased, but he manages to board a Western-bound train with her. Bull finds a lone hot dog which tells him of her fate.

Out West, Dan's prowess soon makes him master of the town. Hattie still dreams of Bull, and when he arrives in town in the guise of a tramp she recognizes him. Bull challenges Dan to another fight. Hattie disguises herself as a cow-puncher in order to be present. She pours glue on the seat in Dan's corner, and revives Bull with dope when he threatens to collapse. Dan is knocked out of the ring and chased down the street, while Hattie and Bull fall into each other's arms.

BIG U.

THE BUGLER (April 11).—Milton, the fort bugler, has fallen into bad habits, for which he is court-martialed and driven out of the army. In the guise of a tramp he wanders about the plains. While seeking shelter with Indians he overhears them plan to massacre the garrison. He makes his way out of the Indian camp, and when he arrives near the fort he picks up the bugle and blows the call on it, whereby he warns the garrison of the danger. The garrison is saved by the mysterious call.

Milton is captured by the Indians, who tie him to a horse. He is discovered by the soldiers, who recognize the former bugler, and now know the cause for the mysterious bugle call.

THE DESERT GHOST (April 12).—The cast: Ben (Neal Hart); Jacobs (G. Raymond Nye); Smyth (Tom Grimes). Story by E. B. Lewis. Produced by George Marshall.

The country has been terrorized by the depredations of a robber, called the "Desert Ghost." Ben is respected by his neighbors, who little suspect that he is the Desert Ghost. One day a rancher brings Mr. Jacobs to his hut and explains to Ben that the visitor intends buying a ranch. Ben offers to share his cabin with the stranger. Jacobs is a secret agent sent by a foreign power to secure maps of the surrounding country. The government has been advised of this mission and Smyth, a Secret Service man, has been sent to frustrate his plans.

One day, as Jacobs is left alone in the cabin, Ben's dog attracts his attention to a trap-door, and Jacobs, investigating, finds loot which Ben has secured after a recent raid. While he is examining it Ben returns. Jacobs confesses that he is a well-known character of the under-world, and the two decide to become pals.

Shortly after, Jacobs receives a telegram warning him of the advent of Smyth. He tells Ben that it is a message from a pal with the information that a rich chap will be on the stage that night. Each decides to hold up the stage for his own purpose. Ben arrives just as Jacobs is about to hang Smyth, with the aid of his spy, who was on the stage. The true mission of Jacobs is discovered and Ben, who is fatally wounded, has the satisfaction of knowing that the map will not fall into the hands of the foreign government.

VICTOR.

HIS FAMILY TREE (April 10).—The cast: Harmon Hicks (Milton Sims); Charmion (Eileen Sedgwick); Hank (Ralph MacComas); I. M. Bunk (Charles Hacfelt). Written by Tom Gibson. Produced by Allen Curtis.

Harmon Hicks was enthusiastic about ancestor. He lived in a small country town, and Hank was in love with his daughter Charmion. Hicks received a note from Professor I. M. Bunk, saying that Harmon was descended from royalty. Harmon and Charmion began to cultivate aristocratic airs.

I. M. Bunk arrived in the village. Hicks was dressed up like the Lord Mayor of London and Charmion was in all her silks and laces. Bunk was instantly smitten with Charmion's looks. Charmion told Bunk that he must bring her a dog with a blue-blooded pedigree.

After making a fictitious chart, Bunk went to find a dog. Hank climbed through the window into his room at the hotel and there filled out a chart to suit himself.

Hicks was delighted with his pedigree and immediately invited the neighbors. Hank exchanged the chart tacked on the wall for the one he had made. The neighbors began to snicker. Hicks found out the substitution and threw Bunk out of the house.

STOP YOUR SKIDDING (April 13).—Goode and Sterling are rivals for the hand of the same girl, and Sterling makes every effort to spoil his rival's chances of winning the automobile race. He steals Goode's last tire. He sprinkles the course so that Goode's machine will skid. However, Goode covers the distance without much interference, while all the other racers fall into the trap and are disabled.

After the race is over and Goode receives the prize Gertrude gets into the machine and they ride away, while Sterling gives it up as a tough job.

NESTOR.

UNDER THE BED (April 9).—The cast: Lee, the Snitch (Lee Moran); His Pal (Harry Nolan); Eddie (Eddie Lyons); Edith (Edith Roberts); Father (Fred Gamble); Mother (Mrs. Witting). Scenario by C. B. Hoadley. Produced by Louis Chaudet.

There is to be a reception to announce the engagement of Edward Lyons and Edith Roberts, when the girl will wear the valuable necklace given to her by her fiance. Lee, the Snitch and his pal frame up a plan to get the necklace. Eddie is still asleep, and the butler is sent to wake him.

Eddie brought Lee home with him and now Lee informs him that he struck a man while drunk, killing him, and that they brought him to the house, intending to bury the body that night. Eddie sees the feet of the dead man under the bed and is terrified; he has to go down to the reception and leaves Lee to watch the body.

Eddie keeps rushing to his room and always finds Lee watching the man under the bed. While he is away, Lee snoops around, picking the pockets of all the guests. Edith thinks Eddie has taken the things for a joke, but finally becomes angry and threatens to expose him.

A detective is sent for; Eddie becomes so nervous that he frantically confesses he "did it." They go to his bedroom just in time to catch the two crooks, whom the detective recognizes. Eddie is overcome with joy to know he has not killed a man.

JOKER.

THE CARELESS COP (April 14).—The cast: Chief Black (R. A. Caven); His Daughter (Lillian Peacock); "Chief Cook and Bottle Washer" (Gale Henry); "Hard Boiled" Harold (Milburn Moranti); Officer 41144 (William Francy).

Chief Black and his daughter read a newspaper article which says that the Chief is no good; there are many hold-ups and robberies being perpetrated and no one is caught. When Officer 41144, a recruit, hurriedly enters to tell the Chief there is a dead cat on Main Street Gale takes him to the kitchen, and feeds him generously.

"Hard Boiled" Harold and an accomplice go about in a truck stealing. Officer 41144 meets Harold just after he has slugged a man and is having trouble with the engine. The officer offers his assistance. They all go to a pawnshop where all the loot is left. The Chief's daughter, dressed as a cop, approaches; the officer arrests her for impersonating a policeman and takes her to the station, where the Chief, enraged by his stupidity, kicks him out.

He and Harold go to the Chief house, where Gale tries to interfere with their taking all the silverware. The daughter enters and the two women assist the officer. But then some of the stolen goods fall out of the cop's uniform and the Chief orders him arrested.

GOLD SEAL.

HAIR-TRIGGER BURK (Three Parts)—April 10).—The cast: Burk (Harry Carey); The Kid (Teddy Brooks); The "Vamp" (Claire Du Brey); Bill (Vesta Pegg); Sheriff (Bill Gettinger). Written by Eugene B. Lewis. Produced by F. A. Kelsey.

Burk and his gang have just robbed the stage. They are pursued by the sheriff and his posse. Bill is wounded and Burk stops for him. They escape down the stream, and the sheriff loses the tracks. Bill is fatally hurt, but Burk and his men do all in their power to help him. They arrive at a small shack and lay him on the bunk. Not long afterward a young fellow approaches the shack, saying he is looking for his father, Bill Simmons. He is led to the bedside of the dying man, who implores Burk not to let his son know what sort of man his father really is. Bill dies after having extracted a promise from Burk that he will care for the kid.

Burk and the Kid start to a distant mining camp. The Kid reads a letter from his father about the Daisy May Mine, which his father seems to own. He asks Burk about it, and Burk evades the question, saying that the mine has been "pinched out."

They arrive at the mining camp and there the "Desert Vampire" becomes interested in the Kid. Burk refuses to drink or let the Kid drink. The "Vamp" sneers at him and threatens to shoot him, but he ignores her. The Kid is attracted, and when he has the chance, drinks and dances with her. He later dresses and goes down to the gambling hall while Burk is asleep. Burk wakes and goes after him; he gets the horses and they set out again.

Burk and the Kid are prospecting, but the Kid dreams of the "Vamp," and decides to return to her. Burk is unaware of this and continues his work. The Kid is welcomed by the woman and he meets Bob Hancock, the owner of the Daisy May Mine. The Kid becomes suspicious. Finding that Hancock bought it, he quickly rides back to Burk and accuses him of selling the mine and keeping the money. Burk, heartsick, brings forth two bags of stolen gold, telling the Kid that this is all they ever got out of the mine. The Kid hastens back to the "Vamp."

The "Vamp" persuades the Kid to let her take care of the money, promising to go East with him. Then she tells Bob Hancock of the gold and the sheriff is summoned. The Kid refuses to admit that he has the loot stolen from the stage, but says it is from the sale of the Daisy May Mine. They laugh at him. Burk arrives at the saloon unseen. He draws his revolvers, and, pulling the "Vamp" from her hiding place behind a door, forces her to get the gold. He gives it to Bob, and, with the help of the Kid, who keeps the crowd away, backs to the door. The two of them jump quickly onto their horses and ride away, the sheriff and the men firing after them.

BISON.

THE KIDNAPPED BRIDE (Two Parts—April 14).—The cast: Richard Harding (E. N. Wallack); Ruth, as a child (Lois White); Ruth, grown older (Marie Walcamp); Jack Morgan (Lee Hill); Richard Harding, Jr., (L. C. Shumway); Rancher Martin (Marc Fenton). Written by Wright Roberts. Produced by Henry McRae.

Ruth, a child of three, is taken with her little brother to the beach. She strays away, follows a dog into a boat, and is cast ashore on an island, where there are extensive sheep ranches. A gang of outlaws make their headquarters there, and take the child to their cave. They find her picture pinned into her sash. The outlaws set out for the mainland, except one, who remains to take care of the child. The Hardings think that she is drowned. Ranchman Martin heads a party to round up the outlaws. The one who remained is shot and killed, and Martin finds Ruth and takes her home to his wife.

Fifteen years pass. Martin has legally adopted Ruth, and she thinks herself his daughter. She loves Jack Morgan, the son of a neighboring rancher, who has incurred the dislike of Martin, who warns the young man several times to stay away from his child, but the two meet frequently in secret.

Martin has struck oil on his property and has interested some capitalists, of whom Harding is one. Harding comes to investigate the strike, accompanied by his son, Richard, a rather irresponsible young man. He makes Martin an offer, which Martin at first does not care to accept. The Hardings decide to stay several days and give him time to change his mind.

Richard sees Ruth and is struck by her beauty. But Ruth distrusts him. At the end of a week Harding has persuaded Martin to sell, and to accompany him to the city to conclude the deal. Martin insists upon Ruth's going, too, as he has found her with Jack and wants to break up the intimacy. She sends word to Jack that she is being taken to the city against her will.

Jack thinks that she is to be forced into a marriage with young Harding. He suggests that he and the boys hold up the special and rescue Ruth. They carry out their plan, and Ruth and Jack decide to be married at once. Martin, with Harding and his son, determine to get Jack, and they return to the ranch. Jack and Ruth, with the cowboys, arrive, and the marriage is disclosed. Martin is furious and tells Jack that Ruth is not his daughter and never was, that she is the child of a sheep-stealing outlaw. He asks his wife to bring the picture that was found on her. Harding recognizes it as his lost child. He claims Ruth as his daughter, and announces to Martin that he will double the price of the oil land and then give it to Jack for a wedding present.

THE VOICE ON THE WIRE (Episode No. 5, "The Spectral Hand"—Two Parts—April 15).—The cast: John Shirley (Ben Wilson); "Red" Warren (Francis McDonald); Capt. Cronin (Howard Crampton); John Carns (Frank McQuarrie); Dr. Renolds (Joe Gerard); Polly Marion (Neva Gerber).

After the discovery of the mysterious death of John Vance, Shirley, Cronin and several other men are sitting at the breakfast table when John Carns is announced and asks to see Vance. Upon seeing the corpse of his friend, Carns mutters "Paris! Paris! Paris!"

By the list of persons condemned by the "Voice," Shirley sees that John Carns' name follows that of Vance. He determines to keep Carns in his own home to try to prevent further disaster.

Two detectives are sent to "Red" Warren's home, but find no one there. They enter and are puzzling over the phone being disconnected when, but a few minutes before Shirley was called over this instrument, when Warren, his hunchback and a crook, taking them by surprise, make them prisoners.

Shirley becomes alarmed because of the non-appearance of the two men and sends Cronin after them. Arriving at "Red's" before he can can be seized, Cronin, too, is taken prisoner.

Warren receives a mysterious message over the phone which informs him that Carns must be "gotten" no matter what it costs, even though Shirley is keeping him in his own home.

At midnight Shirley, Dr. Renolds and a detective are still guarding Carns. Each man holds a revolver in readiness for any emergency that may arise.

Slinking around the house of Shirley are "Red" and his accomplices. In spite of all their strategy and mysteriousness they are as yet unable to get Carns.

THE EYES IN THE DARK (Two Parts—April 15).—Gerald Mortimer, a tourist in the Far East, steals a ruby from a temple. He sails for New York. Mortimer is troubled with his heart and, in addition, is frightened by the fact that he is being followed by two Orientals. An evening later he dies in his deck-chair after giving the ruby to Watson, a friend.

Watson arrives in New York. He visits his sweetheart, Margaret, and shows her the stone, telling of his adventure. As he talks, he observes two eyes fastened upon him. He leaves immediately.

Arriving home, he finds his butler transfixed with terror. Unable to get an explanation, he retires to his room. The door opens; he sees two eyes looking at him from the foot of the bed; he fires, but the eyes remain. Watson turns on the lights; no one is present. The next morning Watson tells two friends who call about the ruby. One of them—Prince—determines to get the ruby for himself.

An evening later Watson, his sweetheart and Prince go to the cafe. Margaret wears the ruby. During the evening the lights are suddenly turned off. When the lights are turned on, Margaret has disappeared along with the ruby.

Meantime the Orientals get Margaret to their room. To their astonishment the ruby is not on her breast. Where it lay is a red mark. They then force her to telephone to Watson, asking him to come to her assistance. Watson is trapped. Both prisoners assert they know nothing of the ruby.

The Orientals then use their occult power. A vision is presented and in it they see one of the friends—Prince—snatching the ruby as the lights go off in the cafe. The Oriental priests visit Prince in his home and after a fight manage to take the stone from him. They then return to their rooms. Watson, in the meantime, manages to 'phone the police. However, the priests escape with the ruby. Watson and Margaret are set free. The last scene shows a vision of the temple and the ruby being restored.

PERILS OF THE SECRET SERVICE (Episode No. 6, "The Signet Ring"—Two Parts—April 13).—The cast: Alida Astaire (Warda Lamont); Yorke Norroy (Kingsley Benedict); Huntley (Jay Belasco); Von Zyl (Fred Harrington); Peyton Carr (Willard Wayne). Written and produced by George Bronson Howard.

Peyton Carr, a young naval officer, and the inventor of the Carr submarine, which is expected to revolutionize undersea warfare, has committed suicide, because of his love for Alida Astaire, the most dangerous woman in Europe. The plans of Carr's invention have been stolen from his room by Alida and she sells them to the Saxonians.

Yorke Norroy, Chief of American Secret Service Agents, is called on the case. Making believe to Alida that he is in love with her, he discovers her fear of being shot as a traitor because of the war, which has just broken out. He gives her a curious signet ring which he tells her will protect her anywhere among Englishmen. Later, he sends a message written in the Saxonian code to the Chief of the Saxonian spies, informing him that there will be a traitor at their meeting that night.

When it is dark, Norroy, Huntley and several men surround the house in which the meeting of the Saxonians is taking place. They break into the room and threaten to spare no one. Alida, not recognizing Norroy, because of his mask, sees on his finger a signet ring similar to the one she is wearing. She displays hers and begs for protection from Norroy, who allows her to leave the room. Then he confronts the Saxonians with "Have I proved there was a traitor among you?"

Alida rushes to Norroy's flat. He treats her coldly and taunts her with her affair with Peyton Carr and the other men. He leads her to the window, where she sees Von Zyl and his men crouched for their prey. She begs for mercy. He is at first cruel and hard, determined to show no mercy to her as she showed it to Peyton Carr, but at the last moment he weakens and allows her to leave through the back entrance. When she has left, full of hope, Norroy looks into the mirror and calls himself bad names for his clemency.

UNCLE JOHN'S MONEY (Two Parts—April 12).—The cast: John Holden (George Berrell); Nephew William (Malcolm Blevins); His Wife (Marjorie Ellison); Nephew James (Burton Law); His Wife (Linnie Gee). Scenario by Fred Myton. Produced by George Cochrane.

John Holden, a bachelor, is a man of considerable means. He has two nephews, William and James. He tells his friend Adams, president of the National Bank, that he intends going back East to get acquainted with his nephews. William is one of the officers of a brokerage concern. His wife is taken up with the smart set. James is a struggling young physician. He is married and has two children.

Uncle John writes William that he is contemplating a visit and requests him to notify James. He and his wife decide to keep the secret from James. John begins to see that things in William's house are not as they should be.

Mrs. Williams gives a tea in honor of her guest and her friends are shocked by his breezy way. Thinking it will increase her social standing, William's wife inserts a notice of the arrival of Uncle John. This comes to James' notice and he visits William's house, but is sent away by Mrs. William. William and his wife are quarreling one day and are overheard by Uncle John. To test William, he borrows money from him on several occasions and, going to a downtown saloon, is having a high time. One of William's friends phones him that his uncle is trying to drink up the town. William, deeply mortified, gets the old man home.

William wires the bank in which his uncle has had funds and learns that Uncle John has drawn out the small balance that he had carried. Uncle John is really sober but pretends to have delirium tremens. Doctor James arrives to take care of the patient. As soon as the old man appears rational, William orders him out of the house. James feels pity for the old man and offers him a place under his roof. Uncle John accepts. A short time later William is severely shocked when he learns that the trust company in which he is working will be run by James, who is managing the affairs of his millionaire Uncle John.

HER PRIMITIVE MAN (April 15).—The cast: Wadsworth (Jack Mulhall); Fay Reynolds (Myrtle Reeves); McNaughton (Harry Griffith); His Wife (Miss Mattox); Rance (Jean Hersholt). Scenario by Chas. J. Wilson, Jr. Produced by H. d'Elba.

Fay Reynolds, a landscape artist, receives an order from Wadsworth for a picture, bordering on the primitive. She goes to the mountains to find a subject. There with Rance, a lazy mountain fellow, as guide, she starts off in her search.

Wadsworth, recuperating from a nervous collapse, visits his father's friend of pioneer days. While chopping down a tree, he becomes aware of Fay and Rance. Fay, thinking him a mountaineer, offers him five dollars if he will pose.

Rance has wandered away and finds some whiskey. Fay suddenly looks up to confront a lion, crouched ready to spring upon her. Terrified, she rushes to the camp. Rance attacks her.

Wadsworth sees Fay and Rance struggling on top of a cliff. Rushing to them, he fights with the drunken fellow. Rance falls over the cliff. Fay discovers Wadsworth's identity and all ends happily.

BOOMER BILL GOES TO SEA (April 15—Cartoon Comedy).—They are short of hands on the "Mary Ellen." Boomer Bill is shanghaied and taken on board. He has a terrible time, as the trip is rough. He is put into the hold, where he thinks he will be safe.

ON THE STREETS OF INDIA (Dr. Dorsey Educational on Same Reel as Foregoing).—The cheapest thing in India is men. The average daily wage is five cents. Indian streets swarm with humanity, curious sights and odd vehicles. In the wedding processions everybody is represented but the bride. The barber carries on his trade in the street. And so does the blacksmith. Everything is washed in the river, and everybody bathes in public. For ten months in India there is no rain, so the land has to be irrigated. The same kind of wall sweep is used today as in the days of Buddha.

THE GYPSY PRINCE (April 12).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Hank (George George); Ophelia (Louise Horner). Written and produced by Milton H. Fahrney.

Jerry sees two footpads hide a wallet beneath some bushes and appropriates it after they depart. The money is sought by the police, who see Jerry with it. They arrest him, but by a ruse he escapes and rides off on one of the cop's horses.

Jerry arrives at a gypsy camp and is smitten with the daughter of the chief. Hank also loves the girl, who is known as "little sister." Hank wants to make away with Jerry, but the chief tells him to bide his time as he desires Jerry's horse, and has in mind trading his daughter, Ophelia, for the animal.

The trade is broached to Jerry, who, thinking by the trade he will get Ophelia, readily agrees. But when Ophelia is brought in Jerry wilts, jumps upon his horse, and rides hurriedly away, followed by Hank.

Hank reaches Jerry on a road overlooking a cliff. A fight follows and Jerry throws Hank over the cliff. Just as he thinks himself safe, Jerry is surprised by the appearance of other gypsies, who, to revenge Jerry's victory over Hank, pounce upon him and throw him over the precipice.

Meanwhile, Ophelia rushes to the scene, and seeing Jerry at the bottom of the cliff contrives a way to rescue him by throwing him a rope. Jerry grabs it and reaches a point of safety again. Hank follows the climb.

Ophelia attempts to make love to Jerry again, but Jerry has had enough of gypsies and rides off to the police station, where he returns the stolen money and the lost horse.

THE RAILROAD RAIDERS (Chapter 1—"Circumstantial Evidence" Two Parts—April 9).—The cast: Helen Holmes (Helen Holmes); David Holmes (Will Chapman); Morton Webb (Thomas G. Lingham); Wallace Burke, his assistant (Leo D. Maloney); Homer Frost (William Buhler); Roy Wilson, his secretary (William Brunton).

Receiving many complaints of thefts along the road, Homer Frost, general manager of the K. & W., makes a tour of inspection and catches the agent at Garden City in the act of stealing cases of canned goods. Steve Arnold, the agent, is arrested, but escapes and catches a freight headed for Deer's Head. David Holmes, assisted by his daughter, Helen Holmes, is station agent at Deer's Head. He receives a telegram saying seventeen thousand dollars will be sent on No. 7. As Steve Arnold loiters around the station at Deer's Head a gust of wind blows the telegram out of the office window and it lands at his feet, and he picks it up.

Thrown off the top of a train where he is stealing a ride out of Deer's Head, Arnold lands near a party of confidence men and becomes leader of the gang. The reading of the telegram coupled with the discovery that one of the gang closely resembles Holmes leads to their seizing Holmes and holding him in the back room while Masters dons his uniform. Even Helen did not notice the deception, and receiving the money from the train handed it to her supposed father. The gang escape with the money. Word is sent of the theft, and Frost arrives to investigate. Holmes is accused of the theft and sentenced to ten years imprisonment, although there was only circumstantial evidence to prove his guilt. Morton Webb, head of the K. & W. Claim Department, assures Holmes that he will look after Helen.

STRAND.

HER HERO (April 11).—The cast: Billie (Billie Rhodes); Jack (Jay Belasco).

Jack is going to call on Billie, with whom he is in love. He wears his chum's suit and leaves his wallet in his other clothes. In a hired car he takes Billie and her sister to a Country Club, where he discovers his loss. A thief snatches Billie's purse, and after a chase Jack gets the purse back. In desperation he takes out a bill intending to put it back later. They go in for tea, and Jack pays the waiter with the "borrowed" bill, when Billie looking in her purse exclaims that the thief stole a counterfeit bill she had been carrying.

Jack, terrorstricken, rushes the girls out, and the waiter and house detective pursue them. Jack's ears breaks down, and running back to see if he is followed the detective seizes him and takes him back to the club. The girls go on home, Billie paying for the car. Jack's chum finds the wallet and brings it to him at the club. Jack does not know how to explain matters, but decides to muss himself up and tell Billie he fought a band of ruffians to recover her note. He comes in limping, Billie believes the story and accepts Jack on the spot.

JOLTED JUSTICE (Two Parts—April 14).—The cast: Judge (Paddy McQuire); Judge's wife (Henrietta Thompson); Owner of the show (Larry Bowes); The Owner's Favorite (Jessie Perry); Old Fogies (Owen Evans and Harry Huckins).

A flirty judge and his wife, the president of the Purity League, are sojourning at a popular beach resort. While his wife is attending a meeting of the league the judge visits the tents of the diving girls and the Hula Hula dancers. The Purity League decides to arrest all the girls for wearing one piece bathing suits. They are brought before the judge, who gives them a suspended sentence and a wink.

While trying to get under the tent to watch the Hula Hula girls, the judge loses his trousers and has to don a Hula Hula skirt to hide his nakedness. The league arrests the Hula Hula girls, and the judge hurries to court, where his skirt is hidden behind the desk, but when he stands up as the prisoners are brought in his Hula Hula skirt is seen. He is disgraced by the Purity League.

MONMOUTH.

JIMMIE DALE, ALIAS THE GREY SEAL (Fourth Episode—"The Metzer Murder"—Two Parts—April 13).—Balked at their attempt to get rid of Marie La Salle the Crime Club contrives to get the papers that incriminate them in the matter of the murder of the girl's father and until Cornering Marie in a hotel, they are about to succeed in their work, when Jimmie Dale, the Grey Seal, saves her. Getting the girl home in safety, he arrives at his mansion in time to answer a telephone call from Carruthers, his friend and editor of a newspaper that has offered $10,000 for the capture of the Grey Seal. The message is that Jack Metzer, a stool pigeon, has been murdered and that a Grey Seal has been found on his forehead.

Jimmie is disturbed that anybody should soil the name of the Grey Seal with the crime of the murderer as being the Grey Seal, in order Carruthers as a cub reporter. An examination of the Grey Seal shows him that it bears a finger print—a sure sign that he did not place it there—as he is careful not to allow his fingers to touch the seals he attaches. He draws his conclusions and with a bit of shrewd detective work confirms his suspicion.

The next day, he requests the Captain of Police, who has discovered the crime, to come to his house for a sitting for a portrait, together with Carruthers. He then exhibits the results of his investigation by showing Carruthers that the Captain has put the blame on the murderer as being the Grey Seal, in order to get the reward offered for the fugitive. The Captain is given the choice of leaving the city or being sent to prison for twenty years. In conclusion it may be stated that the Captain occupied Berth 29 on the "Black Diamond" express going to New York that night.

MUTUAL STAR PRODUCTIONS.

MRS. BALFAME (Powell Producing Co.—Six parts—April 9).—The cast: Mrs. Balfame (Nance O'Neil); David Balfame (Frank Belcher); Dwight Rush (Robert Elliott); Alys Crumley (Agnes Eyre); Dr. Anna Steuer (Anna Raines); James Broderick (Alfred Hickman); Miss Austin (Grace Gordon); Sam Cummack (Aubrey Beattie); Frieda (Elsie Earle).

Mrs. Balfame is the social leader of the small town of Elsinore, and David Balfame, her husband, is the political leader—a drunken loutish man his wife has hated during their sixteen years of married life. While attending a club meeting Mrs. Balfame listens to a speech by Dr. Anna Steuer, her friend, stating that many of the women on the other side are glad to be rid of their beasts of husbands who made war possible. Later in her home Dr. Steuer shows Mrs. Balfame an untraceable poison. With these two facts in her mind, and urged on by a disgraceful scene at the Country Club caused by Mr. Balfame's drunkenness, Mrs. Balfame decides to kill her husband.

Meanwhile, Mr. Balfame has wandered into Old Dutch's saloon and insults the proprietor and his son, Conrad, and also arouses the ire of a tough young man who is dancing with a girl. Discovering that he must go to Albany on political business he phones Mrs. Balfame and asks her to fix him a bracer and pack his grip. She replies that a glass of lemonade and aromatic ammonia will be left on the table for him. Mr. Balfame, still drunk, then starts for home, followed by the young man from Old Dutch's. Mrs. Balfame make a glass of lemonade, putting in the poison, and places it on the table. Then, discovering a man lurking on the grounds, she takes a revolver and hurries out to scare him off.

Frieda, the maid of all work, sees Mrs. Balfame leave the house. As Balfame nears the house there is a shot and he falls. Mrs. Balfame rushes in and, still watched by Frieda, pours out the lemonade and rinses out the glass. On the testimony of Frieda and Conrad Mrs. Balfame is arrested, charged with her husband's death. Dwight Rush, a young lawyer who has long been in love with Mrs. Balfame, represents her. Mrs. Balfame does not love Rush, but promises to marry him if he obtains her freedom.

Rush, and through her jealousy of Mrs. Balfame tells of the conversation she overheard in which Dr. Steuer told Mrs. Balfame of the poison. Dr. Steuer is called as a witness, but is sick in a hospital, and from her dying bed makes a confession that she shot and killed Mr. Balfame because she could no longer see her dear friend abused by the brute. Rush finds his love for Mrs. Balfame has been diminishing as his interest in Alys is strengthened, but goes to claim Mrs. Balfame after the acquittal. Realizing the disparity in their ages, she sends him to seek happiness with Alys Crumley.

HIGH PLAY (American—Five parts—April 9).—The cast: John Sevier (William Russell); Marion Leonard (Francelia Billington); Tom Leonard (Ashton Dearholt); Elaine Morier (Lucille Young); Gerald Morier (Clarence Burton); Jim Hammond (Frank Thompson); Gautier Brooks (Edward Peil); James Collins (Robert Klein). Directed by Edward Sloman.

John Sevier, vice-president of the International Trust Company, is engaged to Elaine Morier, who, with her father, Gerald Morier, maintains a semi-fashionable gambling salon. Sevier interfered in a quarrel one night between Jim Hammond, a confederate secretly employed by Morier, and Tom Leonard, a young and wealthy habitue, whom, intoxicated, Sevier takes home, where he meets Marion, Tom's sister.

Late that night Jim Hammond goes to the apartments of Gautier Brooks, a wealthy young clubman. Brooks is being blackmailed by Hammond, who seems to have some mysterious hold over him, and Hammond, with a threat, leaves Brooks. At noon the next day the trust company closes its doors. Jim Collins, its president, who has been juggling too heavy a list of war stocks, is arrested. Within the hour the newspapers have extras containing a statement by John to the effect that every depositor will be paid at the sacrifice of his own personal fortune.

Elaine denounces John for this action and hands him back his ring. Marion and Tom congratulate him for the gallant stand he has taken, and Tom offers him the use of their fortune in case of need. John realizes his feeling for Elaine was only infatuation, and Marion learns John has ample funds to save the bank.

Next morning the bank opens its doors with John Sevier as its president, and James Collins, a broken man, is released to find refuge in the Sevier home. Elaine is consoled by her father, who plans to trap their quarry again. Two nights later John and Marion drop into the Plaza for supper, and there meet Elaine and her father. Morier feigned to have received an important call, and John is obliged to take Elaine home.

Meanwhile, Morier takes a taxi and arrives home in time to take a position in the shadows of the side street, where he can command his daughter's window. John takes Elaine to the door and consents to come in a moment. Elaine, dismissing the butler, begins a plea for forgiveness. John wavers, and Elaine, pretending she will kill herself, snatches a revolver and starts upstairs. John hurries after her. Meanwhile, Jim Hammond returns to Morier's salon, where he and Tom Leonard, having repaired to the library, begin their quarrel all over again. The butler overhears the quarrel.

John, following Elaine to her room, wrests the revolver from her. She throws herself on the bed, pretending to weep, and Morier knocks on the door. Elaine forces John into the adjoining room and admits her father. John makes up his mind quickly, opens the window onto a fire escape, from where he discovers Gautier Brooks peering into the library where Hammond and Leonard are still quarreling, and see Brooks raise his revolver and shoot Hammond, dropping the revolver into the room and leaping from the porch, John pursuing in his car. Brooks stops his car in front of his apartment and enters, John following him a moment later. A traffic policeman has taken his number. When confronted by John, Brooks confesses, but only laughs when John tells him he is going to turn him over to the police, telling him he will ruin Elaine's reputation, as he saw him leaving her room by the fire escape.

Arriving home he finds Marion there, whose pleas greatly affect him. Unable, however, to sacrifice a woman's honor, he again starts for Brooks' apartment, determined to get a confession from him, but learns he has gone to the club. John overhears a policeman endeavoring to serve a summons on Brooks for speeding, and, telling him he is at the club, takes him along. At the club a page is sent for Brooks, who, seeing John and an officer, infers John has been to the police, and goes into the writing room, and, writing a full confession, kills himself while John reads the confession. He has made the highest play, and won.

THE DEVIL'S ASSISTANT (Pollard Picture Plays—Five Parts—April 2).—The cast: Marta (Margarita Fischer); Dr. Lorenz (Monroe Salisbury); Marion Dane (Kathleen Kirkham); John Lane (Jack Mowrer); Butler (Joseph Harris).

When Marta marries John Lane, Dr. Lorenz, a former suitor, determines to take her away from her husband. A year later John and Marta's happiness over an expected event is turned to grief, for the child dies and Marta suffers intensely. Dr. Lorenz attends her and administers dope, until she becomes a confirmed "fiend." Marion, who loved John, conspires with the doctor, pretending to be Marta's friend, and attempts to win John. Driven desperate by her husband's apparent neglect of her, and craving the "dope" which the doctor withholds, she leaves with Lorenz. Taking refuge from the storm in a hut, the doctor attempts to take advantage of the situation, but lighting strikes the hut and they are buried in the ruins. The doctor is killed, but Marta is saved from the ruins by John and they start life anew.

AN ARTIST'S INTRIGUE (April 4).—Absorbed in his painting, Robert Gainsworthy neglects his wife. Jack Sanders, Robert's cousin, visits them and becomes infatuated with the heartsick wife, but Gainsworthy did not see. The expression in the face of his picture not satisfying him, and observing his wife and Sanders together, he plans to accuse her of unfaithfulness, note the expression on her face and paint that expression into his picture. He did so. The innocent wife, persuaded by Sanders to elope until Robert should come to himself, leaves a note for Robert. The picture completed, he goes to tell his wife of his success—finds the note—and his pleasure of success is turned to bitterness. The artist reclaims his wife from the unworthy Sanders—both happy in a new and better understanding.

WHY BEN BOLTED (Two Parts—April 7).—Ben and Laurie are tramps, but unknown to Ben, Laurie makes counterfeit money for his needs. The Auto King receives a package from his sweetheart labeled "Woodcocks." Opening the package he discovers a box of wooden cocks such as are used on beer kegs. He then sees it is an "April Fool" joke. Meanwhile, Laurie buys an auto from Currier, giving him bad bills. Ben applies for a job at Currier's place, who hires him to get into a box, on which is painted "Loof Lirpa." The box is left upside down at Gypsy's house, with Ben on his head. He is liberated by the maid, who falls in love with him.

Ben calls up Laurie, who hurries to the house. Ben tells Laurie that if he will hide in the box he will meet a beautiful heiress, and Laurie gets in the box. Ben puts on some of the maid's clothes and poses as her sister. Gypsy returns, discovers Laurie, who makes a hit with her, and they all repair to a swell cafe. The wine flows freely, and becoming too boisterous, they are thrown out. Currier discovering the money is bad, Ben and Laurie are pinched, Gypsy blaming Currier, saying it is his fault for sending her a "Loof Lirpa." He holds a mirror in front of the words on the box and Gypsy reads "April Fool," realizes the joke is on her, and falls in Currier's arms.

TOURS AROUND THE WORLD NO. 23 (April 10).—This issue of "Tours Around the World" has a number of entertaining views of Paris Parks and Gardens. There is the dainty little Monceau Park, in the aristocratic section, once the property of King Louis Philippe. Then come the gardens of the Luxembourg, a beautiful memory to those who know Paris, the Champs Elysees, and the Bois de Boulogne, all historic breathing spaces. The "Bois" covers an area of 1,200 acres. There are also pictures of the Trocadero Gardens, the natural park of Buttes-Chaumont and the Bois de Vincennes.

Lisbon, capital of Portugal, lends itself admirably to pictorial representation. It is built an Arabian on low hills backed by the mountains of Cintra, extending along the Tagus river. The picture of the city from the river is magnificent. The municipal palace and the beautiful Dom Luiz garden are prominent among the scenes as are the celebrated Avenida da Liberdade which with its decorations of tiles parallels Lisbon in one of the finest in the world. Lisbon's jewelers and goldsmiths are among the most expert in Europe, their street the Rua Aurea being shown in this section of the reel.

The Dutch town of Volendam is the third section in this issue of "Reel Life." It is a seaside village on the Zuider Zee. Its locks, canals, fishing boats and shops are shown.

REEL LIFE NO. 50 (April 12).—The manner in which young girls are developed into aesthetic dancers by Ruth St. Denis at her California home is portrayed in this issue of "Reel Life." Their freedom of development as healthy young nymphs without the encumbering garb of the twentieth century is particularly appealing. The bacchanal on the beach at "Denishawn" is more wonderful than any stage picture, since it has the interesting ocean for its background.

"Wine Making in France" shows the gathering of the grapes by men and women, the emptying of the baskets into the vats of the wine press, the compression, the flowing of the pure juice into the fermenting vats, and the final stoarge.

"A Flying Torpedo" is an animated drawing which shows just how a torpedo can be launched against a ship from an aeroplane. This is one of the series of animated pictures for which the Gaumont company is famous, pictures of machines and processes that cannot be caught for the screen by the camera.

"Indian Basketry" takes the spectator to the land of the Hopi Indians in the southwest. Here the natives of this tribe in Arizona and New Mexico are seen as they gather the reeds, assort them by colors and sizes, and start to weave their baskets. A number of handsome ceremonial baskets are pictured.

What will cause a great deal of discussion and be the source of a great deal of amusement patterned after the screen explanation is that section of this reel called "A Novel Home Entertainment." It explains how to pass a pleasant hour making apt phrases by using a person's initials as the initials of words descriptive of the person.

THE ADVENTURES OF SHORTY HAMILTON (Episode No. 12—"Shorty Solves a Wireless Mystery"—Two Parts—April 2).—This episode involves Shorty Hamilton in the solution of the mysteries of wireless messages sent out to foreign submarines giving information in regard to the sailing of vessels from American ports.

A rescue from drowning of the daughter of Hans Wagner, a pianist who is supposed to be an invalid, being wheeled about in an invalid chair, results in the discovery by the Jap servant of the supposed pianist of a secret service badge on Shorty's clothes as he hangs them up to dry after the rescue. When Shorty goes out to the clothes line to rescue his badge, he receives a shock from the clothes line, which is of wire, and his investigations disclose to his unerring sleuth mind that the wire is connected with the piano in Wagner's room where he is supposed to be practicing, but in reality is sending wireless messages from the piano, the key of G being the key that is used for sending the messages.

Shorty goes to the government wireless operator to report what he has discovered. The operator tells him of a message sent in the afternoon asking the crew to come ashore and capture the secret service detectives. Shorty learns that Anita is missing, and realizes that she has been made a prisoner on the yacht. Telling the wireless man to send to the nearest police station for aid, Shorty swims out to the yacht to rescue Anita.

The submarines are seen rising to the surface, receiving the messages and then submerging. Shorty reaches the yacht, finds Anita locked in a stateroom and swims ashore with her, where he finds that the police have captured the boat with the yacht's crew who have returned to look for Shorty. Wagner and the Jap are arrested, and all ends happily with the confiscation of the wireless apparatus.

THE ADVENTURES OF SHORTY HAMILTON (Episode No. 13—"Shorty Reduces the High Cost of Living"—Two Parts—April 9).—Shorty and the Chinese cook raise potatoes on Archibald Ranch in anticipation of a rising market. A freak potato is fixed up by the boys to look like a Chinese god and placed where the Chinese cook will find it. Enraged he throws it into a bag of potatoes. Shorty is selling to Pete Boley, the commission merchant. Shorty goes to Los Angeles to confer with Miss Ellen Drake, of the Secret Service, who is assisting the Mayor in reducing the high cost of living. The people are rioting over the high prices, and the Mayor is trying to find out where potatoes are being held.

While chatting with a grocer, Shorty obtains a clew when he notices the Chinese god potato among those the grocer bought from Jenkins, the Potato King. Meanwhile Boley phones Shorty that he has secreted a large consignment of potatoes. Shorty secretly removes the potatoes and puts them on the municipal market. The Potato King learns of the potatoes being sold at cost, and in order to keep the corner buys them in.

Later learning of Shorty's trick Jenkins plans to lure him to the warehouse and make way with him. Shorty plans a supposed call from the Mayor, and Pete Boley tries to capture him. A fight follows, and Shorty is almost overpowered when the police arrive. Jenkins and his men are taken into custody, and the corner in potatoes broken.

THE POWER OF DECISION (Rolfe Photoplays, Inc.—Five Parts—April 9).—The cast: Margot (Frances Nelson); Austin Bland (Richard Tucker); Wood Harding (John Davidson); Mrs. Wood Harding (Sally Crute); Mrs. Hall (Mary Asquith); The Old Artist (Fuller Mellish); The Butler (Hugh Jeffrey). Scenario by June Mathis. Directed by John W. Noble.

Wood Harding, the illustrator, first sees Margot, the model, at a sale of the effects of a poor old artist who befriended her. The auctioneer is belittling the old man's work when Margot rushes upon the platform and tells how kind he has been to her. Harding buys the picture that has been ridiculed, and makes her a present of it.

From that time on she poses only for him, and the two fall in love. Harding has a wife from whom he has been separated for some time, but he marries Margot without saying anything about her. The real Mrs. Harding returns, and threatens to have her husband arrested for bigamy. To save the man she loves Margot denies that she has been married to him.

The girl goes to a distant city and poses for Mrs. Hall, a miniature painter. Mrs. Hall introduces her to Austin Bland, a novelist, who falls in love with her and asks her to marry him. She tells him frankly that she already has given all the love she possesses to another man. Bland says he will be content if she will only marry him, and she does so.

Bland is writing a novel called "The Power of Decision." Its central theme is that "Every mortal has within himself the God-given power of decision." By his own decision each man must act for himself in every crisis.

The publishers have engaged Wood Harding to illustrate Bland's book. It is the author's wish that his wife pose as the heroine, and Harding comes to visit at the Bland residence. Neither Margot nor Harding gives a sign of recognition on meeting, but Harding tries to exert his old spell over her. Her husband's book seems to have a special meaning for her. One paragraph in particular fascinates her: "This was the turning point in her life. The choice between these two men, one bound to her by the holy sanctity of the marriage vow, the other calling from out the darkness of the past. Which road? What lies beyond? The power of decision rests with her."

Gordon, the butler, surprises Harding in the act of attempting to embrace Margot, and later when she discovers him trying to open the safe he prevents her from calling the police, threatening to expose her to her husband. Bland learns the truth through Mrs. Harding, who sees Margot's picture in an announcement of the new novel.

Bland has been asked by his publishers to take a trip with an arctic explorer, to write a series of articles. He accepts. Harding has been urging Margot to go away with him and she cannot come to a decision. She promises to signal him by switching the library lights on and off when she has made up her mind.

Bland leaves in his car for the railroad station, but the machine breaks down and he misses his train. Returning, he sees Harding across the street watching the library windows, and then the lights flash off and on. He goes into the house and confronts Margot, who tells him she has been tempted to go away with Harding, but has finally come to a realization of her love for her husband and has summoned Harding to tell him so. Bland does not believe her. The curtains at the French window move and Bland fires at them.

A man falls, enveloped in the curtains. Margot urges her husband to escape, saying she will take the blame. Bland finds he has shot not Harding, but the butler, Gordon, who has come to attempt robbery. Harding has hurried away on hearing the shot. Margot finally makes her husband realize that, like his heroine, she has chosen the right road and has exercised her God-given power of decision.

THE GREAT SECRET (Chapter XIV—The Escape—Two Parts—April 9).—Barricaded in a room of the Clarke home, where he is defending Beverly and her mother, Strong has a narrow escape from death. He is standing at the door when the hirelings of The Secret Seven shoot through it and the bullets graze him. The door is being battered down when a lookout gives warning that the police are coming and the band flees. Strong manages to capture the butler.

While Strong, Beverly and her mother are being rescued, Wee See, the clubman's Chinese valet, is working on a mysterious phase of "The Great Secret." He visits the Great Master and hands him a slip of paper. This paper contains a map of a mine in the Klondike. Having known Zulph in the Klondike, The Great Master realizes that the map is of the utmost importance. Wee See tells him Zulph seemed to treasure the paper more than anything else among the securities. The Great Master decides to test Zulph.

Wee See leaves the room and soon thereafter Zulph enters. Then Wee See returns and apparently by accident drops the map. Zulph picks up the paper, and when he sees what it is shows great elation. Making a hurried excuse, he departs with the paper. When Zulph reaches his quarters he has a bad case of "nerves," and sees a vision of the child wife of The Great Master as she looked in the Klondike before her tragic death there. With an effort Zulph regains control of himself, and just then "Bull" Whalen, a member of The Secret Seven, enters and tells him he has seen Jane Ware, and fears she will betray them.

Zulph had excercised a strong power over her since their days in the Klondike, where she nursed Thomas Clarke, Beverly's uncle. It was Zulph who tried to induce Jane to poison Clarke. "Bull" Whalen goes away to trail Jane, and Strong sees him. Strong has been deputized by Sears as a special detective to aid in running down The Secret Seven. He trails Whalen and seizes him.

Then he leads Whalen to Detective Headquarters and turns him over to Detective Sears. Just at that time Jane Warren is in anteroom. She has visited Sears with the intention of telling everything she knows about Zulph. Her appearance strengthens the plans of Sears to round up The Secret Seven.

The detective, in examining Whalen, discovers that the first finger of his left hand is missing. Fingerprints taken in the room in which Ackerton was slain showed that a finger of the assassin's left hand was missing. Cochran, who was Ackerton's assistant, becomes wild with fury when the discovery is made, and he wants to attack Whalen.

To the amazement of Strong and Cochran, Sears takes them aside and tells them Whalen is to be permitted to escape, and that Strong then is to trail him. Cochran is left in the room with Whalen. He begins taunting the prisoner. Suddenly Whalen deals him a terrific blow and he collapses. Then The Secret Seven member runs out to a fire escape and flees.

THE MISHAPS OF MUSTY SUFFER (No. 1 of Series No. 3 "The Fried Egg Hero"—Essanay).—Musty Suffer has a job as a waiter, though he lacks considerable in efficiency. Finding that he gets into trouble with every order he serves, he joins the entertainers and sings a solo. This serves to empty the place as he hoped and gives his a rest.

However, another patron comes in and Musty serves him. The customer is irritated with his order and calls for the manager. Musty goes to the kitchen, changes his make-up and poses as the official. He succeeds in insulting the guest and the latter calls for the proprietor. Undaunted, Musty makes another change and appears as the big boss. To pacify the patron he returns to the kitchen and beats the pans over the stove. The guest believes the cook is taking a thrashing and is elated. But the cook subdues Musty with fried eggs and a mallet and his career as a Boniface ends.

THE TRUFFLERS (Essanay—Five Parts—April 9).—The cast: Sue Wilde (Nell Craig); Peter Ericson Mann (Sydney Ainsworth); Jacob Zanin (Ernest Maupain); Henry Bates, "The Worm" (Richard C. Travers); Hy Lowe (Patrick Calhoun); Abe Silverstone (Harry Dunkinson); Dr. Hubbell Harkness Wilde (John Cossar).

Sue Wilde has "kicked out" of the sanctimonious atmosphere with which her venerable father, Dr. Hubbell Harkness Wilde, has surrounded her, and is luxuriating in life which knows no conventions, nor goal except that where the limelight shines brightest. She is an actress in one of those problems plays which scoff at the existing order of things, when Peter Ericson Mann meets her.

Mann, a playwright, falls in love with Sue. Sue permits herself to become engaged to him, yet the lure of the limelight calls her. A motion picture magnate promises to make her the nation's idol, and she forsakes the writer's love for fame on the screen. Driven desperate by jealousy, Peter betrays to newspaper men the secret that Sue's father has embezzled his church's funds. The old man, unable to bear the disgrace, ends his life.

It is the shock which jolts Sue out of her selfishness, and back into woman's sphere. She weds Henry Bates, "The Worm," who, unlike Peter and the other "trufflers," has a job and is honestly working for a living.

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, INC.

THE PULSE OF LIFE (Five Parts—April 9).—The cast: Lisetta (Gypsy Harte); Buckety Sue (Dorothy Barrett); Molly Capels (Molly Malone); Momenic (Nicholas Duneaw); Guido Serrani (Wedgewood Nowell); Standford Graham (Millard K. Wilson); "Dago" Joe (Albert McQuarrie); Luigi Maseto (Edward Brown); Hasting Capels (Seymour Hastings). Written by E. Magnus Ingleton. Directed by Rex Ingram.

Lisetta, daughter of an old fisherman, Luigi Maseto, lived in a little settlement on the shore of the Isle of Capri, off the coast of Italy. Very often, when alone in her father's hut, Lisetta would gaze out to the sea and wonder where the passing ship went to, dream of the great countries they would visit and, secretly, long to be away from her narrow environment.

When Serrani, an Italian artist, who had lived in New York, and was now home on a visit, chanced one day to see Lisetta, he made himself known to her and began at once to practice his wiles upon her. Serrani prevailed upon the girl to go with him to America, leaving behind only a note to her father that she was weary of the life she led and longed for a change.

Soon after reaching New York, Serrani tired of Lisetta and cast her aside. She fell under the influence of "Dago Joe," "frequenter of underworld cafes and became his consort in dances and revelries of the disorderly type. Graham, a sculptor, in his search for models, discovered Lisetta in one of the cafes and secured her consent to pose for him.

Later Graham became enamored of her beauty and the really fine mental poise of a person from whom so very little in the way of fine sensibilities might be expected. And his love was reciprocated.

The news of Lisetta's betrayal reached the little fishing village in Italy, and her brother, Domenic, journeyed to America to avenge his sister's wrongs. He located Serrani now a prominent artist in Washington Square and, went to his studio to exact Serrani's life.

When Domenic climbed through the studio window he saw Serrani seated with his back to the light. Domenic snatched a dagger from its resting place upon the table and left it sticking in Serrani's heart when the avenger disappeared. The original ownership of the dagger was traced to Graham, who had given it to Serrani, and the sculptor was condemned to die, proof having been produced that there had been ill-feeling between Graham and Serrani over the girl Lisetta.

Domenic lingered in New York, earning his living as a laborer, and had watched the progress of Graham's trial for the murder of Serrani. When the day approached for Graham's execution Domenic's conscience began to smite him, and finally he hurried to a police station and confessed his crime, thus saving Graham from execution.

Her experience in America has been so distracting, and her heart was so full of disappointment and grief, that Lisetta decided to go back to the little fishing village in Italy from whence she came. There Domenic joined her, after he had served a prison term as punishment for his vengeful crime.

WORLD PICTURES.

THE FAMILY HONOR (Peerless—Five Parts—April 9).—The cast: Capt. Stephen Wayne (Robert Warwick); Gen. Jason Wayne (Aled B. Francis); Anthony Wayne (Henry Hull); Doris Leighton (Gerda Holmes); Marcia Quesnay (June Elvidge); Eric Mainwaring (Frank Beamish). Directed by Emile Chautard.

General Wayne, a proud old American patriot, and his two sons—Captain Stephen Wayne, an army officer, and Anthony Wayne, a successful young portrait painter—valiantly maintain the tradition of the Wayne family honor. Anthony is engaged to Doris Leighton, a girl of refinement, but he becomes infatuated with Marcia Quesnay, emotional actress and enchantress. He disgraces his family by his devotion to her, and, lured on by her demands, abandons his promising career.

Stephen Wayne, meeting her in an endeavor to compel her to release Anthony from his unfortunate entanglement, falls sincerely in love with her and she with him. Later, with the dawning of this first real love of her life, Marcia renounces her butterfly life and becomes a tender and self-sacrificing woman. She returns all of Anthony's gifts, giving them to Stephen for safe-keeping. In order to disillusion Anthony she causes him to believe she is only a common woman and he turns from her in disgust.

Led on by Eric Mainwaring, an actor in love with Marcia, who tells Anthony that Marcia is a woman to be bought and not loved, Anthony is persuated to steal from his father's safe government funds placed there by Stephen, and is cheated of the money at cards by Eric. Stephen, discovering the theft, goes to Marcia's apartment to confront her with the result of her influence over Anthony, and is there in time to rescue her from Eric, who comes with the money he has cheated from Anthony, to persuade Marcia to go abroad with him. Stephen forces Eric to disgorge the stolen funds and to leave in fear of the authorities.

The following morning Anthony, penniless, an outcast and a thief, is saved from committing suicide by Doris. His father discovering the theft and accusing Anthony, urges him on to suicide, telling his son that honorable death is better than a life of dishonor. Stephen arrives with Marcia in time to avert the tragedy, telling a lie to save Anthony in the eyes of his father and Doris—that it was he (Stephen) who took the money from the safe, at the same time producing the bills to substantiate his claim. A general reconciliation follows. When his father sees Marcia standing beside Stephen he fears that this other son has been ensnared, but Stephen tells them that they have all misjudged her, and that she is going to enhance the family honor by becoming his wife.

A BATH HOUSE TANGLE (Two Parts—April 2).—The cast: The Husband (Porter Strong); His Wife (Madge Kirby); The Judge (Al Edmundson); His Wife (Violet Eddy); The Janitor (Joe Lee). Directed by Harry Edwards.

A. Nutt, a loving young husband, is seen dodging household goods thrown by his wife. Husband is guaranteed safe conduct to the nearest divorce court where his case is heard by an elderly judge with youthful ideas. Mr. Nutt charges that his wife has become a movie maniac, that she lies on a tiger skin, plays a ukelele, smokes cigarettes and goes in for all forms of vamping.

The judge falls for the charms of Mrs. Nutt and the two wander away, indavertently being carried down a sidewalk elevator shaft to a Turkish bath establishment where they stampede a herd of men patients who are taking the cure. Nutt and the judge's wife follow, and the meeting of the two sets of sparring partners leaves the bath-house in a state of chaos. Even the women's side of the house is invaded. Someone opens a drain pipe and all the combatants are swept through a sewer and deposited in the ocean, where they are annexed by a whale. Fadeout of whale going down with all on board.

GREATER VITAGRAPH.

APARTMENT 29 (Five Parts—April 9.)—The cast: Stanley Ormsby (Earle Williams); The Girl (Ethel Gray Terry); Bobby Davis (Denton Vane); The Russian (L. Johnston); His Wife (Billie Billings); Superintendent (V. Stuart); Janitor (Bernard Seigle); Policeman (Frank Mason); Messenger Boy (Tommy Brett). Directed by Paul Scardon.

Stanley Ormsby, a dramatic critic, runs foul of an author and dramatic company who have just put on a new play which he announces as "rotten." On his way home from the play, after waiving aside the author's pleas for a merciful criticism, his adventures begin. He interferes between a couple quarreling on the street and is rebuffed.

Later he gets an assignment from his editor to go to a certain apartment house to interview a singer. Entering the place he is diverted from his mission by a woman falling apparently dead at his feet, before the door of Apartment 29. Carrying her inside he finds her to be the woman of the quarrel, and there finds also her husband shot. There alone, he realizes suddenly that circumstances are against him and wishes to flee. The playwright, who lives in the same building, offers refuge, but in return asks a large sum of money, which Ormsby is only too glad to give.

A girl in the playwright's apartment hides him while the police search the place. He has a dozen hairbreadth escapes and is finally shocked as the playwright demands a bribe to keep him hidden. Finally Ormsby escapes from the house with the girl, only to run into a nest of thugs, who attack him.

He is then rescued by the very police, who then charge him with murder, after which——. Well, it wires up all right, but it was a hair-raising experience, mates.

THE PRICE OF HER SOUL (Six Parts—March).—The cast: Ailene Graham (Gladys Brockwell); Snap Gun Connor (Jack Standing); Dr. Howard Graham (Monroe Salisbury); Lord Francis Wolberton (Brooklyn Keller); Mary McGowan (Eleanor Crowe); Ralph Connor (Jack Abbott); Pierre (Willard Louis).

Snap Gun Connor decides to fight the drug evil, after learning that his brother is a victim. He redoubles his efforts when he learns that the father of the girl he loves is the manufacturer and chief distributor of the drug.

In his effort and with revenge as a motive he becomes responsible for Ailene Graham, daughter of the head of the drug gang, succumbing to the influence of the deadly narcotic. He works every angle to torture her father into realizing the dangers he has been dealing out to others, through daily letters in which the girl's growing helplessness is pointed out.

Finally, when she becomes a helpless victim of the drug, Connor takes her to her father, who, upon seeing that his dealings in the drug have reached his own fireside, refrains from the further dealings, and months later, joins his daughter in the mountains, where Connor has taken her and his own brother. Completely cured, Connor's love is rewarded. A cure is effected and contentment reigns.

ride with another gay dog and a couple of "chickens."

They go to the country and are arrested for speeding. It happens to be Neal's district and when Gordon is haled into court there is Neal presiding. Seeing his advantage, Neal writes a little note to Gordon, "If I can marry your daughter, you get suspended sentence; otherwise—thirty days in jail!" Gordon has to admit defeat and gives his consent, knowing he cannot double-cross Neal because of the "Suspended Sentence."

TRIANGLE FILM CORP.

HER OFFICIAL FATHERS (Fine Arts—Five parts—April 8).—The cast: Janice Webster (Dorothy Gish); Steven Peabody (Frank Bennett); John Webster (F. A. Turner); Ethan Dexter (Sam de Grasse); Henry Jarvis (Fred Warren); Winfield Jarvis (Milton Schumann); Aunt Lydia (Jennie Lee); Anthony White (Richard Cummings); William Blaine (Charles Lee); John (Hal Wilson); Maid (Bessie Buskirk).

Janice Webster is the daughter of John Webster, president of the Webster Trust Company. Ethan Dexter and Henry Jarvis are vice-presidents of the company and leaders of opposing factions on the board of directors. It is the endeavor of each faction to secure Webster's indorsement in their outside financial schemes.

Janice goes away to a young woman's seminary. She leaves her father in rather poor health, owing to his disregard of warnings that he must give up business. A collapse follows, but the iron will of the financier sustains him until the arrival of his daughter. He hands her a letter, then falls back on the pillows dead.

When the will is read it is discovered that Webster's entire fortune has been left to Janice, to be held in trust by the Webster Trust Company until her eighteenth birthday. After the contents of the will become known there is a contest between Jarvis and Dexter to see who will secure control of the millions. Her official fathers are shocked to read of her mischievous escapades in the newspapers, and fearing that it will affect the credit of the bank, they summon her to a meeting of the board of directors. Her lightness of manner creates greater alarm that she might marry some empty-headed youth who will control her and, through her, the bank.

Jarvis decides to enter his son, Winfield, as a suitor. Dexter, meanwhile, notices this move on the part of Jarvis, and his faction urge him to enter the race. He does so, and when he finds Winfield in constant attendance on the girl he assigns Peabody to spend all his evenings at her house on the pretense of business advice. Finally, Winfield does find an opportunity to propose, and is accepted. The wedding day is set for her eighteenth birthday. Dexter also proposes and is accepted, and the day set for her eighteenth birthday.

Then Janice sends for Peabody and asks his advice as to which she should marry. He leaves without answering, crushed because he has grown to love her for herself alone, with no hope of being able to win her. She forgives him and sends him an invitation to her wedding. He overhears Dexter telling of his future control of the Webster millions and Peabody turns on him and denounces him, threatening to warn Janice. Dexter locks him in his office and sets the bank detective as a guard.

The prospective bridegrooms arrive at the Webster home, accompanied by their factions, and are ushered into rooms on opposite sides of the main hall, each unaware of the other's presence. Janice looks expectantly for Peabody.

Meantime, Peabody, desperate as the wedding hour approaches, escapes, pursued by the detective. They capture him on the steps of Janice's home and rush him away in a cab. Janice has witnessed the kidnapping and gives chase. A motor cop joins in, and when Janice "pockets" the other cab, rides up to make an arrest. He recognizes her as a patron of the police relief fund and orders Peabody released.

The factions grow impatient and leave their respective rooms, meeting in the hallway. A quarrel is in progress, when Janice enters with Peabody. She assembles them all in the drawing room and reads the death-bed letter of her father, which designates Jarvis as a skunk, Dexter a rat, the others in similar vein, and relying on her to be "a chip off the old block." She vests the control of her future happiness in Peabody's care.

SWEETHEART OF THE DOOMED (Ince-Kay-Bee—Five parts—April 8).—The cast: Honore Zonlay (Louise Glaum); Paul Montaigne (Charles Gunn); Gen. Gabriel Durand (Thomas Guise); Gen. Jacques de Fresne (Roy Laidlaw).

Mademoiselle Honore Zonlay, adventuress, nurses a bitter hatred for all mankind for the treachery dealt her by one in her youth. Through one of her victims, Gen. Jacques du Fresne, she is enabled to meet Gen. Gabriel Durand, an uncle to the man, now dead, whom she has never forgiven.

She is introduced to Durand by du Fresne as his protege. He succumbs to her charms, will not listen to any scandal regarding her past, and somewhat sooner than she expects he asks her to be his wife, and with her consent announces their engagement to his assembled guests.

Immediately following, Paul Montaigne, a dispatch bearer, arrives at the Durand chateau with a military message. He is a handsome young man, and worshipper of beauty in any form. There is an immediate mutual attraction between Paul and Honore, and as Durand retires to decipher the message, Honore has Paul served with refreshments with the compliments of "Mlle. Durand, the General's sister." Paul leaves, dropping his identification card as he does so, which Honore picks up. Durand asks Honore to explain to his guests that he may be absent for several weeks.

After Durand's departure Honore bids Paul to her apartments in Paris, using the returning of the identification card as an excuse. There follow many meetings between the two. Honore realizes that she loves him. She determines to renounce her past life. Eventually he declares his love and asks her to marry him. She confesses to him and tells him that she is not the sister of Durand, but Honore Zonlay of Monte Carlo. Paul loves her for herself.

In the meantime, Gen. du Fresne has written to Durand and advised him of Honore's past. Durand hastens to Paris, and as he enters Honore's apartments he meets Paul leaving, although the latter does not recognize him. He hands du Fresne's letter to Honore. She admits the truth of it and reminds him that she had never sought his love, but had only desired to make a fool of him and had succeeded.

Paul is called to serve his country and goes as a spy. Finally, unable to stand the suspense longer, Honore determines to seek him on the battle front. Disguised as a peasant she reaches a reserve depot, where she is discovered by Durand, who at first thinks she has come to him, but discovering that she is seeking Paul, tells her that he had sent him out to his death as a spy.

But Paul is not dead. Wounded, he is brought into the hospital where Honore is stationed. The surgeon tells her he cannot live an hour. The chaplain is summoned and performs the ceremony. Honore will not give up. She breathes a prayer for his recovery, and it is answered.

MAYBLOSSOM (Astra—Five Parts—April 8—Colored Pictures).—The Cast: Anabel Lee (Pearl White); Warner Richmond (Hal Ford); Warner's Grandfather(Fuller Mellish). Directed by Edward Jose.

In the blossom time in spring, in the sunny southland, Anabel Lee returned home from the young ladies' finishing academy. Warner Richmond, the favorite of society and beloved by all the maids for miles around, received notice to come to his grandfather's home to stay with him during his last days. Warner did so and on his arrival was warned by his grandfather to forego the society of the fair sex, but Warner one day passed by where Anabel sat reading and to her he was her prince charming.

Forced to marry Anabel, Warner insisted on keeping the marriage a secret on account of his grandfather's wishes. Just after the grandfather died, leaving Warner a large fortune, he became enamored with an opera singer of fame. Destroying all records of his marriage to Anabel, he then married the opera singer, but love in this case lasted until she secured all his money.

Soon believing her husband dead, Anabel married the sweetheart of her childhood days. No cloud darkened the sky of their happiness until Warner came wandering in his drunken travels to the old countryside again. Attended in his delirium by Anabel's doctor husband, he gives out the story of his life. The doctor returns to find Anabel gone with her child. He follows. Warner in his delirium overturns a lamp and the house burns to the ground with all evidence to clear Anabel's name. But love finds the way.

MYSTERY OF THE DOUBLE CROSS (Episode No. 4—"Kidnapped"—Two Parts—April 8).—The cast: Philippa Brewster (Mollie King); Peter Hale (Leon Bary); Bridgey Bentley (Ralph Stuart); the Masked Stranger (? ? ? ?).

The inheritance of the Hale millions depends on the marriage to the Girl of the Double Cross. Peter Hale is in love with Philippa Brewster, who he thinks is the Girl of the Double Cross. Bentley is of the same opinion, but his desires are only of a monetary nature. To determine whether or not Philippa is the Girl of the Double Cross, Bentley plans a kidnapping, but he is overheard by the Masked Stranger. After his gangsters had examined Philippa's arm, Bridgey was to make a fake rescue, thus posing in her eyes as a hero.

The resourceful Stranger, guarding Philippa, arranged a little kidnapping party of his own. It was not until he found himself a prisoner, tied and gagged, that Bentley realized that he had been tricked. Philippa is freed and taken to her home in a taxicab, where Peter awaits her. She tells him of Bentley's predicament and induces him to go to the rescue. The real kidnapper waiting at the corner, kidnaps Philippa as originally planned and carries her with Peter to Bentley's home. Meantime, Bentley, burning his bonds with lighted matches, escapes and returns to his home. There he is held up by Peter, but his men come to the rescue and Peter is wounded.

Policemen, summoned by the Stranger, rescue Peter, who goes in search of Philippa and goes to the room where she was imprisoned, but as he opens the door an amazing sight greets his eyes. Next episode—THE LIFE CURRENT.

PATRIA (Episode No. 8 "Red Night"—International Two Parts—March 4).—The cast: Patria Channings (Mrs. Vernon Castle); Donald Parr (Milton Sills); Baron Huroki (Warner Oland).

Though Patria was successful in averting the explosion with which Huroki hoped to destroy the great Channing munition plant, the strike fomented by the conspirators continued with increasing violence. The strikers are furnished with arms by Huroki and they make a demonstration against the factory, which is defended by a few faithful employes under the leadership of Donald Parr and the Channing officials.

Patria consents to appeal to the Governor for militia, but the wires have been cut by Huroki's men. Patria then takes matters into her own hands, goes out through the big gate and faces the strikers. They are taken by surprise and are at a loss what to do. Patria takes advantage of the moment of quiet and asks what the men demand. The strikers send their leaders to confer with Patria. She will accede to their demands on two conditions: First, that the men consent to undergo military training at Patria's expense, and, second, that they have no more to do with the conspirators, Huroki, De Lima and their kind. These gentlemen, on the outskirts of the mob, are flabbergasted by this move on the part of Patria, especially when the strikers accept the proposition.

Patria and Donald return to New York wondering what fresh villainy Huroki will attempt. The conspirators make arrangements to set fire to the docks at Black Tom, where $7,000,000 worth of munitions in railroad cars await shipment to the Allies. Huroki sees to it that Donald and Patria are informed of the plot, feeling sure they will go to Black Tom in an endeavor to prevent the explosion, and expecting that they will perish in it. Donald does go, but refuses to expose Patria to the danger. She, however, persuades Ryley, Donald's chief assistant in the Secret Service, to go with her in the launch. The fire is started and there is a great explosion before Patria reaches Black Tom. Donald has been knocked senseless and is lying between two lines of burning freight cars. Patria and Ryley rescue him and the three make their way to a schooner at the end of one of the burning piers. The moorings are cast off, but not before the schooner catches fire. The flames make rapid headway. Donald with Patria takes refuge at the top of one of the masts. It, too, is enveloped in flames and finally falls overboard with the lovers. Donald manages to lay hold of a piece of wreckage and supports Patria until they are picked up by a police patrol boat.

PATRIA (No. 11—"Sunset Falls" Two Parts Astra—March 25).—The cast: Patria Channing (Mrs. Vernon Castle); Donald Parr (Milton Sills); Baron Huroki (Warner Oland); Bess Morgan (Marie Walcamp); Villa (Wallace Berry).

Patria leaves New York to look after her interests on the Rio Grande. She is accompanied by her betrothed, Captain Donald Parr. Her arrival at the ranch with Donald is communicated to Huroki, now an outlaw across the border, and he sends the marauders to make a raid the next day at daybreak.

Patria, unknown to the rest, goes for an early horseback ride and during her absence the raid takes place. She hears the firing and in trying to return finds the way cut off. She comes upon an ox-cart on its way across the border and unknown to the driver hides in the straw.

Towards the close of the day she comes to an adobe hut and overhears that Donald was captured in the morning raid and is a prisoner within. Choosing a favorable moment, she slips from the cart and into the hut. Freeing Donald is the work of a minute and they escape by the rear window. Their flight is discovered by Huroki and his chief aide, and they give chase.

Patria leads Donald to a secret hiding place of which she was taught in her childhood. On approaching the place they come to a high cliff. Turning back they find themselves trapped by Huroki and there is only one way out, so running back a few feet, they embrace each each other for what may be the last time and with a swift run jump over the cliff to evident destruction below.

PATRIA (Episode No. 12—"Which Passeth All Understanding"—Two Parts—Astra—April 1).—The cast: Patria Channing (Mrs. Vernon Castle); Donald Parr (Milton Sills); Baron Huroki (Warner Oland); Bess Morgan (Marie Walcamp).

Huroki and General Nogi assembled a force of troops in order to make an invasion of the country with the assistance of the Mexicans. General Nogi demands a report of the preparations made by Patria, in order to resist such an invasion.

At the same time Patria is engaged in reviewing the troops which she has organized and outfitted with Channing "Preparation" fund. All seems to be in fine shape for any contingency, but they forgot to figure on the small unexpected raids made by the Mexicans.

While Bess Morgan and her brothers were at breakfast they were broken in upon by a band of marauders. They put up a good fight, but the odds were against them. Their home was burned to the ground, Bess was captured and her eldest brother was the only one to escape to bring the news to Patria.

While Bess made a daring but unsuccessful attempt to escape her captors, her brother managed to reach Patria's ranch and there he related the horrifying tale to two listeners, Patria and Donald, who were sickened by the ofttold tale of rampage and loot along the border and on her knees Patria asked for the answer.

There are scores of exhibitors who know, without being told, that their projection is not what it ought to be. Despite their best efforts, the pictures which they show are not properly lighted—there are queer shadows here and there—and patrons in the side seats don't begin to get their money's worth after they have paid the box-office price. These are the exhibitors whose troubles will end with the installation of a

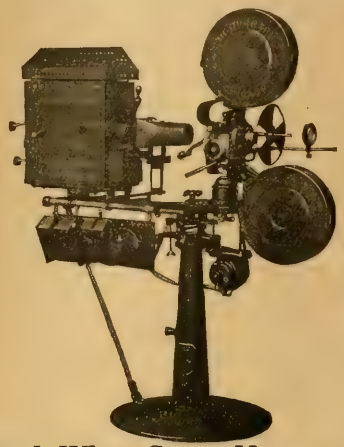
EASILY PRONOUNCED
BY THE MANY USERS



Read What Some Have to Say

Watertown, Wis., E. W. Cassell, says:
You could give us nothing but Motiographs, as they are what we call the best on the market.

San Francisco, Cal., E. H. Roth, says:
Much credit is due the Motiograph, as the projection is perfect and the picture is absolutely flickerless at any speed, as well as delightfully steady.

Greer, S. C., C. W. Grace, says:
I am entirely satisfied with the Motiograph's work.

Charlotte, N. C., H. L. Morrow, says:
I do not believe that Motiograph Service, Reliability and Perfection in Projection can be equaled by any machine (regardless of price).

Canton, Ohio, H. S. Klink, says:
I am using two Motiographs and have a world of praise for them. They do just what the makers say they will do—produce a rock-steady and flickerless picture.

Chicago, Ill., The Famous Theatre, says:
Fifteen months of use and just as good as new; the projection cannot be excelled.

St. Joseph, Mo., W. W. Wertenberger, says:
The material used in the Motiographs is certainly of the highest quality to stand the grind we give them.

Chicago, Ill., Rothacker Film Mfg. Co., says:
We are using Motiographs exclusively in all of our screen inspection work and we have had innumerable compliments from our customers upon the clear, steady pictures we present.

Cleveland, Ohio, Bronx Amusement Co., says:
Altho our theatre opens at eight o'clock in the morning and runs continuously till eleven o'clock at night, being reputed to be the hardest grind in the city, yet we have not had a particle of trouble of any nature with your machines and they have never failed to produce perfect results in a most satisfactory manner.

Lincoln, Neb., Hill-Sun Amusement Co., says:
We have the reputation of having the best projection in Lincoln and believe that the credit for it belongs to the Motiograph machines that we have in our operating room.

Elysian, Minn., L. E. Beynon, says:
The Motiograph we purchased over a year ago is giving very good service—in fact, I might say perfect results.

IF YOU WANT MORE PROOF OF THE MOTIOGRAPH'S PERFORMING ABILITY—We have it in thousands of other testimonials.

IT'S THE BIGGEST BUY TODAY, REGARDLESS OF PRICE.

Your Good Dollars

To produce the best possible pictures requires a combination of good films, a good screen, a skillful operator and a first class projector equipped with the highest quality of lens.

See that the lens is a

WHAT IS YOUR LIBERTY WORTH TO YOU ?

THE Liberty of the American people is in jeopardy. The cry of liberty or death heard in 1776 is echoed in 1917. Every American industry is contributing huge funds for preparedness—to strengthen the sinews of the government in this hour when upon the test of our force and endurance depends the future independence of our people.

What is the great Motion Picture Industry going to do?

What are YOU going to do?

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., has offered its services to the government to assist in attracting a patriotic activity in behalf of the country in the grave crisis that confronts it, and to stimulate interest in enlistments in the various defensive branches of the government by attractive posters and slides, and by compelling advertising and publicity. These services have received the support of active men in the United States service.

But to accomplish the vital results for which we are striving, we must have FUNDS!

Unfortunately the members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., haven't a great deal of money. But they are doing their share.

Are YOU going to help?

Funds from one cent to a thousand dollars WILL help. Checks, money or express orders should be sent to Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc.

TWO GREAT OFFERINGS

"The Voice on the Wire" Serial--and "The Perils of the Secret Service" Series--Winning Everywhere

NOTABLE as have been the many past successes produced by the Universal in the serial field, there are none which in so short a time have taken that firm hold upon the minds of the fans which brings them back episode after episode, as has "The Voice on the Wire." The mysterious voice, giving its ghostly warning over a disconnected telephone; baffling at every turn the ingenious traps laid for it by John Shirley, private investigator, stimulate the curiosity, and apparently raise in the minds of the audiences the same perturbation that Ben Wilson, in the character of Shirley, so ably depicts on the screen. Beautiful Neva Gerber, Shirley's charming and capable assistant, whom he has rescued from the clutches of a gang, also has the fans guessing. Like Cronin, the chief of police, they do not know whether she is "on the square" or not. And so they come back night after night in the hope of finding some clue that will settle in their own minds at least the cleverest mystery story ever filmed. The story is from the popular novel of the same name by Eustace Hale Ball, author of "Traffic in Souls," and many other notable successes. It was directed by Stuart Paton, the successful producer of the Universal's stupendous spectacular submarine drama, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," and bears every evidence of his master hand. Supporting Mr. Wilson and Miss Gerber are Joseph Girard and a large and brilliant cast. The production is lavish in the extreme, and is well worthy of the phrase, "The Universal's latest and greatest serial." Fans, Exhibitors and Exchange men alike are enthusiastic and as every one knows that is proof positive that a serial is big and very much worth while, as an entertainment and as a profitable box office attraction. Bookings may be made through any of the 73 Universal Exchanges or through the Home Office of the Universal.

Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber, Leading Man and Woman in "The Voice on the Wire."

For those Exhibitors who for any reason do not care to run a serial or connected film story, the Universal has prepared a remarkable novelty in the form of seven two-reel dramas, each COMPLETE IN ITSELF, released under the general title of "The Perils of the Secret Service." The stories were written by the famous American novelist, George Bronson Howard, world-traveler, playwright and author of "God's Man," one of the literary sensations of a decade. The stories here offered are based on the famous "Yorke Norroy" series which appeared in a magazine of wide circulation recently, and it is gratifying to note the eagerness with which their filmization has been greeted. As Yorke Norroy, diplomatic agent of the Secret Service, Kingsley Benedict the popular Universal star, has the opportunity of his career. Cool, suave and resourceful he holds his audiences in breathless suspense, always to triumph in the end. He is supported by a different Universal woman star in each of the seven stories and the entire series give a wonderful example of this capable actor's versatility. The series was directed by Mr. Howard at Universal City and are as pleasing and fascinating as they are unusual.

The Magazine of the Screen

Popular One Reel Feature is the Universal Screen Magazine--"Universally" Made--Universally Demanded

IT takes a popular magazine years and years to build up a circulation that is worthy of noting, but it took the "magazine of the screen" but a few short weeks to leap into a popularity that brings millions of moving picture patrons to see it every week in thousands of theatres all over the country. The Universal Screen Magazine began right because the brains back of it knew what the public wanted. It is to "instruct, inform—to amuse and entertain." And that is exactly what people go to the "movies" for. There is something to please everyone in any audience. There are cooking and housekeeping lessons for the women; also beauty hints and many other matters pertaining to woman's widening sphere.

World's Greatest Cook and Housekeeper "Shows How" on the Universal Screen Magazine.

For the kiddies there are genuine juvenile subjects—our dumb animal friends, nature studies, travelogs in the great cities of the world; there are pictures that show you how any number of things are made; there are patriotic and preparedness subjects; there are shown in operation the marvelous inventions of science depicting industrial progress, and there are the remarkable films showing animated sculpture, wherein you see the modeling clay take shape before your astonished gaze. There is no wonder that the Universal was compelled by popular demand to release the Universal Screen Magazine every week instead of twice a month, as originally planned. It is rapidly taking its place in the minds of both people and Exhibitors as the biggest one-reel feature in the world today. Book through any Universal Exchange, or UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE, 1600 Broadway, New York.

PROFITS PROVE PROGRAM'S POPULARITY

Exhibitors Giving Universal Program Show Are Reaping Good Net Profits and Growing in Popularity

IN every section of the country there are Exhibitors who have found that switching from "features" to program they have changed their business from one of loss to one of profit. Any Universal Exchange man can give you the actual proof whenever you want it. The reason is that the public don't care to arrive at a theatre late and find that they must see the last half of a feature first, in other words, look at a picture backwards. They like to go to the movies when they feel like it, stop in for a few good short and varied subjects, and leave feeling that they had their money's worth. On the Universal Program there is always something to please everyone; no one is ever disappointed. If one subject does not please there is sure to be several that do, and the patron goes out to BOOST YOUR HOUSE.

Special Releases

On the Universal Program for the Week of April 30

THE "specials" on the Universal Program are the type and class of picture that you like to use to strengthen your entire program. They cost you a little more money, but they are worth it for the added business that they bring you. In fact, they are the pick and cream of the entire week's program, and as such they are released as specials to enable you to make a quick and sure selection. Look over the list given here and you will see several that you can use as soon as they are released.

SPECIAL ATTRACTION—"THE BRAND OF HATE" (Five Reels), All-Star Cast.
NESTOR—"WHAT A CLUE WILL DO" (One-Reel Comedy), Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts.
L-KO—"THE CABARET SCRATCH" (One-Reel Comedy), Dan Russell.
GOLD SEAL—"BILL BRENNAN'S CLAIM" (Three-Reel Western Drama), Neal Hart and Janet Eastman.
UNIVERSAL ANIMATED WEEKLY—No. 70.
IMP—"A MIDNIGHT MYSTERY" (Two-Reel Mystery Drama), Thomas Jefferson and Betty Schade.
UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE—Issue No. 17.
L-KO—"SCRAMBLED HEARTS" (One-Reel Comedy), Billie Ritchie.

Regular Releases

On the Universal Program for the Week of April 30

THE so-called "regular" releases on the Universal Program are the sterling subjects—high class dramas, comedies, etc., that constitute the backbone of the mighty Program which has more, and gives more quality and greater quantity than all competition combined. Look them over and you will see why they are popular and why you should communicate with your nearest Universal Exchange regarding booking TODAY.

VICTOR—"FLAT HARMONY" (One-Reel Comedy), Eileen Sedgwick.
VICTOR—"POTS AND POEMS" (Two-Reel Comedy Drama), Matt Moore and Jane Gail.
BIG U—"THE PENALTY OF SILENCE" (One-Reel Drama), Wallace Reid.
VICTOR—"A DARLING IN BUCKSKIN" (One-Reel Comedy), Gertrude Astor.
BISON—"LITTLE MOCCASINS" (Two Reels), Millard K. Wilson and Edyth Roberts.
JOKER—"LEFT IN THE SOUP" (One-Reel Comedy), Gale Henry and William Franey.
BIG U—"TRUE TO THEIR COLORS" (Two Reels), Grace Cunard.

THE two lists given above combined constitute the complete weekly Universal Program Service—the entertainment that is making more Exhibitors successful today than all other forms of film entertainment combined. If you are not familiar with Universal Program Service and want to get next to something that will net you real profits, write or wire your nearest Universal Exchange for full particulars and PROOF today. Or address the Home Office as above.

In Step With the Times

Universal Animated Weekly Shows Timely Topics

WHETHER it is the latest operation of a U-Boat, or preparedness parades, or the interior of a munition factory, or the launching of the latest U. S. Naval vessel; a storm in Indiana, the unveiling of a notable statue, a great auto race, or thrilling scenes of the pilots of the air, you may depend that Universal Animated subjects are not only live and timely, but that they are shown first on the screen by that enterprising organization. That is why the U. A. W. is the first choice of fans all over the country, and why it will draw a crowd on the dullest day in the week, when even a big feature will not pull them in. Ask your nearest Universal Exchange or write direct to the UNIVERSAL ANIMATED WEEKLY, 1600 Broadway, New York.

PROFITABLE PROOF

Universal Comedies Prove That as Laugh Getters--They Are Money-Getters

THE cold, cold cash is what proves the merit of a comedy. Especially is this true of Universal Comedies because they are among the first to appear and the same brands are making friends and money for Exhibitors still. In Joker, L-KO and Nestor Comedies the Exhibitor has a choice of three distinct kinds of comedy—each a supreme laugh-getter — the sort that makes the fans ask for "more of the same." Ask your nearest Universal Exchange to show you one of each and then arrange for a big comedy night and give your patrons a rare treat. It will build popularity, prestige and profit for you.

ABSOLUTELY DISTINCTIVE

THIS splendid five-reel production—"THE HERO OF THE HOUR"—featuring dashing Jack Mulhall, is the kind of Feature that makes people love to go to moving pictures. It is absolutely distinctive. It's the kind of play that every theatre clamors for but seldom gets. It's the kind of play that sends people away bristling with enthusiasm for more pictures of this kind. It's a crackerjack. Book it for the popularity it will bring to your house. It's ten to one you'll play it and repeat.

The Warfare Of The Flesh

The reason why this is a STATE RIGHT PICTURE is because it has the same relation to a Program picture that a BEST SELLER has to an average book. It has all the talking points and HIGH SPOTS that are essential to the success of a STATE RIGHT PRODUCTION. It is rich in subject matter, in title, in presentation, cast and exploitation ideas from the box-office viewpoint. It is a safe and sane investment for the safe and sane BUYER and EXHIBITOR. The theme is a spiritual as well as a material analysis of the eternal conflict between mind and matter. It is a BROADSIDE against slanderers of VIRTUOUS WOMANHOOD.

Here is the cast:—

Sheldon Lewis, who starred in the Iron Claw; Walter Hampden, who starred in the Servant in the House; Charlotte Ives, now starring in the Morosco Broadway hit, The Brat; Marie Shotwell, appearing in Enlighten Thy Daughter; Harry Benham, of the Million Dollar Mystery, and Theodore Friebus, for years the idol at the Castle Square Theatre, Boston.

The feature was produced and directed by EDWARD WARREN, maker of many successful state right attractions.

has had few other picture plays, with the exception of "The Warrens of Virginia," which have given her an opportunity to display her histrionic talent.

"The Tides of Barnegat"

is a thrilling story of an older sister who is spurned by a puritanical village because she will not tell the story of a child she is giving a home, and the subsequent persecution of she and the child, is as touching as the sight of a baby boy afloat alone in a row boat, being fast carried out to sea by the swift tide, is heartrending.

F. Hopkinson Smith

the author of "The Tides of Barnegat" and one of the most popular fiction writers of the day, has contributed his most famous story, and probably the best sea tale of a generation, to the screen.

Released April 12th.

"The Cost of Hatred"

is a powerful, virile story of the life-long search of a great, passionate domineering personality, for revenge, and the fulfillment of it is indeed a thrilling story.

Beulah Marie Dix

the famous novelist and playwright who has been studying the photoplay for several months at the Lasky studio, in accordance with Jesse L. Lasky's policy of getting the best and most carefully selected screen stories obtainable, wrote and prepared "The Cost of Hatred" for the screen.

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS EXCHANGES

APRIL 21, 1917

"THE SINGLE CODE" IS SECOND CRANE WILBUR MUTUAL PICTURE

THE second of the Crane Wilbur series of Mutual Pictures is released the week of April 16. "The Single Code" is its title. It is five reels in length and contains innumerable, powerful situations. Thomas Ricketts directed it. Mr. Wilbur is surrounded by a capable company headed by Florence Printy.

Deals With Old, Old Problem.

The story of "The Single Code" deals with an old, old problem. It raises once more the question of whether the man is equally entitled to blame with the woman—whether there should be a single code of morality equally applicable to men and women. Mr. Wilbur appears in the role of Hugh Carrington, a young purist, who writes and preaches "I believe in a single code of morality. Why blame the woman for a sin for which you condone the man? I say man is the greater sinner, for he is of the stronger sex." Yet when sin enters his own home and both himself and his bride falter in the path of righteousness, he seeks absolution for himself and condemns his helpmate. Crying, "You are different. You are my wife!" he rushes away, and so the double standard wins a new advocate.

Released Week of April 16.

"The Single Code" is released the week of April 16. Bookings on it can be made now at any Mutual Exchange. "The Painted Lie," the first of the Wilbur productions released as Mutual Pictures, is showing to tremendous success. There are four others still to come. Reservations can be made for all of them at this time.

Coming Ann Murdock Film Has Big Setting

In "Outcast," the coming Ann Murdock production which is to be one of the first offerings of the Empire All Star Corporation to the Mutual Pictures, a 112 foot stage setting, representing Monte Carlo, will be shown. It depicts the famous gambling resort with true fidelity and is one of the largest ever erected. Still another big scene in this same picture depicts the Hotel Savoy, London. More than a hundred players appear in support of Miss Murdock in these massive sets. Reservations on the Empire All Star productions in which Miss Murdock will be seen can be made now at any Mutual Exchange. The exact release date of the first of these Mutual Pictures will be announced later.

CHAPLIN'S "THE CURE"

Depicting Charlie's Adventures At a Modern Health Resort

RELEASED APRIL 16th

"The Cure" is finished. It is the tenth and newest of the Mutual-Chaplin Specials. April 16 is its release date. The public is eagerly waiting for its screening, as newspapers all over the country have mentioned its coming. In "The Cure," Charlie is shown seeking rest and recuperation at a modern health resort. He arrives with a strange assortment of baggage and promptly proceeds to imbibe of the medicinal "waters." As fellow guests at the health resort, Charlie finds a strange assortment of individuals. Some of them he finds it hard to get along with, while others he finds wholly delightful. One has to actually behold the scenes in the steam-room, in the massage-room, and in the lobby of the resort to appreciate fully the uproarious comedy that Chaplin creates. Laughs fairly bubble over one another. Each bit of "business" is funnier than the last. And the end of the picture contains the biggest surprise of all. All the old favorites—Edna Purviance, Eric Campbell and others—are given innumerable chances to display their talent, and all of them avail themselves of the opportunity afforded. Bookings can be made now on "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," "One A. M.," "The Count," "Behind the Screen," "The Pawnshop," "The Rink," "Easy Street" and "The Cure." Detailed information regarding prices and dates can be secured from your nearest Mutual Exchange.

Exhibitors showing "Mrs. Balfame," the first of the Nance O'Neil series of Mutual Pictures are helped by the window displays on the Atherton novel which, in a new edition, is being prominently displayed at bookstores everywhere.

MARY MILES MINTER STARTS NEW SERIES WITH "ENVIRONMENT"

ANOTHER Mary Miles Minter five-reel feature is released by Mutual Film Exchanges everywhere the week of April 16. "Environment" is its title. It is the first of the second series of Mutual Pictures starring Mary Miles Minter. It was written and directed by James Kirkwood. The American studios at Santa Barbara, California, were used for its staging.

A Quaint New England Story.

"Environment" is a typical Minter production—sweet and wholesome, filled with smiles and tears. It is laid in a quaint, old fashioned, New England village. Miss Minter is cast as the daughter of the village loafer and ne'er-do-well. On graduation day she meets for the first time the new minister, who promptly proceeds to fall in love with her, though her clothes are not so fine as those of her girl friends, and her home is anything but inviting. Through a strange combination of circumstances the heroine is placed in a decidedly bad light before the minister. For a time he thinks her anything but a "good" girl. But the old saying that "The darkest cloud has a silver lining" is aptly illustrated in this picture, for just when all seems hopeless to the little heroine, everything is explained satisfactorily to the pastor and the daughter of the village loafer becomes the bride of the minister.

Strong Supporting Cast.

George Fischer is again Miss Minter's leading man in this picture. Assisting them in the production appear such favorites as George Periolat, Margaret Shelby, Jack Vosburgh, Harvey Clark, Lucille Ward and Al Vosburgh. "Environment" is now booking at all Mutual Exchanges. Exhibitors are still packing their theatres with the first Minter Series and open dates can be arranged for them also, enabling a manager to arrange a whole Minter week for his house if he so desires.

"A Daughter of War" Is Timely Released

Just now while things are at fever heat —while bands are playing and recruits are rushing to the colors, exhibitors have an opportunity of doing their bit to aid the country by showing "A Daughter of War." This is a Mutual special feature in five acts, starring May Ward. Its scenes are laid in 1776. It is released April 12th. Rouse patriotism among your patrons. Stimulate recruiting. "TROOPER 44"

AN UNUSUAL REQUEST

Was made by Governor Whitman for the privilege of a private showing of "TROOPER 44" for the governors of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Delaware, and their aides de camp on the occasion of their conference to devise effective means of cooperation and action during the war.

The interest of the governors was so intense that the E. I. S. MOTION PICTURE CORP. was then requested to show the picture before the members of the Senate and Assembly and other officials of the State of New York. This showing of April 3rd in Albany evoked enthusiastic applause and appreciation.

Although this drama is in no sense a propaganda picture the producers of "TROOPER 44" are now deluged with requests for the showing of the film in the thirteen states where legislation for the creation of a State Police is pending.

The E. I. S. MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION announces that it is not at liberty to make any more private showings of this picture since the enormous interest aroused must be conserved for the advantage of

FROM THE FAMOUS

NEW YORK CRITICS RACE TO ITS PRAISE

SENSATIONAL SUCCESS

(N. Y. Journal.)

"The Whip" is one of the most sensational melodramatic photoplay pictures that has ever been produced.

"The Whip" was played at the Manhattan Opera House for many and many a month, and undoubtedly thousands upon thousands have seen the speaking melodrama. I want to say right here that the thousands and thousands who have seen the production of "The Whip" must for their own satisfaction see "The Whip" in pictures, for surely everyone is interested in the fourth greatest industry in the world.

There is one shot in this picture that is absolutely marvelous, and that is when the Saratoga Express hits the freight car containing the horse called "The Whip." But luckily "The Whip" has been removed before the Saratoga Express hits the car.

"THE WHIP" THRILLS

(N. Y. Times.)

It is said that eight months were consumed in making the film, whose numerous scenes do embrace a vast amount of detail. Some of the scenes of country life—of the training of the Whip, of the hunt club with its pack in full cry—are especially fine. Then there are the exciting automobile smash-up, the stirring events preceding the race, and the race itself.

But most thrilling of all is the collision of the express train with the car in which the Whip was being transported. Those who saw the melodrama will recall the race between the motor car and the train, the removal of the horses in the nick of time from the car detached from the train by the villain, and the crash when the express caught up with the car. A real railroad and train were rented, and there is no doubt about the reality of the crash.

"THE WHIP" IN THE FILM IS ENTICING

(N. Y. American.)

Two record successes have already been credited to the great melodrama, "The Whip," and yesterday afternoon it began what will surely be a third.

"The Whip" began its phenomenal career with a two years' run at the Drury Lane Theatre, London. Next came a one-year season when William A. Brady presented it at the Manhattan Opera House in this city. Yesterday afternoon it was presented as a film play at the Park Theatre. . . .

All the great scenes are reproduced with telling effect, and in many cases more thrilling than they were given on the stage. There is a fox hunt, for instance, which for dash, extent and actuality exceeds anything that can be shown in the combined area of the boards and make-believe scenery.

THE SCENE OF THE RAILROAD ACCIDENT, TOO, IS NO PASTEBOARD THING. IT IS THE ACTUAL SMASH OF ONE TRAIN INTO ANOTHER, A WILD THUNDERING RUSH, AND THEN THE BLAZING WRECKS ON THE TRACK-SIDE. . . .

ALTOGETHER "THE WHIP" IS A CLEAN, WHOLESOME, STIRRING FILM PLAY OF THE GOOD OLD MELODRAMATIC SCHOOL THAT SENDS ONE HOME FEELING HEALTHILY EXCITED AND WITHOUT THE LEAST SUSPICION OF A BROWN TASTE IN THE MOUTH OR A DRAB THOUGHT IN THE BRAIN.

DRURY LANE PRODUCTION

READ THE UNANIMOUS APPLAUSE

"A THRILLER" OUT-THRILLED

(N. Y. Mail.)

A thriller "outthrilled" best describes the screen version of "The Whip," and which will now go on the four-a-day schedule. And that is considerable thrilling, as will be attested to by those who saw the melodrama during its season run at the Manhattan Opera House.

It is said to have required eight months in preparation, and judging from the elaborateness there must have been a heavy "overtime" charge against the production to have crowded in all of the details as recorded in the eight reels.

For downright thrillingness the railroad collision, which was meant to destroy the "dark" horse in the big race, and the actual running of the race the next day, have taken their places among the film's most exciting moments. In the first incident a full-fledged train is employed to crash into the box-car, go over an embankment and then burn up.

BIG AND EXCITING

(N. Y. Globe.)

"The Whip," a stirring melodramatic photoplay, had its first screen production yesterday at the Park Theatre, and judging by the enthusiasm it aroused during the afternoon and evening another winner has been produced. The screen version is bigger and more exciting than the stage presentation.

HAS PLENTY OF SNAP

(N. Y. Tribune.)

"The Whip," shown at the Park Theatre yesterday, certainly has plenty of snap. The picture was directed by Maurice Tourneur, so one naturally expected it to be good, but one would be justified in using the superlative. . . .

One of the most gripping things that has ever been shown on the screen is the race between the motor car and the Saratoga Express, which is rushing on with certain death for The Whip.

The horse calmly walks out of the boxcar just as the collision occurs, and it is a regular collision, too.

Add to this perfection of staging and detail an excellent cast and you have a few of the reasons why "The Whip" is one of the best photo-dramas produced this season. . . .

"The Whip" runs for two hours and is quite as fresh at the finish as at the getaway.

COMPLETE TRAIN DESTROYED

(Morning Sun.)

"The Whip" will be known for its train wreck and racing scenes. It is probably one of the best train wrecks to be used in a motion picture play. It was staged recently at Greenwood, Md., and a complete train equipment was destroyed in the rear-end collision. The train at full speed crashes into a car which is lifted clear of the tracks, the boiler of the engine explodes and the train tumbles over an embankment and takes fire.

3,500 People crowded the Rialto Theatre on Wednesday morning last and with one accord placed their stamp of approval of "God's Man" as the greatest motion picture production of the age.

——READ WHAT THE CRITICS WRITE——

"The Frohman Amusement Corporation's picturization of George Bronson Howard's . . . novel stands as the most intense dramatic picture of extra reels of both recent and distant date."
Peter Milne in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"The most striking photoplay of a modern story I have ever seen." Agnes Smith in MORNING TELEGRAPH.

"One of the most beautifully staged, well acted and effectively produced pictures that has ever been shown."
Harriette Underhill in N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"God's Man will prove a winner."
Adam Hull Shurk in DRAMATIC MIRROR.

"A masterful production. An unusual theme given an unusual treatment."
C. W. Graves in MOTOGRAPHY.

"A feature film in all that the name implies."
E. C. Whitton in N. Y. CLIPPER.

"Stupendous; gripping; vital; an appeal to everyone's heart."
Elaine Ivans in EXHIBITOR'S HERALD.

"God's Man is an ambitious photoplay dealing with an ambitious story. There is no denying the effectiveness and high quality of both."
Tom Kennedy in EXHIBITOR'S TRADE REVIEW.

"Forcefully human and effectively truthful."
"WID."

"God's Man should set a new pace in filmdom."
J. E. Edwards in THE BILLBOARD.

"I consider God's Man one of the three or four really great pictures which have been produced. . . . Many pictures have all the qualities of greatness except story. God's Man has all that the other have, plus story."

"Little Lost Sister"

The latest of the Selig Red Seal Plays and one that is getting the money wherever shown. "A real gold mine," writes an Illinois Exhibitor. "Packed them in and they stood out in the rain waiting for seats," is the information sent in by a New York theatre owner. The Motion Picture News says: "An all-star cast, good photography and care of detail are chief points in favor of 'Little Lost Sister.' To the unsophisticated, the picture will no doubt be a revelation of the methods of the vice syndicates supposed to exist in every city. The moral of the Biblical admonition in reference to casting the first stone will be conveyed to them."

Entrancing Romances in Pictures

The O. Henry story is the story you can never forget. With a swift, sure hand he sets his simple stage, fills it with delightfully human and absurdly romantic men and women whom he alone could portray, and makes them play out those droll comedies and pathetic tragedies which will live forever in the hearts of millions of people all over the civilized world.

O. Henry stories make motion pictures you can never forget. They bring to life upon the screen the vivid, picturesque, whimsical characters — the quaint, surprising situations — the sudden, unexpected climaxes that move you to laughter or to tears.

O. HENRY

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

These wonderful pictures have a vast audience ready-made, for practically the entire population has read the O. Henry stories.

Each O. Henry picture is a faithful reproduction of the story, with all the great author's whimsicality and droll humor. Each is beautifully produced under the direction of THOMAS R. MILLS.

Millions of people are waiting to see the O. Henry Pictures. Their box office value is far above the average. Book them now — be the first to show them in your locality.

Facts and Comments

WHAT rank nonsense is the advice of those who suggest the expediency of accepting any sort of censorship of films, either Federal or State, in the hope that it will eliminate local annoyance. It is reported that a lawyer claiming to represent some film club actually argued in favor of State censorship at the recent hearing at Chicago on the ground that it was preferable to and would do away with local boards. Film men, beware the advice of one who either does not know what he is talking about or is a Judas. Away with expediency!

* * *

KEEP the pictures clean and keep them out of politics is our old, oft repeated slogan. Those who are working hardest for censorship are those of our own household, the producers and distributors and exhibitors of vile films. They are the real enemies of the whole industry. Our reviewing staff have had to be more than ever on the alert lately and our advertising pages have been considerably fewer, because of several films that we will give no publicity to at any price. Let others boast of the number of pages they accept of this sort of business; we want none of it. Keeping the pictures clean is the duty of those in the industry, not of faddists and grafting outsiders, but if the industry does not cure this growing evil, the outside public certainly will.

* * *

SPEAKING of quantity of advertising we might remark again that we could carry many more pages weekly if we accepted all the vile stuff that is offered and if we were willing to accept copy on credit from every firm attempting to do business on a shoe-string. New companies that are unknown and are unable to pay as they go are usually the ones who fail to give our subscribers and readers a square business deal. Advertising of all the worth while films and all the responsible firms are found in our columns weekly; if not, investigate carefully—there's usually a reason.

* * *

QUICK and forceful action is demanded of the exhibitors of the State of Illinois if state censorship is to be avoided in that state. It would be a great calamity if the proposed legislation should become law and it is only by determined and united action that such an event can be effectually stopped. Though the proposed bill has been under consideration for several weeks we are told that very little effort has been made to prevent its passage. Something must be wrong with the Illinois exhibitors if they are unable to foresee the annoyance and expense that will come to the industry through the enactment of such a law. Illinois exhibitors should wake up and at least make a showing at the hearing presently to be held at Springfield. Get out and make a protest.

* * *

WE print in this issue a summary of the proposed bill to license and tax the moving picture industry of the state of New York. This measure is an outgrowth of the work of the Wheeler Investigating Committee of the New York legislature and its sponsors predict that it will yield a revenue of $1,000,000 to the state. There will be a wide difference of opinion as to its utility as a revenue producer and it certainly will be opposed by picture men on the provisions for licensing and taxing the various branches of the business. It is hardly possible to adequately review the measure until it has been put in shape for official presentation, but from the synopsis provided by our correspondent we would venture the observation that the surest thing it will accomplish, in the event that it is placed upon the statute books, will be to drive the entire film manufacturing and distributing business to Jersey, or to some other safe and sane abode. Then what a soft thing the Commissioner will have with $6,000 a year and all he can spend! It may be that Mr. Wheeler and his friends can get this measure passed, but it is blood-raw.

* * *

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD must again commend to its readers the efforts of the editor of its Projection Department, F. H. Richardson, who is making a tour of the United States in the interest of better picture projection. In this issue is reproduced photographs of several gatherings of managers and operators who have assembled to hear his lecture. These pictures prove the growing popularity of Mr. Richardson's tour and the interest picture folk are taking in the subject of projection. The enthusiastic receptions accorded him are of the most flattering nature.

"A Menace to the Drama?"

By Louis Reeves Harrison

"ARE the movies a menace to the drama?" asks Brander Matthews in a magazine article so entitled. He answers the question with that dangerous plausibility to be expected from men more familiar with their medium of expression than their subject matter and with an air of authority intended to carry conviction, the innocent confidence of a long established reputation in another field of criticism revealing itself at every stage of his argument. With due respect for the status of Mr. Matthews as a scholarly writer on all that pertains to the drama, he does little more than grope carefully, like an intelligent blind man on ground unfamiliar.

He quotes the plaintive wail of W. D. Howells that "the gross and palpable triumph of the picture show goes to the theater and bids against it for the artist's liberty, their individuality, their initiative. From men and women it turns them to automatons—it buys their beauty and power for a moment of the film, extinguishing the soul in them." Could anything be more depressing? Unless we are to disregard well-authenticated testimony that actors have ever been willing to have their photographs given publicity it would seem as though the highly respectable antique of fiction is both woefully and willfully mistaken.

Whether the "artist" is photographed in some arrested and minutely fractional phase of interpretation or in some continuous revelation of thought and feeling seems to resolve itself simply into a question as to whether he is to be immortalized as a dead one or as a live one. It is well within the bounds of conservative statement to say that the soulless representation is not that of the movie, to which the novelist is unaccustomed, but of the still picture which he has come to accept as a matter of course.

From such evidences of misconception, it is a pleasure to turn to the more vigorous opinion of Brander Matthews. He deftly disposes of Howells by reminding him that the "theater" is not the "drama." "The drama," says Matthews, "is an art; and the theater is a commercial enterprise." "The theater can rely on the review, the so-called comic opera; it can fill its program with song and dance, with acrobatics, with trained animals, and with all the other possibilities of the variety show. In so far as the moving picture has forced itself into a prominent place among these non-dramatic entertainments, it is not in any way invading the field of the drama."

"In so far" saves Professor Matthews. He is careful in many other statements and generous enough to grant that "So far as mere pictorial story-telling is concerned the drama is outclassed." Now comes a point of view which is so common that it has been that of a very large number of producers. Mr. Matthews concedes that moving pictures outclass the melodrama because of their greater scope of action, but he denies that they can ever "convince the taste and console the spirit" as does, at least supposedly, the drama. Ordinary prudence would suggest that no such broad statements be made of any art of expression, particularly of one in its early throes of evolution.

All that the moving picture can do to a masterpiece of Shakespeare is to rob it of its vitality and reduce it to the purely spectacular level of "The Birth of a Nation." To imagine for a moment that the limitations of an art are those of its early examples is one of those common errors which have always led to erroneous opinion, the more deplorable in a case like this because it is entertained by a man of influence.

"The Birth of a Nation" is frankly spectacular. It is not so much of an example of what can be done as of what has been done, and the use of it as an illustration by Mr. Matthews is on a par with holding up spectacular drama as representative of the entire art. Mr. Matthews falls once more before he gets his bearings and finds his way out of the darkness and that is in saying that moving pictures fail to "convince the taste and console the spirit." Whose taste and whose spirit? There are several millions of intelligent people among the five or ten millions who attend the picture shows every day.

The men who engrossed on scrolls of parchment were proud of their craft and deplored the advent of printing, belittled it because it was addressed to common people, just as moving pictures are belittled by craftsmen who now use the printed page. But Mr. Matthews picks himself up and catches a glimpse of light which leads him to more rational conclusions. "The inexorable limitations of the story told on the screen forbid the deviser of a picture-play to do much more than tell a story picturesquely. He must be simple and clear, swift and direct."

"It is likely that the differentiation between the real play (which must have a story, no doubt, but which has also a soul) and the picture play will increase and become more obvious as the managers of the movies cease to borrow the plots of plays and devote themselves to stories compounded in accord with the possibilities and limitations of their own special art. As they accept these limitations and as they develop these possibilities the apparent rivalry between the drama and the moving picture will lessen, and each will be left in possession of its own special field."

No man of broad vision, who has had opportunity to thoroughly grasp the production and exposition of moving pictures has ever considered them as rivaling the drama. Neither a desire for strife nor aim to surpass the drama was associated with motion picture production. It was almost invariably undertaken and developed in response to a popular demand so great as to be overwhelming at times. In greedy haste to meet that demand producers have been careless in the selection of subjects and prodigal in treatment of themes no longer vital, but, on the other hand, those same producers have accomplished artistic wonders far beyond the comprehension of the uninitiated.

Just now there may be isolated instances where the filming of a play may rival the stage presentation, but they are so few and insignificant that they scarcely deserve mention. On the other hand, especially among people who lack interest in the drama, moving pictures are arousing an entirely new and sympathetic appreciation of the drama, not merely as a form of entertainment, but as an art. The new art has drawn on the older one for much of its vigor and charm, it is true, along with some faulty traditions and crass theatricalism, but the differentiation of which Mr. Matthews speaks is growing every day.

Picturization of the finer kinds of drama, as Mr. Matthews contends, may always be inadequate and unsatisfactory, but he suggests the natural remedy. The shrewder of the makers of motion pictures are strenuously seeking for original stories, invented by men who have mastered the new art of telling tales by visual means alone, who can devise plots in complete accord with the marvelous possibilities of this new art and who can so plan them as to minimize its limitation. In the hands of these pioneers it will explore its own field more searchingly.

Greater Vitagraph Days.....Thursday and Saturday

This dodger was enclosed in a letter sent to us by Chas. Lauer of Texas City, Texas, who writes: "Note Triangle, Fox, Vitagraph, Admission two and one-half cents, with tickets! This means thirty tickets at seventy-five cents. Now gentlemen, I contend that this kind of business is ruination to the picture show business, not only to honest exhibitors, but to the entire industry. Cheapens it to such an extent it will virtually kill it faster than anything else, and the sooner these film exchanges quit doing business and giving this kind of people service the better for us all. I believe if you will publish this with a write-up, it will probably warn film producers from doing business with such men."

Mr. Lauer furnishes proof positive and too forceful an argument to allow any one much room for any additional comment to strengthen his claim that "this kind of business is ruination to the picture show business."

If the management of the Crystal Theater continues to keep up the two-and-one-half-cent-admission for the programs it is advertising it certainly will ruin the business of its competitors, if it doesn't drive them out of business. And if it pays the same price as others are paying for their service it will drive itself out of business. At a two-and-a-half-cent admission we cannot see how any exhibitor can do a profitable business. We have heard of men, with more money than brains doing business for spite and we have heard of others doing business just for fun, neither of which is constructive. We cannot believe that any exchange would be a party to either of these foolhardy intentions, unless it had an understanding (and this we cannot credit), that as soon as the Crystal has the field it will charge a rational price of admission and pay a higher price for its service. This is taking a long shot at it, and we will try to keep in touch with the situation in Texas City, so we can let yon know the outcome and just how it is done.

Our correspondent in Maine recently told us that some exhibitors in the smaller towns in his territory are paying as low as fifteen cents a reel for pictures! How in Maine or anywhere else can they do it? Why the wear and tear on the film itself would amount to that much! He doesn't tell us how old the film is. But that isn't the point. It doesn't sound reasonable with the present high cost of living and production. Why not sell pictures by the barrel and be done with it? Think it over for yourselves. It looks as if we were all going "bug house," or soon will be, if we don't get down to a safe and sane business basis.

Flashes and Dashes

By Sam Spedon.

Who Will Buy Our Pictures?

DURING the National Motion Pictures Association convention at San Francisco in 1915, Raymond Hitchcock said a mouthful. Frank Keenan had just finished his address to the convention, in which he said: "It took me five or six years to make up my mind to enlist as a motion picture actor. I find I made a wise decision; it has broadened my scope as an actor and opened up greater possibilities in histrionic art," or words to that effect. Hitchcock said: "For five or six weeks I have been trying to get a job in the movies and I am glad I got it. I am very popular in pictures, a big hit, but none of my pictures have been released yet. Who, Oh who will buy my pictures?" He said it. We can all make pictures, but who will buy them. After all has been said and done one of the all important propositions that confronts us just now is the selling end, the exchange problem. We are waiting for that predicted "great big man" of the industry, we have heard tell about, to get busy and do things.

Editorial Prerogatives.

Trade papers are not in business merely for their health. There are two reasons for their existence: the good of themselves and the good of the industry they represent. It is the duty of trade journals to see that nothing harmful invades their columns to injure themselves or the industry. Without careful and honest editorial supervision trade papers would soon become the garbage can for malodorous effusions of disgruntled and malicious contributors, that would soon destroy the health of the papers and the industry. The same policy and editorial judgment should apply to the advertising pages. There are certain established journalistic prerogatives and principles which apply to motion picture trade papers as apply to all other well regulated publications.

Do They Want Them?

"Has reason fled to brutish beasts?" Why in the name of common decency will some men insist upon giving people "what they want" when it isn't good for them is past comprehension. If some people clamor for dope shall we give it to them because they want it? "Out damned spot. Out I say!" Such films should be consigned to the furnace of oblivion, they are fit for the fertilizing furnace. W. A. Brady said something when he declared before the Senate Codes Committee hearing on Sunday opening he would consider himself personally responsible for the exhibition of a suggestive or immoral picture and would send such an offender to States' prison as an undesirable citizen.

A Condition in New Jersey.

Here is a strange situation in New Jersey. All the pictures shown in southern New Jersey are passed upon by the Pennsylvania board of censors and released through the Philadelphia exchanges. Under these conditions the New Jersey exhibitors in the southern part of the State are excluded from showing many of the pictures shown in the northern part of the State, passed upon by the National Board of Review in New York City and rejected by the Censors of Pennsylvania. The Southern exhibitors claim that this arrangement is an injustice to them because they would like to show the pictures which are shown in other parts of the State, believing what is good enough for the Northern exhibitors should be good enough for the Southern. Perhaps some one can explain the logic of this arrangement, we can't.

Wheeler Motion Picture Bill In Synopsis

By C. L. Grant

Proposes to Raise $1,000,000 by Imposing a Tax on All Branches of the Industry— Will Also Control Exhibitions

REPLETE with items of the utmost importance to the motion picture industry, the Wheeler bill will be introduced in the New York Legislature at Albany during the week of April 9. The bill establishes the office of Commissioner of Motion Pictures; calls for the licensing of all four branches of the industry, the producer, distributor, exhibitor and operator; gives the commissioner the power of revocation and suspension of licenses for the exhibition of obscene pictures and likewise the advertising or posting of pictures calling attention to immoral or obscene movies. Producers and distributors are also to be called upon to pay an additional license fee on footage, running from one quarter of a cent to nine and one-half cents a foot according to the cost of the negative.

Assemblyman Heber E. Wheeler, chairman of the committee, and author of the bill, will introduce it in the lower house. According to his figures the bill will be instrumental in adding $1,000,000 to the State Treasury annually. Roger P. Clark of Binghamton, with Robert Cummings of the State Bill Drafting Commission, and Assemblyman Robert Marsh have held many conferences during the past few days in the framing of the bill. Mr. Wheeler spent last Sunday in New York City, where he conferred with Attorney William M. Seabury on several of the important provisions.

The bill in its very nature is a sweeping one, amending the general business law in relation to creating the motion picture department, defining its powers and duties and regulating the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures.

The principal office of the Commissioner of Motion Pictures will be located in Albany. He will be appointed by the Governor. The salary has not yet been determined upon. There will be a branch office in New York City in charge of a deputy. The Commissioner has the power to establish other branches about the State if the business requires. The Commissioner is also given the power of appointing his deputies, inspectors and such other assistants as he may require.

The Commissioner of Motion Pictures will be appointed for a term of five years, but may be removed by the Governor for inefficiency, neglect or misconduct of office.

All producers, distributors, exhibitors and operators must be licensed after September 1, 1917. A separate exhibitor's license will be required for each place of exhibition.

The following license fees will be exacted: Producers, $200; distributors, $300; exhibitors, $5 to $200, according to seating capacity; operators, $2.

Exhibitors whose houses seat 300 persons or less will be charged the $5 fee; houses from 300 to 600 persons, $10; houses from 600 to 1,000 persons, $25; houses from 1,000 to 1,500 persons, $50; houses from 1,500 to 2,000 persons, $100. All houses with a seating capacity of over 2,000 will be taxed $200. There will be no exceptions for vaudeville theaters and similar places, where a single picture may be used in connection with a performance of vaudeville or similar nature.

The following footage tax is provided in the bill on every positive which is sold, leased, distributed or exhibited within the State, based on the cost per foot of producing the negative:

	Cents per foot.
If $1.50 or less	¼
1.50 to 2	½
2 to 2.50	¾
2.50 to 3	1
3 to 4	1½
4 to 5	2
5 to 6	2½
6 to 7	3
7 to 8	3½
8 to 10	4½
10 to 12	5½
12 to 14	6½
14 to 16	7½
In excess of $16	9½

According to Assemblyman Wheeler, there are about a dozen producers in this State at the present time; thirty distributors and from 1,600 to 2,200 exhibitors. Figuring on that basis the bill is expected to bring in approximately $1,000,000. There are certain exemptions from the provisions of the bill, such as churches, religious and scientific bodies, which will not be called upon to pay the tax.

The bill covers about 25 typewritten pages. A producer is defined as any person, firm or corporation who produces or causes to be produced negatives of motion pictures, including the employment of actors, the construction of settings, the performances before the camera and the development of the negative.

Production is defined as the picturizing of stories, conducting the settings, selecting scenes, employing and rehearsing actors and causing the story to be enacted before the camera, and the taking in a like manner of motion pictures of actual occurrences and the development of the negative.

The distributor is defined as any person, firm or corporation arranging terms with exhibitors for the exhibition of motion pictures within the control of the distributor and who delivers the positive print for such picture or who keeps the same on hand subject to call.

The exhibitor is defined as any person, firm or corporation who gives a public exhibition of motion pictures.

Operators will be licensed by the Commissioner. Application for the license must be accompanied by a photograph taken within thirty days previous to the filing of the application. All operators must pass an examination unless they can present evidence of having previously passed an examination equally as rigid as that which will be required in this State. No license will be granted to any operator under the age of 18 years. The Commissioner will have the authority to refuse a license to an operator if he deems him unqualified. Operators will be required to wear a metal badge with the number while operating the machine. All fees accruing from the Wheeler bill will go directly to the State Treasurer. All licenses will expire on June 30 after this year.

Power is given the Commissioner to suspend or revoke the license of any producer or distributor who shall have produced or distributed the positive of three or more motion pictures the exhibition of which shall have been lawfully prohibited by the Commissioner. The same official can suspend or revoke the license of any exhibitor who shows any pictures which have been prohibited. The licenses of operators can be suspended or revoked for incompetency or misconduct.

Important Features of the Wheeler Bill

Creates the office of Commissioner of Motion Pictures with a term of five years, with offices in Albany and New York.

Imposes a license tax on the producer, distributor, exhibitor and operator.

Imposes an additional fee on the producers and distributors according to footage and running from ¼ of a cent to 9½ cents per foot.

Gives the Commissioner the power of revoking or suspending licenses for the showing of immoral, obscene or unpatriotic pictures.

Will give New York State $1,000,000 additional revenue.

Exhibitors to be taxed according to the seating capacity of their houses.

The law to become effective September 1, 1917.

Vaudeville houses and others where motion pictures constitute but a comparatively small part of the program, to be called upon to pay according to their seating capacity.

No motion pictures the negatives of which are produced after July 1, 1917, can be exhibited, or any film or positive sold, leased or distributed unless the tax has been paid to the State, which is imposed, according to the bill, on every positive of motion pictures sold, leased, distributed or exhibited in the State, based on the footage cost of producing the negative.

Every positive shall be subjected to the Commissioner with an affidavit in detail as to the cost of production of the negative. The Commissioner will then compute the tax on such positive. Each positive will be given a serial number.

Exhibitors' licenses, however, will not be required when pictures are shown under the management of educational or religious bodies or at banquets, receptions, exhibitions or dances, or at bona-fide private clubs, scientific clubs, political and athletic clubs, or residences or social affairs. In connection with those shown at clubs, exhibitions under the provisions of the bill will not be permissible more than once a week. The provisions of the article imposing a tax upon the positives of motion pictures shall not apply to the positives exhibited only in accordance with the provisions of the section which are of a historical, educational, scientific or religious character.

The Commissioner can adopt rules calling for standards to which operators must qualify. He can require all exhibition apparatus to be kept in proper care and condition. The Commissioner and his deputies are to be given free access to all studios, exchanges and theaters where motion pictures are shown.

The regulatory measures embodied in the bill, which Assemblyman Wheeler asserts will do the work of a board of censorship, are shown in the fact that the Commissioner is to be given the power to prohibit and suppress all improper, impure, immoral, lewd, obscene, indecent, unpatriotic pictures and those which might demoralize the young. Exhibitors violating such may have their licenses revoked.

The bill provides that the following shall be classified as misdemeanors and punishable:

The leasing or offering for lease or sale of reels of positive print upon which a tax is imposed and has not been paid.

Engaging in business after September 1, 1917, without the proper license or operating without license.

The publishing or posting of immoral, obscene, impure and indecent literature relating to the exhibition of motion pictures.

The alteration or mutilation of film.

The exhibition of a picture without the consent of the distributor.

The production of a negative by photographing a positive and printing positives from such negatives without the consent of the owner (duping).

The exhibition of a picture in a greater number of places than is permitted under the contract or lease under which they are being exhibited.

A director, officer, agent or employee of a corporation who does or concurs in doing or authorizes the doing of any act in violation of the above section shall be liable to prosecution and conviction for such violation. The conviction of a corporation of a violation of this section shall not relieve a director or officer, agent or employee thereof from prosecution.
